Disabled Vets to Be Trained in Fink Art By "Defective" Burns

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, March 11.—William J. Burns is training the disabled war veterans in the art of crime detection, particularly finger print study. As soon as they are proficient in the art they will be employed by the famous criminal defective William J. Burns. He may put them on at the rate of $1 a year a la McLean.

The students are enrolled in the vocational training course of the Veterans' Bureau. One of their first tasks after graduation may be to get the goods on their teacher, William J. Burns.

As the rate of graft scandals are breaking in Washington the entire American Expeditionary Force, if trained could be assured of steady employment running down grafters for the next decade.

Jap Co-operatives Lose $25,000,000 In Great Earthquake

TOKYO, March 16.—One of the greatest losers by the recent Japanese earthquake disaster is the Japanese co-operative movement, reports the co-operative news service. The All American Cooperative Commission has just handed a report from a leading Japanese cooperator who states that the Japanese cooperators suffered damages that total more than $25,000,000.

MINNESOTA STAR, FALSE TO LABOR, ON AUCTION BLOCK

Highest Bidder Will Get Van Lear Sheet

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., March 11.—The Minnesota Daily Star, founded nearly four years ago by 6,000 farmer and labor stockholders to champion the farmer-labor movement, will be sold in a few weeks to the highest bidder, if nothing intervenes in the meantime to prevent the execution of an order of sale issued by Judge Buffington. The sa of the Star was authorized after recently appointed receiver, A. Dollenmeyer, a Minneapolis busin man, reported that he was unable obtain funds to keep the paper go

The cause of the death of Star, as seen here, was defect co-operative organization, wh gave it into the control of a f individuals who ran it in oppositi to the wishes of its founders.

Townley Original Organizer.

A. C. Townley, Nonpartisan League leader, organized the Star on the basis of the same kind of "co-operative" organization he employed in other lines. Along with the preferred stock selling for $100 per share was the common stock selling at $1 per share. The promoters, Townley and Thomas Van Lear, former labor leader and near socialist, obtained the only blocks sold of this common stock. The result was that with these votes and the proxies they were able to obtain they were able to control practically every stockholders' meeting.

A Townley regime which lasted only about a year was succeeded by a Van Lear regime which has lasted ever since. Under both these regimes was the business manager, John Thompson, who gradually obtained possession of the paper by borrowing money and signing iron-clad and ruinous agreements with creditors.

Quit Farm-Labor Policy.

Under the Van Lear-Thompson management the paper ceased to become a farmer-labor paper and pandered to the advertising interests and an imaginary middle-of-t road "progressive" publicity. A [illegible] tempt was made to succeed p [illegible] along "business lines." Costly comic strips and popular features were introduced and the news ran largely to sensationalism and the editorials were designed to entertain rather than educate.

This policy was entirely at variance with the serious spirit of the oppressed and struggling workers and farmers of the Northwest. The militant and progressive elements were thoroly alienated and embittered. The Star lost the only support it could depend upon to keep it in existence. On the other hand, this policy did not obtain enough advertising from the business interests to pay the expense. In three years a deficit accumulated amounting to more than the entire assets of the paper.

Several months ago Townley put his Producers' Alliance and Nonpartisan League organizers in the field to obtain proxies for the purpose of recapturing the paper from Van Lear. At the annual stockholders' meeting last fall Townley had enough proxies to control the meeting. He retained both Van Lear an Thompson on the board of director and elected three men of his o choice.

Lesson to Workers.

Van Lear and Thompson soon after discovered what they claimed to be a legal flaw in the election of the Townley directors and refused to recognize them, thus again regaining physical possession of the paper. The resulting struggle of these individual owners of the common stock has wrecked what was left of a onetime labor paper and onetime co-operative enterprise of world-wide fame. The workers and farmers of Minnesota have learned a valuable lesson. They will not be caught again in the fake co-operation trap, nor will they depend upon the business interests to maintain their newspapers.

Spring Is Coming.

BELVIDERE, Ill., March 11.—Robins have been seen hopping about in the snow, and the true harbinger of spring, the bluebird, has been reported seen here recently.

Workers Live In Hovels

Horses, cows and pigs are worth money. Hundreds of thousands of dollars are spent every year by rich men to house their thoro-bred stock in palatial stables. Of late years even roosters and ducks and pigeons have had special trainers to see that they are bred right and that their offspring are healthy and strong. Some of these same men employ Chicago's workers at low wages, and use the profits garnered from their labor to shower care on their animals. Meanwhile the workers live in hovels not fit for the animals raised by their employers, and pay the big landlords exorbitant rents. Marie McDowell, Chicago Commissioner of Public Welfare, says. "If ever we get sordid enough to put money value on a baby as we do on blooded colts and calves, then perhaps, we will see to it that every child shall be born and reared in fresh air and sunshine. We had better not wait to be sordid—we better simply stop being deadly dull and greedy for gain." How much longer will Chicago's workers consent to live without protest at a standard lower than the animals of the bosses?

SEES ENGLAND ARMING GERMANS AGAINST FRANCE

More Soldiers in Europe Than Ever Before

MADISON, Wis., March 11.—"Another war is inevitable unless two or three things happen to stop it," Oswald G. Villard, editor of the Nation, told a Wisconsin university audience here last night.

Villard said he had concrete knowledge that England was making extensive preparations against a possible war with France. He quoted "a prominent English general" as aying "we would arm the Germans" in event of a war with France.

"There are 1,500,000 more men nder arms in Europe today than at e outbreak of the war," Villard id. "Germany is suffering under 0,000 foreign troops."

Britain's new labor government, he fall of the franc, making it necessary for France to follow England's lead, and intervention in Europe by the United States were dvanced by Villard as possible means of averting the conflagration he says is threatened.

Famous Russian Art Film Reaches Chicago, March 19

"Polikushka," the Moscow Art Theatre Players screen adaption of Leo Tolstoy's wonderful story of serfdom, is coming to Chicago for one day before it starts on its transcontinental tour. It will be shown at Orchestra Hall on March 19, at 7 and 9:15 p. m.

A two-reel Russian comedy entitled, "Soldier Ivan's Miracle," will also be shown in the same evening.

Fatality in Eastern Wreck.

BURLINGTON, Vt., March 11.—One man was killed and more than a score injured when five cars of the Boston-Montreal express train, trav-lling over the Central Vermont railad, left the tracks at a point been Bolton and Waterbury today.

Voice Like Chaliapin Heard at Concert For Technical Aid

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN.

Three singers of the Russian opera company gave a concert at Schoenhoffen Hall for the Society for Techical Aid to Soviet Russia last Sunday afternoon, under the direction of Jack Pfefer, Russian opera impresario.

Gabriel Krizanovsky, baritone, opened the program. His is the sort of big, ringing baritone that has made Chaliapin so famous. In the interpretation of humorous songs he is especially fine. He sang Musorgski's "Song of the Flea," and another similar song, not understood by this writer, but both Krizanovsky and his audience seemed to have a hilariously good time with it. He sang two dramatic songs as well, an aria from Mozart's "Don Juan," and Schuman's "Two Grenadiers," set to a text which we later learned was a Russian revolutionary one.

Ina Daen, a coloratura soprano followed him. Her arias were unknown to us, but they were examples of brilliant Russian melody, and they were sung by a most brilliant Russian voice. Mme. Daen was dressed fittingly, in a Catherine the great costume, splendid with jewels and bright colors, and several million pearls.

Ivan Dneproff, the tenor, we heard the other night on the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' program. He sang, among a great many other things, the Hindoo chant from Rimsky—Korsakoff's "Sadko." This composition has been heard in recent years as a foxtrot, as a violin solo, as a cornet solo, in fact, in every sort of arrangement except the original, as an operatic aria. As Dneproff sang it, it took on an entirely new aspect, and the mystery and weird beauty in its peculiar, gliding rhythms, was understood as never before.

Seeks Damages for Imprisonment.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 11.—Daniel O'Connell, who served nearly three years of a seven years' sentence at McNeil's Island penitentiary for alleged obstruction of the draft during the war, and who was subsequently disbarred as an attorney and refused reinstatement after his release from prison, has filed damage suits against the arresting officers. He charges false arrest and asks damages totaling $121,500.

The Land for the Users!

A Problem in Education

By HARRY GANNES.

The buildings are large and spacious. Having hours upon hours of leisure coupled with mountains of gold rung from the sweat and the toil and the suffering of the masses, the Russian bourgeoisie were not stingy in building their seminaries and fashionable schools; and it is only in the order of things that the working class should take over these institutions in the revolution.

But they were not erected as institutions for working class learning. Their libraries were filled with a lot of trash. The whole cutlook of the former teachers, if not pro-czaristic, was at least pro-capitalist. And so when the working class took over power and all its ramifications, which includes the abodes of learning, they met with many and sometimes seemingly insurmountable difficulties.

I visited the institution for Social Education in Moscow, established by Comrade Blonski, author of the Work-School, and the thing that struck me most was the massiveness of the building and the empty forelorn view that one got of the inside. To rebuild the entire outlook of the new, proletarian students on the basis of the new society, is the aim of the teachers, and to do this requires a complete new staff of teachers and an entirely new literature is needed. Even the scientific works were found to be spurious so far as working class training is concerned. The histories, sociological works, books on political economy and anthropology were worse than useless. They were counter-revolutionary.

And so in a small measure we grasp the herculean task set before the proletarian teachers after the revolution. Great progress, however, has been made in spite of all the heart-rending obstacles. A new literature is in the making, and the new student body, trained not as "individualists" but as members of the working class, trained in the interest of the working class, will soon flood the educational life of all Russia.

The revolution is six years old. It takes from three to four years, under the most favorable circumstances, to produce a specialist; hence it is too early to judge the results in Russia when we detract the first two years of the Russian revolution so far as educational accomplishments are concerned due to the intense civil war and invasions. Right now during the peaceful period, education receives its highest impetus and the harvest promises to be bountiful.

In order to enlist the support of the workers of the entire world, and especially the youth, the Central House for Communist Education has been put under the control of the Young Communist International, which means that every league of communist youth, including the Young Workers League of America, owes a responsibility to the students in the Central House.

When a group of international delegates to a gathering of the Y. C. I. visited the Blonski school in Moscow, they were impressed by the dearth of scientific instruments and literature. The Russian youth are gormands for science and technical subjects. One of the professors complained to me that the new "spetz", the proletarian technical students, were in fact a little too one-sided on scientific and technical studies. "Ah," he said, "they lack that broad cultural knowledge of the old time students, but they cannot be beat for the readiness and rapidity with which they master the most intricate technical and scientific details." Of course, the Work-School has a good deal to do with this new trend of things. But in spite of this avidity for scientific knowledge there is a dearth and a grave lack of scientific instruments and necessary literature and periodicals.

True, the Russian scientists are working overtime producing new books and re-writing the old ones so that there will be less trash and more learning. Yet you cannot destroy the literature of a century and replace it with the culture of a new class but six years in power.

The Young Communist International has issued an appeal for help in the matter of aiding them to gather the necessary supplies to further education in the Central House. Here is what is mostly lacking.

There is a need for scientific books of all kinds, especially natural science, geography, engineering, drawing, chemistry, physics and so on. Maps and instruments (chemical, physics, psychological, physiological), and the many others needed to study the laws of nature and the technic of industry.

A great many of these things are easily obtainable in the United States and would be a great boon if sent to the Young Communist International for its use in the Central House for Communist Education.

Especially could the American Workers aid the youth of Russia by sending them copies of the many scientific periodicals published in the United States and Canada. There is no need to worry about the patriotic and capitalist bunk nearly of all these publications make a specialty of; that will be taken care of by our comrades in charge, and will prove most amusing to the students of the Central House when they study the human mind and find that genius and insanity are so closely related.

Poor as are the German workers, they are helping to collect scientific material for the Central House of Communist education, and it will be but little burden on the interested workers in this country to help out.

Every scientific book that you can lay your hands on without legal consequences, every instrument of the kind discussed before, every magazine of scientific or technical value (the names are too many to mention), should be carefully wrapped up and addressed to the Central House for Communist Education, Young Communist International, Moscow, Russia, and make sure the proper amount of postage or expressage is paid.

WORLD'S METAL WORKERS APPEAL FOR GERMAN AID

Urge Help for Brave Comrades in Germany

To the Metal Workers of all countries.

Comrades and Brothers:

Your brothers in Germany have again entered the phase of grave battles against capital. They are being driven back to the days when the workers spent no less than twelve hours per day in the factory, getting starvation wages and having no right to protest against this slavery.

The German metal workers, especially those who find themselves under the double yoke of the trusts and of the army of occupation of the world gendarme, Raymond Poincare, are fighting for the eight hour day against tremendous odds.

German Struggle—World Struggle.

The German metal workers have raised the banner of struggle directly in the factories and shops as the reformist unions not only failed to take up the leadership in the struggle, but on the contrary, signed a treacherous pact with Stinnes, Krupp and the other metal kings, providing for the introduction of the ten hour day. In this resolute struggle the reformists took their places alongside those of the capitalist ministers; they did no join the ranks of the hungry terrorized workers, who are defending with the last drop of their blood the basic gains of the international proletariat—the eight hour day.

Metal workers of France, Great Britain, Czecho-Slovakia and United States:

Do you believe that the struggle of the German metal workers is their private affair? No. You cannot think so, for each one of you realizes that the abolition of the eight hour day in Germany is only a preliminary to your being robbed of two or three additional hours per day. The German capitalists are robbing the workers in order to be in a better position to compete with your capitalists. Should today the metal workers of the Ruhr be forced into submission, tomorrow the Comite des Forges will take steps to increase their competing capacity at the expense of the increased labor and lower wages of the French metal workers.

The Ruhr, Berlin and all other metal workers of Germany have been left by the reformist trade union centers to the mercies of capital and of the military dictatorship. In this determined struggle for the eight hour day we see no united leadership. The factories have raised the banner of the struggle on their own initiative and against the will of the central unions. The struggle is directed by the factory and shop committees and by those branches of the metal workers union which are led by communists. In this struggle Stinnes and Company are calmly looking on from the third line of trenches and before the working masses will be able to reach this line, they will have to overcome the resistance of their "own" unions and of General Seeckt's warhounds.

Support the German Comrades!

Comrades and Brothers: Lose no time. Support your fellow workers in Germany. Follow the example of the Red International of Labor Unions which has started collections for the support of the struggling workers, and not of Stinnes' henchmen.

The International Propaganda Committee of Revolutionary Metal Workers calls upon you to form in every country committees of help to the struggling metal workers of Germany. These committees should explain to the workers of their countries the situation in Germany, collect money for the support of the struggling German workers. Send this money directly to the International Workers Relief Committee or its American section, The Friends of Soviet Russia and Workers Germany.

On to the support of the German workers!

On to the struggle for the eight hour day!

Long live the revolutionary metal workers of Germany!

Down with the traitors to the working class!

Long live international solidarity.

INTERNATIONAL PROPAGANDA COMMITTEE OF REVOLUTIONARY METAL WORKERS.

Colored Minister Denounces Scabbing; Militants Active

Scabbing was denounced last Sunday by Rev. David Johnson, of St. Mary's African Methodist Episcopal Church, at 5147 S. Prairie avenue.

This was reported by Miss Marie M[illegible]terer, one of the colored militants in the garment strike, who spoke before his church.

Effective strike talks were delivered the same Sunday by other colored women: Mrs. Olivia Whiteman speaking at Ebenezer Baptist Church at 408 E. 45th street; Mrs. Eva Porter, at the Fulton City Methodist Church; Mrs. F. May Brown, at the Mt. Olivet Church at 2023 Kendall street, and Mrs. Willie Morris, at the Baptist Church at 5810 S. Wabash avenue.

The Radio Referendum.

Complete tabulation of the cast in the radio poll on prohibition here, showed 34,185 persons favoring modification of the Volstead act and 12,483 opposing the proposition.

Political Party May Be Organized in Erin By Redmond Followers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DUBLIN, Ireland, March 11.—What appears to be a comeback on the part of the old Irish Parliamentary Party was seen in a meeting held here last Sunday when a great crowd gathered in the county of Wexford to celebrate the anniversary meeting in commemoration of John Redmond, leading figure in nationalist politics for decades.

John Redmond was for long the idol of the Irish people who longed for freedom from British rule. When the war broke out he took the side of England. The Easter Week revolution led by James Connolly, the communist brought about a development that embittered the Irish people against the British government and turned them against Redmond. He died shortly afterwards.

During the Black and Tan war the remnants of the constitutional political party completely lost their influence. But since the treaty was signed, leaving out Ulster, the people saw that Sinn Fein, the party of extreme nationalism secured less concessions from England that even John Redmond insisted on.

The action of the Sinn Fein party under the leadership of De Valera and Mary MacSwiney in refusing to participate in the Irish parliament gave the old parliamentarians the opportunity they were looking for. The only opposition to the Free State party now in the parliament is the Labor opposition which is worse than none, under the reactionary leadership of the social democrats.

The remnants of the dead Redmond's followers are expected to rally under the leadership of the old veteran John Dillon and supply the anti-Free State opposition in Dail Eireann. They oppose the policy of imprisoning and executing political dissenters and executions followed, by the Free State government. As they are trained politicians and parliamentarians it is quite possible they may be able to stage a comeback. Unless the Republicans wake up they may find the bourgeois opposition snatched from their grasp by the same gang that denounced the Easter Week revolution and actually aided the British government in murdering in cold blood the leaders of that struggle.

The delicacy of the Free State government position is shown by the latest mutiny in the army. Rather than suffer from unemployment, the officers and some of the men who were dismissed took their artillery with them to the hills. Warrants are out for the arrest of the men. This has caused extreme nervousness in government quarters.

Militants Facing Attack of Police And Union Officials

(By The Federated Press)

LOS ANGELES, March 11.—Seven members of Carpenters' local No. 158, including two business agents, have been expelled from the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners for membership in the Trade Union Educational league, ostensibly, but in reality for carrying on a fight for amalgamation and the Labor Party.

The expelled men charge that they were thrown out of their unions summarily, without advance notice or trial. This action is the first to follow the raid of March 1 when police without warrants arrested 30 persons at a meeting of the Trade Union Educational league here and confiscated league records.

Two others, who were also expelled March 4, were reinstated the next day after proving they were not members of the league. Four members of the Millmen's local No. 884 were expelled March 5, and more expulsions are slated in three other locals of carpenters in Los Angeles county involving about 11 unionists.

The following were expelled from local No. 158: Jim Walker and Fred Miller, business agents; A. Abramson, D. J. McClure, Andrew Renner, E. N. Diebler, and Carl Nelson. They will appeal to the general executive board and to the national convention to be held in Indianapolis in September, if necessary, they declare.

Esthonian Minister Arrests Communists: Froths at Russia

(Special to The Daily Worker)

REVAL, March 11.—In the attempt to excuse the recent arrests of scores of workers leaders and radicals, many of whom were members of the Communist Party Esthonia's minister of the interior makes the wild charge that the Communist International is spending "hundreds of millions" of gold rubles yearly for the overthrow of bourgeois governments.

Ignoring the fact that Esthonia's workers and peasants have their own enormous grievances which cause them to organize for revolutionary purposes without the stimulus of this mythical pile of gold he goes on to praise the alleged liberality of his government which allows Communists more freedom than do Latvia, Lithuania and Poland. The arrests were made, he declared, only to save Esthonia from a movement that represents "merely the interests of Labor as opposed to the interests of Capital".

SOCIALISTS LOSE, BUT COMMUNISTS WIN, IN THURINGIA

Scheidemann Is Bringing Trouble to Party

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER

(Staff Correspondent of the Federated Press)

WEIMAR, Germany, March 11.—Losses by the Socialists and gains by the Communists and Nationalists are the outcome of the state elections in Thuringia. A working class majority has been converted into minority. The Ordnugsblock (order block), made up of all the bourgeois parties except the extreme Nationalists or Voelkische, will have 35 seats, Socialists 17, Communists 13, and Voelkische 7. In the previous assembly the Socialists had 22 seats, Communists 5, and the bourgeois parties together 25 seats.

Lefts Fight Scheidemann.

The greatest loser is the Socialist party. The recent defeats both in Saxony and Thuringia have thrown consternation into its ranks. A severe party struggle is on between the officials like Wels and Scheidemann, who were identified with the Majority Socialists during the war and joined hands with the pro-kaiser elements, and the militant minority, recruited chiefly from the ranks of the former Independent Socialist party and led by Paul Levi, Tony Sender and Robert Dissman.

The diverging points of view held by these leaders and their followers find expression in the estimate of the Thuringian elections.

Reds Worry Yellows.

The Scheidemann group contend that Thuringia shows what will happen if the Socialists flirt with the Communists. Had the Thuringian Socialists, they say, had nothing to do with the Communists, the "law and order" loving citizens would have continued to vote the Socialist ticket.

The opposition group argue that the growth of the Communist vote shows that half-way measures and coalitions with bourgeois parties will not do, and that the working class must follow a radical, class-conscious program. They argue, further, that there was a considerable stay-at-home vote of Socialists who have become disgusted with their party.

For or Against the State Cossack Bill Commerce Body Test

(By The Federated Press)

Renewed efforts to impose a militarized state constabulary upon Illinois are being made by the Illinois chamber of commerce and its allied forces. Special attention is being paid by this open shop aggregation to the primary elections for members of the state legislature. Lawmakers running for re-election are classified by the chamber as fit or unfit according to whether they voted for the police bill or against it in the 1923 session when the measure met defeat.

The legislative policy committee of the Illinois chamber of commerce has only two duties. One is to work up a lobbying platform for the business interests and the other, in its own words, is:

"To conduct a campaign before and during the 1925 session of the legislature for putting this platform into effect."

The first and foremost of the five planks in the commerce chamber's legislative platform is:

"1. A State Police Force for Illinois."

The business interests also want to reorganize the state's school system, get publicity on state expenditures, make constitutional amendments easier and obtain "common sense workable taxing and assessment laws."

The chamber has thoroly organized the state with active representatives in almost a hundred cities outside of Chicago.

Many Indications That Oil Inquiry May Be Strangled

A new record for transcontinental railroad trips was in the making today as Mrs. Alfred H. Smith, widow of the president of the New York Central lines, rushed from Los Angeles to New York to attend her husband's funeral.

New Election Talked Of in England Before End of July

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, March 11.—The Ramsay MacDonald government has proven its worth to the capitalist class so much that the Tories are beginning to fear that they made a mistake in maneuvering them into office. There is talk of a new election.

On the other hand the British workers are daily growing more disgusted with the reformist policy of the so-called socialist government. Even John Wheatley from the Clyde is grossly disappointing. His action in cancelling a decree against the Poplar Guardians, which was unenforceable, was hailed by the boosters of the MacDonald government as an indication of radicalism, but in the debate he announced that he would not surrender to the poor any more than he would to the rich. That, together with the smacking kiss he bestowed on the anatomy of King George, when the "swearing in" proceedings were gone thru has put him on the list of casualties.

The new government is gaining in favor with the bourgeoisie. They can fool the workers much better than either of the two other bourgeois parties. They defend imperialism more determinedly. MacDonald's speech on India was a model which no doubt will be studied carefully by potential Tory foreign ministers. He made it quite clear the British Labor Party would stand no nonsense from subject peoples.

The MacDonald government has no policy on unemployment. That is the most difficult problem facing solution. It cannot be solved under capitalism, but the reactionary labor politicians claim that it can. The late Baldwin government went down to defeat on the unemployment problem. Now in turn it jeers at the Labor government. The latter simply says "wait and see."

There is already talk of a new general election before the end of summer.

Wrigley Gets Fat As You Chew, Yes He Does, By Gum

(By The Federated Press)

A million dollars a week is the tribute which American chewers are paying to the gum capitalists as a penalty for allowing themselves to be conquered by a collosal advertising campaign. According to figures made public by the department of commerce the production of chewing gum in 1919 was valued at $53,430,000. Since that year the habit has been spreading.

Of course, William Wrigley, Jr., and the men who are helping him spread the habit to the four corners of the globe are actuated primarily by the desire for service. And their profits just happen as an unavoidable incident to that service.

But profits are none the less enormous. Those announced by the Wrigley Co. for 1923 total $7,047,491, an increase of more than $1,000,000 over 1922. As the capital stock of the company is reckoned at $15,000,000 the year's profits must be reckoned at over 46 per cent.

If we add these profits to the millions spent each year for advertising, that is for teaching people to buy more gum, it will appear that the chewers get very small value for their money. And it will become an open question whether the country can afford to divert over $50,000,000 a year, the wages of more than 33,000 families, to an enterprise which exists chiefly to produce profits for Mr. Wrigley.

Pageant of French Revolution Coming At Defense Bazaar

NEW YORK, March 11.—The National Defense Committee is preparing a pageant as part of the program for the bazaar which will be held April 10-13 at Central Opera House. The pageant will present a picture of the French Revolution, followed by the story of the Russian Revolution, the victory of the workers with Russia in the lead.

One hundred men and women are needed to participate in the pageant. We also need music for the pageant and anyone who can play violin, piano or any other instrument please report to the Leonardo de Vinci Art School (old church building), 288 E. 10th street, near Avenue A, every Monday evening, and ask for the Pageant Committee.

Workers Turn Against Churches.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—Christianity in America is in collapse because the wage-working masses have lost faith in it, and a great preaching crusade must be undertaken in order that the people may be brought back to faith and to respect for the rights of private property.

This is the substance of a remarkable pamphlet issued here by authority of Bishop Freeman (Episcopal) appealing for a preaching endowment which shall make the United States safe for the propertied class. The text of the document was written by Monell Sayre, "a man of practical affairs and large business experience," according to Bishop Freeman, and pension adviser to the Church of England.

Can't Obliterate the Oil.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—Washington was blanketed under six inches of slush and snow early today and the worst storm the capital experienced this winter showed few signs of abating. Driving rain turned the night's heavy snowfall into a morass.

KANSAS SLAVE COURT IS DEAD AS A DOOR NAIL

But Judges Still Draw $5,000 a Year

By TOM TIPPETT.
Staff Correspondent of the Federated Press

PITTSBURGH, Kans., Mar. 11.—The Kansas court of industrial relations as a novel experiment that did not receive a fair chance to operate, according to a report of the National Industrial Conference board, received here. The board is the research organization of a large number of employers' associations. It has been studying the Kansas industrial court for more than a year.

The report says the court idea was the product of a special industrial situation, partly national and partly local in Kansas. It was designed to meet the local aspect of these problems but it was also offered as a contribution to the general problem of adjusting the group interests of public, employers, and workers.

The "special industrial situation" was the national unrest in labor circles under the nationwide open shop campaign after the war. The Local Aspect in Kansas was Alexander Howat who for 20 years had led the coal miners of the state to victory after victory via the strike route.

Howat Strike Killed Court.

The court is dead in Kansas. It was completely wrecked by direct action by Howat and his Kansas coal diggers. When Howat called his first strike in violation of what he called the slave court he was put in jail. The moment he was locked up every mine in the state was shut down by a protest strike which ruined the court that had been designed to prevent strikes.

The industrial court was an issue in the 1922 election. Jonathan M. Davis was elected by a 21,000 majority over Wm. Morgan in the race for governor. Davis ran as an anti-court candidate while Morgan was backed by all the forces in the state favoring the court act.

The industrial court was created four years ago by Henry T. Allen, then governor of Kansas. Allen's first official anti-labor performance was in 1919 when he brought college students into the coal fields as strikebreakers during the coal strike.

One Carload Scab Coal.

Allen got his picture in the movie with the first—and only—carload of scab coal that his "educated punks"—as the miners called them—were able to load. That was at a strip mine, not underground. That started Allen in the direction of the president's chair at Washington. He could not break the miners' strike so he cooked up a law to make strikes illegal and produced his industrial court to keep workers on the job. The court was made up of three men appointed by the governor. It was to determine hours of labor, wages, contracts and all other questions affecting industry.

With such a tribunal a union could not function. The miners steadfastly refused to recognize the court. Howat was in prison 16 months for violating it but that is all the court ever accomplished. Governor Davis' first official act was a pardon for Howat.

When the court attempted to fix wages in a packing house, the Wolff Packing Co. appealed to the U. S. supreme court and that body refused the Kansas industrial court the right to fix wages. The miners have a test case up now [illegible] matter of form to permit the supreme court to pass on the right to interfere in strikes.

Strikes Go On.

But strikes go on here as always. No one in the state pays any attention to the industrial court except the three judges who still receive $5,000 each per year and practice law on the side. The governor recently asked the industrial court to investigate the prices charged for coal in Kansas. It refused on the ground that it was no business of the court, saying that was not in the public's interest. Davis then demanded the resignation of the three judges, charging them with being a useless burden on the state. They did not resign.

The coming legislature is expected to oust them and repeal the Allen court act. Meanwhile Henry T. Allen is back in Topeka running his newspaper. Calvin Coolidge beat him to Washington on a strike-breaking record.

Jobless, Penniless—Suicide.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 11.—Alone in a strange city, and unable to find work after weeks of searching, Katherine Fleener, a waitress, took poison in a suicide attempt. At the Central Emergency hospital, where it was said she would probably recover, Mrs. Fleener told officials that she was literally penniless, having spent her last money for the poison.

Zinoviev's Speech to Leningrad Communists

(NOTE—The DAILY WORKER today publishes the third installment of the great speech delivered by Gregory Zinoviev to the party conference of the Leningrad District. Those of our readers who have read lurid reports of war between Communist leaders should follow this discussion closely. It is true that Trotsky had a difference of opinion over questions of party organization with Zinoviev and others. But the enemies of the Soviet Republic may rest assured that a discussion on tactics will not give them the opening to rush in their war dogs and lap up the blood of the emancipated Russian workers. A further installment will be published tomorrow).

• • • •

ZINOVIEV CONTINUES:

DURING that period, when czarist absolutism still existed, we were unable to hold to the principle of election.

We were obliged to have a strictly conspiratory and centralized Party organization, as Comrade Lenin demonstrated. He stated that adherence to the principle of election would only have been to the advantage of the police.

Those revolutionary workers who are capable of taking leading Party positions will be appointed by us, and will be appointed without any fuss. But to preach consistent democracy within the Party under an absolutist regime, at a moment when we require the concentration of conspiracy and centralism, would signify that we succumb to demagogy and place the revolution in danger.

It was no easy task to defend this official standpoint of Bolshevism. The Mensheviki earned cheap laurels just as any "democrat" can earn them now, by singing the praises of democracy, without any regard for the situation as a whole.

In January, 1905, Bolshevism declared that a broad adherence to the principle of election within the Party is impossible. But if the principle of election is not possible, where is democracy? Thus a broad democracy was equally impossible for the Party.

Furtherance of Revolution.

For us the highest law is the furtherance of the revolution, but we do not follow the letter, the dogma. The furtherance of the revolution demands that our organization is strictly conspirative and concentrated. When the situation changes, then we shall raise the question of the workers' democracy within the Party.

And in actual fact, after czarism was overthrown we raised for the first time the question of inner Party democracy, in another form.

The whole of the periods between 1905-1907 were a variegated intermingling of the legal with the illegal, and thus also a combination of the beginnings of inner Party democracy, in accordance with the exigencies of the changing situation.

The years of counter-revolution began. The Party was plunged into illegality. The legal element diminished until the year 1911, when the "Swesda" and later on the "Pravda" appeared. The element of legality vanished almost completely, and the elements of conspiracy and centralization took the upper hand.

During the period 1907-1912 we lived in complete illegality. Nothing was heard of inner Party democracy. The leaders of the Party were appointed from above. Two or three comrades were chosen, and had the right of co-option.

Then came the war. The Party organizations dwindled away; a part was driven into illegality, and the conspirative element increased.

It need not be said that after the fall of czarism, in the year 1917, we began to rebuild the Party. But then the civil war began, and this meant that every muscle had to be strained to its utmost tension, and it meant that the principle of democracy had to be confined to certain limits.

Defects of Our Organization.

Have we had, or have we still, faulty sides to our organization? Undoubtedly we have! Far too large a number of circulars are issued, and these substitute living energy. Even in such a splendid and universally beloved organization as the RCYU.

Almost all the organizers of the collectives are appointed from above, by the gouvernement leaders. We know such gouvernements. We have followed the rule of appointing the organizers for the collectives. But now this rule can and must be altered.

We must give the nuclei the opportunity of even falling into error, of now and again electing an organizer who may prove useless for his position, and may have to be replaced by another. It goes without saying that where a nucleus is unsound, it must be cured.

In our Petrograd organization there is also room for improvement. We have 30,000 new metal workers in Petrograd. Has this fact been apparent in the Party organization? No! But this great event—30,000 new metal workers, among whom there is a considerable base of the "hereditary" proletariat—should be noticeable in our organization. There should be a supply of fresh blood. But this is not the case. It is imperative that this be changed.

Limitations of Workers' Democracy.

Reference must be made to those limitations which we have consciously placed upon the workers' democracy. A number of limitations have arisen spontaneously, and a number of others have been deliberately imposed by us.

We undertook the purging of the Party, which means that the most proletarian section of the Party held it to be necessary, in the interests of the revolution, to review and expel from the Party the least reliable section of those members who had obtained entry into the Party without really understanding what the Communist Party is. The purging of the Party has nothing in common with the "pure" principle of "comprehensive" workers' democracy in the actual sense of the words. What kind of democracy is this, when we appoint some few persons from above, and say to them that they shall purge the Party to any extent necessary. And they have done the work thoroly.

More than 100,000 members were excluded from our ranks. There are many who say that this number of expulsions was not sufficient; others say it was too many. Comrades, in some gouvernements one was true, and in other gouvernements the other. In general the operation was well performed.

Curtailment of Suffrage.

We once passed a resolution that at a Party Congress—I believe it was at the Tenth Congress—not every Party member had a right to vote, but only those who had been members of the Party for a certain time (two years).

It might be said that the Central of the Party selects the delegates, curtails the suffrage of the Party members just before the Congress at which it is to be criticized and reelected. Viewed from the standpoint of an abstract workers' democracy, this is a travesty of all "democracy."

But we did this from the viewpoint of the furtherance of the revolution. We could only permit those to vote who really represented the Party guard.

We also make long membership of the Party a condition for the appointment of the secretaries of the leading Party organizations of the gouvernements, and of the district organizations and of the chairmen of the gouvernement trade union Soviets. And this is not pure democracy either.

In a democracy we elect whom we will. Is this limitation necessary or not? It is necessary!

The furtherance of the revolution, that is the highest law.

The third limitation consists of the confirmation of the appointment of the secretaries by the superior organizations. This, too, is not pure democracy, and still we do it.

The fourth limitation is the Red Army. For a time there were more than 100,000 Party members in the Red Army.

In the Red Army we need the spirit of comrade-like discipline, but we cannot accomplish pure democracy there, nor the principle of election. Here we carry on political work on the lines of the Political Divisions.

It is impossible to do otherwise. And yet there was a time when the functionaries of the Red Army formed the fourth or third part of the whole Party. Can we give this up in the period of the dictatorship? No!

This question must be put as follows: Either Red Army or broad workers' democracy. And every revolutionist will say: To the devil with the sacred principles of "pure democracy" so long as we have a real Red Army, really able to defend the interests of the revolution.

There are thus quite a number of limitations necessarily imposed by the dictatorship of the proletariat. These we must consciously accept.

(To Be Continued Thursday.)

MORGAN COMES TO FRENCH AID WITH MILLIONS

Gustave Herve Shrieks For a Mussolini

PARIS, March 11.—The French cabinet is in desperation as a result of the rapid decline of the franc, despite all efforts made to stabilize it. Dollars were quoted at 27 francs, 30 centimes and pounds sterling at 116 francs 40 centimes.

The governors and director of the Bank of France have met with the cabinet to consider what extraordinary measures should be taken to stop its downward dive.

Among the proposals made were to abolish the eight hour day and to turn over the government monopoly on railroads, tobacco, matches, telegraphs and telephones to private ownership, and to organize a new cabinet composed entirely of business experts.

Herve for Fascism.

Gustave Herve, former socialist and close personal friend of President Millerand, once a member of the French socialist party, is demanding that a Fascisti dictatorship be established. He is supported in this by the Comite de Forges, the great French steel trust.

Herve demands the restoration of wartime regulations. He wants the issuance of bread cards, the suppression of sweets, cakes and candy, a head tax in gold francs on foreigners living in France, and the prohibition under penalty of a long jail term of any Frenchman from purchasing foreign moneys or securities, except thru a government bank.

The reduction of newspapers to two pages as during the war and a ban on the purchase of wood pulp abroad.

Another proposition made is that no more bonds for national defense should be issued, allowing the so-called devastated regions to take care of themselves and the floating of a final loan of $1,000,000,000.

French spies continue to bring disconcerting news of war preparations from Germany. This is used by Poincare to frighten the Chamber of Deputies into granting his demands but it is felt now that he has reached the end of his rope—in parliament. A dictatorship is a very likely possibility.

Morgan's $50,000,000.

The Petit Parisien confirms a report that the Bank of France has obtained "important aid" to stabilize the franc in England and the United States. (This presumably would refer to a report that France has obtained a credit of $50,000,000 for three months from a syndicate of American banks headed by J. P. Morgan and Co.)

The Petit Journal said the discount rate may be raised to prevent excessive rediscounting and consequent use of the money for purchasing foreign materials.

Finance Minister Lasteyrie announced last night the government plans operations for consolidation of the floating debt.

Alleged Pro-Kaiser Publisher May Be Pardoned by "Cal"

WASHINGTON, Mar. 11.—President Coolidge has rejected an application for pardon on the part of Dr. Edward Rumely, former publisher of the New York Evening Mail, alleged to have been purchased by the German government during the war, it was said at the White House today.

There has ince been a suggestion the sentence be commuted and it was indicated that some executive action towards clemency in this direction may be taken soon.

Capitalists May Buy News Agency.

BERLIN, March 11.—There are persistent rumors in journalistic circles that the Wolfsches Telegrafen Bureau, the semi-official news bureau which stands in the same relation to the German government as the Agence Havas does to the French or Reuter's to the British, is to be brought up by the big German industrialists. It is said that a member of parliament, Dr. Cremer, who belongs to the People's (Stinnes) party and is also on close terms with the German Nationalist party, is to become the head director.

Entertains His Prisoners.

Federal officials here are making an investigation to determine whether sheriff Edwin Ahlstrom in charge of the county jail at Waukegan exceeded his hostly duties in the case of two girl prisoners. Reports to the marshal's office were that Ahlstrom sought to relieve the monotony of jail life for Marjorie Mober and Margaret Darling, held as witnesses in a white slavery case, by taking them to Chicago to a cabaret.

PAUPER WAGES PAID TO MANY RAIL WORKERS

And 179,726 Are Laid Off Since August

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Pauper wages and insecurity of job stand out as characteristics of railroad employment in the United States as pictured in the December wage report of the U. S. Interstate Commerce Commission. Over 30 per cent of the 1,670,192 hourly paid workers employed during the month received less than $100 for their work, which included a considerable amount of overtime. While more than 25 per cent of them earned less than $90 for the month.

Unemployment was shown to be spreading rapidly. Between November and December the total number of railroad workers was reduced from 1,899,545 to 1,793,779 or by 5.6 per cent. This meant that 105,766 employes were laid off within the month. At the same time the total compensation paid railroad workers fell $15,024,016, a decrease of 6 per cent.

The reduction in the number on railroad payrolls since August when 1,973,505 were employed has amounted to 179,726. This represents the addition of the railroads to the already flooded job market.

But the full extent of the decrease in employment is evident only when we investigate the figures showing the number of full time jobs available for workers paid on an hourly basis. These figures together with the average monthly pay, are shown for the last six months of the year as follows:

	Full time jobs	Aver. pay per month
July	1,711,379	$128.60
August	1,713,099	131.80
September	1,697,851	125.60
October	1,690,581	135.00
November	1,631,843	128.10
December	1,524,700	124.60

11 Per Cent Loss Since August.

This shows a decline of 11 per cent in the number of full time jobs available in railroad employment from the peak in August. It also shows average monthly wages more than $10 lower than those paid in October.

Low paid labor suffered most severely in the layoffs. In the maintenance of way department where 350,962 workers worked a full month for only $86 the reduction in force since August has brought unemployment to 115,387 persons or approximately 25 per cent of those employed in the summer. Practically all of the men laid off in this department were section men and track laborers with wages which averaged only $69 during December.

Shop forces were also heavily reduced during the last months of the year. Layoffs rose to a total of 46,456 or approximately 8 per cent of the force employed in August. One-eighth of the freight car men employed during the summer are now unemployed while the skilled trade helpers have suffered a similar reduction.

The coming of spring will mean the gradual re-employment of a considerable number altho the majority of railroads are planning material reductions in their maintenance expenditures for the coming year. But the outstanding fact is that this major industry recognizes no responsibility for giving tens of thousands of its low paid workers a chance to earn a living during the cold months of the year. And this is not exceptional but a regular feature of railroad employment.

Supreme Court Takes Rest.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—The Supreme Court today announced it would recess from March 17 to April 7.

Steel Militants Will Be Represented at Amalgamated Meet

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WARREN, Pa., March 11.—The militant element in the rank and file of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, which has most of the Warren steel workers in its ranks, is preparing to send a real rank and file representative to the April 1 convention of the union in Pittsburgh.

The militants have been studying the inner workings of the organization and find too many superfluous officers eating up funds. The resolution from our lodges here concerning this says: "That said convention shall determine the number of superfluous officers in the national offices and initiate a move to remove same." The lodge meeting also called for the ending of the 1 per cent assessment.

Organizing the Unorganized.

The question of organizing the unorganized steel workers will come up also in the coming convention. It will be a very important matter for it concerns 600,000 steel workers and the work of organizing these into one.

One more important resolution made here for this convention is, that a special committee be appointed to determine the status of strikes now in effect and to call off those found to be hopelessly lost.

Both lodges of Warren, O., held meetings Saturday, March 1, and elected delegates for this convention. The Liberty Lodge had a banquet after their meeting where an able office workers' union member spoke on the Teapot Dome scandal, and the role of the Workers Party.

Ford's Reward

By a vote of 227-142 the House of Representatives has decided to hand over the great Muscle Shoals power resource aggregating 900,000 horsepower.

In violation of the Federal water power act limiting such leases to fifty years the House decided to give away for one hundred years to Mr. Ford for the paltry sum of a maximum of ten million dollars nitrate plants, steam plants, and quarries valued at scores of millions of dollars. The scrap value of the available equipment alone is worth more than what Ford is to pay for the greatest power resource of the country.

The whole episode is illustrative of the inherently corrupt character of capitalist democratic government in the United States. For two years Mr. Ford and other private interests tried to grab up this great source of wealth. For a time it appeared as if Mr. Ford stood no chance against the competing bidders. This was particularly true when the flivver king was harboring and advertising his own presidential ambitions. But no sooner did Ford renounce his presidential aspirations and publicly declare himself for Coolidge than his Muscle Shoals prospects became rosy. When the Detroit multimillionaire changed the name of his clubs from "Ford for President" to "Ford for President Coolidge" the Muscle Shoals issue was settled. The reactionary administration forthwith decided to be generous to Mr. Ford.

The reward to Mr. Ford by the Coolidge clique is another case of the typical Teapot politics with which our whole governmental system reeks. If anybody still nurses any illusions as to Mr. Ford's idealism, stupid, abnormal, or otherwise, this deal for Muscle Shoals made with the oil-besmeared Old Guard should dispel these notions forever. Mr. Ford has shown himself to be as good a politician as an exploiter of the workers and an enemy of organized labor. The price paid by the working masses for this disillusionment and enlightenment as to Ford's political integrity and incompetence is our surrender of the greatest water power resources in the country. This is an expensive price indeed, but we will have to go on paying such prices until the workers and farmers take over the government and the industries.

The Curse of Child Labor

Except for China and India the scourge of child labor has been more widespread and devastating in the United States, the most capitalist country, than in any other land on earth.

It has been estimated that more than one million children between the ages of ten and fifteen are still engaged in the statistically labeled "gainful occupations," that is, they are employed in industries netting the bosses profits. In the beet fields of Michigan, in the coal mines of Tennessee and Virginia, in the textile mills of North Carolina and Rhode Island, on the cotton plantations of Texas and Alabama, and in the orange-berry bogs of New Jersey we have these hundreds of thousands of children grinding out profits for the employing class. Even in the metropolis of our country, New York, there are children of three years of age, at work in their dilapidated unsanitary rooms, misnamed homes, helping to turn out costly dresses for the chosen ladies of Fifth Avenue aritocrats of capitalist high society.

Child labor is an organic disease of capitalist production for profits. National organizations numbering a membership of ten millions have been unable to free these children from the bondage of capitalist exploitation. As a matter of fact, the Children's Bureau at Washington has found that the first six months of 1923 show an increase of 38 per cent in child labor.

What a scathing indictment of our capitalist social order this sordid picture of children at work "by the dawn's early light" presents! What monumental folly is generated by a system of production and exchange under which one in every twelve children is compelled to labor and one in every ten adults is lined up in a movement for the abolition of this dreadful scourge!

Karl Marx has well said that "capital comes into this world dripping blood and dirt from every one of its pores." All such drugs as weak, half-hearted palliatives of reform legislation have failed to destroy this scourge of child labor. What is needed now is the surgeon's knife to go to the root of the afflicted area. Only a major operation on the whole social order—the thoro reorganization of society on a Communist basis can end the evils of child labor.

30,000 Firetraps

The other day the workers of New York held a rousing protest demonstration against the housing system compelling them to live in fire traps. The event was occasioned by the loss of thirteen lives in a fire on Madison Street, in the heart of the congested East Side occupied by the working class.

Now Fire Chief Kenlon comes forward with information that should arouse every workingman in the country to immediate action to make impossible the recurrence of such tragedies. According to Chief Kenlon there are thirty thousand homes in New York in fire peril. Deadly, hazardous fire perils are the lot of one million members of the working class who are forced to inhabit these abominable traps. Eloquent testimony of the serious dangers confronting the workers as a result of this perilous state of affairs is afforded by the fact that in 1923 fires in the tenement houses of New York took a toll of eighty-one lives.

A most instructive sidelight on the critical conditions in the Empire city is furnished by the conclusion of Frederick C. Kuehnle, the Chief Inspector of the Bureau of Buildings in Manhattan, that if the landlord of the firetrap on Madison Street had spent $2,500 for iron staircases and wire lath-cement walls the lives of the workers and their children might have been saved.

This is the pith of the whole calamitous housing condition under which the workers of every city find themselves today. When the homes of the workingmen are privately owned and run for profits the landlords will not make the necessary repairs, will not take steps to secure the lives of the tenants against the menace of fatal blazes. To take such steps would reduce the profits and the landlords are more interested in high rates of profit on their investment than they are in the lives of their tenants. Since these same landlords are also the owners of the government, nothing can be expected from this source by the working class. There may be less than thirty thousand fire traps in Chicago, Philadelphia or San Francisco. But in all the cities of the country the houses of the workers and the municipal governments are owned by the profit-seeking landlord class. Hence all the workers face the same dangers.

Gompers Plays His Part

The March issue of Mr. Gompers' private house organ, the American Federationist, is an unusually uninteresting number. But there is one article in this issue that is even more instructive than interesting. This is the story by Mr. Gompers of Mr. Gompers' trip to Panama.

We refer to the impression Mr. Gompers tried to give his readers of the blessings Haiti has received at the hands of the American troops of occupation.

Everybody knows that the conduct of the American marines in Haiti is one of the blackest crimes perpetrated by any of the imperialist capitalist governments. American employing class military forces raped the Haitian Republic and forcibly dissolved its parliament. Even the Harvester Trust Senator McCormick of Illinois, who had previously indorsed the high-handed outrageous conduct of the forces of occupation in Haiti, has changed his mind and now advocates America's discarding its present policies.

But with Mr. Gompers it is different. The president of the American Federation of Labor quotes the so-called President Borno of the Haitian Republic to show that all the demands that have arisen in Haiti and the United States for the withdrawal of the marines had no real basis in the conditions and were unwarranted. Mr. Gompers has Borno say: "It is only the outs that are dissatisfied. One, two, or three men might some day send out a statement contrary to what is the opinion of the great majority of the Haitian people. Naturally people in the United States may think there is some basis for the charges made. But there is not."

Gompers shows his hand here as a partner to the infamous policy pursued by our industrial and financial magnates in crushing the Haitian people. This disgraceful conduct on the part of Mr. Gompers is an outrage against the whole American working class. At best Mr. Gompers speaks only for a small section of our workers, the uppermost layer of the highly skilled aristocratic workers who have been led into becoming part and parcel of the imperialist system at the expense of the great mass of workingmen massed in the big basic industries of the country. Gompers, as the loyal lackey of the organ of dollar democracy at home, the strikebreaking government of the United States, is also an organic part of the capitalist machinery of oppression abroad, a vital part of the whole imperialist system crushing the weaker peoples of the industrially less developed countries.

This is the part played by Mr. Gompers in the struggles of the workers and farmers against their exploiters and oppressors. The capitalist clique that is holding in subjection the working masses of the United States, the Philippines, Haiti, San Domingo, the Virgin Islands, and Mexico surely owes a great debt of gratitude to Mr. Gompers for his role in the class conflict raging between the employing and working classes.

The 100 per cent American students at James Patten's Northwestern University show that they are not too proud to fight. A large mob of them pelted a few peaceful students with stale eggs a few evenings ago. This indicates of course that when the next war breaks out they will all rush to Washington.

(WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE)
The Russian Communist Party branch is governing this frontier city and fighting the counter-revolution. Earlier installments tell of the fuel shortage that prevents seed grain from being fetched on the railroad. The Party meeting decides to send the Red Army far away for fuel, at the risk of leaving the city open for bandits and counter-revolutionists. It also decides to conscript the local bourgeoisie for wood cutting in a near-by park. Varied types of party members are flashed on the screen: Klimin, the efficient president of the branch, who still finds time to have a sweetheart; Robeiko, the consumptive, whose devotion is killing him; Gornuikh, the brilliant youth of 19 on the Cheka; Matusenko, the luxury-loving place-hunter and Stalmakhov, a practical workingman revolutionist. Gornuikh, disguised as a peasant, overhears talk in the market place about a plot of counter-revolutionists to seize the town while the Red Army is away getting wood. The Communist company is summoned but, perhaps, too late. Robeiko is dragged out of his house and shot, Klimin's sweetheart is butchered and Klimin and Stalmakhov are overpowered and hurled into a dungeon. The counter-revolutionaries are in possession of the town, with the Red Army away. Klimin and Stalmakhov are butchered before the Communist company led by Gornuikh can arrive. The Red Army appears at last with great reinforcements and the big battle begins with Karaulov, a rough Cossack revolutionist, in command of the Red forces.—(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY).

THEY moved forward slowly and lost many killed and wounded, and when in the blue morning mist, on the hillock by the railings and little houses, Spitsyn saw the distant lines of the enemy, the edge of the sky was already bright scarlet and the sun was on the point of gliding up from behind the rolling faraway horizon. Spitsyn was now not thinking of anything. Fastening his cartridge belt so that he could quickly and easily get at his cartridges, he aimed smartly, fired, and the rifle thundered at his ear, and jerked in his strong hands as if it were alive. Then, stopping, he ran breathlessly to the next hillock, fell on his knees, took aim once more, and again the rifle thundered at his ear. Fidein had been slightly wounded in the left shoulder, but the bone had not been touched and he remained in the ranks. Spitsyn bandaged him silently, and then they ran on again, one beside the other, and poured in the direction of the little houses and railings of the outskirts, white puffs of smoke, and invisible terrible bullets.

In times of peace, Danilov never thought of war and battles, but lived for his own pleasure, spoke at meetings, rode to the Politdep to have a row with Martuinov, and did not mind drinking and flirting with a pretty girl. But war came along and seized Danilov, only not like Seletsky as a director of fighting operations but as a soldier in the ranks. Always in battle he marched in the first line, and from far away the Red Army men saw the shining leather jacket and the scarlet riding breeches of the Commissar.

And now he had already asked Karaulov and Seletsky several times: "Give me a company and I'll go for them with the bayonet.' The Battalion Commander, not understanding him, shrugged his shoulders and turned away, and Karaulov swore at him briefly but forcibly.

What Do You Think of Our First Story?

The DAILY WORKER wants to know what its readers think of the first serial novel it offers to its readers. We have published many installments of this gripping story. Another appears today. What do you think of the story, its setting, its character, as far as we have gone? We want our readers to let us know. Write down your views and send them in to the DAILY WORKER, 1640 N. Halsted St., Chicago, Ill. We publish as many of these letters as we can find space for. Don't delay. Write today.

Danilov had been offended and had gone to the first company to find his friend Spitsyn, whom he respected for his brains, tho he laughed at him now and again. He wanted to share his resentment with him. He walked up behind the lines, sometimes distinguishing near the railings the small dark figure of an enemy and shooting at it with his revolver. Friendly and cheerfully he greeted the Red Army men, and coming up to the flank of the first company, he had already seen Spitsyn's bent back, and was just going to call him, when, suddenly, looking towards the nearest houses of the outskirts, he saw a black spot coming nearer. He looked at it sharply and keenly and stood still. A few bullets whistled over his head. But he went on staring and suddenly roared out:

"Comrades, some woman or other is running.. Be careful how you shoot."

Already they all saw her. Her hair was loose in the wind, and now and again she fell, screamed piercingly, and ran on again. In pursuit of her, from the enemy's lines, poured shot after shot. And suddenly Fidein shouted out in his ringing young voice, and his words were carried far along the ilne:

"Lads, it's our schoolmistress, it's Comrade Gratcheva!"

Others supported him:

"Yes. Yes. It's she, herself!"

Danilov ran forward with his revolver.

"Now then, Comrades, to the rescue of our schoolmistress. Come on to meet her! Forward!"

"Lie down, Comrade Gratcheva! Lie down in the snow!" Fidein shouted to her. Lisa did not understand at first what these people were shouting at her. But then she saw the line running towards her, nearer and nearer, and at last fear no longer prevented her from recognizing the familiar faces.

There they all were, dear ones, her own, more than her own! The lads she had taught the multiplication table to in the school, now armed with terrible rifles, they seemed to Lisa a powerful avenging force, a force of triumphant justice. She fell on the snow.

"How did you come here?" she heard a sharp voice, and lifting her head she saw a stern sky overhead only faintly turning blue, a dim red sun, a grey mass of houses on the hill close by, and she heard the irregular sounds of the fusilade, threaded by the monotonous tapping of the machine gun. Immediately before her, on a background of dark earth and white snow, she saw a grey, literally bloodless face, matted eyebrows, wrinkled cheeks and thin beard, and recognized the Brigade Commander, Karaulov. She was not afraid of him as she had been formerly, but, weeping, began to tell him what she had lived thru during the night.

Karaulov, not interrupting, heard the details of Robeiko's death, heard in silence the tale of Simkova's corpse, which was still lying there . . . under the grey railing . . . and Karaulov's face was motionless, except for some muscle that jerked in his cheek. But when the Battalion Commander interrupted her disconnected narrative with a brief report that connection with the railway station had been established, and that Comrade Gornuikh, the Chekist, was there with fifty railwaymen of the Communist Company, Karaulov commanded in reply, abruptly:

"Danilov! Go for them with the bayonet. Now I permit it. Finish them off, sons of dogs! Begin with the left flank. . . . Seletsky! Fire down the streets with the machine guns. . . . Take no prisoners."

And then he caught Danilov, who was delighted at the command, by the hand, held him a moment, and whispered: "Did you hear? They have killed Robeiko. . . . When the town is taken, I shall drink like sand. . . . But now, advance!"

CHAPTER XIII.

OVER the purple-brown distance of the fields, catching at the grey roofs of the houses, slowly, hanging low, heavy, damp, quiet masses of clouds floated up. They sowed a thin drizzle, hesitating, timorous, but joyful, like the first caress of love, like the trembling approach of a youth to the naked female body. The hills were invisible—the misty net of rain hid them, and under the low cloudy canopy the world was small and constricted, but the air was growing warm and saturated with moisture, just as it is under the glass of a garden frame, dimmed with a dull film of tiny drops of water.

The light wind, lazy and capriciously changing direction, carried from the fields to the town the intoxicating aroma of the dissolution of the old life and the beginning of the new, and, from the town to the fields, noises, knockings, whistles and church bells. Konstantin Petrovich was drinking in both one and the other with his whole being: he was standing on the sandy hill—there is a solitary weather-beaten rock there—and looked down at the pile of houses and the railings, the mass of churches, and the picture of the quiet little town, tedious, familiar in all its details, seemed to him transparent, and sewn with tarnished thread on an ancient faded curtain.

Some one strong and bold would finally tear it up, and there would shine out from under it the variegated colors of a new life, alien and hostile to Konstantin Petrovitch, and glowing with a beauty that he would not be able to understand. Life, like an aged snake, was once more changing its skin, throwing off the old one, faded and wrinkled, and under it were being revealed the bright patches of the never yet seen pattern of the new life. Were not these the bright patches that even now were lighting up the grey picture seen thru the smoke and rain, the scarlet flag on the building of the Circus, yes, and the red placard over the chemists's shop in the square?

And Konstantin Petrovitch looked back on the past life of the Russian people, that went on on the background of those wild misty fields, in little grey towns, in the innumerable villages, the life that had been painted by Pushkin, Turgenev, Chekhov . . . and hundreds of other Russian writers, who wept over that life that was now forever gone, described it so truly, and continually enchanted Konstantin Petrovitch with its melancholy beauty. For twenty years he had taught literature in the Gymnasium of the town, for twenty years, year by year, he had read thru the elegantly bound books that filled two cases in his little study. Their ranks had grown much thinner since the Revolution. . . . Margarita Semenova, the elderly woman who was for him both wife and servant, was exchanging them for meat, groats, flour and eggs.

(To Be Continued Thursday.)

OCHRANA OR CHEKA?

Exposure of American Ochrana.

Mr. Laidlaw has more brass than even we thought he had. His whole article is just one whine after another against what he calls the attempts to outrage and rape such lily-white innocents as Fall, Daugherty, Sinclair, Denby, Doheny, and Coolidge. The spokesman for the Republican Party invokes the aid of that Holy Ghost of American democracy—the division of governmental powers among the legislative, judicial and executive departments. This subterfuge is one of the most effective devices employed by the capitalists to hide the strikebreaking, class character of the government. Mr. Laidlaw howls to the heavens that this sacred prop of our employing class dictatorship is being undermined by the Teapot exposure. The Public Lands Committee is assuming the roles of the courts and the executive! Government by Cheka has supplanted government by Constitution, rants Mr. Laidlaw.

No one will be fooled by Mr. Laidlaw and his like. The real issue is not one between so-called constitutionalism and the cheka, but the fact that our capitalist Ochrana, our dictatorial capitalist clique dominating the country, is being exposed in its naked ugliness and given somewhat of a scare by the reaction of the working and farming masses to the revelations of the Teapot investigation.

His Pitiful Whine.

So determined is the reactionary coterie of exploiters to save its Ochrana, its secret and open brutal control of the government machinery, the means of production and exchange and the natural resources of the country, that it is even openly threatening to use force and violence in order to stifle the Teapot disclosures. Thus thundered Mr. Laidlaw in behalf of his sinister moneyed forces on guard for the capitalist class:

"Should the state legislatures follow the example set by the United States senate in the case of the Teapot committee, and should the example be followed also by the lesser legislative bodies of the country, such as municipal boards of aldermen and county boards of commissioners or supervisors, there should be a popular uprising against inquisitions in the United States, and the chaos of Russia or of France during the 'reign of terror' would be like a pleasant excursion to the country in comparison."

Class Conflicts Sharpening.

So Mr. Laidlaw and his ilk are terror-stricken and panicky. The workers and farmers of America, like their brethren in all countries ruled by the capitalist class, are rapidly approaching the time of decisive struggle between their own organized political power and the organized agencies of capitalist oppression from the government down. We are heading straight to the period when the struggle for mastery will be between the Cheka—the centralized political power of the exploited masses—and the Ochrana—the death-dealing agency of the employing class that has for years been torturing our best fighters, the bravest champions of the oppressed workers and farmers.

The proletarian dictatorship with its cheka to crush the criminal plunderers of the country's wealth like Fall and Daugherty or the Ochrana with its jails filled with striking workers and the capitalist exploiters riding rough shod over the masses—these are the only ultimate alternatives before the working and farming classes of the United States.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

Clare Sheridan says that the King of England had not any intimate friends until the British Labor party came into office. She tells us that George is very democratic and felt quite at home among the sick and wounded during the war. No doubt he appreciated the boys' heroism in behalf of his meal ticket. Even his son, the Prince of Wales, prefers jockeys to gentlemen.

• • • •

When the Ministerial list of the MacDonald government was presented to him, the King did not know what to do. There were so many aristocratic socialists there that he was up in the air, so to speak. Lords and Sirs intermixed mith a stray labor leader cluttered the cabinet menu card. But when he reached the name of John Wheatley from the Clyde, he shook his head. He had his "doots." John was a socialist and talked like one.

• • • •

Ramsay MacDonald assured His Majesty, Wheatley was a very proper person. Then the "swearing in" ceremony took place. The king knew them all by their first names. The labor members were ordered to kneel on a velvet cushion in front of him, which they did, swore allegiance to him on a New Testament which was a gift of the occasion and engraved with the name of each. The kissing of George's hand followed. After the osculatory exercises were over the king buttonholed Ramsay MacDonald and whispered in his ear, "Of all my Ministerial subjects, Ramsay, old dear, the one who gave me the most lingering kiss was subject Wheatley." Now, there you are.

The DAILY WORKER may carry a news item like this in the year 1950, social revolutions and other circumstances permitting: "Congressman Puddlebrain introduced a bill in the House today authorizing the president to appoint a committee of three with a view to examining the possibilities of the scheme suggested by J. P. Bloater of the Alaska Lumber Trust, to provide disabled veterans of the war for democracy with crutches and mahogany frames for their honorable discharge certificates. The congressman suggested the following names to the president: Congressmen Flimflam of Missouri, Kokum of New York and Kelly Poole of Chicago. Congressman Puddlebrain resented the imputation that Mr. Bloater was moved by any motive but the welfare of the ex-servicemen when he made the suggestion. A bill to give the veterans of the great war adjusted compensation in the form of iodine for their rheumatism was introduced today in the senate by Hodge Podge of Massachusetts. It is opposed by the Senator Turpentine from Georgia."

The Vatican is contemplating recognition of the Soviet government. Negotiations are in progress to arrange a treaty. It seems that the spurt of enthusiasm which prevailed in counter-revolutionary quarters has now died down and His Holiness is doing the wise thing. Coupled with this information came the news that the Greek regent succeeded in finding a man to take the country off his hands. The victim has a long name but we doubt if his term will be so long. Our favorite restaurant could throw no light on what penitentiary he escaped from, but the opinion was hazarded that he must be a second story worker, who figures on a quick getaway in case of trouble.

Ramsay Has Tough Time.

Ramsay MacDonald has a tough time trying to please Lord Curzon and the manufacturers and keep his labor followers at his heels at the same time. Well, they are at his heels—barking. The labor leaders who are not in the cabinet do not see any reason why they should not be called into conference whenever matters affecting the interests of their unions come before the government. MacDonald was told that the workers do not appreciate the blessings of government-appointed courts of inquiry as was established in the last strike. They prefer to fight it out without the intervention of an alleged sympathetic body.

16 More Syndicalism Cases.

SACRAMENTO, March 11.—Of the 23 I. W. W. members arrested in a raid on a conference of the organization here, 16 have been held on a criminal syndicalism charge. They will presumably be tried before Judge Busick, author of the anti-I. W. W. injunction, and the judge who sent Tom Connors to jail for five years for circularizing the state in favor of a repeal of the syndicalism law.

The Poor Fish says: I notice that Major George Berry is a candidate for the vice-presidency. Gompers fears that Coolidge may be squirted out of office and he must have a strike-breaker in the White House.

NATIONAL FARMER-LABOR MEET PLANS MADE

INCLUDE-ALL JUNE 17 CALL IS AGREED ON

Expect Thousands of Delegates at Farmer-Labor Meet

BY WILLIAM F. DUNNE
(Special to The Daily Worker)

ST. PAUL, Minn., Mar. 12.—After considerable discussion the call for the June 17th convention to organize a national Farmer-Labor Party, which will wage a vigorous campaign in the coming national elections, was adopted by the St. Paul Conference of Farmer-Labor delegates here.

The only opposition to the call came from the handful of delegates who represented a negligible following in Illinois. William E. Rodriguez, Gifford Ernst, Robert M. Buck, J. G. Brown and William V. Mahoney, of Washington, D. C., whom everybody here believes to be the under cover agent of Samuel Gompers, constituted most of the opposition to this call.

Call All-Inclusive.

The delegates are going back to their respective Farmer-Labor parties imbued with confidence that the June 17th convention will be the biggest gathering of progressive workers and farmers this country has yet seen. The call adopted by the conference is an all-inclusive one and invites the labor and the political groups of the workers and farmers the country over.

Mr. Mahoney, of Washington, who represented at this gathering "the unity committee of Washington, D. C.", a creature of his own making, was the leading opponent of this call. Brown, Buck, Rodriguez and Ernst, of Illinois, in co-operation with Mr. Teigen, Magnus Johnson's secretary, made repeated but vain assaults against the call being so inclusive.

Workers Party the Target.

The target of the attack launched by the Rodriguez faction was the Workers Party and the Federated Farmer-Labor Party. The delegates overwhelmingly defeated these disruptive efforts of the disturbers.

Rodriguez and his followers were given all the time they wanted to make their attacks. Mr. Rodriguez, in the course of one of his speeches read for more than half an hour extracts from articles and manifestos that appeared from time to time in the DAILY WORKER.

Stuff Too Old For Capitalists.

Rodriguez made no headway at all with his arguments. At the close of his speech a reporter for one of the capitalist newspapers, The Pioneer Press, remarked: "I believe he made a lot of converts for the Communists".

Buck and Brown followed along the same lines that Rodriguez did. They made a desperate effort to stampede the delegates by painting crimson pictures of a red menace. This did not take at all with the delegates, particularly the farm delegates, who time and again wanted to end the discussion.

Manley Makes Able Reply.

Joseph Manley, national secretary of the Federated Farmer-Labor party, then took the floor and in one of the ablest speeches delivered to the conference completely disposed of all the arguments made by Rodriguez and the others.

The welcome that Manley's speech received showed what sorry figures Buck, Brown and Rodriguez cut before the conference. The arguments of the latter were so childish that even the capitalist press did not fall for them and discontinued giving them the prominence which their authors had hoped would be accorded them.

Communists Defended.

Delegate W. H. Green, from Nebraska, ridiculed the fears of the Illinois faction with considerable effect. He was followed by Delegate R. D.

FARMER-LABOR MEN UNITE IN CALLING BIG JUNE 17 CONVENTION

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ST. PAUL, Minn., March 12.—The call for the June 17th national convention of farmer-labor forces was signed by William Mahoney, St. Paul and R. D. Cramer, Minneapolis, representing the Minnesota Farmer-Labor movement; by Joseph Manley, secretary and William Bouck, chairman of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party. Bouck is also president of the Western Progressive Farmers of Washington state; by Chairman R. H. Walker and Secretary H. R. Martinson, North Dakota Farmer-Labor party; Chairman Tom Ayres and Alice Lorraine Daly, South Dakota Farmer-Labor party; Chairman J. L. Beebe and Secretary Wm. H. Green, Nebraska Progressive party; Chairman C. E. Taylor and Secretary P. Budden, Montana Farmer-Labor party; Secretary John C. Kennedy, Washington state Farmer-Labor party, and James Campbell, Buffalo Labor party.

The close of this conference is being followed in Minneapolis by the Farmer-Labor federation of Minnesota which expects to become the vital force in the Minnesota state party. Then tomorrow the Minnesota Nonpartisan league and the Working People's Nonpartisan Political league, the industrial wing of the party hold their separate conventions for Minnesota in Minneapolis. The actual state convention of the Farmer-Labor party opens in St. Cloud, 75 miles northwest of the Twin Cities March 14.

BIG SUB DRIVE LAUNCHED BY DAILY WORKER

Campaign Will Open on March Fifteen

The first nation-wide subscription campaign undertaken by The DAILY WORKER will open officially on March 15, and will continue until June 15. The quota set by the campaign managers is 10,000 new readers by the end of the drive.

The record of progress made by The DAILY WORKER is little short of marvelous. Since the campaign opened last August to sell shares, until today, the workers of this country have witnessed a piece of successful organizing unequalled in the history of the working class movement in this country.

Today The DAILY WORKER is out in the streets, in the factories, in the mines, out among the exploited farmers in the fields fighting for them and with them, helping them in their daily battles against the organized greed of the capitalists and pointing the way to the solution of the problems of the producing class of this country, the Workers Republic and Communism.

Skeptical people who have grown weary in the struggle, shook their heads last fall when the Workers Party of America started the work of raising $100,000, that was deemed essential before the first issue of the fighting labor daily would make its appearance. But the militants in the Workers Party have faith in their cause. They have energy. They don't know what the word failure means, and on the 13th day of January, the first issue of The DAILY WORKER came off the press.

Today, two months after the first issue appeared. The DAILY WORKER owns its own building where it will soon move into. This guarantees its permanency as much as it is humanly possible to do so. It's home will indeed be the centre of the radical movement in America.

The new campaign for 10,000 readers starts off with the advantage that the solicitors will have no difficulty in assuring the workers that the DAILY WORKER is now firmly established and that its permanency is assured.

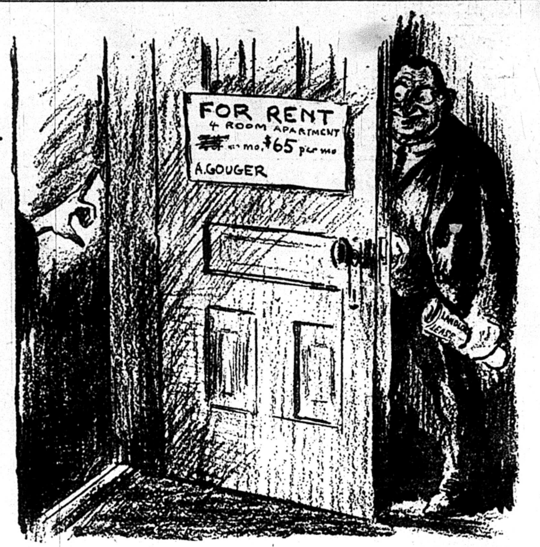
Detroit High School Students Forced to Defend Corruption

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., March 12.—That the role of the American school is to train apologists for the capitalist system and the inevitable graft and corruption of public life which it entails, is evidenced by the assignment given a Senior English Class of Northwestern High School, Detroit, of vindicating the acts of social treachery of Coolidge, Daugherty, Denby, McAdoo, and Newberry in a written essay to be handed in March 12th. Tho some were inclined to condemn rather than vindicate, no option was allowed the students.

STEP INTO THE PARLOR



Accept Daily Worker's Suggestion That Labor's "Committee of 15" Be Invited to Garment Strike Hearing

As the result of the suggestion made by the DAILY WORKER the Commissioner of Public Welfare, Mary McDowell, has invited the "Committee of 15" of the Chicago Federation of Labor to send representatives to the conference which will be held between the representatives of the striking garment workers and the employers this afternoon. "I had not thought of asking the 'Committee of 15' until the DAILY WORKER suggested it," Miss McDowell said. "I am glad the DAILY WORKER made the suggestion."

The meeting will be held in the office of the Commissioner of Public Welfare in the City Hall Square building, starting at 2:30 o'clock.

The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union will be represented by its president, Morris Sigman and Meyer Perlstein, vice-president.

SENATE VOTES PROBE OF REVENUE BUREAU, CHARGE INEFFICIENCY

WASHINGTON, March 12th.—Without a dissenting vote, the Senate today adopted a resolution by Senator Couzens, Michigan, providing for an investigation of the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

Couzens in a speech charged that "gross inefficiency and improper organization" handicap administration of the bureau.

Senators Watson, Indiana, chairman; Ernest, Kentucky; Couzens, Michigan; Jones, New Mexico, and King, Utah, were appointed by Senator Cummins, president pro-tempore, to conduct the investigation.

Big Electric Station Is Furnishing Power For Kuzbas Workers

KEMEROVO, Kuzbas, March 12.—The electric power station has just been completed and began operations furnishing light and power to the mines, factories and dwellings of the workers.

The chemical factory began operations Feb. 15.

Townley Fails to Keep Farmers From United Front With Workers

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minnesota, March 12.—The Farmer-Labor Federation Convention opened here this morning in Richmond Hall with two hundred and fifty delegates present and more arriving hourly. The attempt of Townley forces to keep the farmers away from the convention seemed to have failed as delegations were about evenly divided between farmers and wage earners.

William Mahoney was chosen chairman and Ralph L. Harmon secretary. The credentials committee made a partial report following the address of welcome by Mahoney and report on organization by Harmon. The convention will finish its business today before the session of the Working People's Nonpartisan Political League which convenes at 10 A. M. tomorrow.

It is expected that the latter organization will endorse the decisions of the Farmer-Labor Federation and fuse with the larger and more representative body. Delegates from the amalgamated organization will then attend the convention in St. Cloud which finishes a series of conventions and conferences that have been called to bring unity among the Farmer-Labor forces in Minnesota.

The convention today is remarkable in the respect that it is the first gathering of its kind including the farmers and wage earners and representatives of their respective economic organizations for joint political action. There is an atmosphere of optimism prevailing and the success of the unity plans seemed assured.

KANSAS MINERS STANDING SOLID FOR ALEX HOWAT

Vote for Special Meet On Expulsions

By TOM TIPPET
(Staff Correspondent of the Federated Press)

PITTSBURGH, Kan., March 12.—Alexander Howat and all other deposed officials of District 14, United Mine Workers, were voted five months' back salary by the convention of Kansas miners in session here. This period covers their official term interrupted by their expulsion from the union when the international organization revoked the Kansas district charter in 1921.

Two other Howat resolutions were also passed; one calling for a special international convention to settle the Kansas controversy, the other demanding of the international, reinstatement in the union for Howat and the other expelled men.

The resolution calling for reinstatement met with little opposition. The other two precipitated the hottest debate so far in the convention which is entering its second week. The one demanding a special international convention was the most bitterly fought by the administration forces.

D. A. Frampton, ex-president of the adjoining Missouri district and now an international organizer, defended the international's position in the Howat case.

The delegates then demanded the floor for Howat who attends the sessions daily. Howat denied the charges made by Frampton and said he had complied with every ruling of the national board that he knew of and that he had done everything it had told him to do to bring about a trial for himself as well as the other expelled officials.

He has not yet been given a trial, he says, and was prevented by force from presenting his case to the last international convention and said the fight against the measure before the house was directed by the international because of the inspiration favorable action on it would give the miners elsewhere in the country who are agitated by the same question.

Howat appealed for a special convention so that both sides of his case may be heard by rank and file delegates. The affirmative vote on all three resolutions was overwhelming. International Board Member Watkins from Iowa was denied the floor on the special convention resolution by a vote of the house after Frampton and Howat had spoken. A demand for a rollcall mustered but 27 votes out of the 145 delegates present.

McLEAN ADMITS HE LIED ABOUT DOHENY'S LOAN OF $100,000 MADE TO FALL

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, March 12.—Mrs. Roxie Stinson, divorced wife of Jess W. Smith, was the first witness late today before the Senate committee investigating Attorney General Daugherty, Senator Wheeler, a member of the committee, announced.

Wheeler revealed today that he went to Columbus, Ohio, and brought Mr. Stinson back with him to testify.

While the Senate oil committee was reaching a new peak in its investigation with the testimony of E. B. McLean that he lied to oblige his friend, Albert B. Fall, the Daugherty investigating body suddenly announced the opening of public hearings.

McLean, occupying the witness stand for three hours, gave the committee little new information beyond his explanation that he told an untrue story of the $100,000 "loan" to Fall because Fall asked him to and assured him the "loan" had nothing to do with oil. Fall apparently got McLean to tell the story to keep secret the fact that he really got the money from E. L. Doheny.

Announcement that the Daugherty probe would open today followed swiftly on a secret trip by Senator Wheeler, Montana, and the announcement that the committee would go first into stories that bootleggers got protection from the department of justice, thru Jessie Smith, close friend of Daugherty, who killed himself a few months ago. Wheeler brought several witnesses with him and these probably will be examined today. The committee abandoned for the present its investigation of a plot between American oil men and Mexican revolutionists.

In a lengthy statement to the investigating committee McLean declared:

1. That he never knew Harry F. Sinclair, lessee of Teapot Dome, or ever speculated in any of the Sinclair company stock.
2. That he does not know E. L. Doheny and never speculated in any Doheny stock.
3. That he knew former Secretary of Interior Albert B. Fall and former Secretary of the Navy Denby only as personal friends and never had any official dealings with them.
4. That he speculated in Pure Oil stock in 1922 as an entirely personal matter and that he handled none of the dealings of others reported to have been implicated in that transaction.

McLean indicated that he told his first story about lending $100,000 to Fall merely because Fall was a personal friend.

Suicides In Daugherty's Apartment.

Mrs. Stinson, Wheeler said, was divorced from Smith eight years ago, but was "his close friend and confidant" in spite of that fact.

The investigators will seek to learn whether Smith had any connection with reported protection afforded bootleg liquor rings, granting of paroles to bootleggers and use of "influence" in dispensing federal patronage. He was a close personal and political friend of Daugherty.

Mrs. Stinson, Wheeler indicated, is ready to tell the committee a full story of Smith's receipt of stocks, bonds and money for services rendered in his capacity as a friend of the attorney general.

Fears For Her Life.

Senator Wheeler in springing this surprise is understood to have done so because Mrs. Stinson, his first and

"TEAPOT" GUSHER ISSUE TO SPILL NEW SCANDALS

Big Orders Arrive for March 17 Special

Our readers, who have been sending in orders for bundles of "Teapot Specials" of March 17th, are brimful of curiosity as to what kind of a gusher there will be.

"Gusher" is the word for this "Teapot Special." It is the bursting forth March 17th of the accumulated oil scandal stories that our regular six-page daily hasn't room for. "Apples," "Apricots," the "Principal" and all the rest of the Coolidge crew thought that by working overtime they could keep ahead of The DAILY WORKER, but the "Special" will catch up with them. Ha! Ha!

Palmer Too.

So the eight-page special will appear—with plenty of storage space in its tank form—to produce all the left over facts on the greatest steal since the days of A. Mitchell Palmer —and that pirate's doings too.

"Enroll me for 50 copies of the "Teapot Special," for which I am enclosing check for $1.00. I wish that ten million workers would subscribe to the daily. I am doing what I can; my daily goes from hand to hand until it is impossible to read it any longer. It is the best of all publications."—JOHN KOBI.

"Biggest Oil Flow."

"Enclose $1.00 for 50 copies of the "Teapot Special" number coming March 17.

"Your paper is a wonder. You've struck the biggest oil flow in the United States. Truth is mighty and will prevail. You are proclaiming it in every issue. No more big dailies for me while you are in the field."

J. H. Jasper of Detroit thinks that a string of five friends in various parts of the country could distribute 50 "Teapot Specials" apiece. So he sends in $5.00 for five bundle orders of fifty.

Poet Orders 50.

Our daily is a dandy,
It surely takes the candy,
It comes in mighty handy
With grit that's surely sandy.
Long live The DAILY WORKER.

These are merely samples. From New England to Florida and the far west the orders for the "Teapot Special" are hastening in. Better get your order in at once to be sure of getting it.

Party branches are calling for orders of 500 apiece and more, besides the increased bundle orders from newsdealers and individual comrades in their towns.

Two cents each in bundle orders of 50 and more ($1.00 for 50).

Two dollars for 100.

THE DAILY WORKER, 1640 N. Halsted St.,
Chicago, Illinois.

Send me..................copies of "The Teapot Special" Edition of the DAILY WORKER, to be dated Monday, March 17, at the rate of two cents per copy; $1 for 50; $2 per 100.—I want to help the workers and farmers learn the real meaning of these great revelations against the social system that is oppressing them.

PROBING OF D. UGHERTY IS NOW ON

Final Preparations of Attack Were Made in Secret star witness, expressed fear of her life.

After some preliminary questioning by Wheeler in Columbus, Mrs. Stinson is understood to have "told the whole story," a complete case for the committee.

The period to be described by the witness was understood to cover the time from the election of the late President Harding in November, 1920 to May, 1923, when Smith died by his own hand.

Smith, according to witness's story as it was to be told: was constantly receiving considerable sums for favors he was able to do wealthy men during that period.

Examine White House Doorkeeper.

Prior to examining McLean, the committee put P. E. McKenna, doorkeeper at the White House executive offices; E. W. Starling, White House secret service man, and E. W. Smithers, White House telegrapher, on the stand to explain telegrams they sent to McLean at Palm Beach.

McKenna told the committee that he had wired McLean that C. Bascom Slemp, the president's secretary, was leaving for Florida because McLean had asked him to and Slemp had given his consent.

Starling explained that messages between himself and McLean concerned employment of a man named "Wilkins" as guard for McLean's young son.

Smithers, who operated McLean's private wire between Washington and Palm Beach, told the committee he had asked for the position to earn some extra money and that his duties were exclusively confined to transmitting the messages and news digests that were sent over the private wire.

The fight to oust Attorney General Daugherty was carried into the open here today. The investigating committee masked its preparations in secrecy.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler, democrat, of Montana, who will assume charge of the open hearing at which Daugherty's management of his department's affairs will be attacked, disappeared for 24 hours.

One report was that the Montana Senator was delving personally into the files of the Department of Justice, seeking certain records in connection with the revolt of Estaban Cantu in Lower California in 1921. This is the subject on which the committee's attention first will be focussed, the idea being to show that Daugherty ordered his agents to cease interference with gun running and illegal recruiting that Cantu might win and American oil interests benefit thereby.

Seek "Jesse Smith" Wires.

The Daugherty investigating committee today ordered telegraph companies to produce all telegrams received and sent by Jesse Smith, friend of the attorney general, who committed suicide in Daugherty's apartment. Messages passing between November 4, 1920, and the time of Smith's death were asked for.

In making this announcement Senator Burton K. Wheeler, democrat, Montana, who has charge of the investigation, said that the committee had taken up a new line and indicated that the relations of Daugherty and Smith might prove the initial point of attack instead of the Cantu revolution.

Probe Bootlegging, Too.

Investigation of bootlegging activities in the capital and elsewhere, efforts to secure pardons and paroles for bootleggers and the doling out of Federal patronage, will be gone into first by the committee, Wheeler indicated. He refused to go into any detail regarding his purpose in calling for the Smith telegrams.

Showing up at his office after a mysterious 24 hour absence, Wheeler today was accompanied by three persons identified to inquirers simply as Mr. Fink, Mr. Sterner and Mr. Stinson. They went into his office with him.

Here's Call for the National Farmer-Labor Convention to Be Held in St. Paul, Minn., June 17

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ST. PAUL, Minn., March 12.—The Call issued here for the June 17th National Convention of all Farmer-Labor forces in the United States is in full as follows.

• • •

THE Declaration of Independence, a document underlying the institutions of this country, states that every human being is endowed with certain inalienable rights and that among these are "the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." These rights are today denied the great mass of people of this country by a privileged class which thru its economical and political power dominates the life of this country.

The privileged class has, thru the organization of "trusts," thru interlocking directorates, thru the great banking institutions of Wall Street concentrated the control of the economic life of the country in the hands of a financial oligarchy with its headquarters in Wall Street. It uses its power to amass great wealth for itself at the expense of the happiness and well-being of the farmers and industrial workers who are the producers of the wealth of this country.

In order to maintain its privileges and to aid in its exploitation of the farmers and industrial workers this privileged class has fastened its grip upon the government. It uses the legislative, executive and judicial branches of the government alike as instruments in its service to secure greater and greater profits and to amass greater and greater wealth. The recent exposures of corruption in connection with the Teapot Dome oil scandal is but one outstanding incident showing how the government power is used to loot the natural resources of the nation.

During the past few years millions of farmers have been driven from the farms because unable to secure even the means for a livelihood thru their labor as a result of the exploitation by the privileged class. The Esch-Cummins law passed in the interest of the railroad owners has been one factor in producing this situation.

The industrial workers, struggling to maintain their organizations and a decent standard of living, have found that this privileged class has at its command the powers of the government whenever the struggle over the right to organize, wages and working conditions have resulted in a strike. The use of injunctions against the workers on strike is an everyday occurrence. The infamous Daugherty injunction against the railroad shopmen still stands—an injunction which at one stroke robbed the workers of every right supposedly guaranteed by the constitution.

The Republican and Democratic party have proven themselves equally the instruments of the privileged class in using the governmental power against the farmers and industrial workers.

These conditions have developed a widespread movement by the farmers and industrial workers to organize a political party which will fight their battles and challenge the continued rule of the privileged class in this country.

The political organizations of farmers and industrial workers, scattered over the country, must be united for the 1924 presidential campaign, so that they may present a united front against the parties of the privileged class and join in a common struggle against that class.

To achieve this end this call for a National Convention in the Twin Cities, June 17th, for the purpose of nominating a candidate for president and vice president and adopting a national platform is issued.

We extend an invitation to send delegates to this convention to all farmer organizations, local trade unions, central labor bodies, state federation of labor, international unions, co-operative organizations, labor fraternal organizations and all farmer and labor political organizations, the Non-partisan League and the Committee of 48, provided that they endorse the following tentative program:—

- A—Public ownership.
- B—Governmental Banking.
- C—Public control of all natural resources.
- D—Restoration of civil liberties guaranteed by the constitution.
- E—The abolition of the use of the injunction in labor disputes.

The basis of representation in the convention shall be as follows:

1. Each state shall be allowed votes equal to its electoral vote, plus one vote for each five thousand votes or major fraction thereof, cast for the progressive candidate receiving the highest number of votes in the 1922 general election. Any state delegation failing to agree the total vote of such state shall be apportioned equally among the delegates from that state.

2. Each national political organization shall be entitled to five votes; each national economic organization shall be entitled to five votes, provided such organization shall have subscribed to the fundamental principles upon which the call for the convention is based.

Apportionment of Delegates.

1. Each state federation, central body, and local organization of labor, farmers, business or professional men shall be entitled to one delegate. Also any group of twenty-five or more farmers, not representative thru another organization from the same territory, affixing their signatures and addresses to a credential indicating their agreement with the political demands enumerated in the convention call, shall be entitled to one delegate.

2. Each state political organization having legal standing, shall be entitled to five delegates; where no legal standing exists a state political organization shall have but one delegate.

This CALL for a CONVENTION is issued by the Committee of Arrangements in the name of the following organizations:

Signed:

Agree On June 17th Call

Cramer delivered a brilliant speech. Point by point he took up the objections, insinuations and lies of the obstructionists, and mercilessly tore them to shreds.

"You people", said Cramer, "hold up Minnesota as the model you wish to be guided by, yet you ask and insist that this conference do the thing Minnesota has refused to do, namely, exclude any group of workers that will go along with the program. This all-inclusive policy is responsible for our success in Minnesota".

Communists Are Dynamic Force.

Cramer went on to shell the arguments of the obstructionists with deadly effect and said: "You want to exclude the elements that are the dynamos of the movement, and without which no movement can live and be successful. We have to choose between being successful and being respectable, and you want us to choose respectability. These arguments of yours are the arguments used by Daugherty, Denby and the rest of the hundred percenters, before they were using all their time to wipe off the stain of oil and dodge the penitentiary. These arguments of yours would be allright in a convention of republicans or democrats, but they are out of place in a gathering of farmers and workers who are here to build a defense against a common enemy. Let's start to build and quit acting like small editions of Elbert H. Gary."

Tremendous applause followed Cramer's speech, and the previous question on the convention call was carried.

Teigen's Last Effort.

The question was reopened, however, in order to permit Teigen to stage the last effort of the obstructionists by introducing an amendment to eliminate all national parties from the call.

This amendment was defeated. A committee on arrangements was then elected and the conference adjourned.

Negligible Opposition Discredited.

The Illinois malcontents have been thoroly trounced and discounted at this conference. They have declared that they will not attend the June 17th convention. The numerical strength of this group is negligible. It was obvious to everybody at the outset of the conference that their sole object in coming was to make war on the Workers Party.

The delegates are convinced that the only purpose of these obstructionists was not constructive, and was directed at breaking up the conference thru an attack on the Communists.

Expect Monster Convention.

The Minnesota Farmer-Labor Federation will open its sessions today. There is very little doubt as to its action on the call. The call and the basis of representation will be adopted by the Federation, and it will join immediately in calling the June 17th convention.

It is estimated that 5,000 delegates will be present at the June convention. The basis of representation decided upon calls for one delegate for each vote which a state has in the electoral college and one vote for each 5,000 votes cast in any state in the election of 1922 for a "progressive candidate".

Five votes are allowed for each national political organization which subscribes to the platform. One delegate is to be allowed for each national economic organization. One delegate is provided for each local farmer organization, labor union, and co-operative, or units of the Nonpartisan League, or working people's Nonpartisan political leagues. Five delegates will be seated from each state progressive political party legally recognized. One delegate from any state political party not legally recognized and one delegate bearing credentials from any group of twenty-five or more farmers will be permitted.

LaFollette's Manager Speaks.

Before the conference adjourned John F. Sinclair, a northwestern bankrupt banker, who recently returned from Europe after making an investigation of the economic and political conditions in various continental countries, was permitted to address the delegates. Mr. Sinclair is recognized to be LaFollette's manager in Minnesota. In his address to the delegates Mr. Sinclair praised the Soviet government and the Russian Communist Party. He urged the Conference to include all working class groups.

Important Motions on Questions of Policy And Organization

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ST. PAUL, Minn., March 12.—Among the historic declarations of the gathering of farmer-labor forces here were the following motions and resolutions on organization and policy, which were adopted unanimously:

Negotiations With C. P. P. A.

"The Committee on Arrangements is authorized to carry on negotiations with the National Committee of the C. P. P. A. for co-operation between the two groups, but is not authorized to anyway alter or change the call for the Convention May 30th. It shall report the result of its negotiations to the Convention May 30th for approval by the Convention."

Instructions on Arrangements.

"That the Committee on Arrangements is instructed to remain in St. Paul until after the action of the farmer-labor organization of Minnesota and issue the call for the convention immediately after such endorsement is received."

Committee on Arrangements.

That there be added to the present Committee of Arrangements consisting of Wm. Mahoney, C. A. Schapper, Wm. Teigen, Robert Cramer and J. A. H. Hopkins four additional members, so as to broaden the basis of representation for the various state parties and national organizations participating in the Conference. Walker of North Dakota, Green of Nebraska, Ayres of South Dakota, Manley of Federated Farmer-Labor party were added to the committee with J. F. Sinclair of Minneapolis at the request of Henry Teigen.

Motion on Organization Work.

That each group participating in the Conference is urged to carry on an active organization campaign to build local and state organizations in support of the May 30th and for the purpose of carrying on the campaign after the convention. William Mahoney expressed a desire to resign from the Arrangements Committee but after tributes to the value of his services given by Tom Ayres and Joseph Manley followed by a rising vote of confidence he consented to remain until the committee got its work underway.

Just before adjournment pledges of finance were made as follows: Federated Farmer-Labor party $500; South Dakota F. L. P. $100; Montana and Nebraska $100 each; Farmer-Labor party of Washington and the Western Progressive Farmers $100 each. The conference adjourned with the slogan of "On to June 17."

Smouldering Fire Halts Removal of Bodies From Mine

CASTLE GATE, Utah, March 12. in the lower workings of No. 2 mine of the Utah Fuel Company here, brought a halt to rescue work today.

Fifteen bodies have been located in a portion of the mine that has become flooded.

One hundred and twenty-seven bodies have been recovered.

The little town is the scene of one of the greatest tragedies in the history of mining in the United States. Hope has now completely given way to grief.

Heartbroken widows sob their hearts out as body after body is brought to the surface. Halls formerly used for recreation purposes are now filled with dead.

Many of the victims were World War veterans. They braved the dangers of the German shells for the American capitalists only to meet their doom in peace, toiling to produce profits for the same masters.

New York Slops to Work.

NEW YORK, March 12—New York slopped to work thru slush covered streets today, buffeted by a strong gale, as the city was held in the grip of one of the most disagreeable storms of the season.

Detroit Sub-Getters for Daily Worker Celebrate with Banquet

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., March 12.—The many active friends of the DAILY WORKER whose efforts have made the subscription drive a success, will gather in the House of the Masses, Saturday, March 15th, at 8 p. m. to crown their labors with a sumptuous feast.

That the occasion may be cheerful and spirited even without the aid of Canadian "imports", Comrade "Bill" Dunne has been secured to enliven the proceedings with some "selected" stories, and to enlighten the local comrades on some shady chapters in Comrade District Organizer Edgar Owen's past. Comrade Dunne assures us that all the gentle pirates are not in Coolidge's cabinet, and he promises many revelations concerning many other Detroiters with revolutionary pretensions.

The committee in charge wishes to assure all attending that a real meal will be served, and with "Bill" as toastmaster, nothing more need be said. All DAILY WORKER readers are invited.

The place—House of the Masses, Gratiot at St. Aubin Ave.
Time—8 p. m. Price—$1.00 per cover.

Wanted: A United Front of All Labor In Garment Strike

TODAY an attempt will be made by the Commissioner of Public Welfare, Mary McDowell, to bring representatives of the clothing manufacturers and the striking dressmakers together for a conference. On the suggestion of the DAILY WORKER an invitation was sent to the "Committee of Fifteen," appointed by John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, to attend the conference.

The DAILY WORKER deplores the fact that until now organized labor in Chicago has not thrown its weight effectively into this struggle on the side of the striking dressmakers. On March 2, a resolution was passed at the Chicago Federation of Labor pledging the support of that body of strikers. A "Committee of Fifteen" was appointed. But the Committee might as well be shut up in King Tut's tomb for all the effect it has had on the strike as far as the workers can see.

The DAILY WORKER repeats that the cause of the striking dressmakers is the cause of every worker in the city of Chicago, and outside as well. A defeat for them is a defeat for all of us. The workers look to the Chicago Federation of Labor for leadership. The delegates gave its leaders the authority to act. It is time something is done.

The striking dressmakers are putting up a splendid fight against overwhelming odds, judges, state's attorneys, the Chamber of Commerce, the mayor and his police, the detective agencies, the capitalist press. There is one organization in Chicago that could outfight this combination if it chose, that is the organized labor movement represented by the Chicago Federation of Labor.

The "Committee of Fifteen" should get busy at once. Its representatives at today's conference should make it quite clear that it stands four square with the striking workers, in deeds as well as in words, in action as well as in resolutions. The "Committee of Fifteen" can speak authoritatively in the name of hundreds of thousands of workers in this city. That voice will be listened to. It can speak so that the capitalist press, which is now closed to the strikers' side of the case, will have to take heed. This strike can be won in twenty-four hours if only organized labor in this city is given a lead by its leaders. LET US HAVE A UNITED FRONT!

When any section of labor is under fire from the enemy then is the time to lay aside differences of opinion as to the ultimate goal. The thing to do in such a situation is to stand together and beat the boss, the enemy of all workers. We are in the midst of such a situation now. The dressmakers are a section of labor's army. It is on the firing line. What is the rest of the army doing? Staying back of the lines! This must not be.

The DAILY WORKER urges the workers of Chicago to get behind the garment strikers in real earnest. The bosses thought they had them beaten from the start, but they got the surprise of their lives. Practically unaided, the dressmakers are bringing them to their knees. With a united front of all workers the victory will be quick and complete. It is up to the "Committee of Fifteen" to give the lead. Let us have a real United Front in this strike!

Our Suggestion Is Accepted

officials about the strike.

"The spirit of the strikers is fine. We all know we will win," he told a DAILY WORKER reporter. "I am here to tell the strikers that in their strike they have the backing of the enire International organization."

Bosses' Spokesmen Mum.

Dudley Taylor and Leo LeBosky who represent two groups of the bosses, were both "too busy" to talk with a reporter yesterday.

Neither of the groups which they represent have given any indication to the Commissioner of Public Welfare whether or not they intend to be present at the meeting tomorrow.

"Contented" Employes!!

Arthur Weiss of Arthur Weiss & Co., and A. H. Mitchell of Mitchell Bros., two of the biggest manufacturers have told Mayor Dever, that there is nothing that they can discuss with the union since their employees are working under the open shop and are peaceful and contented.

The falsity of this is proven by the facts brought out in the report of the residents of Hull House which was read to the Mayor, in which it is stated that Arthur Weiss is very active in giving the police orders telling them what to do and what not to do in the hope of bringing employes back to the shop.

Whether or not this will have any effect on the attitude of the other bosses toward the meeting to be held by the Commissioner of Public Welfare remains to be seen.

Mass Trials Probable.

When Joe Gilles and Abe Schrotte were arraigned before Judge Walker, in Branch 19 (jury branch) of the Municipal court yesterday, on charges of disorderly conduct, they asked for a continuance until March 27. Their request was granted. These were the first cases of strikers to be called in the jury court. Their action indicates that the lawyers for the union will ask that all the cases growing out of the strike be massed and tried at the same time.

When Rose Goldberg, Emma Goldberg, Florence Corn, Jennie Lieberman and Eva Birk were arraigned in S. Clark Street police court yesterday morning on two charges of disorderly conduct and two charges of assault and battery, each preferred by Officer Grable of the State's Attorney's office, the judge had to smile.

According to Grable the girls beat him and another man and broke his arm and scratched his face. E. T. Rickert, attorney for the girls, asked the judge to convict the girls at once and soothe the injured feelings of the outraged copper.

"Poor, Defenseless Officer."

"Here are a bunch of girls who have assaulted this poor innocent officer. He was defenseless. They scratched his face. They broke his arm. Something ought to be done."

"Maybe you think is funny. Maybe you would like it," Grable said to Rickert. "Look at me face. It's full of iodine."

"That face of yours needs iodine," said one of the girls. "It looks too much like vinegar now."

"I wish you would tell your troubles to a jury, Officer Grable," Judge Trude said. "If the defendants don't object, I will send this case to the jury court."

There was no objection from the girls and so the case was sent to the jury court.

The girls were arrested as a result of a beating Grable and Mr. Dolinsky, of Katz and Dolinsky, gave them at the corner of Market and Jackson Sts., Tuesday evening. Grable and other officers from Crowe's office were trying to give the girls copies of the injunctions. They refused to take them. Then Grable and the other officers threatened them. The girls refused to be frightened and told the coppers to chase themselves.

The coppers began to curse and then walked off. In the meantime, Dolinsky, who was watching the performance, followed the officers and induced Grable to return. Grable took hold of one of the girls and struck her. Dolinsky threw his arm around another and tried to knock her down.

Pushes Girls Into Wagon.

The girls resisted and a scuffle followed. When more police came up the five girls, three of whom were only watching the others defend themselves, were arrested.

At that time Grable was able to use both his arms in pushing the girls into the patrol wagon. When the girls were taken to S. Clark Street police station they were charged with assault and disorderly conduct.

EVANSTON COPS LOSE FIGHT ON CHICAGO PICKETS

Quit Deporting Workers Of Windy City

Evanston's effort to imitate the copper companies in Bisbee by deporting strike pickets failed at last.

Aroused by the police chief's policy of throwing Chicago visitors to the strike zone into automobiles and dumping them out of the city another force of workers from the metropolis went up there in the morning: Carrie Gallagher, Minnie Edelman, Martha Robitzka and May Oppenheim and David Feidelson. They were deported as usual.

"Violating No Law."

Back in the afternoon came half a dozen more Chicago pickets and assembled at the Reback dressmaking plant on Benson street. Police moved down on them and profanely told them to get out quick. They refused and the police were about to place them under arrest when Sergeant McCall came on the scene and explained to everyone that nothing could be done about it; that the pickets were violating no law—whether they were Chicagoans or not.

It seems that a delegation of Polish clergymen were even then in session with Chief of Police Liggett at headquarters, protesting against interference with pickets and strikers generally, many of whom are Poles and members of their congregations. And anyhow it seemed useless to try to drive the pickets away.

Capitalist Moral Suasion.

So Sergeant McCall came on the scene. He tried to use capitalist moral suasion on the pickets who wouldn't yield to force; told them that "the people" of Evanston didn't like strikes and were "riding" the chief hard to take drastice action.

But the picketers had no tears for the mayor's embarrassing situation. They thought of the sweated workers who were battling for union conditions and decided to keep up their work.

Miss Lulu Montgomery, one of the picketers, is vice-president of the West Virginia Federation of Labor and a student in Chicago at the Women's Trade Union Training School and Northwestern University. Among other pickets were Julia Broza, Mary Bellock, Celia Chamowitz, Freda Reicher and Marie Shimsky.

Pavlowa Invites Garment Strikers To Famous Ballet

Several hundred striking garment workers saw Anna Pavlowa dance with all her beauty and grace at the Auditorium Theatre last night, and another group will see the famous ballet artist's entertainment tonight.

The tickets were furnished thru the generosity of Pavlowa and her manager, Sam Hurock. The great dancer is thoroly opposed to the sweatshop system against which the strikers are fighting.

Steamer on the Rocks.

NORFOLK, Va., March 12.—The French steamer Tours, which sailed from Norfolk February 25 for Wilmington, N. C., with a general cargo, is on the rocks near Neuvitas, Cuba, today.

Blow Up Coffee House.

DETROIT, Mich., March 12.—A dynamite bomb which exploded at the entrance of a Greek coffee house here early today injured thirty persons and wrecked the building, as well as another coffee house.

The Poor Fish says: According to press dispatches members of the Y. M. C. A. in Constantinople are feeding the ladies of the Caliph's harem. NATIONAL "DAILY WORKER"

SUBSCRIPTION CAMPAIGN STARTS MARCH 15TH

GOAL SET FOR 10,000 NEW READERS BY JUNE 15TH

--Quotas Set For Every Locality--

LOCAL "DAILY WORKER" BOOSTERS DETERMINED TO EXCEED THEM

NO WORKING class paper ever published in the English language in the United States has been so widely and uniformly commended as the DAILY WORKER. Even the capitalist press, when calling attention to the new menace that the presence of the DAILY WORKER constitutes to American capitalism, cannot help acknowledging that it is a well-written, realistic revolutionary organ, quite different from anything of a like nature attempted in this country before.

The DAILY WORKER has on its staff some of the best writers in the American revolutionary movement. Not alone can they write, but they know the labor movement. They have actively participated in the class struggle. Its cartoonists have won world renown and if they wanted to draw for the capitalist press, they could name their own salaries. There is Robert Minor, editor of The Liberator, and Fred Ellis, specially engaged by the DAILY WORKER to draw pictures depicting the gyrations of capitalist grafters while they rob the workers and plunder the wealth of the nation.

The DAILY WORKER is supplied by the International Press Correspondence with articles on the European and world revolutionary movement from the pens of the leaders of the Russian Communist Party and the Communist parties of the other European countries. You can read what Trotsky, Radek, Bucharin, Zinoviev and other great leaders think in the columns of the DAILY WORKER.

To increase the circulation of a paper like the DAILY WORKER is a joy that every true rebel cannot help experiencing. When the whistle blows on March 15, signalling the start for the big 10,000 new readers campaign, the machinery that is already being oiled and greased (not with Teapot Dome lubrication) will be set in motion and from then on until June 15 the progressives will know no let up in their efforts to reach their goal and get far beyond it.

Rebels love to battle with the capitalist class and when not in a scrap with the masters there is nothing they like better than to indulge in a contest between themselves.

Out of the enthusiasm of this campaign a spirit of friendly rivalry has grown between the DAILY WORKER pioneers in the various localities. Cities are challenging each other. One of the most interesting of these contests is that between Detroit and Chicago.

In order to give each locality some specific figure to aspire to a quota has been set, based on the present circulation of the DAILY WORKER and on the estimated facilities existing in the various industrial centers.

These figures have been set rather low, so low in fact that the booster captains were complaining until they were informed that a goal meant very little to a rebel; as soon as he reached one, he got ready to go for another.

In order that the competition may be computed fairly, scores will be made on the basis of percentage, those who secure the highest percentage of their quota being counted the winners. Quotas are set as follows:

Chicago	1000
New York	500
Detroit	400
Cleveland	250
Boston	200
Philadelphia	200
Minneapolis	200
Brooklyn	200

Each week the standing of the leading cities computed by the number of new subscriptions sent in in comparison to the quota set, will be printed in the DAILY WORKER.

Record of the subscriptions sent in from other cities for which no quota has been set will also be published, it being understood that the campaign will be carried on everywhere, in small cities as well as large, in mining and lumber camps and in the farming districts, too.

In the issue of the DAILY WORKER one week from today, the first week's result of the great campaign will be published. It is expected that militants all over the country will give unlimited time and energy toward making the drive the most successful ever carried on in America. The DAILY WORKER is the BIG thing of the American labor movement. Is it any wonder that "Making the DAILY WORKER Grow" has become a national occupation?

Special Offers made for Period of Drive

SUBSCRIPTIONS TO LEADING LABOR PERIODICALS GIVEN AWAY

NOT since the call to save the Russian workers from the terrors of a devasting famine has a drive aroused so much enthusiasm on the part of the progressive workers of America as the campaign to add at least ten thousand new readers to the mailing list of the DAILY WORKER which will open officially on March 15.

While the DAILY WORKER since its establishment has broken all records for growth, doubling its circulation since the first issue appeared on the streets on January 13, its readers are not content with resting on their laurels; on the contrary, the marvelous success of their paper has spurred them onward to set a new record, even for the DAILY WORKER, in the next three months.

The campaign for 10,000 new readers will end on June 15. Letters to the Business Manager, insist that the figure has been set too low. Figures and quotas will be disregarded, declared the enthusiastic rebels from the great industrial centers and the open spaces. "How soon shall we pass our quota?" is the question asked by the local campaign managers.

From the mines where the workers go down into the bowels of the earth to produce the coal that sets the wheels of industry in motion come assurances of success for the campaign. The miners more than any other section of the American workers know the necessity for a fighting labor daily. The coal barons have the money to buy claims of papers that will drown the voice the labor in a barrage of hostile propaganda. Every mining camp where a radical worker exists will become a center for support in the DAILY WORKER drive.

Class-concious workers know that in increasing the circulation of the DAILY WORKER, they are not alone helping the paper to survive; they are making new recruits of the revolutionary movement; they are strengthening the arm of American labor; they are moulding the minds of the masses into the groove that fits them, for that disciplined labor army which must be trained to establish the Workers' Republic on the ruins of the rotten and corrupt capitalist order.

"Educate, Organize, and Emancipate" will be one of the slogans that will speak from thousands of banners as the hosts of DAILY WORKER boosters get into action.

Special Trial Subscription.

From experience we know that once you get a reader for the DAILY WORKER, he contracts the habit and you cannot stop him. The main task is to get him started. A special offer is therefore made during this campaign to get new readers on our mailing list. For the sum of $1.00 the DAILY WORKER will be sent to a new reader for two months!

Any worker, unless his mind is irreparably injured by the poison of the capitalist press, will never go back to the deluge of scandal, murders and general filth which is the main attraction in the organs of the master class. The DAILY WORKER selects its news. It prints all the news that is fit for the workers, to read and is written by experts in the art of writing.

For the Sub-Getters.

The two months' trial offer is an attraction to those workers who hesitate to buy a yearly sub, but by arrangement with the publishers of several nationally known magazines the management of the DAILY WORKER is able to make an offer that should induce even the most skeptical to plunge for a yearly sub. right off the reel.

Any one of the magazines listed on this page will be given free for six months to any DAILY WORKER reader who secures a yearly subscription. Here is an opportunity to get on the inside of the revolutionary movement, to read the thoughts and opinions of the leaders in the American class struggle on the issues that spring up from day to day out of the clash of forces in this mighty nation.

The Teapot Dome scandal, the graft revelations in the Veteran's Bureau, the struggle for a class Farmer-Labor Party, the Third Party movement—all these questions will be discussed, dissected, turned upside down and inside out by the best political surgeons in the American revolutionary movement. You should know the significance of these important occurrences. It is not sufficient that you should get the news, it is essential that you should know the probable effect of every big incident on the future course of the working class movement.

All set for the big drive. This is the biggest task that the American rebels ever set themselves to. They will succeed.

New Building Boosts Campaign.

Even before the official opening of the campaign, the announcement that THE DAILY WORKER has bought its own building and will soon be operating its own printing plant, has given tremendous impetus to the growth of THE DAILY WORKER and its firm establishment as a leading working class institution.

THE DAILY WORKER will move into its building about April 10. That will be a day of great historic importance to every live militant in America. It will mean that a home has been established not only for THE DAILY WORKER, but also a home, a center for the militant labor movement in America.

CHINESE AGREE TO RECOGNITION OF SOVIET RULE

Few, Final Demands Are Insisted On

PEKIN, March 12.—The cabinet, in special session today agreed to grant de jure recognition to the government of Russia providing M. Karakhan, head of the Russian delegation here, accepts the Chinese interpretation of the agreement re-establishing diplomatic relations between the two nations.

It is understood the agreement will be signed jointly as soon as Karakhan accepts the Chinese text of the document, the wording of which differs slightly from that of Russia.

The treaty provides that Russia shall evacuate and renounce her extra-territorial rights and recognize Chinese sovereignty in Mongolia.

Cal Coolidge's Steam Roller Is Hard at Work in Many States

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 12.—The republican party steam roller is working at maximum speed. It looks as if the Coolidge machine will sweep the New Hampshire presidential primaries. All reports received so far from this New England state indicate a walk over for Coolidge.

In addition to the district delegates the Republican Party convention in Kansas in which Congressman Tincher, one of the reputed leaders of the so-called farm bloc, was the dominant figure, has also pledged the additional seven delegates at large that Kansas sends to the national republican convention.

The Coolidge clique in the Republican Party has tucked away safely 177 delegates. The machine leaders are boasting that they will sweep Coolidge into the nomination on the first ballot. All they need is 555 votes to nominate Coolidge. They are sure of 800 at least.

Of the 177 delegates so far lined up for Coolidge, 72 are from southern states and the Philippines. No one seriously considers these delegates representative even of the Republican party membership. The southern and Philippine crop are the result of patronage and the power of appointment wielded by the White House. The twenty-seven delegates counted on by the Coolidge followers in Minnesota represent the reactionary followers of the Preus machine which was smashed in the last election when Magnus Johnson was sent to the senate. The 23 delegates coming from Kansas are looked upon as a gift to the Coolidge group in order to secure its support for the nomination of Capper as vice-president on the Republican ticket.

"A Week" Truthful, Says Worker Who Saw Revolution

To The DAILY WORKER:—Regarding your request to send in opinions about "A Week," I wish to say that to my opinion it is a real revolutionary story; full of interest for every worker, as it gives a concrete idea of the struggles of the Russian comrades during those revolutionary days.

Having lived thru that period in Russia myself, I can also add that the author gives us a correct interpretation of feelings, and a most truthful story. That far I can see from the chapters read. I am anxiously awaiting each new copy of the "DAILY."

As for the "Teapot Special." please reserve for me 25 copies, which I shall distribute among comrades who will read them and learn something.

With comradely greetings,
SAM MIZON,
Houston, Texas.

New and Startling Evidence Shows Amazing Misuse of Department of Justice In the Michigan Case

New and startling evidence of the sinister misuse of Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty's "Department of Justice" has just been made public by the Labor Defense Council.

This latest exposure consists of a series of letters written by Attorney General Daugherty, Assistant Attorney General John W. H. Crim and Assistant Attorney General Mabel Walker Willebrandt in the fall of 1922. in connection with the famous raid on the convention of the Communist Party of America at Bridgman, Michigan.

Department of Justice Liar.

The letters conclusively prove: (1) that Department of Justice officials lied when they denied the presence of federal operatives in carrying out the raid; (2) that, altho ostensibly an affair of the state of Michigan, the raid was planned and directed from the office of Super-Dick William J. Burns, in plain contravention of the law; (3) that the whole thing was a result of Daugherty's determination to "get" William Z. Foster, C. E. Ruthenberg and their associates and that when he found there was no federal statutes under which it could be done he resorted to the subterfuge of making it appear as tho the arrests were undertaken independently by the Michigan state authorities.

Since there is no federal appropriation for use in prosecuting state cases, any department funds which may have been diverted to this purpose constitute a gross misuse of government money. If the money did not come from the department treasury, where did it come from?

Now that the precious oil of Teapot Dome has fairly inundated the precincts of the "Department of Justice," people are beginning to get an idea of the corruption and subservience to capital which characterized its activities. Since the unearthing of the tell-tale McLean telegram, written in one of Burns' own official codes, it is no longer possible even to pretend "innocence" on the part of Daugherty and Burns. The Labor Defense Council has "had the dope" on Daugherty and Burns for a long time. The correspondence referred to has been lying in its files, waiting for an opportune moment for publication.

An Important Letter.

The most important letter of the series is one by Assistant Attorney General Crim, dated October 31, 1922. The American Civil Liberties Union had addressed a communication to the Department of Justice demanding to know by what right federal operatives had participated in the Michigan arrests. Crim's extraordinary explanation, which follows, is the only detailed response that was ever received:

"American Civil Liberties Union,
"Gentlemen:

"This is to acknowledge receipt of your letter to me under date of October 30, 1922, and to say that I have made an investigation of the files of this department to determine the precise interest of this department in the so-called Bridgman matter.

"I find that certain individuals attending that conference had been under investigation by this department for some time with a view to prosecuting them for violating certain sections of the United States Penal Code. These offenses, I may say, with due regard to protecting the interests of the United States, have nothing to do with any particular theory of government, or so-called radicalism. In keeping these particular individuals under surveillance, representatives of this department came into possession of information which seemed to be a violation of the laws of the state of Michigan, turned it over to the state authorities, and assisted such authorities in identifying and arresting certain individuals. Such laws of the state of Michigan, in contrast to the statutes I have referred to above, do involve particular theories of government, or so-called radicalism.

Department Whitewash.

"This department has not perfected its investigation of the individuals believed to have committed the offenses against the United States. No formal charge has been made against the individuals under investigation by this department and while it is not proper for me to make public any details in this connection, I can assure you that the investigation this department is conducting, without the slightest doubt, falls within its duty and is provided for by the appropriation for this department. With this before you, I assume you are not concerned with the names of the particular representatives of this department who have been working on the government's cases and co-operated with the officials of Michigan.

"Respectfully,
"JOHN W. H. CRIM,
"Ass't. Att'y General."

The Labor Defense Council denounces this remarkable communication as a cheap fraud and a lie designed solely to provide a much-needed excuse for the illegal participation of federal stool-pigeons in the Michigan raid. The L. D. C. characterizes as a barefaced lie the ingenious explanation that "certain individuals attending the convention" were ever under investigation in connection with "certain sections of the United States Penal Code" having "nothing to do with any particular theory of government, or so-called radicalism." The L. D. C. declares that Crim lies when he pretends that the Department of Justice merely turned over to the Michigan authorities information which it had come upon "accidentally."

Daugherty Ignores Letters.

For all its falsifications, however, the letter plainly admits not only that federal agents participated in the raid (which was, of course, brought out in the testimony at the Foster and Ruthenberg trials themselves) but that they actually initiated the whole proceedings.

This letter from Crim, which lets the cat out of the bag completely, was received only after protracted preliminary correspondence with the Department of Justice, in the course of which the Washington officials resorted to every available trick of evasion.

As early as August 24, 1922, the American Civil Liberties Bureau had directed the following inquiry to Attorney General Daugherty:

"We note the extensive reports of a raid on what is alleged to be a convention of the Communist Party of America held at a resort in the state of Michigan, the raid being conducted by representatives of the bureau of investigation of the Department of Justice. . . . May we, therefore, ask on what theory the federal government has acted, under what authority and under whose direction?"

Instead of answering, Daugherty dodged the whole issue. He merely declared that none of the persons arrested were charged with violation of any federal statute and that they had been "arrested by the state authorities" under the state syndicalism law of Michigan.

The Civil Liberties Bureau immediately replied: "We think you misunderstood our inquiry which was directed not to the charges against the men, but to the presence of federal officers in making the arrests. According to newspaper dispatches, the arrests were not made until orders were received from Washington."

Agents Institute Proceedings.

Daugherty thought it best to ignore this letter. And on September 19, Assistant Attorney General Willebrandt warned the Bureau to mind its own business. Mr. Willebrandt wrote:

"If the state authorities consider they had sufficient evidence upon which to arrest, it is no concern of this department or of an unofficial organization or individual not retained by them, as to how the state procured the evidence."

But the Civil Liberties Bureau was determined to get at the truth and neither the lies of Daugherty nor the studied evasions of Mr. Willebrandt could stop it. After a series of fresh rebuffs on the part of the so-called Department of Justice, the Bureau addressed Mrs. Willebrandt as follows:

"We are merely inquiring whether operatives of the department participated in the arrest and prosecution of certain individuals who were not "charged with violation of any federal statutes." You are of course aware that the appropriation granted for the purpose of enforcing the statutes of the United States and does not in any wise relate to the enforcement of the statutes of the several states. We receive with surprise your suggestion that it is not the right of any citizen to be informed as to whether or not officers of the federal government are acting outside of the scope of their functions authorized by law."

It was in response to this that the illuminating letter from Assistant Attorney General Crim was received.

16 LABOR FIGHTERS SEIZED BY DEVER'S COPS ON PICKET LINE

Here is the list of pickets who were thrown into the S. Clark street station yesterday by the strikebreaking police of Mayor Dever and the bosses' Crowe. Look them over carefully. They were arrested in Labor's fight against the sweatshop system. Think of these persecuted but undaunted fighters for your class when you watch the strike settlement conference in the office of the Commissioner of Public Welfare today and demand that no settlement be considered except such a settlement as will justify the fight of these 17 pickets and the many others arrested before them.

They were bailed out by the union and will appear in S. Clark street court this morning where they will demand jury trials.

DAKOTA GOVERNOR RATTLES TEAPOT BEFORE FARMERS

McMaster Is "Radical" During Campaign

By JOHN HENRICKSON.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

FREDERICK, S. D., March 12.—Governor McMaster is campaigning the state of South Dakota for the U. S. Senate under the guise of a radical.

Speaking here to a large audience he opened some of the secret closets of the republican party and dragged out such old skeletons as Ballinger, Taft and Guggenheim of the Alaska coal and timber scandal and the more up to date Newberry scandal.

Rattles Teapot.

He also discussed the present oil scandal and the tariff laws which are so oppressive to the agricultural west, and he hit the unfair freight rates.

In speaking of the Federal Reserve Bank he charged the officers have piled up enormous reserves and built extravagant buildings. He tried to impress his audience with the idea that he was out to fight predatory interests, particularly the Standard Oil Company. His object all thru his speech was to show how consistantly Senator Sterling had stood for the east instead of the west.

McMaster (one time bankers, now governor) wants a new job and he's out to get votes, and he thinks his temporary radicalism will help send him to the U. S. Senate.

The farmers and workers of South Dakota have been misled long enough by politicians of the McMaster type, who do their campaigning on promises which they forget when they get into office, and they realize that both the Republican and Democratic parties are controlled by special interests which are their exploiters. So the governor's chances of going to Washington via the Bolshevik route is hopeless.

The farmers and workers are uniting in an independent Farmer-Labor party based on fundamental principles.

Animal Carnival In Music Was the Honey Bee's Knees

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN

Camille Saint Saens, humorist par excellence and master musician, occupied the entire program of the children's concert of the Chicago Symphony orchestra at Orchestra Hall. The main composition was his "Carnival of Animals," a suite in fourteen movements. The French composer wrote this a long time ago, but refused to allow its performance until after his death. He died in 1921, and only now are we beginning to hear it. The swan movement got out somehow, and has become a most popular cello solo, but beyond that it is all new music.

The composition calls for two pianos, and they were played by Rosalind Kaplan and Howard Feiges, who look about 10 years old, and who play as tho they were some 20 years older. The best music in it is undoubtedly the swan movement, with its smooth and graceful solo for the violincello, which Mr. Brueckner played. For humor the elephant movement takes first prize. The theme is that of the Dance of Sylphs from the Damnation of Faust. In the Berlioz opera it is a fairy dance, high up in the violins, while Saint Saens makes it describe the playful, coy, caresses of an elephant, down in the rumbling basses. Another theme he burlesques in the tortoise movement. Here he takes the fast and furious gallop at the conclusion of Offenback's "Orpheus" overture, and turns it into the slow, crawling efforts of a tortoise.

Miss Kaplan and Mr. Feiges had their best chance in the movement called "Pianists." The composer himself was a pianist, and knew whereof he wrote when he included them with the other animals, and placed them between stinging bees and fossils. And there are movements about kangaroos and goldfish, a cuckoo, horses of Tartary, lions and jackasses.

Organized Labor Can't Be Ignored in Immigration Issue

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ST. LOUIS, Mo., March 12.—Organized labor had difficulty in getting any consideration from an anti-Johnson immigration bill conference called at the Jefferson Hotel by a group of orthodox Jews. The meeting was not limited to Jewish representatives, however. Other racial groups took part.

When the executive committee announced that Missouri senators would be invited to address a coming mass meeting a delegate from the Jewish branch of the Workers Party forced a vote on a resolution to compel the conference to invite speakers from the labor movement. This resolution was lost by a 63 to 47 vote. A delegate from the Journeymen Tailors left in disgust then and the conference, becoming alarmed, agreed to the Workers Party suggestion that T. R. Sullivan of the St. Louis labor movement be extended the invitation to address the coming mass meeting. The name of Gompers as a speaker was booed so that conservatives dropped him. The date of the mass meeting will be announced later,

Chicago Housing Conditions Put Even New York to Shame, Finds Investigator For Daily Worker

Those departments of the city administration of Chicago concerned realize that they are unable to cope with the housing problems for which they are supposedly accountable.

The majority of the people in this city, the great masses of the workingmen and women, are living at a lower standard than the minimum standard of decent living estimated by investigators. As low as was the standard of living found by the DAILY WORKER investigation in New York, the living conditions in Chicago are found to be in many phases, far lower.

City Takes No Action.

In one of the most scientific surveys of housing conditions ever made in Chicago, Robert Todd, working for the Chicago Municipal Sanitarium, found that few cities in America can show bedrooms as small as these in Chicago.

"In many of these bedrooms," he found, "The width is so scant that the window frames have been cut away to allow for the length of the bed. It is doubtful whether any city can show one-quarter of the number of small bedrooms that are to be found here in Chicago. The figures show the result of years of neglect of our housing conditions."

Some time ago the Department of Public Health summed up the housing evils which have increased tremendously this year. "The principal housing evils," says the Department of Health bulletin, "Are lot overcrowding, narrow courts and small yards, underground rooms, attic rooms, dark rooms and dark halls, insufficient toilet accomodations, room overcrowding, defective draining and plumbing, lack of proper maintenance, and general dilapidation of buildings. Unfortunately we have not hitherto had the force to do the necessary work of building inspection.

"A large number of people in certain parts of our city are living in cellars and basements which were never intended for habitation, but have been converted into living rooms without approval of the authorities. There are many rooms which by reason of lack of light, are unfit for human occupancy. Insufficient toilet accomodations consist in many cases of primitive privy vaults, which are a menace to the rising generation and a public nuisance. There are many yard closets which are inadequate with regards to decency, and which are liable to spread contagion."

Low Standard General.

Another lament for a more adequate force with which to mop up the matter from the running sores of our city which should never have been allowed to take hold of the social constitution, is contained in the latest report of the Department of Health of Chicago. "The figures show approximately 3,500 inspections per year per man on new buildings (alone). There is an element of danger to the efficiency of the service in thus increasing the load of each man for the reason that quality must be sacrificed in order to increase quantity."

The low standard at which the workers of the city are forced to exist is general thruout the city. Mr. Todd's investigation, covering four city blocks in four separated sections of the city, shows that in block "A" 35 per cent of the homes are overcrowded, in block "B" 39 per cent are oxercrowded, in block "C" 46 per cent are overcrowded and in block "D" 46 per cent are overcrowded.

Laws Not Enforced.

"The bedrooms," the investigator found, "In a large proportion are far below the 80 square feet of floor space now required by city ordinance. The alley rooms of one block are above ten per cent of all the rooms on the block. Rear rooms that open onto a rear yard, range from 10 to 20 per cent of all the rooms examined. Nineteen per cent are so dark that one must move slowly to avoid anything on the floor. In an additional 27 per cent it would be hard to work continuously."

"There is a constant strong tendency to compress the home because excessive profits come from crowding," concludes Mr. Todd, "the whole device aims at economies which are carried on without proper regard for the preservation of home life."

Investigation by the Chicago School of Philanthropy and Civics of Chicago University show that in 13 blocks examined in the stockyards district, there are 1,459 rooms under 80 square feet in area, the minimum size now prescribed by city ordinance; there are 935 rooms under eight and one-half feet high; the minimum height now prescribed by city ordinance; there are 372 rooms with window area less than ten per cent of the floor area, the minimum now prescribed by ordinance for new homes; there are 81 rooms practically without any windows at all; there are 1,616 dark and gloomy rooms; there are 1,119 out of 1,616 apartments where families have no private toilet vacilities; there are 1,981 sleeping rooms crowded beyond the legal maximum prescribed by law.

Unfit For Animals.

The unspeakable manner in which the workers of this city are being forced to live in hovels unfit for beasts is bringing shame and disgrace to those who are responsible for the well being of our citizens. What are we going to do about it? If the mass of the people do not protest agressively enough to put a stop to this misery, and at once, they themselves will be to an extent responsible for their degraded standard of living.

Conditions are becoming steadily worse. Only this morning the attention of the DAILY WORKER investigator was called to a case reported from the South Side, where a family of 11 were living, huddled together in four small rooms. Another case was reported to the Department of Public Welfare of a family in the West side being forced to pay a rent increase of from 60 to 125 dollars a month.

An Obliging Landlord.

Unless some definite action is taken by the tenants themselves, the landlords will continue to disregard the comfort and welfare of the workers. The United Charities reports a case as follows: "When calls came to the United Charities repeatedly asking for a County Doctor to be sent, it was evident that something must be effecting the health of the family. It was not until after several weeks of illness that Mrs. T—— told what the real trouble was. The landlord had shut off the water and the family was suffering because of this. Mrs. T—— had been ashamed to let anyone know how she had been living. She reported that landlord's action several times to the Board of Health, and the landlord was ordered to turn on the water, but within a short time he would again turn it off. The T—— family was forced to move to better quarters, but another large family is occupying the same flat which the T——s left, and will probably suffer the same way."

In a house on North LaSalle street, formerly a mansion, the DAILY WORKER investigator found on one floor a man and wife, with their one child, living in a single bedroom; next door, was another family of three living in a single bedroom; across the hall were a man and wife living in one bedroom, and on the top floor a family of four were packed into two small rooms. This section is considered a high class housing district.

Thousands of dollars are spent yearly by the wealthy of the city to breed race horses who are housed better than the workers in Chicago. Race horses are worth money.

Contractor, 5 Days, Worker, 5 Years, On Same Charges

WOODLAND, Calif., March 12.—A recent decision here throws a little light on the criminal syndicalism situation in California. A local contractor was found guilty of introducing the defendant in a bootlegging case to one of the jurors who was to try him, and of discussing the case with this juror. The contractor was convicted of jury tampering and received—a sentence of five days in the Yolo county jail.

In Sacramento, the nearest big city to Woodland, Tom Connors, secretary California Branch General Defense Committee of the I. W. W., was sentenced to five years in San Quentin on the same charge—his offense having consisted of sending out from his office 20,000 circulars favoring repeal of the criminal syndicalism law, one of which by chance fell into the hands of a man who was on the venire for jurors in a criminal syndicalism case!

Henry Gets Stray Dollars.

NEW ORLEANS, La., March 12.—The local branch of the Ford Motor Co., has celebrated its first anniversary with the assembling of its 44,679th car. Nine hundred men are employed with a monthly payroll of $150,000. The majority of these cars are sold on the installment plan, which necessitates in many instances unpaid bills to the butcher, baker, and landlord. Henry is gathering all the stray dollars in the south in this city.

Will Have To Investigate.

NEW ORLEANS, La., March 12.—A local newspaper in speaking of the completion of the new jail in Gretna, a suburb, states that it is fitted up with all modern conveniences, such as electric lights, hot and cold running water, numerous baths, a reading room, clean sanitary mattresses, and the like. Which goes to show that the average working stiff is better off in jail than at liberty.

Trachtenberg in Boston.

BOSTON, March 12.—Alexander Trachtenberg speaks Friday evening, March 21, at 8 o'clock, at Paine Memorial Hall, 9 Appleton street, on the International Communist Movement as he observed it during a 14-months trip thru Europe.

RUSS EMIGRES SNORT WITH RAGE AT BENITO'S ACT

Driven Like Lice From Old Nick's Embassy

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, Italy, March 12th.—The Queen of Roumania is in Rome. So is the red flag of Soviet Russia and the most disgruntled gang of White Russian pan-handlers, who were swept out of the old Czar's embassy by a group of Fascist scavengers sent there by Mussolini to fumigate the place and make it fit for communist possession, when he recognized the Soviet Republic.

Since the Bolshevik revolution, these emigres were on good terms with the Italian government and had the honor of being recognized as gentlemen even tho they had to be supported by handouts. "Hope springs eternal in the human breast" and the Italian breast was no exception, so it was expected that some day the communists in Russia would be overthrown and executed and then Italy could get her money back.

However, it did not happen that way and the counter-revolutionary vermin who have infested the Russian embassy were cleaned out the other day. They are now grumbling against Mussolini and charging that he has betrayed them, which is undoubtedly true, but that is Benito's favorite sport and he is not worrying in the least. He likes nothing better than to write polite notes to Chicherin saying how glad the great Italian people are to be on good terms with the noble Russians.

The term "subversive" is only applied here in Italy to parties that believe in democracy or the parliamentary system. Under this head come the clerical and socialist parties. The Communist and Maximalist parties which frankly stand for the dictatorship of the proletariat are put in jail. At least they are not considered "subversive" but only dangerous.

Don Sturzo, a Sicilian priest, is in hard luck. Mussolini detests him and so does the Pope who is on very good terms with Mussolini. Cardinal O'Connel of Boston, U. S. A., who made a speech here the other day praising the Fascisti, is looked on with great favor by the government. He has considerable influence at the Vatican and is expected to impress the value of Fascism on the American capitalists when he returns to the United States.

The Italian cardinals are not too well pleased with the Pope's intention to distribute red hats in America with such reckless abandon, yet they must recognize facts, and one of the most salient is that money makes the papal mare go and it is rather scarce in Europe just now. The Americans are entitled to a good wardrobe in return for their dough.

Amalgamated Bank Sent $3,000,000 to Russia Last Year

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, March 12.—The Industrial and Commercial Bank received during the last year from the United States about $3,000,000 for friends and relatives of people residing in the U. S. The money was transmitted from the U. S. thru the Amalgamated Banks of New York and Chicago.

The Industrial and Commercial Bank is conducting now a campaign to get aid from relatives and friends in the U. S. for Russian citizens who are in need. For this purpose all the branches of the bank are accepting letters for free transmission to United States.

Pigeons Bring Race News.

Can't Fight Fires.

ILLIOPOLIS, Ill., March 12.—Inadequate fire fighting apparatus was unable to cope with a blaze here last night and two business houses and a residence were destroyed at an estimated lost of $15,000.

Englewood Y. W. L. Dances.

Englewood Branch, Young Workers League, meets coming Thursday night, March 13, 1924 at Prospect Hall, 64th and Ashland. There will be dancing and other entertainment. Everybody invited. Admission free.

Nothing Ever Done!

FOR a quarter of a century investigations have been carried on into Chicago's terrible housing conditions. But nothing has been done to put into effect a program for the relief of Chicago's workers. After the present investigation the DAILY WORKER will announce its national housing program. Our program will be practical; it will be in the interests of the masses of the people—the workers—it will be capable of being quickly put into operation. But it is up to you. Without support from organizations of all kinds and from individuals, the DAILY WORKER can do little. We expect, and we are getting, that support. You have seen how bad the crisis is in New York, Chicago and other cities. Write in and tell us what the situation is in your locality, no matter where you live. Get your organization to take action, protesting against the terrible conditions which affect you and your family. Co-operate with the DAILY WORKER in its campaign. Let us hear from you.

ILLINOIS MINERS BITTER AT DELAY OF CONVENTION

Challenge Farrington's Appointment Right

Illinois miners are more bitter than ever against their officials as a result of the postponing of their district convention to the distant date of May 13,—the officials not announcing the postponement until a week before the date originally set for the convention.

The outstanding reason for this unfair postponement, the rank and file believes, is that Frank Farrington wants to have his organizers safely appointed first. These appointments are usually made about April 1 and Farrington evidently is counting on the support of these appointees.

Farrington's Days Numbered.

If the convention had not been postponed, it is almost sure that the columns of the DAILY WORKER would have announced by this time that the appointive power in Illinois "is no more." The miners in Illinois are determined to put an end to the most abused power in the hands of the officials in the miners' union and intend to start in their own district.

Many contend that the Farrington machine was defeated in the last convention of the Illinois miners, but the announced result was to the effect that the machine had won out by a few votes.

Shortly after that convention, Farrington announced that he would have recommended abolition of the appointive power in his report to the convention, had the International convention of 1921 voted to do so, but that he could not see the sense of allowing Lewis the appointive power, while he (Farrington) was deprived of it. He argued that Lewis would flood his district with an army of organizers to spread venom and bring about his downfall.

Now since the marriage of the twain, there should need be no fear of this and many who supported him in the last convention on that plea, will vote against him this time. The days of power for Farrington will end just as soon as his appointive power is taken away.

Postpone Pittsburgh Meet.

The Pittsburgh district convention (District 5) has been twice postponed, and at this writing it is not known when the convention is to be held. The Progressives, however, say that it will avail them little to play groundhog, because the shadow of their crooked actions will be seen anyway and when the rank and file, by an avalanche of votes, put them back into the hole, they are going to stay there until entirely forgotten, and then some more.

Vote on Wage Pact.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 12.—Illinois miners are voting today in a wage scale referendum to decide whether or not to accept the wage agreement reached between their officers and operators in the bituminous industry.

The agreement calls for a continuance of the present scale for a period of three years.

Public Speakers in Cleveland.

CLEVELAND, March 12.—The Young Workers League of Cleveland will conduct a class in public speaking, every Wednesday evening at 8 p. m., commencing March 12, at 4309 Lorain Ave. This class will be under the direction of Max Lerner, district organizer, Workers Party, who has conducted classes of various kinds in New York, Seattle, and other points and has, in the last couple of years, completed several extensive speaking tours. The aim of this class is to produce effective speakers for branch and union meetings and the public platform. Workers Party members and sympathizers are welcome. No tuition charge.

Dempsey Dodges Wills Offer.

NEW YORK, March 12.—Jack Dempsey's manager, Jack Kearns, has declined a $500,000 offer from a syndicate for a battle with Harry Wills, Negro runner up for the championship, in Providence, R. I., July 4. Jack can get the money more easily some other way than by facing the heavy hitting ex-longshoreman.

Labor Law Upheld.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—Constitutionality of the New York labor law restricting hours of women restaurant workers to 54 a week and within 6 a. m. and 10 p. m. was upheld by the New York supreme court in a decision sustaining the conviction of Joseph Radice, a Buffalo restaurant keeper, who allowed a waitress to work after 10 p. m.

Zinoviev's Speech to Leningrad Communists

(NOTE—The DAILY WORKER today publishes the fourth installment of the great speech delivered by Gregory Zinoviev to the party conference of the Leningrad District. Those of our readers who have read lurid reports of war between Communist leaders should follow this discussion closely. It is true that Trotsky had a difference of opinion over questions of party organization with Zinoviev and others. But the enemies of the Soviet Republic may rest assured that a discussion on tactics will not give them the opening to rush in their war dogs and lap up the blood of the emancipated Russian workers. A further installment will be published tomorrow).

ZINOVIEV CONTINUES:

THERE is still another limitation put on the workers' democracy, the fact that we inhibit the formation of groups and factions within the Party. We often hear the words: We demand freedom of discussion! when what is meant in reality is: We demand freedom to form factions!

The liberty to form groups—has this anything to do with the principles of the workers' democracy? Yes, certainly it has much to do with it. A pure workers' democracy demands the freedom to form groups within the Party, for if it is really the case that "we are all equal," if we really possess "full" democracy, then I naturally have the right to gather around me those who think as I do, and to weld them together, etc.

The freedom of faction existed at the time of the Second International. There were two or three groups fighting within almost every social democratic party.

Lenin and Rosa Luxembourg were ony one faction in the Second International, its left faction. And it was the same, on an international scale, for 25 years.

"Not Parliament of Opinions."

During the period of the organic development of the Second International such a state of affairs had become a regular rule. But when the Comintern began to organize itself, its first word was: What we now want is not a parliament of opinions, not an "answers to correspondence," but a leading organ, a single Communist world organ, for we cannot conquer the bourgeoisie in any other way.

But the creation of a single workers' Party means that we have to renounce the liberty of factional struggle.

In the Second International we saw, at the Stuttgart Congress, Rose Luxembourg and Lenin on the one side, Bernstein, Jaures, and others, on the other. This is impossible for the Third International, for we are now in the midst of a different epoch. In exceptional cases there is now and again a group struggle in the Third International, but this is always an exception.

We frequently prefer to cut away a considerable portion of the Party, as we did in Norway, in order to preserve a really united and homogeneous Communist Party, and not a "parliament of opinions." And we do not act thus because we are in love with centralism, but because the present historical situation requires that the political Party be cast in one single piece, or it cannot conquer the bourgeoisie; without unity it is condemned to decay.

Lenin's Policy.

Our Party is the soul of the government. It is not necessary to go far to see this. Were we not in the same party as the Mensheviki for years, standing against them as a faction? And now? Now we are two classes, two worlds. If we now approve of the formation of separate groups and factions within the Party and allow these to act as they please, this would mean nothing more nor less than developing the germ of a secondary government.

The Party cannot permit this. The very slightest division of power means the decay of the proletarian dictatorship. That we have been able to withstand the enormous difficulties pressing down upon us from all sides is solely due to the fact that the Party has been homogeneous.

It is frequently asserted that the Tenth Congress is to blame for all the misfortunes which have been encountered by the Party. Why this assertion? It was precisely the Tenth Congress which recognized the freedom of discussion and of consultations in the Party. It was this same Tenth Congress which, however, accepted the proposition made by Comrade Lenin on the prohibition of factions and groups. And it is this which has been displeasing to many.

The policy of the Tenth Congress is the policy of Comrade Lenin. It is, therefore, necessary to recognize clearly that an attack is being made against the foundations of Bolshevist policy, against the principles of Leninism, against its fundamental balance as drawn by the Tenth Congress. And thus the strictest dividing line must be drawn between a freedom of discussion and consultation permitted by the situation, and the liberty to form groups and factions.

Crriticism—Not Factionalism.

It need not be said that this is not to be so interpreted as if we were going to designate every criticism as faction-like. Not in the slightest. By doing this we should simply drive the comrades into factions. Criticism is necessary, unavoidable, and necessary. Those who whine for "Party discipline" at every breath of criticism, and want to train up a muzzled party, should be laughed at and set aside. But factions are not permissible.

I must now deal with a question which has given rise to some disagreement amongst us: the cultural education of the non-partisan and Party workers. Before entering into this in detail, I should like to first treat of two articles written by Comrade Sarkis, in one of which he is right and in the other equally wrong.

In the question of the workers' democracy, the second article is right and the first wrong. Comrade Sarkis, whom we know and appreciate as one of our best functionaries, working in one of the most important proletarian centers, has put the question wrongly.

The general trend of the article is to the effect that no improvements whatever are required in the Party organization.

It is scarcely necessary to say that this is not the case, for improvements are very necessary. We are behindhand in many respects with regard to the workers' democracy.

Under the new conditions we must go over to the system of electing the organizations and nuclei from below. The elections to the gouvernement and district leading organizations must be carried out more publicly.

Room For Improvement.

In Petrograd, too, there is room for improvement in the Party organization.

With reference to the question of cultural education, I am in agreement with Comrade Sarkis. I have stated that our collectives in the provinces are invariably ahead of the non-partisan masses, if only for the reason that they constitute a part of the whole Party, and this works on organized lines, possesses a program, tactics, a tradition, a history, but that we sometimes observe, in the sphere of culture, in intercourse with one another, and in economic maters, that a part of our Party functionaries are in certain respects, behind many of the non-partisans.

NEARING BESTS PETRUNKEVITCH IN RUSS DEBATE

Audience Votes 6 to 1 for Recognition

NEW HAVEN, March 12.—By a vote of six to one, an audience which thronged Music Hall, voted in favor of the recognition of Soviet Russia, by the United States, after listening to a debate between Scott Nearing, of New York, and Alexander Petrunkevitch, professor of zoology at Yale, whose father was a leader of the old Duma.

Nearing showed by means of a huge economic map suspended from the stage, how all the European countries are dependent upon one another. He proved that the present economic chaos in Europe is largely due, to the still existing boycott of Soviet Russia by surrounding capitalistic nations. The capitalists have realized their mistake, he declared, and now nineteen nations have given Soviet Russia recognition.

Coolidge and Russia.

"President Coolidge said," Nearing stated, "that whenever there appear works mete for repentance our country ought to be the first to go to the economic and moral rescue of Russia." Coolidge declared that encouraging evidence of Russia's return to the ancient ways of society can be detected.

"These ancient ways suggest once more the exploitation of Russia by the French coal operators, the German bankers, British and American oil magnates and Nikolas Romanoff. It means that we are asked to look at the world thru the eyes of Lodge and Root and be content, rather than look at a world which holds, in the fifty years to come, such immense changes for the better as mankind has never experienced."

"U. S. Free"—Ha! Ha!

When Professor Petrunkevitch, who had declared that he was for the people of Russia but against its present rulers, characterized the United States as the land of the free, the audience, which jammed the largest hall in town, jeered repeatedly.

Nearing pointed out that the Frenchman whom the French platinum trust had sent into Russia to ferret out production secrets was an economic spy.

Besides eight hundred workers who were present when Chairman Alfred Wagenknecht opened the meeting, over four hundred Yale students attended. The meeting was under the auspices of the Workers Party. Six hundred and thirty-two voted for recognition of the Russian government, and only 94 against, the rest of the audience not voting.

Negroes Resenting White Hoodlumism Against Dark Race

To The DAILY WORKER:—The Chicago Tribune is still vomiting anti-Negro propaganda. She stated in her "Danger" editorial that there will be trouble if the impression grows that there are sections of Chicago in which it is unsafe for an isolated white to appear.

However, there will also be trouble if the impression grows that there are section of Chicago in which it is unsafe for a Negro to appear with his light-skinned, fair-complexioned Negro wife, sister or sweetheart.

A crowd of whites attacked a Negro escorting his Negro wife near 63rd and Cottage Grove Ave. because the white ruffian censors mistook her for a white woman.

A Negro Workers Party member was attacked near 47th and Langley avenue by whites because his sister, whom he was escorting, happened to be too fair to suit the white attackers.

A Negro postal clerk, returning from the theatre with his pretty fair-complexioned Negro wife, was knocked down by two police department dicks who objected to what they believed to be a "damn nigger" with a white girl.

The Chicago Tribune is always too drunk on race prejudice to take notice of a Negro being attacked by whites, but she will have to learn that white hoodlumism and hooliganism as just as bad as the black.—Gordan W. Owens, Chicago, Ill.

WORKERS GOING BROKE; PLUTES GROWING RICH

1923 Is a Banner Year for Bankrupts

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

More wage earners and farmers were declared bankrupt by federal courts during the year ending June 30, 1923, than in any one of the previous 11 years, according to the annual report of the attorney of the United States. The number of failures among those who actually produce the goods was probably greater during 1923 than in any year in the history of the country.

Bankruptcies among all classes, including merchants, manufacturers, professional and others, also reached record breaking proportions during 1923. The total number declared bankrupt by the courts amounted to 34,401 while the total liabilities amounted to $486,400,908. The year nearest approaching this in the amount of liabilities was 1917 with a total of $323,557,441.

The official figures show that 10,261 wage earners and 5,945 farmers were adjudged bankrupt during 1923. In other words these two groups of producers furnished over 47 per cent of all the bankrupts in the federal court records. This represents a very material increase as compared with pre-war years in the proportion coming from these two classes. During the five years 1912 to 1916 inclusive farmers and wage earners supplied less than 35 per cent of all the bankruptcies.

Read the List.

The following table shows the number of farmers and wage earners declared bankrupt and also the total number of bankrupts from 1912 to the present:

1912	837	4,647	15,615
1913	942	4,942	17,703
1914	1,047	5,803	18,794
1915	1,247	6,672	21,294
1916	1,662	6,468	24,014
1917	1,906	7,829	25,358
1918	1,633	8,259	23,530
1919	1,208	6,789	19,351
1920	999	5,647	15,622
1921	1,368	5,928	15,200
1922	3,328	7,582	22,517
1923	5,945	10,261	34,401

The proportion of wage earners in the bankrupt column rose sharply from 27 per cent in 1916 to 34 per cent in 1918 undoubtedly reflecting the fact that wages were lagging far behind the rapidly mounting cost of living. There is another sharp rise marking the coming of industrial depression in 1921 when wage earners represented 39 per cent of all bankrupts recorded by the federal courts. Then as business picked up in 1922 and 1923 the number of bankruptcies among wage earners fell back to 30 per cent of the total for all classes.

Farmers Have Relapse.

In the case of farmers the turn for the worse did not come until 1921 when the deflation of farmers by the banking interests was in full swing and the purchasing power of agriculture was far below that of pre-war days. Between 1920 and 1921 the percentage of farmer bankrupts to the total rose from 6½ per cent to 9 per cent, then in 1922 to 14 per cent and in 1923 to 17 per cent.

The extent to which farmers and wage earners have been harder hit than the business classes by the war and its aftermath is revealed in the following figures which show the percentage increase in the number of bankruptcies among the various classes since 1912; farmers and wage earners, 195 per cent; merchants, 103 per cent; bankers and manufacturers, 57 per cent, and professionals, 17 per cent. It is a startling fact that seven times as many farmer bankrupts were reported by the attorney general for 1923 as for 1912.

Open Shop Threat Made by Operators in Kentucky Field

(By The Federated Press)

Wage reductions threaten coal miners in western Kentucky, according to information published for the benefit of the trade in the coal and coke section of the Chicago Journal of Commerce. The suggested action by operators in that region would add mines producing nearly half a million tons a month to the non-union column. Referring to attempts which will be made by non-union forces to extend into what have been union districts, the statement reads as follows:

"Western Kentucky operators are seriously considering adjusting the miners' wage scale in the Muhlenburg union district to the 1917 level. . . When the contract expires April 1, it is expected the producers will not sign a new pact with the United Mine Workers. The field produces approximately 250,000 tons a month.

"One or two operators in the Hopkins County union district adjoining Muhlenburg, where the contract with the miners does not terminate until April 1, 1925, are understood to be restless and are making attempts to operate open shop. One company, it was declared, is planning to bring the wage down 40 per cent, which is approximately twice as low as the 1917 scale. The field mines about the same amount of coal a month as the Muhlenburg district."

Reichstag May Dissolve.

BERLIN, March 12.—Chancellor Marx says he may dissolve the Reichstag Thursday because of pressure from socialist and nationalist forces against the special full power emergency act.

IMPEACH COOLIDGE!

STEEL CITY LABOR STRIKES BLOW AT PEONAGE LAWS

Congressman Speaking at Mass Meeting

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 12.—A crowd of over one hundred delegates and observers from almost as many branches and lodges of well known national organizations filled the Verdi Theatre in Pittsburgh and organized the Western Pennsylvania Council for the Protection of Foreign Born.

Among the organizations we notice: National Croatian Society, Slovenian National Beneficial Society, Lithuanian Alliance of America, Lithuanian Workers' Literature Association, Sons of Lithuania, Lithuanian Women's Progressive Association, Order of Owls, Serbian Benevolent Lodge of U. S. S. S., National Slovak Society, Italian-American Society, Office Workers' Union, United Mine Workers of America, Journeymen Tailors' Union, International Association of Machinists, Amalgamated Clothing Workers, Workmen's Circle, Young Workers League, Workers Party, Workmen's Sick and Death Benefit Fund, Slovak Workers' Socialist Federation, Labor Defense and Free Speech Council, Russian Technical Aid Society.

Officers Chosen.

The following officers were elected: Chairman, A. Horvat; Vice-Chairman, Edward A. Hawkens; Corresponding Secretary, O. Yeager; Secretary-Treasurer, A. Rostrom, 237 Shaler St., Mt. Washington, Sta., Pittsburgh, Pa.

The spirit at the conference was fine and many delegates expressed their interest and enthusiasm for the movement. Short addresses were made by three speakers, dealing with the subject from different angles. A resolution against the "immigration" bills discriminating against foreign born workers was adopted.

A collection of $51.90 was taken and contribution lists were distributed. The delegates decided to start a vigorous campaign to raise $25,000 in this district to finance this movement and defeat these bills.

La Guardia to Speak.

The local campaign will be launched with a mass protest meeting next Sunday, at the Labor Temple, at 2 p. m., with Representative La Guardia as the main speaker and several prominent local men, such as Attorney Anthony Lucas. This meeting is expected to give the movement an excellent start.

The great interest in and need of a council like this was also manifested by the numerous observers from organizations that had not had time to elect regular delegates. These expressed sympathy with the cause and will give favorable reports to their organizations.

3 Anthracite Miners Perish in Explosion Near Wilkesbarre

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WILKESBARRE, Pa., March 12—The bodies of three men killed by an explosion of gas in a rock tunnel of Number 12 slope at the Truesdale colliery of the Glen Alden Coal company, near here, were removed early today after rescue squads had worked several hours to reach them.

The dead are:

Alex McCuish, 31, a former captain in the famous "Cameron Highlanders" during the war; Alex Stuart, 43, also a veteran of the British forces and an unidentified Norwegian laborer.

The explosion occurred about 9 o'clock last night while the men were driving a rock tunnel and it is believed a spark from the drill set off a pocket of gas.

Syndicalist Charges Dismissed.

SANTA ANA, Calif., March 12.—The criminal syndicalism charge against Ralph Colescott, Denny Crowley, and V. J. Thompson has been dismissed, and the men discharged, after three postponements of their trial. The men were arrested over a year ago, and have been out on bond.

Squat German Chemist Chicago's Gold Coast Bootlegging Ghost

The "Gray Wolf," bootlegging ghost of Chicago's gold coast, is under arrest today after a three year battle of wits with police and federal agents.

The mysterious figure in the grey speedster proved to be a squat, little German chemist, Otto Von Bachelle. He had fooled half of the millionaire colony with liquor which he manufactured himself in his laboratory, and which was supposed to the "the real thing."

The Coolidge Ultimatum

After weeks of wrangling and bitter fighting the house of representatives adopted a tax measure which was a hodge-podge affair. The tax bill as approved by the house reflects very vividly the chaos, disintegration and confusion prevailing in the dominant capitalist parties at this moment.

Observers were wondering what Coolidge would do with the proposal of the House. He could not very well veto it on the general principle that it would be considered bad politics to be in any way at all responsible for holding up a tax reduction measure, no matter what it was. On the other hand the president had been banking so much on the Mellon scheme that his acceptance of the mangled house bill might be looked upon as a serious blow at his power and prestige.

As was to be expected, Coolidge then began to wield the powerful club placed in his hands by a highly centralized government. Coolidge tried the game played by Wilson during the days when war fever was raging at its worst. He sent an ultimatum, clothed as an urgent request, to congress, demanding a 25 per cent reduction in the 1923 income taxes without delay. But the reaction of congress to this ukase from Coolidge was a curt and effective rebuff to his enroachments upon the right guaranteed by the constitution to the house of representatives, the right to levy taxes.

The very tone and language of the ultimatum betrayed Coolidge's motives as solely petty political. It is easy to read in the plea of the chief executive an attempt on his part to do some political fence repairing. Congressman Greene, the republican chairman of the house ways and means committee, lost no time in informing the president that there was no chance to pass any emergency tax legislation because under the present conditions it would be impossible to secure the necessary unanimous consent for such action. The democratic leader, Mr. Garner, even cast to the winds all pretenses at respect for presidential honorable motives and showed that Coolidge was simply trying to pose as a savior of the masses, while actually he was trying to strengthen the reactionary republican party.

Another War Brewing

Germany is getting ready for the next war! Capitalist correspondents in Berlin send this prophecy to their papers as hot stuff. But why wonder at it? There is not a government in the world strong or weak that is not preparing for the next war.

The best brains of every capitalist government in Europe are devoted to the task of preparing for the next reign of carnage. This is capitalism. And yet we are told that Communists believe in violence. Communism alone can save the human race from this suicidal mania for war and self-destruction.

The last war was supposed to make another war impossible. So said the American war mongers. But to say that another war must not be, today, is to court the dungeon. The United States is preparing for the next war.

Germany is preparing for war, Of course. Today she can place 400,000 men in the field. In a few years more she may have 750,000. Her chemists have perfected the most deadly forms of gas. How splendid!

And France! Victorious France, totters under the weight of her victory. The franc slips; panic seizes her rulers; a dictatorship of capitalism is threatened. Surely a beautiful prospect.

Meanwhile Soviet Russia proceeds calmly building up a new order, abolishing the causes of war and offering hope to the workers of the world who are slowly building up their Communist organizations that will abolish capitalism and its evil accompaniments, the most terrible of which is war.

A storm is threatening in the Coolidge cabinet that will soon burst with a violence resembling an earthquake. It appears that the silent man was in a caucus with McLean. This boded ill to the friends of Harry Daugherty and other big guns in the republican party. The White House wire of the "principal" to the "Big Bear" at Palm Beach was a surprise to others besides the Public Lands Committee.

The esteemed Chicago Evening Post regrets that the "people" are losing confidence in the present capitalist government. The Teapot Dome investigation is largely to blame. It happens that the owner of the "Post" was one of the excuses for the investigation. He got the neat sum of $92,000 for securing valuable information. Of course he has confidence in our present government. It was very good to him.

JOIN THE WORKERS PARTY

"Back to the People"

The poweful capitalist interests are not retreating before the assault that is now being made against them.

The American constitution is reputed to be a most inflexible document. There is no other constitution so difficult to amend and which puts the government at so respectable a distance from the influence of the masses. Yet, while the Teapot committee is busy digging into telegrams and secret codes the senators and congressmen of both the republican and democratic parties are joining hands in making the constitution even more rigid and more difficult to amend than it is today. To some this task may be an impossible one in view of the already excessive rigidity of the constitution. Nevertheless, this is the case.

United States Senator James W. Wadsworth, of New York, a multi-millionaire republican, who has inherited millions of dollars from his father, once one of the leading real estate gamblers in the country, and who is himself now one of the notorious bond sharks, is the author of a bill innocently called the "back to the people" amendment. In the house of representatives, Congressman Finis G. Garrett, of Tennessee, democrat, is the sponsor of this measure.

The amendment provides for new and slower procedure for changing the constitution. It is to be a substitute for Article 5 of the constitution, but will retain the already objectionable feature of this article which provides for the ratification of any constitutional amendment by "three-fourths of the several states thru their legislatures or conventions, as one of the other mode of ratification may be proposed by the Congress or the Convention." The Wadsworth-Garrett proposal adds to this check against exercise of political power by the masses the following dangerous stipulation: "that the members of at least one house of each of the legislatures which may ratify shall be elected after such amendments have been proposed; that any state may require that ratification by its legislature be subject to confirmation by popular vote; and that, until three-fourths of the state have ratified or more than one-fourth of the states have rejected or defeated a proposed amendment, any state may change its vote."

This is a most dangerous move being made by the big business interests against the workers and farmers. Here we have an attempt to use the skillful device of so-called "confidence in the people" and the cumbersome parliamentary machinery in order to blind the workers and farmers to the uselessness of capitalist democracy. The Philadelphia Bar Association, the Pennsylvania Manufacturers Association, the National Security League, and other reactionary organizations of the employing class have lined up for this measure. It is the urgent duty of every organization of the working and farming classes to resist the enactment of this vicious measure to the bitter end.

The Spanish Dictatorship

It appears that the Spanish dictatorship of Colonel Rivera, and the gang of militarists that had committed all the outrages in the Philippines and Cuba, once so roundly denounced by our American "humanitarian" capitalists, is due for a serious jolt.

This clique of capitalist hangmen who have maintained themselves in power by slaughtering the helpless unarmed Spanish workers are now being buried on the very field where they had previously scored their greatest victory. It was thru their supposed opposition to the Moroccoan military campaign that the Spanish Fascisti came into power. Once they seized power in Spain these Fascists pursued the same imperialist ventures.

Now the Rivera dictatorship is about to be overwhelmed by a horrible military disaster like the government which it overthrew. The Riffians have broken thru the Spanish lines and are pushing thru in wedge formation. The bankrupt Spanish government is rushing reinforcements. The outlook for the Spaniards is hopeless. The reverse is so serious that the government's life is threatened.

The Outlook In Japan

Dire political consequences are expected in Japan as a result of the conflict between the cabinet and the privy council over the question of giving an eighty million yen loan to the insurance companies.

Despite the refusal of the privy council and the house of represenattives to sanction the measure, Viscount Kiyoura is going ahead with this policy of favoritism to the big insurance interests. Thus the viscount is following a policy contrary to the wishes of every other branch of the government. This dictatorial attitude of the ruling clique of Japan will precipitate decisive struggles in the Island empire.

The working masses of Japan have been showing increasing signs of discontent. A great struggle for the extension of franchise is now gripping the country. The outcome of this fight for a democratization of the Japanese government is of tremendous importance to the entire Far East.

The Trial of Forbes

On the eve of his trial Mr. Forbes feels confident. One of the clubs he is swinging is a threat to name the "higher-ups" if serious effort should be made to visit punishment upon him for his crookedness in administering the affairs of the Veterans' Bureau. In this he is pursuing the policy adopted by Mr. Daugherty who is defying the Senate, the House, the President and the whole country simply by threatening to tell the truth about a number of leading figures in the Government.

Mr. Daugherty is today without question the most powerful man in the Government for this very reason. Perhaps Mr. Forbes is the next powerful man because he is the next most crooked man in capitalist politics. Under these circumstances we don't expect much from the Forbes trial.

Disarmament must wait, says Ramsay MacDonald, until—the pigs begin to fly. Disarmament will wait until the capitalist system is overthrown, say the Communists.

SPLITS AND CLASS STRUGGLE

By JOHN PEPPE

IS IT true that Communists advocate splits everywhere and under any circumstances? Or is it true that the tactics of the united front that we must avoid splits everywhere and under any circumstance?

James Oneal, the editor of the socialist organ, "The New Leader" again attacks the Communists. James Oneal is the socialist who more than anyone makes it understandable why the Third International adopted the name Communist, abandoning the name socialist as the synonym for shame and betrayal.

In the March issue of the New Leader, the official organ of the socialist party, he accuses the Communists of wanting to split the May 30th convention of the farmer-labor movement. Oneal writes under the heading, "The United Affront": "The Minnesota conference accepted the Communist professions of good faith and permitted Communist delegates to associate themselves with the Farmer-Labor Party is issuing a call for a national conference to meet in St. Paul next May . . . Now then, turn to the issue of the WORKER of December 22, 1923. Here will be found an article by John Pepper on the proposed May conference. . . . But in his article he writes of the 'tremendous tasks' that face the Communists. They are always facing 'tremendous tasks,' and 'great historical tasks.' But the task he has in mind in this article is the necessity of the Communists splitting any organization that may be organized next May. This he writes, 'Is the greatest historical task, the task which stands before all other tasks.' Of course, this 'task' is jutified on the ground that bourgeois elements will creep into the conference. But who are the 'bourgeois elements' in the view of all Communists. The answer is easy. All who do not accept Communist 'principles' are a part of the 'bourgeois elements.' The Pepper article is an announcement of what the duty of Communists is in the event of them getting into any conference on the score of the 'united front'."

Is it really true what James Oneal asserts, that the Communists want to split every organization, that the Communists want to split the May conference of the farmer-labor movement, and that my article said that the task before us is "the necessity of the Communists splitting any organization that may be organized next May?"

Of course James Oneal's assertion is a lie, a conscious, deliberate lie. He cannot quote, nor does he quote a single phrase from my article or any other article published in any Communist publication, which says a single word to the effect that we want to split the May conference. And on the contrary, if he possessed at least the literary honesty, after having long ago lost his revolutionary honesty, he could quote hundreds of citizens from scores of articles and manifestos written by all Communist writers (including myself) for strengthening and building up the May convention.

I will quote here word for word what I really wrote in my article of December 22, 1923, in the WORKER, under the heading, "La Follette, the Third Party and the Labor Party." I pointed out that the following tasks face our Party:

"1. We must realize that our chief enemy is big capital, the government and the political parties of imperialism. We must understand the revolutionary significance of the political mass upheaval of all the lower classes of American society against ruling imperialistic capital. Our first task is, therefore, to throw into the scales the solid forces of this revolutionary process against capitalism. That means that we—regardless of how little we may like it—must retain a political alliance with the Third Party movement against the capitalist parties.

"2. It is in the deepest interest of the working class and the American revolution to render the split between the capitalist class and the other classes as wide as possible. It is, therefore, a paramount Communist task to shatter the capitalist united front. We must drive the LaFollette group to split with the democratic and republican parties. It is one of our most important tasks everywhere, in every trade union and farmers' organization, in every Farmer-Labor Party; in every Third Party, to begin a mighty campaign which will force the La Follette group into making the split.

"3. We must make every effort to split away the workers and exploited farmers from the well-to-do farmers and small business men. It is the greatest historical task, the task which stands before all other tasks. to develop the class consciousness of the workers and exploited farmers."

My article, therefore, really does speak of splits; but of what kind of splits? Do I advocate or propose any split of the May 30 convention? Not at all in my article, but only in James Oneal's lying imagination. I advocate two kinds of splits in my article: (1) The split between the capitalist class and the non-capitalist classes; (2) The split of the workers and exploited farmers from the well-to-do farmers and small business men.

I, therefore, advocate the split, the breaking up of the united front of the capitalist class. I want to tear away the non-capitalist classes of our society, the farmers, small business men and workers from the leaders of big capital and political parties of big capital, and I want to separate organizationally as well as ideologically the proletarian elements, the workers and exploited farmers from the other non-capitalist classes, from well-to-do farmers and lower middle class. I say in my article that the class struggle of the working class will more easily make headway when capitalist society cannot set up a united front against the working class. I claim that the capitalist class and its government would become essentially weaker if the non-capitalist classes would lose confidence in the social and political leadership of big capital. I analyze the situation, showing that such a breaking away of the masses from the leadership of finance capital is progressing and that all signs point to the development of a Third Party movement.

At the same time my analysis goes further and makes it clear that the non-capitalist classes, altho in certain respects they have interests in common against financial capital, nevertheless, have interests which vary in many respects. Therefore, we Communists, as representatives of the proletariat, must make every effort to render the workers and exploited farmers conscious of these differences of class interests. I claim that we as Marxists must not underestimate the tremendous political significance of the breaking away of the non-capitalist classes from the leadership of finance capital, but at the same time we should not forget that these lower middle class masses will always hesitate; and only the working class, schooled and unified in capitalist production itself, will show the necessary discipline, centralization and collectivist spirit to take over the leadership in the overthrow of capitalist society.

My article advocates, therefore, two kinds of splits which must be self-evident for every Marxist, f every consistent representative the working class. I advocate t split of all non-capitalist elemen from the capitalist class, and t split of the working class and ex ploited farmers from the gelatinou formless, hesitating, atomized, no capitalist mass. But at the same tim every Communist, and of course m article too, advocates the united fro of the working class, advocates an helps to organize the May 30th co vention which tries to build up th united front of the workers and e ploited farmers.

It is a deliberate lie to state th the Communists want to split t May 30th convention. We know th the May convention will not conta only elements of workers and e ploited farmers. The class consciou ness of workers and exploited far ers in our country is not yet so f advanced that they have separat everywhere and all along the li from the lower middle class and wel to-do farmer elements. But ou attitude to the May 30th conventio from the first moment was uncondi tional support. I personally hav gone so far as to express the vie that after we make a strong fig against it, we must accept even th nomination of La Follette if the m jority of the exploited farmers an workers in the May convention wi decide that way.

We are for the May 30th conven tion; and as against all the lies o James Oneal we are today the mo loyal fighters against the postpon ment or abandonment of the Ma 30th convention. We fight for Ma 30th and we fight against July 4 be cause May 30th means the unite front of the workers and exploite farmers, and at the same time i means the split from the movemen of well-to-do farmers, small busines men and labor aristocracy. We Com munists are for splits if the split i in the interests of the class struggl of the workers, and we are agains splits if they are against the inter ests of the class struggle of th workers. The tactics of the unite front has two sides, the splitting on the unifying sides. It aims to unit all workers to fight capitalism; an at the same time it aims to spli away all workers from the formless general, non-capitalist mass as wel as from the reactionary or yellow socialist leaders.

(NOTE:—This article was writte before the St. Paul conference vote to postpone the May 30th conventio to June 17th—Editor).

(WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE)

The Russian Communist Party branch is governing this frontier city and fighting the counter-revolution. Earlier installments tell of the fuel shortage that prevents seed grain from being fetched on the railroad. The Party meeting decides to send the Red Army far away for fuel, at the risk of leaving the city open for bandits and counter-revolutionists. It also decides to conscript the local bourgeoisie for wood cutting in a near-by park. Varied types of party members are flashed on the screen: Klimin, the efficient president of the branch, who still finds time to have a sweetheart; Robeiko, the consumptive, whose devotion is killing him; Gornuikh, the brilliant youth of 19 on the Cheka; Matusenko, the luxury-loving place-hunter and Stalmakhov, a practical workingman revolutionist. Gornuikh, disguised as a peasant, overhears talk in the market place about a plot of counter-revolutionists to seize the town while the Red Army is away getting wood. The Communist company is summoned but, perhaps, too late. Robeiko is dragged out of his house and shot, Klimin's sweetheart is butchered and Klimin and Stalmakhov are overpowered and hurled into a dungeon. The counter-revolutionaries are in possession of the town, with the Red Army away. Klimin and Stalmakhov are butchered before the Communist company led by Gornuikh can arrive. The Red Army appears at last with great reinforcements and the big battle begins with Karaulov, a rough Cossack revolutionist, in command of the Red forces.—(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY).

AFTER all, one had to live. "On principle," he had not gone to work in the Soviet school, he knew no trade, and his stores and savings had soon been eaten up. From week to week, from month to month, from year to year, he had lived all thru the Revolution in the hope that the bloody, hated, incomprehensible power of the Bolsheviks over his country was on the point of falling, and that the old real life would return. He had hated the Bolsheviks ever since the first threatening thunder of the October Revolution; they were entirely strange to him; there had not been any of them in his past life; their doings, behavior and speeches, were for him alike incomprehensible and full of contradictions. The Bolsheviks seemed to him low and brutal and at the same time devilishly cunning, lying Jesuits and at the same time narrow, inflexible doctrinaries. The mere sight of the Soviet posters in the streets upset him, and he hardly left his house even in day time, shrivelled up, let himself go, started drinking home-made spirits, quarrelled over nothings with Margarita Semenovna, and for whole days on end either played patience or lolled on the sofa and re-read the books of his diminishing library.

The Czecho-Slovak revolution destroyed his hopes of a return of the old order of life. He saw then the abuses, robbery and bribery of the governing bourgeoisie, the ignorance, stupidity and senseless cruelty of the officers. He was sorry for the Whites and contemptuous of them, behaved towards them with the feeling of a father for a drunken idle son who had not justified the hopes that had been set upon him. The life of people in this world began to seem to him a miraculous absurdity, and he was visited by misanthropic dreams of the destruction of all mankind.

On the day of the revolt, from morning on, vague rumors went about among the townsfolk who had been mobilized for the getting of fuel. When in the evening, after a preliminary roll call, they had been shut up in a big dark room and heard from the courtyard the disturbing, warning roll of the drum, malice and fear, joy and anxiety, filled the room with laughter, shouts and a rumbling, angry murmur. And then Karaulov himself, accompanied by two respectful silent figures, came into the room, and threw the light of an electric torch on the now quieting crowd. Under the thin light of the torch he saw on all those faces, old and young, beautiful and ugly, clever and stupid, on all of them glee, hope and terror; he understood, and said, not loudly, but so that all could hear, addressing the Commander of the Third Company, Zhourbin, dark, well-made, with a slight squint, standing respectfully at attention, who was to be left with his company to guard the monastery.

"In case of anything . . . instantly. . . . You understand?"

"Just so, Comrade Commissar," replied Zhourbin and smiled boldly, squinted at Karaulov, squinted at the silent crowd of townsfolk and seemed to them a devil with fiery powerful body, smoky face, the crooked glance of cruel, handsome eyes, and the satanic horn of a Red Army helmet.

During that dark, nervous night in the big, close room, no one slept; they whispered, whispered, whispered and went thru the names of the Communists with glee, remembering their mistakes, and hoped, hoped, hoped.

And Konstantin Petrovitch also did not sleep, but lay on a narrow hard bench, covering himself with his coat, turned from side to side and thought continually. He did not believe in the success of the revolt, and did not sympathise with it, remembering the experience of the Czecho-Slovak mutiny and the Kolchak time. The Communists were still alien to him, and he did not believe the things they wrote on their red flags, and for the sake of which they so devotedly died. But, since the people, the workmen, the Red Army soldiers—those peasant lads in soldiers coats—for so many years had obeyed them, these preachers of the International, obeyed this revolutionary sect that was in composition only half Russian, then, perhaps, they were indeed bringing with them some sort of vital truth. Perhaps if he had tried working with the Bolsheviks. . . . Perhaps then he would have found this truth of theirs. But he had lain on his sofa and read his books in their fine bindings . . . and eaten them. . . . He read a funeral service over his past life.

And as soon as one company returned to the monastery and it became known that the revolt had been suppressed, Konstantin Petrovitch asked Zhourbin for leave to go to the town for the day, to change his worn out boots, and at the same time, as he decided privately, to go to the Popeduc (Popular Education Department) and to ask if some work could not be found for him. Besides he wanted to look with new eyes on the loathed little town that had eaten up all his life, and on the unloved but familiar Margarita Semenovna, than whom, after all, he had no one nearer in the world. And so, from the morning, under that thin drizzle that was falling, beside the slow carts that were taking fuel to the town, Konstantin Petrovitch had trudged, listening to the talk of the peasants and the Red Army soldiers who were convoying the carts: talk of the sowing, of how it was time to be ploughing but the Anti-Christs, the Bolsheviks, were making them carry wood in the thaw; of how there was no seed for the sowing; of how the Communists were swindlers, promising goods in exchange for food and then sending to the country not nails, iron, crockery or calico, but starched collars, powder and lipsalve. . . .

"Ugh, the Anti-Christs!" said a peasant.

"It's some one purposely putting spokes in the wheels," replied a shy, crimson-faced Red Army man. "The Cheka ought certainly to be told of it. . . ."

The peasant shook his head hopelessly:

"The Cheka won't help. There are Communists there, too, and they stick by each other."

But another Red Army man was explaining to a group of peasants: "This wood you are carrying is for the railway, and by the railway we are to bring the seed. . . . For the sowing, I suppose. . . . All this Spitsyn told us, the Political Instructor, a good comrade . . . and I read it in the paper. . . ."

(To Be Continued Friday)

The Big Cheap-Skate

By J. O. BENTALL.

A RATHER uncouth criminal was caught the other day who openly confessed that he had hired out to certain business rivals to carry on a systematic labor of setting fire to competitive laundry establishments.

His employers had beat down his wages till now he was getting only the niggardly sum of $50 a week. I take it for granted that he was worth that much to the concern that hired him, or there would have been a further cut, as his trade does not seem to be organized as yet.

The job of setting fire to laundries appears to have been a permanent one. At least that is what the New York press claims. But that the journeymen thus hired were on the regular payroll and that their stated wage was $50 a week hits the moral lump of the metropolitan editors like a "red plot" hatched up by Billy Burns and sent in hot via Helsingfors.

The World rolls its eyes and tilts its head as it looks toward heaven in the sanctimonious attitude of a gossippy woman that has discovered a scandal and says painfully:

"What's to be said of a creature—we can't call him a man—who makes a living by setting fires at the direction of any other creature who will pay him $50 a week for the dastardly job?"

Why the World goes into hysterics over this petty arson affair is beyond our ken, unless it considers the fellow a cheap skate for doing it at that scab rate. Personally I think he is getting about all that the traffic can stand, especially when I compare him with our millionaire tenement owners who set big blocks afire by sheer neglect that does not cost them a cent, and when I think of the thousands of lives that are lost in factory firetraps and mines, in tinderlike shops, in schoolhouses, all over the country. And look at the fellows who set the whole world on fire in the great war and who have kept it burning all since—mostly for money.

Look at the piles and piles of money—oodles and oodles of graft and profit they get. They seem to be making a comfortable living at the firebug business. May I suggest that the World throw a fit in their direction also some Sunday morning before it goes to church.

Upon mature deliberation, however, I can easily see how it must gall the sensitive feelings of our capitalist press to have a clumsy laundry firebug get into the limelight and dim the lustre of the glittering stars in the brilliant heavens of civilized arson.

And at only $50 per week.

Contemptible Judge Hears Contempt Cases

STRIKERS IN COURT FIGHT FOR RIGHTS

But It's Hard to Get Justice Before Dennie Sullivan

Three garment strikers will be brought before Judge Denis Sullivan this afternoon to show cause why they should not be held in contempt of court for alleged violations of the injunction he issued on behalf of the Graceline Dress Co., 302 S. Market St. They are Morris Kravis, Eugenia Schlacter and Minnie Seidel.

They were all arrested yesterday by deputy sheriffs and brought to the court of Judge Sullivan for preliminary hearing.

They had not been served with notices to appear in court to show cause why they should not be held in contempt as is usually done.

They were seized and hurried off by the deputies. They were not given a chance to consult Attorney Peter Sissman, who represents the union in the injunction proceedings, and who appeared for the defendants.

Sissman pointed out to the court that he objected to any questioning of the people arrested on the grounds that they had not been properly served with notice to appear and since they had not had a chance to consult counsel they might incriminate themselves.

Judge Gets On High Horse.

His objection was overruled. Judge Sullivan told Sissman that since he had not filed in writing notice of his appearance as counsel that he (Sullivan) would not recognize him. Sissman countered by saying that he had had no notice of the proceedings in time to file notice. The judge, without saying so directly, finally recognized Sissman as attorney for the strikers.

Sissman repeatedly pointed out to the court that any questions addressed to the defendants were illegal, because they had not been properly notified in the contempt proceedings.

"But, Mr. Sissman, I am only trying to find what is going on in the district covered by these injunctions," Sullivan said.

Wants Judge to Obey Law.

"I object most seriously to your getting that information except as is provided by law," Sissman objected.

His objection was overruled.

Then Attorney Taylor, who represents the Graceline Dress Co., and appeared in the role of chief prosecu-

Daily Worker Makes Offer to New Readers

One of the most attractive features of the big 10,000 new readers campaign now waged by THE DAILY WORKER is a trial subscription which entitles new readers to secure the paper for two months for the small sum of $1.00.

Thousands of readers thruout the country who have not yet even heard of THE DAILY WORKER, can be brought into the fold in this way. It is safe to assume that once a worker secures a copy of this fighting working class paper that he will stick to it.

No better way of building up the labor movement can be thought of than to spread THE DAILY WORKER among the workers in the shops and factories. This will produce a thinking movement. It will supply the now discontented wage slaves with the knowledge of their class position which is essential to a successful organization of workers.

There will be no agents commission paid on the trial subscription. An announcement on page 4 gives further particulars.

NONPARTISAN LEAGUE JOINS FEDERATION

Unity of City and Land in Minnesota Complete

BULLETIN.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., March 13.—The Non-Partisan League Convention have voted to join the Farmer-Labor Federation despite everything the league's own officialdom could do to prevent this result.

There was a scene of wild enthusiasm in the Farmer-Labor Convention when the result was announced by the negotiation committee. This is the last step in unity of the economic organizations of farmers and workers in Minnesota.

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE
(Special to The Daily Worker)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Mar. 13.—Obstructionist leaders of the Non-partisan League, who are trying to hamper the building of a real Farmer-Labor Party here, have run into a snag that presages the downfall of their leadership.

Following the use of the names of Magnus Johnson and Hendrick Shipsted, the two U. S. senators from Minnesota, by Thomason and Gilbert, nonpartisan league officials, as opposing joint action with the Farmer-Labor Federation because of alleged Communist domination, the following telegram signed by Henry Tiegen, secretary to Magnus Johnson, William A. Schaper, of the Farmer-Labor Federation's arrangement committee; James Manahan, representing the Equity Cooperative Society, and R. L. Harmon, secretary of the Farmer-Labor Federation, has been sent to Senators Johnson and Shipsted:

"Thomason states in telegram sent you yesterday that sixteen Communists dominated Third Party conference in St. Paul Monday and that same men are now dominating new Farmer-Labor Federation

GREAT SIGNIFICANCE OF MINNESOTA EVENTS IS HERE SUMMARIZED

Complete unity of the Farmer-Labor forces in Minnesota has been achieved. This is the meaning of the St. Paul and Minneapolis conferences just held that have a national significance.

First, the St. Paul Conference that voted, in the interests of unity, to postpone the National Convention from May 30th to June 17th, at the same time, however, taking a decisive stand against the July 4th gathering of third party elements to be held at Cleveland, O.

What Is Taking Place in Minnesota.

Then followed the convention of the Working People's Non-Partisan Political League (City Workers) that voted to affiliate with the Farmer-Labor Federation.

Then came the Townley Non-Partisan League (farmers) and also voted to affiliate with the Farmer-Labor Federation.

The amalgamated organization will now attend, thru its representatives, the convention of the Farmer-Labor Party of Minnesota at St. Cloud.

It will demand that state candidates be nominated, so that the party will go into the state primaries as a unit.

Attorney General Dickers With Smith For $180,000 On Forbidden Fight Films

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, March 13.—Attorney General Daugherty and Jess Smith, his friend, "put $2,400 apiece into an oil proposition out west," with a man named "Colonel Darden," Roxie Stinson told the senate committee investigating Daugherty today.

She said Smith told her of the transaction.

James G. Darden is an official of the Mutual Oil Company that had claims in Teapot Dome. He is under subpoena by the oil committee, but has not been located.

She also disclosed that Daugherty and Smith were considering an arrangement whereby films of the Dempsey-Carpentier fight could be transported from state to state without prosecution.

They were to make $180,000 by Daugherty's agreeing not to prosecute, she said.

Mrs. Stinson told about hearing a conversation in New York soon after the Dempsey-Carpentier fight, between Smith and Joe Weber, of Weber and Fields, about "getting a parole for Weber's brother-in-law, a man named Solomon, who was in the penitentiary. I can't relate it verbatim, but it was about fixing it with Daugherty."

Mrs. Stinson said Jess Smith told Weber "we are working on it now."

"He told me later 'he's awfully cheap but I think we will do something for him.'"

Several bitter clashes took place between Daugherty's attorney and prosecutor Wheeler. The latter accused the attorney-general defenders with attempting to block the investigation.

One of the most startling pieces of testimony was that on the night prior to the suicide of Jesse Smith a secret meeting was held in the White House, at which there were present, President Harding, Attorney-General Daugherty, E. L. Doheny and Harry Sinclair.

When the Hearings Resumed Today.

"This gentlemen comes here every day trying to bring up matters to get them into the newspapers," Wheeler said.

Senator Ashurst took up the cudgel in Wheeler's defense and charged that Howland had insulted Wheeler yesterday and should apologize.

Howland asked for information regarding subpoenas issued for the head bookkeeper of Daugherty's bank at Washington court house, Ohio.

Senator Wheeler said that either the bookkeeper must come here or the committee would send an accountant to examine the books relative to deposits since November 1, 1920.

"What do you know with reference to the K. Street residence "

"I would rather not answer that. I consider is purely personal.

"Had it anything to do with the Attorney General?"

"Yes."

Questioned whether Jesse Smith and Daugherty met at the K. Street house, the witness answered in the affirmative. She said Daugherty and her former husband had conferences with several people, including senators and others who were trying to land jobs for their friends with the government.

It seems that Daugherty was general employment manager in the Harding clearing house. It was a favorite hangout for oil men and others who were trying to get in on the ground floor in any good proposition that was up.

Daugherty was definitely entangled in the oil scandal when Mrs. Smith in reply to a question, stated that the attorney general and her former husband were involved in an oil deal with Colonel Darden of the Mutual Oil Company.

Senator Wheeler took up the questioning:

"Did Smith ever tell you of any deals between Daugherty and Darden?"

"Yes. Jess Smith gave Colonel Darden $2,400. I asked him, did Mr. Daugherty give the same amount. He said, 'yes.' They had a deal on an oil proposition out west.

"That was what Colonel Darden was interested in. Colonel Darden had for years been trying to get

'TEAPOT SPECIAL' HAS AROUSED A FURIOUS DEMAND

Cal's Pirate Crew Will Be Exposed

The "Teapot Special" is sizzling and bubbling with the scandals that are going into its pages and when March 17, comes and the 8-page special is on the streets there will be an explosion that will destroy what little peace of mind is left to Daugherty, Fall, Denby and the rest of Cal's thieving crew.

Comrades are rushing their orders in by the one to five hundred lot: they are getting them in early so they won't be turned down at the last moment with the news that it is all sold out ahead of time.

For the Farmers.

Says George F. Partridge of Rochester, Minnesota:

"Send me 200 copies of the "Teapot Special." I want to help the workers and farmers learn the real meaning of these great revelations against the social system that is oppressing them."

Three hundred copies are ordered from the secretary of the City Central Committee of the Workers Party in Youngstown, a steel baliwick where the party is gaining new strength since the DAILY WORKER began coming into the town.

From far and near big advance orders are coming in from enthusiastic comrades who see a chance of supplying all their fellow workers with the most vital information of the year.

Under No Wraps.

This Teapot scandal has laid bare the class control of government as has nothing that has broke out of Washington this century. Capitalist papers, realizing this, confine their reports as far as possible to the bare official proceedings except where some political end is served by further expose of rivals of the other party. But the DAILY WORKER is under no wraps in telling the story. And the "Teapot Special" of March 17—next Monday—will give all the facts:—tell who the thieves were, what they stole and why they did it.

For a comprehensive as well as interesting story of the Teapot and California oil steals and the rest of the titanic looting and for revelations of employers control of the Burns-Daugherty outfit YOU MUST get the "Teapot Special."

Freight Goes In Ditch.

SPRINGFIELD, Ohio, March 13.—One fireman was killed and an engineer and brakeman were injured when a Detroit, Toledo and Ironton freight train went into a ditch inside the city limits here today.

UNITE FARM-LABOR FORCES IN MINNESOTA

Working People's League for Farmer-Labor Federation

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE
(Special to The Daily Worker)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Mar. 13.—The Working People's Nonpartisan League in session in Richmond Hall here has endorsed the Farmer-Labor Federation and voted to become part of that oganization.

The decision was reached with but little debate and that chiefly on details of the organization plan. William Mahoney, of St. Paul, is chairman, and Fred Siegel, of that city, is secretary.

The Farmer-Labor Federation delegates, who met yesterday and perfected their organization, are meeting with the Working People's Nonpartisan Political League and the organization is now the Federation of Workers and Farmers.

The Townley organization is also meeting today and has refused to seat any delegate suspected of desiring to have the organization follow the example of the Working People's Nonpartisan Political League and become part of the Federation.

The negotations committee appointed by the Federation yesterday was denied the opportunity of conveying the message of the Federation to the conference of the Townley organization and this has resulted in a clean-cut division among the Nonpartisan League delegates. Numbers of them are now demanding that the Federation committee be heard and are threatening to leave the League conference and meet with the Federation. The rank and file wants unity and is going to have it in spite of the officials.

SENATE DEFEATS BILL THAT SOUGHT TO GIVE AID TO THE FARMERS

MCLACHLAN GETS LETTER OF CHEER FROM MILITANT

Ardently Awaits Release of Mine Leader

In the hope that more comrades will cheer up brave Jim MacLachlan who is serving two years in Dorchester penitentiary, Nova Scotia, for his courage in fighting for the miners of District 26, the following letter from a militant miner on this side of the line is published.

MacLachlan was the president of the district who led the miners' strike in sympathy with the British Empire Steel Corporation's millmen, for which he was expelled by John L. Lewis and imprisoned by the province.

Mr. James B. MacLachlan,
"Guest" of Gov't of Canada,
British Empire—— Steel Corp.,
Dorchester Penitentiary,
Nova Scotia, Canada.

Dear Comrade MacLachlan: Busy as we have been, there is no excuse that I can offer for not having written you before now; in fact, I must confess to negligence in this respect and forthwith offer my apology.

I presume there is little use attempting to give you the news concerning the outside world, especially that affecting the miners, for I understand you are permitted to receive unlimited mail and to read the papers. The Canadian comrades, I suppose, have given you the information concerning the Indianapolis fiasco, but none exist who can give the real story; words cannot describe it and I am of the opinion that even an artist could not draw a picture of it, such was the monstrosity.

Sluggers and Cynicism.

John L. Lewis was at the height of his infamous career in that convention and, I am frank to admit, I am unable to command words outside the profane vocabulary, to properly describe him. With a bold, brazen attitude, backed by his army of sluggers and an unmatchable cynicism, not to mention his brutal carcasm, he ruthlessly ruled without regard to the registration of sentiment, as expressed by voice and vote on the different questions.

I cannot boast, I even deplore the fact, that I was born a British subject, when that government allows its dollar-grabbing dogs of war to imprison you because of your activities in the interest of the ones who work, yet there is little difference, if any, between the governments of the old order. The mystery is that the workers are so tolerant as to allow it.

May we not hope that the day is near when the tables will be turned and our class, the working class, in Canada and all the countries of the world, as is now the case in Russia, will rule in the interest of the workers. Then the workers can enjoy a fuller, better and happier life, instead of as now, slaving for profits, comfort and luxuries for the idle rich.

The DAILY WORKER.

If you can let me know thru your family, to Comrade Bell at Glace Bay, whether or not you are getting the DAILY WORKER, I would be glad to subscribe for you, so you could at least keep in touch with what is going on, until your persecutors are forced to free you from the unwarranted imprisonment which is now your lot. Then again you can serve in the Class Struggle that must lead to the inevitable, complete emancipation of the working class.

In closing, let me assure you that I will write more often, but with the hope that it will be unnecessary to address the letters to that vile den of capitalist oppression, I remain in Comradeship,

Thomas Myerscough.

P. S.—Comrades are urged to write to MacLachlan at Dorchester Penitentiary, Nova Scotia, Canada.

Chicago Bakery Wagon Drivers May Call Strike

Chicago bakery drivers will assemble in Ashland Auditorium next Saturday evening, to decide whether a strike shall be called to force better conditions from the bosses.

The meeting is summoned by Bakery Wagon Drivers Union, local No. 734. Secretary Sastrom will be one of the speakers.

It Hits Hard.

To The DAILY WORKER:—The paper hits hard and well.—Henry Roenne, New York City.

Chicago, Forgetting Its Negro Founder, Gives Race Over to the Mercies of Greediest Landlords

The first house in Chicago was built by a Negro in 1790. It is probably still being inhabited, if it is anything like most of the Negro dwellings in Chicago. Colored people in Chicago have been forced to live in restricted areas, where the dilapidation of the buildings has been almost unbelievable, where the rents charged have been higher than those charged whites in similar localities, and where the landlord almost never makes repairs.

Due also to the wholesale migration from the South, and to the restricted localities in which Negroes are allowed to live, the plight of the Negro in Chicago has been far worse than that of his white brother.

Discrimination.

"Colored people have, generally," we learn from a bulletin of the City Club, "Irrespective of their economic condition and culture, been restricted to low grade residence areas in which the housing accomodations to be obtained are very poor, and in which the rents, on the other hand, are very high. They assert that landlords renting to colored tenants do not put proper repairs on their houses, with the result that the housing deteriorates in quality.

Colored neighborhoods, they claim, do not get the attention from the city in street cleaning and garbage removal that the white neighborhoods receive. Often the worst dens of vice are forced into proximity to the colored quarters, making these neighborhoods unsafe for women and children. These conditions have been greatly intensified recently by the pressure among colored people for more housing.

"It is the unanimous feeling of those who understand conditions in colored neighborhoods that the solution of the problems of housing colored people thru provision of sanitary homes in decent and attractive neighborhoods would be a great forward step toward adjusting race relationships."

Necessities Are Lacking.

In the last three years the Negro population has increased at least fully one-third as much as the 109,000 negroes here in 1920. And yet no provision has been made to house this influx from the South. The most recent investigation of the Negro housing conditions, just published—a thoro survey made by the Chicago Commission on Race Relationship—proves that the ordinary conveniences considered necessities by the whites, are lacking in the colored neighborhoods. Bath-rooms on the South Side are often missing. Gas lighting is common, electric lighting a rarity. Heating is commonly done by wood or coal stoves, and furnaces are exceptional. Where furnaces are present they are generally out of commission.

The Chicago School of Civics describes a typical house in the negro district. "There are no gutters, the roof leaks in two places, the house is continually damp, basement, sink and drain leaks, there is no putty in the rattling window panes."

Never Make Repairs.

On the South Side almost every tenant tells of rain coming in thru the roof, chimney and window. Cases of fallen plaster and windows being without putty are too common to be noted by investigators. No matter how much some of these houses should be repaired, and they are almost never touched by landlords, they would still remain old houses, poorly built, thru which the wind can blow at will.

Owners in the so-called "Black belt" do not regard the house as worth repairing. They figure that tenants can always be found. The DAILY WORKER finds that in sections of the West Side white residents can get advantages and improvements that are denied to Negro tenants. One investigation shows that thirty-one per cent of all the Negro houses on the West Side are "absolutely dilapidated."

Broken Down Houses.

We are told by the Chicago School of Civics and Philanthropy investigator that "Broken down doors, unsteady flooring, and general dilapidation of negro houses are found on every side. Window panes are out, doors are hanging on single hinges or entirely fallen off, and roofs are rotting or leaking."

Colored tenants report it is impossible to persuade the landlords either to make the necessary repairs or to release them from their contracts, and that it is so hard to find better places in which to live, that they are forced either to make the repairs themselves, which they can rarely afford to do, or to endure the conditions as best they might.

"Tenants remain in dwellings twenty years after their unfitness has become apparent," says a University of Chicago investigator of Negro housing conditions, Caswell W. Crews.

"They can find no place to go. Houses are almost all wooden frame affairs, on the South Side. Paint is a dim memory. Toilet and baths are in no condition for use and plumbing is in such a state as to constantly menace the health of South Side Negro residents. It is often the case that many rooms cannot be used because of dampness, leaking roofs or defective toilets overhead."

Worst In City.

The only change in the situation at the present time, the DAILY WORKER finds, is a further deterioration of the physical state of such dwellings. Of the houses in the Polish district, 71 per cent are in good repairs; in the Bohemian districts, 57 per cent in good repair; in the stockyard district, 54 per cent are in good repairs, and in the Negro districts, only 26 per cent are in good repair. The houses in which the Negroes of Chicago at present are living, are in a worst state of repair than any other class of houses in the city. Seventy-five per cent of the houses occupied by Negroes in Chicago are in urgent need of repair and the landlords are steadfast in their refusal to do anything to remedy the pitiable surroundings in which the Negroes of the city are forced to live.

Time For Action.

Many learned men in the city are bothering their heads over the "Negro problem." They are debating whether or not the Negro is in reality an "inferior race." And while this hot air is being expended by people who profess their interest in the "uplifting" of the Negro, the sections where the Negroes are being forced to live are sinking further and further into dilapidation and decay. It is time some of this energy exerted for reform was diverted into looking after the material comfort of our Negroes. They should be given an opportunity to at least live in surroundings as decent as those now being enjoyed by the whites.

And it is time the Negroes themselves took some united action to better their own conditions. Organization is power. Negroes! protest vigorously against the despicable housing conditions to which you have been submitting. Let the DAILY WORKER express your declaration of the right to live as decently as the white. Then your white brother will be forced to show you more respect.

Daily Worker Exposing Housing Discrimination Against Negroes

THE Negro problem is essentially one of housing, the DAILY WORKER is told by an official of the Chicago city government. The Negroes of this city are tired of being made the object for every political investigation and reformist's whims. Everyone knows that the Negro is being discriminated against in the housing situation—that he is paying higher rents for more shabby quarters. He wants something definite done about it. Today we tell what the actual facts of the Negro housing districts are. The Negro realizes that if his condition is to be improved, he must organize and do most of it himself. The DAILY WORKER, however, is standing by and is going to help all it can in the campaign which the Negroes are just starting for better housing conditions.

Probe Catches Daugherty in Some Oil Deals

Going into her testimony regarding the Dempsey-Carpentier fight films, Wheeler asked, "What was the deal?"

"The transportation of films in interstate commerce was forbidden and if they could have been transported without prosecution they were to get $180,000."

"What was Mr. Daugherty to do?"

"He was to see there was no prosecution for violation of the law."

Harry To Break Law.

"Who was the deal made with?"

"The picture men."

"And Mr. Smith was doing what?"

"He was the mouthpiece."

Wheeler next went into stock transactions. Mrs. Stinson said, that her account at a Columbus broker's was "intermingled" with Jess Smith's, and that she had 200 shares of Pacific oil and 300 of Sinclair oil.

She did not know whether Smith paid for the stock or got it for nothing.

Court Stops Oil Drills.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., March 13.—The Mammoth Oil Company was today enjoined by Judge T. Blake Kennedy from drilling any more wells on the Teapot Dome property. Rear-Admiral Strauss of the U. S. navy and A. E. Watts, vice-president of the Sinclair Consolidated Oil companies were named as joint receivers for the property pending the final outcome of the litigation.

New Russ Airplane Motor.

LENINGRAD, March 13.—A new airplane motor has been invented by Prof. G. A. Hold, of the Leningrad Technological Institute. This motor is worked with oil and is set in motion by compressed air. It weighs ten times as little as an ordinary airplane motor and requires much less fuel. It is generally expected to mark an immensely important development in aero-technique.

British Liner in Bad.

NEW YORK, March 13.—A libel action against the huge British liner Orduna of the Royal Mail steamship lines, will be started in U. NO POWER ABLE TO STOP UNITY OF FARM-LABOR sensing the tremendous importance of the unanimity in the vote for a substitute for the representation basis proposed by the committee.

Its report provided for mass representation at state conventions but as a result of objections from farmers' representatives, objections were illogical but prompted by the fear of being outnumbered and outvoted at state conventions, representation to state gatherings comes from county conventions held at least two weeks before the state meeting. In the county conventions representation is on the basis of the vote cast for governor. To the state conventions, however, the delegates are elected direct from the county conventions.

Decision Far-Reaching.

This seemingly rather unimportant technical matter of organization was the only bar to unity in this meeting of farmer and labor elements that is hammering out a powerful weapon for the toilers of this state. The effects of this decision go far beyond the geographical borders of Minnesota for on this decision hinged to a large extent the success of the Farmer-Labor movement in the Northwest and in the nation.

Outside of this substitute for that portion of the committee report the report as a whole was adopted with a few minor changes and amid tremendous enthusiasm which burst out time and time again after the crucial point had been reached and passed.

Despite the solidarity now prevailing between the two groups, there is no lack of disruptive elements present seizing upon every opportunity to create confusion. At the entrance to Richmond Halls an agent of the Pike machine stands telling farmers who will listen to stay away from this gathering because the union men will dominate it. The Minnesota Daily Star, controlled by the officialdom of the old official group, today carries a slimy editorial designed to create dissension in the ranks of the workers and farmers and urging them to use the primary and not nominate candidates at St. Cloud.

Papers Feature Big News.

With unity an accomplished fact in the Farmer-Labor federation as a result of its successful fusion of the rural and city elements, it is only a matter of time until the state organization is solidly in its hands.

The importance attached by the capitalist interests to the series of conferences that are uniting the workers and farmers of Minnesota and the Northwest in a powerful Farmer-Labor party controlled by their economic organizations is shown by the fact that the Minneapolis Tribune this morning carries the story of the St. Paul conference on the first page in its mail editions. Its story is a detailed one without any attempt whatsoever to mimimize the powerful Farmer-Labor machine that the St. Paul conference took the first steps to erect.

Labor Circles Active.

The labor movement of the Twin Cities is throwing its whole strength into the unity movement and every local union and both central bodies are centers of intense activity. Farmer delegates here state that in the rural sections the same situation obtains.

Minnesota is off in a cloud of dust and is almost ready to accept the leadership in the task the St. Paul conference of functioning Farmer-Labor parties in seven states placed upon her. Labor and farmer movements set the stage for the gigantic convention of farmers and workers that the action of the Farmer-Labor Federation today makes certain will be held.

On every hand is heard commendation for the active part the Workers Party of America and its Minnesota units is playing in building a movement that promises to be of a size and influence to surpass the expectations of its most optimistic organizers.

Russian Government Stores Competing With Private Firms

MOSCOW, March 13th.—The provincial branches of the Government Department Stores have sold 5,000,000 rubles worth of goods during the last year. There are now eight branches with 24 stores in the provinces. Manufactured goods was sold for 1,100,000 rubles, groceries for 750,000 rubles, shoes, 320,000 rubles, dry goods, 230,000 rubles, etc. In some bigger villages and at some railroad stations special peasant stores have been opened selling goods used mostly by the peasants. They are competing successfully with the private stores.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., March 13.—A thousand workers' and farmers' delegates to the various conferences now being held in the Twin-Cities packed the courthouse assembly room here in one of the most unique workingclass meetings ever held in this city.

Twelve nationally known speakers addressed the meeting on the subject of "Conservation and Exploitation of Natural Resources" from eight o'clock to eleven-thirty. Not a single person left the hall except speakers who had talked and had to catch trains, and from the moment that Norman Tallentire, district organizer of the Workers Party, opened the meeting as chairman, until William F. Dunne, of the DAILY WORKER, closed with an appeal for organization of the workers and farmers, there was no let up in the enthusiasm.

The list of speakers was as follows: Charles Taylor, of the Montana Farmer-Labor party; Joseph Manley, secretary of the Federated Farmer-Labor party; C. E. Kennedy, of the Washington Farmer-Labor party; William Z. Foster, national chairman of the Workers Party; Alice Lorraine Daly, of the South Dakota Farmer-Labor party; William Bouck, head of the Western Progressive Farmers of Washington; W. H. Green, of the Progressive party of Nebraska; Tom Ayres, of the South Dakota Farmer-Labor party; C. E. Ruthenberg, National secretary of the Workers Party, and J. L. Beebee, of the Nebraska Farmer-Labor party.

The speakers were limited to ten minutes with the exception of Ruthenberg, who was allotted twenty minutes, and William F. Dunne, who closed the meeting. Every one of the speakers rose to the occasion and rarely has so much pep and punch been contained in speeches of such brevity.

Ruthenberg and Foster were given a tremendous ovation when they rose to speak. Both pointed out the desperate situation of American capitalism, its essential dictatorial nature and the manner in which the government was used to keep workers and farmers in economic misery at the bottom of the social scale.

Every speaker stressed the need for organizing the Farmer-Labor forces and emphasized the fact that these two groups must work out their own salvation and expect nothing from those who are not willing to cast their lot, win or lose, with the workers and farmers.

The subject given the speakers was a spendid one, for the purpose of the meeting and every mention of the conservation of natural resources, in connection with Teapot Dome brought applause, laughter, and cheers from the audience.

Alice Lorraine Daly won a place in the hearts of her audience with a speech that went straight to the core of the matter, and she was cheered when she urged the men to get the habit of bringing a woman with them to all meetings when the problem of the workers and farmers was discussed.

Chairman Tallentire announced, in taking up the collection, that the meeting had been arranged by members of the Workers Party and gave a brief outline of the work of the organization.

The meeting, consisting of delegates to the Farmer-Labor conferences that have brought unity in the movement in the Northwest, addressed by speakers of a dozen different organizations and eight different states, was symbolic of the crystallization of the scattered units of the Farmer-Labor movement into a great national organization. More than one of the audience remarked, as they rushed to the platform to congratulate the speakers, after the meeting, "This is what June Seventeenth will be, only it will be fifty times as large."

COAL COMPANY BLAMED FOR BIG DISASTER

Coal Dust Accumulation Caused Blast

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CASTLE GATE, Utah, March 13.—The second greatest disaster in the mining industry of Utah was caused thru an explosion resulting from an accumulation of dust, in the opinion of miners with years of experience in coal digging.

The Utah Fuel Company is trying to offset the strong suspicion created in the public mind that its criminal negligence is responsible for the death of 175 miners, practically every one of them leaving a family to depend on public charity for a living.

Send Out Inspired Statements.

Inspired statements are sent out over the press association wires to the effect that this mine was one of the show mines of Utah. The fact is that the Utah Fuel Company is one of the most notorious anti-labor combinations in the United States and has defied all efforts on the part of the United Mine Workers of America to organize it.

So bad are the conditions under which its employes work that even the strikebreakers it took on after an unsuccessful attempt on the part of its coal diggers to organize, went on strike.

While the coal company claims that its sprinkling system was in good working condition there is no other theory of the explosion other than thru one caused by an accumulation of dust.

The Utah mines are required to frequently sprinkle their mines in order to take out of the air any coal dust that might otherwise accumulate. It is evident that the company fell down here and did not properly consider the safety of its employes.

Single Men Fired.

The company's No. 1 mine was closed down last week and all the single men were dismissed. The married men were given employment at mine No. 2.

The owners of the Utah Fuel Company mine were not in any danger from the explosion. One of the officials was at the general offices of the company in Boston, Mass., and another was in San Francisco.

128 bodies have already been removed from the fatal mine. Small fires hamper the rescue crews. No church services will be held for the victims because of the large number of funerals.

Castle Gate is indeed a sorrowing city. It has paid its tribute to greed.

See Reactionary Trend in German Political Outlook

BERLIN, March 13.—The Reichstag was dissolved this afternoon.

The immediate cause of the dissolution is due to its inability to achieve a working arrangement for its ordinances without a state of siege.

A new election planned for May 11, is expected to show a reactionary trend with the nationalists sweeping the country.

Stabbing Brings New Crisis in the Cabinet at Athens

ATHENS, March 13.—A dispatch from Janina reports a cabinet crisis precipitated by the stabbing of an Albanian deputy in a parliamentary chamber by Mufit Lambochova, leader of the Italophile party.

The fact that the deputy is not expected to live has made the political situation critical.

Fight Malaria In Russia.

MOSCOW, March 13.—The second national anti-malaria conference was held here in the presence of over 300 delegates from all parts of the Union of Soviet Republics. A series of practical measures were discussed and decided upon.

Who Is the "Principal"

THE real story of the Teapot Steal and the countless other ways in which the employing class has been using its control of the government to plunder the great resources of the country will probably not be told until the workers and farmers establish a government of their own and open the secret archives of the various governmental divisions and departments as well as the vaults of the capitalist banks and private manufacturers.

Everybody is asking now who is the "principal" mentioned in the telegrams that were examined by the Senate committee. The editor of McLean's paper, the Washington Post, Mr. Bennet, has said that Senator Curtis of Kansas is the "principal." The Kansas Senator, who is the whip of the reactionary clique running the show in the Senate, denies this charge vehemently. Many people are convinced that Coolidge is the real and only "principal" referred to in these telegrams passing between the White House and the nest of oil thieves vacationing in Palm Beach.

But who is the "principal?" The "Teapot Special" will attempt to answer this and other questions that have proved too puzzling to the Walsh committee or which Senator Walsh has not dared touch. What is behind all this highway politics. Who is who in this rogues' gallery done in oil? Where does Coolidge come in the whole sordid affair?

Do you want to know the facts? Do you want an answer to these questions? Do you want to be able to help yourself and help your friends clear up this messy situation and do some real house-cleaning politically from Pennsylvania Avenue in Washington down to every little muncipal and county governmental cellar, then put your order in for a big bundle of "Teapot Specials." We know that you will be more than satisfied with this issue. The "Teapot Special" will carry punch. The "Teapot Special" will carry the kind of punch that will help knock out the capitalist class and its control of the government.

Do you want to help us do this job well? Rush your orders for the "Teapot Special." Do it now. Use the Order Blank below.

Get Aboard "The Teapot Special"

Send me..............copies of "The Teapot Special" Edition of the DAILY WORKER, to be dated Monday, March 17, at the rate of two cents per copy; $1 for 50; $2 per 100. I want to help the workers and farmers learn the real meaning of these great revelations against the social system that is oppressing them.

VANDERBILT IS BEAN-SPILLER IN EYES OF G. O. P.

Prowls Around Capitol On Trouble Bent

By LAURENCE TODD.
(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, March 13.—Administration apologists are worried by the presence in Washington of Frank A. Vanderlip, who has been sued for $60,000 by the two young men who purchased President Harding's paper, The Marion Star. The owners of the Marion Star were not questioned in detail when they came before the senate oil investigation committee last month, and declared that Vanderlip had no basis for his charge that they had paid twice as much as the paper was worth. Vanderlip appears to view the coming trial of the damage suit with a deadly cheerfulness.

Vanderlip on the Job.

Since Vanderlip made his apologetic appearance before the committee on Feb. 15, he has apparently been busy securing information as to the actual value of the Harding newspaper and as to many other matters relating to the financial affairs of the political friends of Doheny and Sinclair. He has consulted with some of the best informed men in Washington, and predicts that the trial of the damage suit against himself will furnish generous headlines, even in a presidential year. Vanderlip's visit to the capitol has been little noticed chiefly because of the sensational charge by Leonard Wood, Jr., that the oil crowd determined the defeat of his father and the success of Harding in the presidential race, and the further disclosure that Senator Wheeler's committee will connect up Attorney General Daugherty's department and American oil interests, with the recent counter-revolutionary movement in Mexico.

This Mexican phase of the oil scandal has recurred persistently since the beginning. First, it came with Doheny's testimony that he owed Fall more than he could ever repay, because of Fall's efforts in the senate to safeguard Doheny's interests in Mexico. Then former Attorney General Gregory and former Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, were employed by Doheny to plead with the state department, under the Wilson administration, to protect these same interests. Then George Creel came into the picture with his unofficial mission to persuade Obregon and de la Huerta to surrender to the official American attitude on Mexican oil rights. And McAdoo was promised a million dollars fee if he could get results in Mexico City.

Last summer a compromise was reached, Mexican loans were negotiated, recognition of Mexico was accorded, and peace appeared to be secured. Yet, almost immediately the Fascist revolt broke out and secret agents along the border began to report its progress to the American oil magnates.

The Federated Press published at that time the view of Mexicans in Washington that the oil men were back of this reactionary uprising. Now it appears that when one of the agents of the government on the Texas border reported that he had seen an illegal shipment of arms to the rebels he was instructed to release them. It also appears that the friends of Fall were in close touch with the rebel chiefs and that their interest in the revolt lay in the fact that de la Huerta was pledged to turn over vast amounts of the natural wealth of Mexico to American exploiters. It happens that the decisive events in this Mexican event took place about the time that Fall, McLean, Slemp, and other characters in the intrigue at Palm Beach were in conference there.

Young Wood is going to tell what he knows of the secret history of the Republican convention which made Daugherty attorney-general and Fall secretary of the interior. Still more interesting may be the testimony of Clara Smith Hamon, who shot and killed the man who controlled the oil delegates, in that convention. It is not certain that she will disclose the secrets she shared as to Hamon's reasons for making the nomination of Harding possible; but it is expected that she will make clear the basis for Hamon's confidence that he would be secretary of the interior under the new administration. She can say whether Hamon intended to step aside for Fall and whether he believed both he and Fall were to be in the cabinet.

Strive in Vain.

Week-end attempts by the administration press to arouse public resentment at the publication of President Coolidge's telegrams to McLean in January and February fell flat. Daugherty remained in the cabinet. The intimacy of Coolidge with McLean was established. The Republican national committee hinted, in vain, that the oil investigation was another Bolshevist plot.

THE POWER COLUMN

DESTINED to add at least 10,000 new subscribers to THE DAILY WORKER circulation within the next three months, the big campaign has been started. More favorable conditions for carrying on a drive of this character could not be hoped for. THE DAILY WORKER has been received with enthusiasm by every worker who has had the opportunity of reading it. Political and economic developments in America are such as to force the American workingclass to look more closely upon what is going on around them and to supply themselves with the means whereby they may be informed of the important events which are now happening every day. More and more intelligent workers are beginning to understand that THE DAILY WORKER is the only newspaper in America that can supply that information. More than this, the conditions are such as to give the greatest possible impetus to a subscription campaign. Workers Party members and militants in general are showing greater and greater activity and their activity is meeting with unlooked for results.

What this campaign will mean to THE DAILY WORKER is obvious. It will mean that "our paper" which was established under what appeared to be precarious conditions and which has already firmly rooted itself in the lives of forward looking workers, will now take another step forward and penetrate into an ever-widening mass.

Ten thousand new subscribers for THE DAILY WORKER will be the means of building a foundation which will make THE DAILY WORKER impregnable against any attacks whatsoever. It is particularly fortunate that just prior to the campaign, THE DAILY WORKER was able to announce the purchase of its own building and the forthcoming establishment of its own printing plant. If up until now the militants have been a little doubtful of the ability of THE DAILY WORKER to maintain itself from a business standpoint, those doubts have now been entirely dispelled.

The picture of our new building which appears in this issue will offer concrete evidence of the firm intentions of THE DAILY WORKER management to build the soundest possible physical foundation for the Daily Worker Publishing Company. This building is destined to be not only the home of THE DAILY WORKER, but also a veritable center of the militant activity of the American workingclass. From the building at 1113 W. Washington St. will radiate the inspiration and guidance which will lead the American militants and the American workingclass to new struggles and to greater victories.

Campaign Lays Down Definite Tasks

THE DAILY WORKER is one of our greatest weapons in the class struggle. To make it serve to the fullest extent the purpose for which it has been established, it requires continuous attention on the part of the workingclass militants. It needs the help of every militant. All that is necessary is a little work on the part of every one. What is required is not only enthusiasm and fine words, but deeds.

We have stressed before the fact that there are thousands upon thousands of workers who as yet do not even know about the existence of THE DAILY WORKER. To reach these thousands, to let them know about THE DAILY WORKER, to let them see it and read it, is the most important immediate task.

In order to make that task the easier, THE DAILY WORKER has decided to give two months trial subscription for $1.00. Every present reader of THE DAILY WORKER must know of at least a dozen workers who could be induced to buy a trial subscription at this extremely low rate. Yet if every subscriber to THE DAILY WORKER will sell only one trial subscription within the next three months, the goal of 10,000 new subscribers will have been far surpassed. Organizations of labor car also assist tremendously in the spreading of THE DAILY WORKER by means of these trial subscriptions.

Those who wish to take a long step toward building up a powerful labor movement in their locality can find no better instrument to help in this direction than THE DAILY WORKER. If they can find a dozen or 25 workers in their locality whom they feel should be readers of THE DAILY WORKER, but who cannot at this time be induced to subscribe, an appropriation of $10.00 or $25.00 sent to THE DAILY WORKER along with ten or twenty-five names and addresses of potentially militant workers will secure a two months trial subscription to each of them and at the end of that time it may be confidently expected that 90% of these new readers will continue as regular subscribers.

• • • •

Premiums for Live Boosters

IN ADDITION to the thousands whom, it is expected, will be added to THE DAILY WORKER mailing list by means of the trial subscriptions, there are also many hundreds who are already ripe to be regular subscribers. In order to give an incentive to reach these THE DAILY WORKER has offered a premium of a six-months subscription to either the LABOR HERALD, SOVIET RUSSIA PICTORIAL or the LIBERATOR to any present subscriber who sells to another worker a one year's subscription to THE DAILY WORKER. Here is an opportunity which many of the best militants in America have been looking forward to. Like THE DAILY WORKER, the three militant monthly labor journals above mentioned are deserving of a far greater subscription circulation. Many militants, however, have not been able to afford subscription to more than one labor journal and we know that many will avail themselves of the opportunity of securing free a subscription to one of these three magazines. It only requires a little work and the results are tremendous; the benefits obvious to all concerned. THE DAILY WORKER, the Liberator, The Labor Herald, Soviet Russia Pictorial and the labor movement as a whole will all prosper.

• • • •

Competition Spreading

THE BITTER, but friendly competition which has arisen between the comrades of Detroit and Chicago is now coming to a climax and the results will soon be announced. However, this spirit of competition and friendly rivalry has not confined itself to Detroit and Chicago. Every city in the country will participate in the competition started by the new 10,000 subscriptions campaign and it is expected that readers of THE DAILY WORKER will watch with considerable interest the results of this campaign as they are reported in the Power Column every Tuesday and Friday.

The quotas which have been announced in yesterday's issue of THE DAILY WORKER are extremely low and it is confidentially expected that many of the cities will exceed their quotas by 100 or 200%.

• • • •

Branch Agents Take Lead in Campaign

OF PARTICULAR importance to the branch agents and city agents is this new campaign. These comrades who have been the best boosters for THE DAILY WORKER until now will continue in their function as the captains and leaders in making the campaign successful. It should be pointed out to all branch and city agents that this drive is to be of tremendous value in the laying of a broad basis for permanently successful activity.

In some places it has been a pretty tough job for agents to make a good start. In many localities not a single DAILY WORKER subscription was secured during the subscription campaign that preceeded the establishment of THE DAILY WORKER and newly appointed branch agents had nothing to work on with no immediate prospects of successful work. Now, however, with many new subscribers coming to THE DAILY WORKER from every part of the country, there will be hardly a city or even a village in the entire country where there will not be at least a small group of DAILY WORKER subscribers, a nucleus upon which the Daily circulation will grow.

The campaign for 10,000 new subscribers by June 15th depends to a large extent upon the activity of the DAILY WORKER agents. The future success of the DAILY WORKER agents will depend to a large extent on the outcome of this campaign.

We know that the large family of DAILY WORKER readers will give their unqualified support to this and every other activity carried on by THE DAILY WORKER.

LEGION 'CRUSADE' BOOSTS PARTY IN WILKES-BARRE

Attacks Spur Workers To Join Party

By A. JAKIRA.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Mar. 13.—"The Workers Party received thousands of dollars worth of free advertising in the anthracite region due to the efforts of the American Legion, Rinaldo Cappelini and Mayor Hart, who is a close friend of Cappelini"—was the first statement I heard upon my arrival to this city from a miner who has no connections with the Workers Party.

The Wilkes-Barre Post of the Legion happens to be in bad need of members. There are more than 3,000 ex-service men in this city, but hardly 100 are members of the Legion, if the official reports are not exaggerated. The workers who "fought the war for democracy" can not be fooled into the petty bourgeois, reactionary Legion. The leaders of that organization apparently realize this and are thinking hard to find some "sensational" issue that would attract new members. A "crusade" against the Workers Party looked like a good recruiting issue but it was a failure.

Anti-Red Meet A Fizzle.

The local press carried "sensational" news announcing a mass meeting of the Legion for the purpose of organizing a campaign against the Workers Party, but only 25 or 30 showed up, and among these there were several "reds" who just dropped in to see what was going on. The chief speaker had to admit that ex-service men fail to support the organization and advised a [illegible] for new members. The "crusade" against the "reds" [illegible]tically forgotten despite the fact that this was supposed to be the star attraction of the gathering.

At the same time that the Black Hundred of the local Legion is using all means at its disposal to prejudice the workers against [illegible] communists, Cappelini is doing his bit to incite to mob violence against the Workers Party. He has been issuing statements that it is the Workers Party, and not the operators, that is to be blamed for the labor troubles in the anthracite region. Our ex-progressive Cappelini, now, indirectly, joins hands with the operators in their claim that the strikes which break out from time to time are not justified, that operators are right and the miners are wrong, and Cappelini made these statements before the grievance committee had a chance even to investigate the causes that led up to the strike.

Press Supports Cappelini.

The local capitalist press, in extensive editorials, gives its full approval to Cappelini and other miners' officials of District One "in their efforts to drive out the radical intruders" from the organization. Cappelini apparently forgets that the miners are very patient and that once they decide to strike it must be for cause. But Cappelini must find some excuse for the operators and the easiest way to do it is to make the Workers Party the goat.

But the attempt of Cappelini and the American Legion to prejudice the workers against the Workers Party and to incite them to mob violence against the "reds" is having the opposite effect. Since the "crusade" started many new members came into the Party and the existing Party units are busy in solidifying their ranks and perfecting their organization machinery.

tor took up the examination of Morris Kravis. Kravis said that he went to the Amalgamated Bank, at 371 W. Jackson St., regularly to deposit money and that seeing many of his friends on the picket line he spoke to them.

Taylor Tries Third Degree.

Taylor then went into the examination of Eugeneia Schlacter, Mrs. Schlacter is a foreigner who does not understand English very well. Taylor's method of attempting to aid her understanding was to raise his voice and try to frighten her. He tried time after time to get her to incriminate herself. His attempts were aided by the woman's slight knowledge of English.

Mrs. Schlacter said that she was a widow and that she has three small children and for that reason she was not very active on the picket line.

Minnie Seidel was the last of the defendants called.

Seeks Better Conditions.

"Judge, your Honor," she said, "I am anxious to go back to work. I go to the picket line to see what is happening. I am trying to get better conditions to work under. That's why I am on strike. I have not violated any law."

Sullivan then began beefing to her about her right to work and her right to quit work. He told her that she has no right to interfere with anyone who is working.

It had not been proven that she had interfered with anyone. Dudley Taylor had merely accused her of interfering with someone. Yet she had to stand quietly and hear Dennie Sullivan beef at her.

Court Is Contemptible.

If she had told him what was probably in her mind, she would have been locked up for the rest of her natural life, charged with contempt.

Nothing more contemptible than this bringing workers into court and depriving them of their rights, such as service by due process of law and the right not to incriminate themselves, could have been imagined.

Sissman then asked that the cases be postponed in order to give him a chance to consult with the workers.

Sullivan had a seizure of generosity and offered to let the strikers leave court if they promised to obey the law as he laid it down. He first asked Minnie Seidel if she would refrain from picketing, which according to Dennie was in violation of the law.

Miss Seidel said that she felt that she had violated no law.

Judge Uses Jail Threat.

Sullivan said, "I am here to tell you what the law is. Will you obey it or will you go to jail? If you do not promise to refrain from picketing then I will send you to jail."

"Really, your Honor, I don't know what to answer. I feel that I have not violated any law. I am on strike for a decent living and decent conditions.

"I have a mother and father who I must take care of. I am 24 years old and half my life I have worked hard. I went on strike and now I am threatened with jail. Really, Judge, I don't know what to say."

Sullivan beefed some more.

Then Sullivan asked Sissman if he would promise to see that the royal decree handed down by himself was not violated. "That is obviously impossible, your Honor," Sissman replied.

Sullivan Turns On Sissman.

"Well, if the injunction is violated will you refuse to represent your clients," Sullivan asked?

"I most certainly will not," he snapped.

"Do you think that you will be fulfilling your duty as an officer of this court if you do not see to it that the orders of the court are carried out," Sullivan asked.

"I have conscienciously advised all persons who asked me that picketing was a violation of the law of this state. I will continue to do so. But you can see that I cannot be held responsible for what persons I don't know, do," Sissman replied.

"I have worked at the trade these people work at, and I have a very keen sympathy for the under dog. I intend to represent them, even if they are accused of violating the injunction."

If Sissman had accepted the suggestion of the court and refused to represent the union and its members accused of violating the injunction, they would be without a right that every murderer, crook, pimp and burglar is accorded, the right to be represented by counsel.

Finally the court got back to the question of what to do with the defendants until the hearing will be held. After lecturing the strikers, as if they were already proven guilty of contempt of court, they promised to refrain from picketing until this afternoon at two o'clock and were released on their own bonds of $500 each.

Police Start Big Offensive Along Whole Strikers' Picket Line

While Miss Mary McDowell, commissioner of public welfare, was preparing to try to bring about a settlement of the strike of garment workers yesterday, the police were busy in a desperate attempt to arrest the entire picket line of the striking garment workers.

Nine strikers, who had agreed to meet at the Canal street elevated station, before going to the picket line, were arrested as they were about to start toward the Loop. They were taken to the Des Plaines St. police station where they were charged with disorderly conduct. They were: Ben Silver, Elianor Sadlowska, Florence Corn, Sophia Altsculler, Sophie Martin, May Rodinia, Yetta Harerstein, Bessie Katz and Sarah Schneider. They were all released on bonds furnished by the union and will be arraigned in the Des Plaines St. police court this morning.

Arrest Hull House Observers.

Of the seventeen supposed strikers who were arrested along Market street Wednesday evening and arraigned in S. Clark St. police court yesterday morning, three proved to be observers from Hull House for the Citizens' Committee of the Chicago Church Federation. They demanded an immediate trial and were given it. They were: Mrs. Evelyn Byron, Elsie Richards and Tippy Helen.

Three detectives from the States Attorney's office said that they had seen them in the neighborhood of S. Market street several times on different days and had arrested them because they were present when some girl used bad language.

"But what were they doing? That's the point, what were they doing?" Judge Samuel Trude said in a weary voice.

The coppers were unable to say that the girls had done anything. Mrs. Byron said that they had been walking along the street when a copper pointed them out to some one else and said, "Take these ones, too." They were put into a patrol wagon and driven off.

They Are Discharged.

The Judge asked them where they lived and when they all said Hull House discharged them. The fourteen girl strikers all demanded jury trials and were released on bonds. Charles F. Miller, a cutter, was arrested at N. Robey street by police from Crowe's office when he was leaving the picket line and going home Wednesday evening. He was arraigned in Sheffield Ave. police court yesterday morning charged with disorderly conduct and demanded a jury trial. He was released on bonds.

Morris Sigman, president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, spoke to mass meetings of the strikers at 180 W. Washington street and 20 W. Randolph street, before he went to the meeting in the office of the Commissioner of Public Welfare yesterday.

Bailin in Court Today.

Albert Bailin will be arraigned in S. Clark St. police court this morning on a charge of criminal libel made by the Wm. J. Burns Detective Agency for statements he made in depositions he swore to in connection with the defense of William Z. Foster in the Michigan cases. The depositions were made in Chicago and aroused national interest because of the sensational nature of the charges made against the Burns agency.

Kuznets Coal Fields Richest.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

LENINGRAD, March 13.—The Geological Committee has drawn up a geological survey of Kuznets coal basin, Siberia. The survey has shown that these coal fields are many times richer in coal than the resources of the Donetz fields. Aeroplanes were used in making the survey.

Russian Surveyers Meet.

LENINGRAD, March 13.—A national conference of surveying engineers has been convened at Leningrad, with a view to correcting the results of all the surveys of the natural resources of the Soviet Republics lately gone into. Delegates have arrived from the remotest parts of the Union.

WALL STREET TO RESCUE IN WORLD CRISIS

Expect $100,000,000 t Keep Franc Up

NEW YORK, March 13.—Advancing a credit of more than $100,000,000 to the Bank of France for stabilization of the franc was interpreted in international banking circles here today as portending an end of the reparations tangle, the approach of a workable agreement between France and Germany and the start of an economic revival in Europe.

The credit, as announced by J. P. Morgan and Company, already has resulted in a strong increase in the value of the franc, it was pointed out and probably would not have been granted had the bankers not been certain that France intends to accept the report of the exerts committee now investigating the financial capacity of Germany, with a view of settlement of the reparations tangle.

The report should be ready for presentation in Paris late this week and and will provide a working basis for the complete financial and industrial rehabilitation of Europe.

More Shops Settle; Thug Boss Dolinsky Loses His Worker

Two more shops have settled i the garment strike. They are Pau Wachtel, 228 S. Market St., th Rosenthal and Liss, 674 W. Madis St.

The employes in the shop of Katz and Dolinsky at Market and Jackson Sts., where two union pickets were beaten up Tuesday, quit work late yesterday and went on strike. More than 30 of them went with union pickets to the strike headquarters and registered.

Detectives from Crowe's office walked behind them all the way to 180 W. Washington St., the strike headquarters threatening and cursing them. They no longer have the "protection" of the police.

NEW COMMITTEE GROWS OUT OF TALK ON STRIKE

Oscar Nelson Is the Lone Labor Member.

As the result of the strike conference held by union officials, members of the special citizens committee and a representative of the smaller garment employers in the office of Mary McDowell, commissioner of Public Welfare, yesterday afternoon a subcommittee was chosen to take action towards settling the strike.

The committee contains only one representative of labor, Oscar Nelson, of the Postal Clerks' Union and representative of the Chicago Federation's "Committee of 15" at the strike conference. Dean Holgate, of Northwestern University; Miss Mary McDowell, commisioner of Publice Welfare, and Earle Dean Howard, labor manager of the firm of Hart, Schaffner and Marx, are the other members.

They were appointed by Father Seidenberg, of Loyola University, chairman of the citizen's committee, and is instructed to gather data on wages, hours and working conditions, as well as police brutality and to hold conferences between the union representatives and the various groups into which the employers are divided.

Optimism was breathed by Miss McDowell, Father Seidenberg and Clarence Darrow, who attended the conference as a union attorney. But the two-score strikers who tried to sit in at the conference, but were kept apart with other visitors at a meeting of their own in the auditorium on the top floor, are replying on the picket lines first and on the negotiators second.

"Strike Strong"

"One thousand workers are back under shop settlements already," said President Morris Sigman to a DAILY WORKER representative. "The strike is strong."

The lone boss, from the firm of Bleeck and Arnold, of 237 S. Market Street, talked to a DAILY WORKER reporter after the conference and assured his willingness to settle with the union—if he could get some concessions, and he said a large group of smaller employers he unofficially represented would do the same. His eagerness indicated that he will soon be willing to settle on any terms.

A mock heroic stage play act was indulged in by two big employers who have been hard hit by the strike for union conditions.

Arthur Weiss, of the W. Adams street firm, where dozens of pickets have been arrested, came blustering around to the Commissioner of Public Welfare's office where the settlement conference was staged yesterday, with a certain Mr. McLain, representing the big scab firm of Mitchel.

Boss's Bluster

As he was entering the conference room, he saw the figures of Morris Sigman, president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and Meyer Perlstein, vice-president.

"What! Meet with union representatives," said Weiss; "No, indeed!"

Asked whom he expected to see at a "strike settlement" conference, Weiss angrily declared that he had nothing to talk over with the union. —that his employes were "working and happy."

Weiss Backs Down

After this little piece of acting, Weiss went into another room to confer with the Citizens' committee and Oscar Nelson, a representative of organized labor.

Nelson refused to discuss the results of the conference afterwards, but the talk about the place was that Weiss was weakening.

All this while the crowd that had been shunted off from a conference that they had supposed was to be public, so that whatever arrangement developed, would be a "covenant openly arrived at", were sitting in the auditorium on the top floor of the City Hall Square Building.

Boss's Lie Nailed

Father Seidenberg, fresh from his talk with Weiss downstairs, came up and reported to the throng that Weiss and the other big employers declared that all their people were working and happy and that the strike was a far-off thing as far as their shops were concerned.

There was a ripple of merriment at this and Miss Julia Reicher, a striker, got up and said that she had been working for Weiss before the strike and that there were 30 girls from his shop on the strike. Two other girls corroborated this later.

"Happy" Family Bunk

Father Seidenberg went on to report Weiss's story of the "happy" family conditions in his shop and the freedom he gave his employes—even to circulate "abusive" union circulars.

Amusement again and Miss Reicher got up and told how she had been discharged, as had many other Weiss girls for their union principles and activities. She challenged Weiss to allow an investigating committee to see the inside of his shop.

Charity For Boss

Father Seidenberg then gave what he called a little "constructive" criticism and said he had seen that circular—(Weiss must have given it to him) and that he didn't like it. It was "personal", he charged and actually abusive, in his opinion. He said they should use "persuasion" on Weiss, not such unkind methods. This Christian toleration aroused no enthusiasm from the workers who were battling for the living wage from the most notorious employer of the lot—the one who has inspired literally, scores of arrests by the State's Attorney's men.

Miss McDowell made a long and earnest plea for "peace", "settlement," and "toleration." But all this while the real work of the conference was going on in her office on the eighth floor with the strikers excluded.

The Commissioner of Public Welfare, however, was anxious to get all the facts that persons present could give her about arrests for peaceful picketing, shoving of strikers about by police and the use of "sluggers" by employers.

She got plenty of them: Miss Helen Tippy, Miss Ella Gates Starr and Miss Elsie Richards of Hull House, who had been arrested that morning on the picket line and discharged because they were from Hull House and not from strikers' homes gave a list of the outrages they had witnessed and which have already been reported in the DAILY WORKER. Strikers arose and told their story, too.

Father Seidenberg arose and told how he went on the picket line inspecting, with his clerical collar concealed and a heavyweight individual talked arrest to him.

The priest demanded to see his star and the thug replied that he hadn't had a star but could arrest anyone he felt like arresting as long as he was physically strong enough to do the job.

When the thug saw the clerical garb he apologized. Likewise a policeman who told him to move on but changed his tune when he was treated to a sight of the cloth.

Dever Can't Dodge.

When Father Seidenberg said that Mayor Dever had told the Citizens' Committee that he was personally against the injunction and that he had given orders to his own men to make no arrests of pickets unless there was actual disorder but that he had no control of the state's attorney's men, William A. Cunnea, former socialist candidate for mayor of Chicago, rose and reminded the folks present that the state's attorney's men were all under the ultimate authority of the mayor, who could withdraw them when he wished. This was reaffirmed after the meeting by Alderman Oscar Nelson in a talk with a DAILY WORKER reporter.

As to the assertion that arrests are only made when there is disorder, Dr. Ralph Gerard, of the General Medical College and member of the Citizens' Comittee, told of seeing numerous arrested pickets discharged in court "by a wave of the hand," for lack of evidence as to disorder.

14 PICKETS ARRESTED AS CONFEREES TALK; THREE BOSSES SETTLE

Fourteen more arrests by Mayor Dever's and State's Attorney Crowe's police late yesterday afternoon while the "strike settlement" conference of his commissioner of Public Welfare was in session evidenced again the fact that a Democratic and Republican politician act with the bosses no matter how they talk.

The girls' names are:

Minnie Glick, Minnie Yerdico, Carrie Siever, Fayelkoff, Dora Samuelson, Ida Kalish, Freda Nitzberg, Sherley Coragold, Corn Rubin, Anna Rothenberg, Ben Silver, Rose Yanlowitz, Rose Finesilver, Sarah Zelinsky. Sarah was arrested at the request of a newspaper photographer so that he could get a good flash of a girl hustled into the patrol wagon.

While these pickets were being hustled to the S. Clark street station, three bosses surrendered as the result of picket work. They are: The Apple Dress & Skirt Co., 306 West Van Buren, Novack & Slatkinm, 1347 Milwaukee avenue, F. Becker, 1360 Milwaukee avenue.

Twelve more pickets were arrested in Evanston as the DAILY WORKER went to press.

today. Furthermore he read you a telegram in making argument against Federation before Non-partisan League convention and stated that your telegram was directed against Federation plan. Absolutely no truth in statement that Communists dominated conference or confederation convention. We know you and Frazier are misrepresented and misconstrued. Irreparable damage will be done if you do not immediately wire denial. Reply to Doctor Schaper."

This telegram read to the convention of the Farmer-Labor Federation caused a great burst of applause. It was read following the report of Chairman Carlden, of the negotiations committee, appointed yesterday by the Federation

Every influential leader in the Twin City labor movement has long distance calls in for Johnson and Shipsted and a dozen wires of protest have already been sent. There is a determination freely expressed to end once and for all disruptive influences and make elected officials understand that no interference is wanted in the work of organizing the farmer and labor forces in Minnesota.

Carldon placed the blame for the lack of unity squarely upon the shoulders of the non-partisan league leadership and announced their tactics as "contemptible" but said plainly that they did not reflect the sentiment of the Non-Partisan League membership and convention. The Farmer-Labor Federation now takes the position that its committee will meet no more with the officialdom of the league but will negotiate directly with the convention of the league.

There is no doubt but that the majority of the delegates to the Non-partisan League convention will join with the Farmer-Labor Federation and that the reactionary position taken by the officials of the league means the end of their domination of what little organization the league has left in Minnesota.

Pending further negotiations with the delegates of the Non-partisan League direct, the Farmer-Labor Federation has divided itself into congressional districts for the purpose of nominating state committeemen and candidates. They have also elected a new conference committee based on districts in which the progressive element is well represented as they are also on the state committee and in the list of candidates.

I. G. Scott, labor alderman, member of the Plasterers' Union, has been nominated for congress by the delegates from the Tenth District. The Farmer-Labor Federation has adopted practically unanimously the declaration of principles and program endorsed by the Farmer-Labor conference in St. Paul Tuesday and will finish its work late tonight, after which large numbers of the delegates will go on to St. Cloud for the final meeting of the series just held which have brought unity in the Farmer-Labor movement of Minnesota.

Dinner Pail Epics
by Bill Lloyd

OUR ruling class is on a tear. There's scandal, scandal everywhere. In shipping board and Sinclair's tanks, in hospitals for wounded Yanks, in satchels carried full of gold, in federal pardons dearly sold, in telegrams to Ed McLean, in booze permits transferred for gain, in stocks bought on official tips, in flasks upon the bulging hips. It surely is a slimy mess, e'en icy Calvin must confess.

This Ed McLean must be sum guy, he done so much and yet got by. Not only wuz he A. Fall's pal, but he has chummed around with Cal. For with the Teapot on the fire, he gets from Cal a corjul wire.

But, say, I think the meanest deal wuz how Forbes put thru his steal, and took from wounded service boys the things to give 'em ease and joys. From off their bed he took the sheet. He took the sock from off their feet. He robbed 'em of their last tooth brush and stole the sugar from their mush.

"The best is yours, for you're all right," the boys were told when sent to fight. Now wounded vets must be neglected because the man who wuz selected to keep 'em fed and free from cold has copped our Uncle Samuel's gold.

I think that Harding musta bin poor judge of men. It is a sin. Old Daugherty he picked to guard our alleys, porches and back yard. To guard our oil, he picked Fall, and those who "answered country's call" he gave to Forbes who wuz a crook and never gave the vets a look.

And who picked Harding, that's my quiz. Why, that wuz the conventions' biz. But politicians, all alone, picked him in the swell Blackstone. Administration needs a licking, and working folks should do the picking.

Russ Textile Trust Last Year Netted 1,872,000 Rubles

MOSCOW, March 13.—According to the reports of the Moscow state industrial trusts for the year 1922-1923 ending Oct. 1, 1923, the textile trusts made 1,872,000 rubles profit, the rural-industrial trust made 858,000 rubles, the leather trust made 610,000 rubles, the printing trust made 74,000 rubles.

The following trusts ended the year with deficits: The glass trust had 326,000 rubles deficit, the machinery trust had 139,000 rubles deficit.

Of the separate units the Ustinsk factory shows 282,000 rubles profit and the "compressed gas" shows 46,000 rubles profit.

Secretary Refuses To Use Y. W. C. A. as Garment Scab Agency

An attempt to use the South Side branch of the Y. W. C. A. as a strike breaking agency, to secure unknowing colored girls to act as scabs in the garment workers strike was frustrated when Mrs. Lula E. Lawson, general secretary of the Indiana branch, curtly refused to send her girls out to do strike-breaking duty.

The action of Mrs. Lula Lawson in sending the strike-breaking agencies about their business, has caused much discussion in the Negro district. It was learned by THE DAILY WORKER from another source that an influental member of the Urban League has reprimanded Mrs. Lawson for not acceding to this last desperate attempt of the garment bosses to break up the garment workers unions.

Mrs. Lawson refused to listen to criticism in advising her girls not to side with the bosses against their own interests. "I told those who approached me to send my girls out that I did not want to do anything which would cause race feeling among the laboring women of this city," said Mrs. Lawson. "And I told the girls not to go out on a job, even at higher pay, which would make them forfeit their self-respect or be disloyal to the garment union, which contains many Negro members."

One girl rooming at the Y. W. C. A. who is now earning sixteen dollars a week refused an offer of twenty-five dollars a week, and police protection going to and from work, said she refused because she "would not scab on either white or Negro workers, even at a higher salary".

Sullivan Scrap of Paper Served on Pro-Strike Editor

A copy of Denis Sullivan's injunction which has proved itself a scrap of paper so far as the striking pickets were concerned was served on Editor W. N. Koniuszewski, of the Polish newspaper, Dziennik Ludowy, at its publishing plant at 959 Milwaukee Ave.

Koniuszewski's paper has been running a lot of news on the strike and reciting some of the brutalities of the police and private thugs as well as reporting the bosses who are surrendering in job lots to the union.

In the opinion of Judge Sullivan and his employer patrons this is very bad stuff and should be enjoined, particularly so as the stool-pigeons allege the union purchased it. So a deputy sheriff slipped into the newspaper office very quietly and handed the terrible slip of Sullivan to the editor.

Koniuszewski says he will publish the injunction in the paper today. The mysterious document needs airing. So ends the story of another scrap of paper.

Molly Maguires To Be Discussed At Workers Class

Who were the "Molly Maguires?" Why did some labor men speak of the Greenback Movement of the '70s as "an American substitute for socialism?" How did the American Federation of Labor become the dominant factor in the labor movement?

If you are interested in the answers to these questions, and other simliar ones, it will be worth your while to join the 37 students already enrolled in the Workers Party class in American Labor and Socialist History, which meets every Sunday morning in the Soviet Technical School, 1902 W. Division Street, at 10:30 o'clock sharp.

Next Sunday is the last date to register. The topic to be taken up then will be "Decline of the Knights of Labor, and Rise of the American Federation of Labor." The class will meet regularly every Sunday morning, until the final session, on the last Sunday in April. The class is open to Workers Party members, sympathizers and the public in general. Enrollment fee is $1.00 for the full course.

Hungary to Sweat More Taxes Under International Rule

By FRITZ KREJCSI.

(Staff Correspondent of the Federated Press)

PRAGUE, March 13.—Budapest's attention and energy is concentrated upon preparations for the new regime of international control, which Hungary—that is, the militarist caste now ruling the country—has accepted as the Shylock price of a foreign loan.

The Hungarian government will introduce a program of internal reform, as a guarantee to the league of nations and its financial backers. As a preliminary measure, tax payments will be exacted in gold, instead of unstable paper money. This will mean that the Magyar tax payer will be obliged to pay higher rates than before the war—despite the fact that workers' wages lag far behind pre-war standards.

This reform is of ominous importance to Hungarian labor. The Hungarian worker's standard of living is already being dragged down by the nation's shattering economic crisis; to this will now be added a heavier burden of taxation, to be met by the worker and peasant in order to fasten more tightly the hold of the Horthy government and its international backers upon the grip of power.

MINERS SPURN LEWIS CONTRACT IN NOVA SCOTIA

Would Forbid Strikes to Redress Grievances

(Special to The Daily Worker)

GLACE BAY, N. S., March 12.—The contract signed at Montreal between the Lewis appointees in this district and Besco has been decisively voted down by the miners in the referendum taken last Thursday. The returns from the various parts of the district gives the following results:

Cape Breton Island	2,257	4,105
Pictou County	215	1,098
Springhill	573	414
Totals	3,154	5,617
Majority Against		2,463

Had the miners been given time to read the contract carefully before voting the contract would have been defeated by a larger majority. The Lewis appointees only sent a few copies to each local union, and in many cases these did not arrive until the day before the voting. The Lewis appointees, both provincial officers and international representatives, urged the miners to ratify the contract, the corporation, meanwhile, coercing, by withholding the miserable increase.

Forbids Strikes.

The contract contains clauses which will bind the miners hand and foot to the corporation. A whole net-work of machinery for arbitration of disputes and an arrangement for an umpire to be appointed if the disputes cannot be settled otherwise are written into the contract. The miners are forbidden to strike and the pit committees are given the job of supplying miners to work in the place of those walk out because of grievances. The slavish clauses of the contract, and the miserable increase in wages—nullified by a rise in company rents and prices—so far as the miners were concerned.

The vote against the contract shows the stand of the miners regarding the Lewis appointees who are ruling the district with threats and bluff. The referendum, besides defeating the slave pact, is also a vote of lack of confidence in the Lewis appointees. These fakers state that such a thing never happened before in the history of the United Mine Workers, and that it is "a direct slap in the face" to Lewis and the rest of the gang. The officialdom has been used to having the rank and file meekly accept whatever contract they signed with the operators and miners of Nova Scotia are establishing a fine precedent for the rest of the miners to follow.

Responsibility on Lewis.

The result of the vote places the whole responsibility for the contract upon the shoulders of Lewis and his appointees. When the miners were ordered back to work last month they protested and demanded that the international union support them in a fight for the 1921 rates. This Lewis refused to do. The referendum was taken with the hope that the miners would ratify the contract and thus become responsible for it. This did not happen, and the miners have made it plain that they are opposed to being tied to the corporation by Lewis and his gang under conditions of which they do not approve.

The corporation states that the contract was signed and will be carried out so far as they are concerned. The Lewis appointees do not know what to do, and have wired Lewis to get advice from him.

Defense Committee Asks Grand Jury to Probe Farrell Cops

(Special to The Daily Worker)

FARRELL, PA., March 13.—In an open letter to the press of Sharon the Farrell Defense Committee demands that the Mercer County grand jury investigate the police force of Farrell who recently raided and arrested six alleged members of the Workers Party and held them over for the grand jury.

The defense pointed out the large expense to be born by the tax payers of Mercer county for the trials of the defendants and asked the voters and taxpayers of Mercer County if they were willing to bear the burdens of financing the Steel Trust and its lackeys in railroading six workers to prison.

Police Fear Probe.

The police force of Farrell will not welcome a grand jury investigation of their corruption and scores of leading citizens are approving of the efforts on part of the defense council to bring the anti-labor activities of the Farrell police before the grand jury.

The defense offers to submit the stenographic report of the hearing and even have the defendants appear before a jury of clergymen or any other group of citizens to decide whether advocating better working and living conditions is sedition.

The defense committee has again been threatened with arrest and Chief Leyshock promises to detain them in his cockroach infested jail if they invade his town. The committee cares little about these threats and will continue to avail themselves of every opportunity to bring about the grand jury investigation of the Farrell police chief and his force of labor wreckers.

Great Party Achievement.

To The DAILY WORKER:—Your paper is admirable and a great achievement for the Party.—Tom Bell, Glace Bay, N. S.

Russian Communist Party United; Many Seek Membership

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, March 13.—Reports are reaching Moscow from all over the country of thousands of applications which continue to pour into the Communist Party. From the Baku district comes a report of 3,869 applications, from Grozny 1,300, Vologda 1,000, Vjatka 500, Kazan 395, etc.

The all-Union Party Conference, which closed here evidenced the close unity and cohesion prevailing within the ranks of the Russian Communist Party. The resolution, submitted by the Central Committee, dealing with the questions of Party construction, which had been thoroly threshed out at the public discussion at Party meetings, and in the press preliminary to the Conference, was passed without a dissenting vote.

This resolution declares for liberty of an open consideration and discussion by all the members of the Party of all the principal questions of Party life, as well as for the principle that all the leaders and officials of the Party are to be elected, not appointed, to the posts they hold. However, there can be no factions or separate groups within the Party, as it would not be in keeping with the organizational principles of the Communist Party.

The closing speech, delivered by Kameneff, declared:

Communists Saved Russia.

"The countries of the world will soon see that the Communist Party not only has saved Russia from the destruction wrought by the intervention, but was also able to call upon the workers and peasants to create a state more powerful and united than any other capitalistic state. The Party is strong enough today to tell our ill wishers abroad that their hopes of a split in our ranks are false, and that the Russian Communit Party, united now as before, is ready for the completion of its historical tasks."

300 Per Cent Party Gain.

KRASNODAR, March 13th.—The state committee of the Communist party reports that the membership of the organization has grown 300 per cent.

SOVIET SHIPPING GAINS IN BALTIC AND NEAR EAST

Line to North Africa Being Established

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, March 13.—The White Sea, Baltic, and Black and Azov Seas shipping lines connected with the State Merchant Fleet, are working satisfactorily.

The Baltic Fleet has been working all along to its full capacity, its freightage exceeding the tonnage at its disposal.

It has established lines from Leningrad to London and Hamburg. The steamers are equipped with refrigerators, and fitted to export butter, eggs, and other agricultural produce, as well as such goods as grain and timber.

The Black and Azov Seas Shipping Company has completed the work of restoring its fleet. It now possesses a dead weight tonnage of 70,000 tons. During its last working year it carried over 300,000 tons of cargo and 663,646 passengers, equal to forty-six per cent of the cargo and seventy-three per cent of the passengers carried in 1913 by the Russian Shipping and Trading Company, the greatest enterprise in South Russia. Considering the age and disrepair of the ships remaining on the Black and Azov Seas after the evacuation of the Whites in 1920, the percentage are highly creditable.

The Black and Azov Shipping Company maintains twelve cargo and passenger lines. The ships, however, engaged in the passenger traffic are in great need of repairs and renewal.

Alexandrian Line Next.

The company has established communications with the ports of the Near East. The Odessa-Constantinople line runs three times a month. When the "Lenin" (former "Simbrisk") arrives in Odessa from Vladivostok it is proposed to establish an Alexandria line, calling at the ports of Constaninople, Smtrna, Jaffa, Alexandria, and the Pirasus.

AMALGAMATION SCARES OFFICIALS OF BOILERMAKERS

Editor Dares Not Print Articles, He Admits

Amalgamation has so frightened the International executive board of the Boilermakers & Iron Shipbuilders' Union that strict orders have been given to James B. Casey, editor of the union journal to reject all communications dealing with that subject, no matter whether sponsored by officials or other individuals.

Casey notifies Charles R. Collinson, an active member at Sutherland, Saskatchewan, Canada, that his article is inacceptable because it comes under the amalgamation taboo.

Explains Ostrich Policy.

"Your two letters of recent date, one of them consisting of an article that you wished published in the Journal, and the other making certain corrections in the first was received, and inasmuch as the subject matter you dealt with, Bro. Collinson, was one that I had previously been instructed by the executive council to refuse publication on, I referred your communication to the executive council, which is now in session, and they called my attention to the action they took at their April 1922 meeting in which they instructed me to reject all such communications dealing with amalgamation regardless of whether the articles were sponsored by international officers, district or local officers, or individual members. Under the circumstances, Bro. Collinson, I shall have to withhold publication of your article.

"Regretting that the subject matter was not of such a nature that I could publish in the Journal, and hoping that you will write on some other subject that would be permissible, and of benefit to our members, and if so I would be glad to publish same.

"Yours fraternally, "J. B. CASEY,
"Editor-Manager of Journal."

Amalgamation Vital Issue.

Amalgamation is the vital issue before the Boilermakers' Union, Collinson shows. Membership has dropped off because the ineffective craft-divided system was not able to resist wage reductions and the elimination of time-and-a-half payments for overtime.

The rejected article follows, in part:

"The loss of time and one-half for Sundays and certain specified holidays, the unwarranted decrease in wages utterly out of proportion to the decrease in the price of commodities lost to our organization a large number of members.

Poverty, a result of the foregoing, was also responsible in some degree, for I know for a fact that some of our members did not have the money to pay our dues and so were automatically suspended.

The unreasonable attitude of some of our leaders toward craft amalgamation has in the estimation of many union men I have spoken to on the subject tended further to disrupt the organization of the working class.

Tens of thousands of unorganized workers must be brought into the unions. The saying "In numbers is strength," cannot be denied by any thinking worker and amalgamating our unions would bring them to their highest numerical strength.

Jobs for Organizers.

We are often told that the reason our union officials do not favor craft amalgamation is because some of them would lose their jobs, which to my way of thinking is sheer nonsense. There are millions of unorganized workers in America to be lined up, and I sincerely believe that our officers have the intelligence, experience and ability to organize these workers.

Small chance of them being out of a job if their energies were devoted in the right direction and as a matter of fact many more men of their caliber would be needed to adequately cope with a situation which sooner or later is bound to come.

Craft System Futile.

Under the handicap of craft organization, however, this is impossible, but the rank and file are slowly but surely realizing the antiquated, inefficient and costly methods employed by our craft form of organization. The insignificant efforts of craft union officers amounts to very little in the aggregate.

That we must consolidate our forces under militant leadership or see our organization wiped out of existence is a foregone conclusion.

Zinoviev's Speech to Leningrad Communists

(NOTE—The DAILY WORKER today publishes the fifth installment of the great speech delivered by Gregory Zinoviev to the party conference of the Leningrad District. Those of our readers who have read lurid reports of war between Communist leaders should follow this discussion closely. It is true that Trotsky had a difference of opinion over questions of party organization with Zinoviev and others. But the enemies of the Soviet Republic may rest assured that a discussion on tactics will not give them the opening to rush in their war dogs and lap up the blood of the emancipated Russian workers. A further installment will be published tomorrow).

* * * *

ZINOVIEV CONTINUES:

COMRADES, this has to be accorded sober consideration. Comrade Sarkis laid before you convincing figures from the Moscow Narva district. But I have other figures to lay before you; there are, for instance, 32,004 students in the educational establishments of Moscow, among whom 13 per cent are members of the R. C. P., 15.7 per cent of the R. C. Y. P., making to all 28.7 per cent Communists, whilst the non-partisans count over 71.43 per cent.

In Petrograd the higher educational institutions register 25 per cent Party members and Russian Communist Youth, and 74 per cent non-partisan. These are the comparative figures. It will be said that it is only the comparative figures. It is one of the questions in which quantity passes over in quality.

Active Participation Necessary.

We can only gain the culture which we require by means of personal and active participation of Party members in public life—in the state, the trade unions, and the Party.

If the cultural standard of the Party members is to be raised to the level which we require, we need books as well, and courses of instruction, and Soviet Party schools and workers universities, besides newspaper and other aids. But this is only one-half of what we require, the other 50 per cent consists in the intense participation in the work of the trade unions and Soviets, that is, in the work of the State and the Party.

Why are we so backward? For very simple reasons. The Party has absorbed 10,000 of the best forces of the Party nuclei in the shops and factories. I have seen the brief statistical survey of the election to the Petrograd Soviet, in which we see that out of somewhat more than 800 persons, 711 were workmen who had been workmen until the year 1914, and are now engaged in organizatory and administrative work.

"What kind of people are these? They are the same people who were formerly in the nuclei, and now form part of the state apparatus, since the dictatorship of the proletariat requires it.

Sacrifice by Party Members.

It naturally follows that if we withdraw tens of thousands of the best workers from the nuclei, the latter are politically at a lower level. This is our misfortune, but not our fault.

Another circumstance must be added: the lack of time. It has been rightly pointed out here that the non-partisan workman has more time at his disposal than our Party comrade, who is frequently burdened far beyond his powers, and whose material position is often not so good—he has more financial obligations, more material sacrifices for the Party, for the trade unions, etc. Very often he cannot afford that which the non-partisan worker can afford, and he has besides less time.

Thus it happens that we have remained behind here and there, but not by any means everywhere. We must recognize this, or we shall earn that reproach of despicable Communist boasting against which Comrade Lenin so rightly warned us.

We must draw two conclusions.

Firstly, those non-partisan workers, who have gone thru every imaginable course of instruction and who have now, in the seventh year of the revolution, approached very nearly to us must be admitted into the Party.

This is one solution. The other consists of the following: to exert every effort in aid of the Party organizations, to make up for lost time, so that the Party rank and file may be raised to a higher level of culture and knowledge.

Necessity of Workers' Education.

We can already record definite successes. A considerable stratum of Party members is receiving instruction in the workers' universities, in the Communist universities, and in the state Party schools; but this is not enough, it is only a drop in the ocean. The better we get things in order, the more importance we shall attach to this.

JOLLY OLD TAR TALKS OF WAR TO UNION LEAGUE

Admiral Tips Rich Pals To Naval Strategy

By FREDERICK KUR
(Staff Correspondent of the Federated Press)

NEW YORK, March 13.—Rear Admiral Cole is a jolly old soul! He is chief of staff to the admiral commanding the United States fleet, and has been addressing a few peculiarly chosen words to members and guests of the Union League Club in this city.

Admiral Cole delivered several well-aimed uppercuts to the naval disarmament treaty, drawn up at the Washington conference of sad memory. That treaty, said Cole, had failed lamentably in the prevention of international naval competition.

Disarmament Failed.

Moreover, continued the critical tar, the United States had sought to apply disarmament to all classes of vessels; but there is keen rivalry in the construction of submarines and scout criusers. The admiral added that the United States was obliged to maintain the 5-5-3 naval ration towards Britain and Japan, but has failed to do so.

Now, you will begin to wonder where you have heard these charges before. You will have realized that the admiral's statements are reminiscent of utterances of socialists, pacifists and similar wicked groups, usually branded as "pro-German, sedition mongers, red-liver'd revolushunists," and their ilk. What's up, then? Have we, at long last, discovered a U. S. admiral who is in earnest about this disarmament business?

No, the providential ways of the naval mind are inscrutable. Here are a few of the remarkable conclusions which our very rear admiral draws from his observations:

Gravy for Merchant Marine.

The United States navy must be kept mobile. We must have an adequate naval base on the Pacific, preferably at Alameda in San Francisco bay. We should supply ships that could cruise with the fleet at a speed that would nullify attacks from pursuing submarines. We ought to put all our support behind a merchant marine that could operate with the navy. We require warships of long-cruising radius.

Possibly you fail to understand how we can enforce the broken disarmament treaty by violating it a little more? But that only goes to show that you haven't the right sort of naval mind.

On the immense gate that leads to the castle of the demobilized Austrian kaiser, a Latin proverb is engraved which says, in effect, "In time of peace, prepare for war." That, of course, is the gist of Admiral Cole's remarks. You probably have not forgotten that the same kaiser, who was also a naval officer, lost his navy, along with a handful of other appurtenances, such as thrones, empires and gold-braided jobs. But Rear Admiral Cole, it seems, has learned nothing and forgotten everything. You will agree, tho, that that is what naval minds are for, after all.

Nick Longworth Objects to House Probing Bribers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, March 13.—The House today adopted the Garrett resolution providing for a full investigation of the charges before a Chicago grand jury that "two congressmen" had improperly accepted money.

A motion by Republican Leader Longworth to postpone action by referring the resolution to the rules committee was defeated 197 to 158. Thereupon the resolution was passed by a viva voce vote.

Yesterday the House refused to pass a resolution insisting that Attorney General Daughtery furnish the names of the accused members and the nature of the charges against them.

War With Japan If We Bar Japs, Warns Dr. Gulick

WASHINGTON, March 13.—Total exclusion of Japanese from the United States by the insertion of a clause in the new immigration bill denying admission to persons ineligible for citizenship will arouse war talk and perhaps encourage preparations for a war in Japan, Dr. Luther Gulick of the Federal Council of Churches, warned the senate immigration committee today.

Gulick pleaded for elimination of the clause from the bill and urged settlement of the Japanese immigration question by direct conference with Japan.

BELGIAN RULERS WOULD BETRAY LAND TO FRANCE

"Economic Agreement" Brings Hot Dispute

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BRUSSELS, March 13.—The Belgian chambers are discussing at present with much violence the ratification of the Franco-Belgian economic agreement which was signed last year by the two governments.

Some members of the bourgeosie are objecting to the terms of this agreement. Many industrial associations whose interests are wronged by the new custom tariffs, are against the government; their objections have been voiced thru the Catholic party by Renkin.

On the other hand the Socialists are against any kind of agreement which should unite Belgium to protection of France.

Further, some political magnates are against this said agreement because they are striking out for a closer and even more complete customs union with France.

Secret Arrangement.

The great importance the government is giving to a simple question concerning an economic agreement shows that besides this agreement there must be some secret arrangement or some engagement which are of much greater importance, with the French government.

The policy of the Belgian government during the last five years ended—at the time of the occupation of the Ruhr—in the total submission to the aims of the French imperialism.

It is a fact that France is trying to compel Belgium to submit to her, in order to strengthen her primacy on the European continent.

Steel Trust Rule.

As a matter of fact, the economic agreement is only aiming to compel Belgium to ask for a closer union with France, which means the entire submission to the interests of the "Comite de Forges," the big steel trust which is managing everything in Paris. Belgium has signed with several countries some commercial treaties which bear the clause of the most favorized nation. Therefore, unless Belgium cancels these treaties, she will be compelled to grant to all these foreign countries the same advantages as she is giving to France.

To cancel the treaties now in force is to lose all the foreign markets. To give every country the same advantages as those granted to France is of course to authorize an invasion of foreign products. In both cases, the results are the same: The Belgian industry will have to face such difficulties that the only means to find a way out will be to cling closer to France.

At that time, Belgium will have to accept the customs union which will be offered by France and make this small country the tool of the French capitalism.

IMPEACH COOLIDGE!

MENTIONING THE MOVIES

By PROJECTOR.

WEST OF THE WATER TOWER.

A real story of Main Street, but infinitely more dramatic than Warner's picture of the Lewis classic. A very young couple tumble along to a realization of love under the utterly deadening surroundings of the small town. Their fathers disagree in matters concerning the next world, therefore the minister's son and his baby bride enlist the services of the town's worst character, the pool-room keeper, to help them get married. They become pawns in the clash of belief and interest and very great and touching unhappiness results. In the end, the town has to come to the boy, it spurned and ostracised because he is its only good speaker, and as the druggist says, "if a speecher can make real estate values go up, why let him speech."

Glenn Hunter plays the gawky, indecisive boy almost to perfection, while May McAvoy puts over one of the finest ingenue "new women" ever screened. George Fawcett, playing her father, the atheistic lawyer, is the only human being among the old folks of the town. But the girl is a brick. After symptoms of pregnancy develop she is told that the pool-room keeper, to hit back at the minister thru his son, has arranged a mock marriage. They cannot find the "Squire" to get the precious license to bear children, so she bravely suggests a trip to the city. In due time she returns with her baby, and when the startled boy shows no affection for his offspring, she flatly refuses to marry him and goes off with her finely tolerant father.

The boy loses his job, the father his pulpit, the gambler his pool hall, the lawyer his practise,—all because a mumbling of words was supposed to be not according to Hoyle. In the end it turns out that everything was all right, they were married all the time, and the town—well, it stayed the same old town just the same. The picture is one of the keenest psychological studies ever screened and some of the actors have done wonders with essentially difficult roles. It is well worth seeing.

Lithuania's White Dictatorship Has Killed All Liberties

(By The Federated Press)

KOVNO, Lithuania, March 13.—Arrests of Socialists and Communists, especially of Jews, suppressions of free speech and press, and search without warrants are the order of the day in Lithuania. This country like various other European countries is being governed under a "state of emergency" law, a form of martial law. Trial by jury is practically abrogated and persons who are arrested on the suspicion of radical tendencies are judged without recourse to higher authority. This applies especially to editors, who are sent off to jail as soon as the government does not like what they write.

During the night of February 9-10 mass arrests took place of active members of the Jewish Cultural league and of teachers of the Jewish non-sectarian schools. The Cultural league is largely made up of workers, and it insists that Yiddish be taught in the non-sectarian schools.

New Trial Is Denied I. W. W.'s Convicted In Syndicalism Case

(By The Federated Press)

SACRAMENTO, Cal., March 13.—Following a like decision in the Vargo et al case, the third appellate court has confirmed conviction and denied a new trial in the criminal syndicalism cases of Frank Bailey, F. Franklin, R. A. Gibson, John Hiza, William Joozdeff, James Martin, P. Mellman, and John Orlando. The court admitted that the man had not advocated violence, and that the judge and jury displayed prejudice, but nevertheless confirmed sentence.

The case will be carried to the state supreme court. All of the men except Hiza, who is in Folsom prison, have been sentenced to 14 years each in San Quentin.

RUINED FARMERS UNABLE TO BUY NEW MACHINERY

Implement Sales Down To 30 Per Cent

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

The sharp drop in the demand for agricultural implements in 1922 and 1923 as compared with pre-war years presents striking evidence of the low purchasing power of farmers since their deflation by banking interests in 1920.

According to government figures the production of farm implements in 1922 amounted to less than 30 per cent of the 1914 volume. Official reports from the industry show that during the last months of 1923 farm implement makers were using only about one-third of the capacity of their plants.

Agriculture Is Secondary.

This apparent halt in farm progress along mechanical lines is just one stage in the slow subordination of agriculture to the interests of industrial capital. Prior to the war the world position of the United States was associated with its export of surplus food products. But the war brought two revolutionary changes, the enormous expansion of major industries and the change from a debtor to a creditor nation.

From now on export of capital in the form of the products of manufacture will shape national policy. A foreign market for the products of industry will take precedence over a market for the products of agriculture.

Just As In England.

The transition has meant a crisis. Secretary of Agriculture H. C. Wallace showed what the attitude of the government toward this crisis would be when he addressed the Chicago Association of Credit Men more than a year ago. He said that England once stood at the same parting of the ways and decided to sacrifice agriculture to industry. "History," he added, "has proved the wisdom of that choice."

Actual figures covering 22 varieties of farm implements show a production of 4,119,537 in 1914 as compared with a production of 1,206,059 in 1922. The number of plows produced fell from 1,335,104 in 1914 to 431,409 in 1922. The decline in production of some of the other more important implements is shown as follows:

	1914	1922
Harrows	764,666	254,458
Corn cultivators	378,934	89,633
Mowers	274,521	80,484
Grain binders and headers	215,386	41,458
Sulky rakes	139,565	30,019
Corn planters	114,657	21,783
Cotton planters	101,256	17,874
Broadcast seeders	106,018	46,889

The importance of improved farm implements is discussed by E. R. Gross, professor of rural engineering, State College of New Jersey. In an article for a New Jersey agricutural publication he says: "To produce a bushel of wheat by hand required 3 hours and 3 minutes, but with machinery it can be done in less than 10 minutes.

1½ Hours For Ton of Hay.

"The cutting and curing of a ton of hay used to take 11 hours of man labor; now it requires about an hour and a half."

The present condition does not mean that the mechanicalization of agriculture is going to stop, or even slow down for any appreciable period. As a matter of fact it probably represents a definite step toward the day when agriculture will be an industry operated by large aggregations of capital according to the most modern methods of mass production. For to bring about that condition requires a period in which small independent farmers are forced into bankruptcy and dispossessed. Their places will be taken by wage earners working under agricultural engineers.

Church With Bosses Against Workers, Says Chief Stone

(By The Federated Press)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 13.—Charging the Protestant churches with supporting capital against labor in most industrial disputes, Grand Chief Warren S. Stone, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, speaking before the seventh annual meeting of the Council of Cities of the Methodist Episcopal church in session here, said the churches lack the courage to apply their creeds of brotherhood and justice. Stone said the churches would have to choose between their large capitalist contributors and the support of the workers:

"I do not need to warn you that the church will have to pay the price if it is going to take a stand on economic and social questions. You can't expect large benefactions from Judge Gary if you are too critical of the 12-hour day in the steel industry, which I understand still prevails for more than 25% of the workers, despite promises and pledges to the contrary."

"You want to know what labor thinks of the church," Stone continued. "I tell you, very frankly, that labor does not think very much of the church, because the church does not think very much of labor. Always in any trouble between labor and capital, the influence of the church has largely been on the side of capital."

Arvo E. Usenius, Active Member, Dies in Superior

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SUPERIOR, Wis., Mar. 13.—Arvo E. Usenius, well-known Superior party member, died Monday evening, March 10th, after an illness of four years. Comrade Usenius was born in Finland in 1892, and migrated to this country 11 years ago. He took active part in the labor movement in Finland as well as in America. He is survived by a widow in Superior, a mother and sister in Finland, and two brothers, one in Fitchburg, Mass., and one in Soviet Karelia. Usenius has been employed as associate editor of the Tyomies, Finnish daily, for the past three years. Previous to that he was employed in a machine shop where he contracted tuberculosis, while working under unsanitary conditions which was the cause of his death.

Despite his illness, the deceased comrade was one of the most ardent workers in the movement and was instrumental in organizing an English branch here.

In him the Superior branches have lost a valued comrade and his death will be felt keenly thruout the district.

Communists and the Teapot

A certain Mr. Marvin conducts a department against "Reds, Communists, Bolsheviks" and "dangerous" citizens of all descriptions in the columns of the New York Commercial. This organ of finance calls itself "the national business paper." We, therefore, assume that what it says is the gospel insofar as Wall Street is concerned.

In a recent issue of this mouthpiece of Lower Broadway, the charge is made by Mr. Marvin that the real forces back of the attacks on Coolidge, Denby, Daugherty, and the rest of the oil thieves is the "proletarian revolution." Mr. Marvin charges that the Communists are directing an onslaught on Burns and such other friends of labor by pursuing their dangerous tactics of "boring from within." This time it is within the government.

Apparently Mr. Marvin has overshot his mark. We Communists have never hidden our purpose which is to get rid of this present government of the employing class and substitute for it a workers' and farmers' republic.

We wonder whether Mr. Marvin is such a high-priced propagandist because he is skilled in selling his clientelle the ridiculous notion that the Communists are responsible for misleading the masses about the corrupt character of our government. His customers know better than to accept such buncombe. The matter-of-fact proof is that it is the Marvins, the Daughertys, the Burns, the Denbys and McAdoos—the link between the stock exchange in New York and the puppet show on Capitol Hill in Washington—who have been trying to befuddle the minds of the workers and farmers as to the real character of the government while they were using the governmental powers to protect and serve the big banking and manufacturing interests.

The Teapot Dome scandal, the Veteran's Bureau fraud and corruption, the Mellon tax steals, and the countless other instances of graft and corruption arise not in the minds of the Communists, but out of the conditions under which the government machinery, and the means of production and exchange socially used are privately owned for private profits.

No, Mr. Marvin, the Communists are not boring into the government. But the Communists will not hesitate to make it clear to the workers and poor farmers that the Teapot Scandal should unite them for action which will bring about a complete change in the political and economic class relations of today. We propose to do away with Teapot politics forever. The only way to uproot Teapot politics is to establish a workers' and farmers' government which will control all the natural resources of the country in the interest of the great masses and to organize industry in such a manner as will insure the collective ownership and social control of the means of production and exchange—the Communist system. The lies and frauds of the Marvins can't stop Teapot scandals. Only Communism can.

Sir Oracle Lodge

Henry Cabot Lodge, the Massachusetts senator, has for a score of years been advertised as the wisest statesman of the country. Many reactionary republican leaders have oft told us that Mr. Lodge is a prophet and seer who can read the future even without the aid of a deck of marked cards or a crystal globe. As the leader of the republican party in the senate, Mr. Lodge has won the title, from many of his blind followers, of "Sir Oracle Lodge."

Thus, when this great historian and prophet speaks let no poor, unlettered proletariat dare question the truth of his findings. In the days when events were not dated in Washington B. F. (before Fall) and A. F. (after Fall) Henry Cabot Lodge wrote a letter, Feb. 22nd, 1921, to Mr. Herbert Welsh, President of the Indian Rights Association, regarding the presently dishonorable Albert B. Fall. Said the historian Lodge:

> "In my opinion he (Fall) is exceptionally fitted to be secretary of the Interior, as it is now generally understood, that he will be appointed to that post. Senator Fall is a thoroly upright and high minded man, and UTTERLY INCAPABLE OF USING HIS OFFICE FOR HIS OWN FINANCIAL INTEREST, which I regret to say is implied by some of the expressions of your letter."

And in the debate on the Colombian treaty, Senator Lodge in eulogizing Fall's knowledge of South American conditions declared on April 12th, 1921:

> "His (Fall's) patriotism and far-sightedness are as conspicuous as his knowledge, and I am sure the Senate will give attention and weight to what he has to say in regard to this pending treaty, with which he has been so largely concerned."

In view of the recent endeavors of Senator Lodge to proclaim his holiness and his complete lack of connections with the oil scandal, and in view of the resolution introduced into the senate the other day to investigate the Colombian treaty, these tributes paid by the Massachusetts senator to Mr. Fall before the latter was caught redhanded, become particularly appropriate. The innocence of Mr. Lodge at the time the Colombian treaty was debated is comparable only to his present Teapot innocence. The "historian" declared then that "the indications are very strong that very large oil fields, perhaps the largest in the world, are on the point of development in Venezuela and Colombia." What will Sir Oracle Lodge declare now?

Mr. Lenroot Quits

It is indeed welcome tidings to us to learn that Senator Lenroot, chairman of the public lands committee, investigating the oil scandal, has at last quit.

We are not particularly interested in the reason for Mr. Lenroot's resignation which was long overdue. Mr. Lenroot's excuse for quitting is illness. Perhaps Mr. Lenroot is telling a political truth for a change. It is not out of place at this juncture to state that the workers and farmers have long ago been sick of Lenroot's crooked maneuvers on the public lands committee in behalf of the Dohenys and Sinclairs. We know full well that Mr. Lenroot's primary reason for beating a hasty retreat from his office is that he has at last realized that it would be suicidal for him and his oil friends to continue in this important position.

Thruout the investigation Mr. Lenroot has hobnobbed with the oil thieves. The junior senator from Wisconsin is an old-timer in the alley politics of Washington and Wall Street. He enjoys the back-door confidence of every big capitalist magnate in the country. Mr. Lenroot is a man of no mean ability. Yet, at no time in the sessions did Mr. Lenroot show the slightest intention or make the faintest effort to uncover the facts of the case revealing the control and outright ownership of the government by the powerful financial overlords. We are not surprised at this conduct on Mr. Lenroot's part. Mr. Lenroot came to Washington as a progressive. He sold out completely to the reactionary clique. While he was on the public lands committee he continued to render services to his masters with unfailing regularity.

Now that Lenroot has quit it is high time that Mr. Smoot, whose record is at least as crooked as that of the Wisconsin senator in the oil investigation, should also get out of office. Indeed, we would adjudge Mr. Smoot the winner in a contest with Mr. Lenroot for services rendered to Doheny. The presence of Mr. Smoot on the public lands committee makes a joke out of the whole investigation. As long as this "Latter-Day Saint of the Mormon Church" stays on the committee there will be no real investigation. Everybody is well aware of the fact that the Utah senator has had intimate connections with the "apricots and apples" in the telegraphic dispatches between McLean and his Washington friends from the White House down.

The pressure of the masses and their distrust in the investigation, in some of its executive sessions, has forced Mr. Lenroot out. Our next task is to get rid of Mr. Smoot. He should go in double-quick time.

Farm Thrift and Education

The Department of Agriculture has for some time been investigating the conditions of the farming population of the country. In one of its latest bulletins on this question we find the following marvelous discovery: "Average school grades reached were found to be directly related to efficiency in accumulation." In other words the best money savers had the most schooling.

If this were the whole truth one would be able to say safely that the department of agriculture has at least been able to solve the crisis that has overwhelmed the farmers. We would like Secretary Wallace first of all to tell us how a farmer can save money when he not only does not earn any, but continually loses on his produce. We wonder how can a farmer save money when he gets less for a bushel of wheat than it costs him to produce one. How is it possible for a farmer to save money for his own and his children's education when he is unable to pay his taxes, to meet his mortgage bill, and to pay the interest demanded by the bankers for loans advanced to him? How can one talk about saving money to a bankrupt farmer?

Before a farmer can be expected to save he should first of all be provided with security of income. Only those farmers who earn more than they need to get along on can be expected to save any money. Thus the department of agriculture is deliberately misleading the farmers when it tells them that their education is dependent upon their thrift, their savings account. The truth of the matter is that the education of the farmer, like the education of the average worker exploited by the employing class, is limited by his income. It is natural to find less education amongst the lower paid workers than amongst the higher paid workers. The workers receiving lower wages can hardly meet their most elementary demands. These workers cannot afford to attend schools themselves or send their children to the higher institutions of learning. The same holds true for the farmers.

This report issued by Mr. Wallace's department, is typical of many of the misleading reports circulated amongst the farmers in order to blind them regarding their present sufferings and the true role of the government in the agricultural crisis. The farmers have had too much experience with such agents of the packing interests as Mr. Wallace and with such help rendered them by the government to put the slightest faith in these reports.

(WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE)

The Russian Communist Party branch is governing this frontier city and fighting the counter-revolution. Earlier installments tell of the fuel shortage that prevents seed grain from being fetched on the railroad. The Party meeting decides to send the Red Army far away for fuel, at the risk of leaving the city open for bandits and counter-revolutionists. It also decides to conscript the local bourgeoisie for wood cutting in a near-by park. Varied types of party members are flashed on the screen: Klimin, the efficient president of the branch, who still finds time to have a sweetheart; Robeiko, the consumptive, whose devotion is killing him; Gornuikh, the brilliant youth of 19 on the Cheka; Matusenko, the luxury-loving place-hunter and Stalmakhov, a practical workingman revolutionist. Gornuikh, disguised as a peasant, overhears talk in the market place about a plot of counter-revolutionists to seize the town while the Red Army is away getting wood. The Communist company is summoned but, perhaps, too late. Robeiko is dragged out of his house and shot, Klimin's sweetheart is butchered and Klimin and Stalmakhov are overpowered and hurled into a dungeon. The counter-revolutionaries are in possession of the town, with the Red Army away. Klimin and Stalmakhov are butchered before the Communist company led by Gornuikh can arrive. The Red Army appears at last with great reinforcements and the big battle begins with Karaulov, a rough Cossack revolutionist, in command of the Red forces.—(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY).

• • •

"AND whoever mutinies now, whoever prevents us from getting things going, is our enemy," he said with heavy hatred; "and I'd have no mercy on my own brother if he turned bandit."

"I do not know anything," dejectedly said the oldest peasant with a grey beard and faded eyes, "but I feel in my soul that we shall all die of hunger if the Empress of Heaven, our Mother who pleads for us does not help us." And, looking from the hill towards the gold crosses of the churches in the town, hearing the thin, church bell ringing, he took his fur hat from his bald head and crossed himself, and, after him, the others crossed themselves also. And Konstantin Petrovitch, in a little old uniform coat of the Ministry of Education, also crossed himself with a little cross, and, looking at those grey, uneducated peasants, at the grey town, the purple-brown distance of the fields, the misty day, his heart wept for that form of life which was growing still forever, wept in time with that complaining ringing of bells, which with dejectedly lowered wings floated over the town in that inexpressibly simple hour when the sun, like a dull white spot, had long passed noon and was throwing the pale semi-circle of the rainbow over the purple-brown, distant fields. . . .

The Red Army men frowned, looking at the mouzhiks crossing themselves, and then one, the youngest of all, said mockingly, "Well, well, we've prayed, let's get along. . . . And you, Mister, don't lag behind," he added, to Konstantin Petrovitch. The train of carts moved slowly forward, and Konstantin Petrovitch saw how from all parts of the town, across the broad square, people were coming together to the Circus Building, walking singly and in groups, young and old, men and women. Different faces, smiles, gestures, gaits, and yet there was something common to them all, as if one and the same distant, morning sun was lighting them all. And Konstantin Petrovitch guessed that these were the Communists, gathering for the Party Meeting.

This was the first Party Meeting after the revolt, and, for the Communists, the church bells sounded like the blowing of an enemy trumpet, an insolent reminder that the struggle was not yet over, that the enemy had retired but had not been broken; each one heard it, and blinked, but then remembered that a victory had been won, that after all the revolt had been put down, and each one shared his feeling of joy with his comrades. And together with the others, Lisa Gratcheva went timorously to the meeting, came to the entrance of the Circus, but could not make up her mind to go in. In vain Lisa sought in the crowd for faces that she knew. It was as if all of them had been killed during the revolt, but there, see, in a clean great-coat, a Communist star on his breast, Comrade Matusenko himself, secretary of the Politdep, drawing out of his pocket his clean ticket of membership, and showing it to the young secretary of the District Committee, who was sitting in the entrance to the Circus and registering those who came to the meeting. . . .

"Comrade Matusenko, Comrade Matusenko. . . . You at least are alive, Comrade Matusenko. . . . You at least they have not killed."

And Comrade Matusenko smiled with self-satisfaction.

"Why should they kill me I am a small figure, unnoticeable, and have no enemies among my neighbors. My wife and I did not hear the shooting or anything else. . . . Just quietly slept thru it in our beds, hee hee. . . . In the night she woke up and said, 'Iliusha, it sounds like shooting. . . .' 'Enough, Grusha,' says I, 'go to sleep, you're dreaming,' hee, hee. . . . And in the morning I listened and there actually was shooting. I waited at home till they stopped shooting and then went to the office. There was no one but me in the Politdep, but it's not for me to neglect my duties. . . ."

"What's to happen now, Comrade Matusenko? Comrades Simkova and Martuinov, both killed. . . ." Grief and affliction on the face of Matusenko: "I am orphaned, orphaned altogether. . . . There it is, popular ignorance and savagery. . . . And why are you here, do you intend to join the Party?" he asked Lisa patronizingly. . . . "Is that why you have come to our meeting?" And, hearing the sound of the bells calling to the Saturday evening service, Lisa thought of how she had not gone to church today, to Mass, but to the Party meeting. . . . And in general . . . she would not go to church . . . even at Easter . . . because there was no God.

Karaulov rode up on horseback to the Circus Building, jumped lightly from his horse, and tied it to the horse-post, while he kept looking down the road, watching far away the black ribbon of the train of carts. Some one laid a heavy hand on his shoulder and, looking round, he saw Gornuikh, broad-faced and calm, with a slight touch of weariness in his eyes, and his lips firmly pressed together:

"Are they bringing it?" Gornuikh asked shortly, pointing down the road.

"They are bringing it," Karaulov as shortly replied. And both were silent. They were remembering the twenty-eight comrades who were lying in their coffins, under the red flags, in the yard of the Extraordinary Commission, awaiting solemn burial.

"I'm sorry for the lads," said Karaulov abruptly. "Died for nothing. . . . And you and I were right. . . . The battalion ought not to have been taken out of the town."

Gornuikh was silent, thinking, and then said, speaking as if he were piling heavy, uniform stones into a solid wall:

"No, Karaulov, we were both wrong. You see, there, they are bringing the wood. You just think," he added, with rare animation for him, "that wood gives us seed-corn! And corn, for peasant revolts, is like water for fire. Not for nothing the comrades died. . . . Just now I am holding and enquiry and I see . . . the revolt was coming anyhow. . . ." And Gornuikh began briefly to tell him of the results of the enquiry.

Fixing Facts For Farmers

WALL STREET and its government are working overtime trying to make the farmers believe that they are earnestly endeavoring to end the present agricultural crisis. Big business and its expensive "rural experts" have been playing for many months with all sorts of fake farm panaceas while the farmers have been sinking more deeply in the slough of bankruptcy. To date, these self-styled friends, in reality the most dangerous enemies, of the farmers have spent most of their money and energy in fixing facts for the farmers, in circulating misleading, fraudulent, unfounded reports amongst the farming masses to make them believe that they are actually getting along splendidly, that the conditions on the farms are steadily improving.

One of these reports just issued by the department of agriculture announces "that in 1920 not more than 10 per cent of rented farms were owned by absentee landlords."

Great scot! What has this to do with the misery of the farmers? But let us be charitable and analyze this statement in order that we might get the greatest relief possible out of it for the sorely pressed farmers. Mere nominal paper ownership of a farm does not mean a thing to the farmer when the land is heavily mortgaged, when the average mortgage debt per owner-operated farm practically doubled for many of them in the last ten years, when the freight rates are still at least 15 per cent above pre-war level, while Canadian and Argentinian rates have gone back to or even below the 1913 scale, and when practically 25 per cent of the farm-owners have lost their farms thru bankruptcy in the wheat belt alone.

What wonderful blessings nominal legal ownership brings to the farmers are best evidenced by the fact that in one year, 1922, almost 4 per cent of our entire rural population, 1,120,000, fled from the country in a great exodus to the city, and that in the two-year period 1920-1922, the number of habitable farmhouses abandoned by the farmers almost doubled.

Then the report goes on to say: "More than one-third (of the farm owners) are themselves engaged in agriculture. Nearly one-third are retired farmers. The remaining third are in non-agricultural occupations." Here we have the tragic admission. When is a farm owner an absentee landlord? Is a farm owner not an absentee landlord when he stays on the farm all year as a retired farmer doing nothing but becomes an absentee landlord in the eyes of the secretary of agriculture and his coterie of high priced lawyers when he does not live on the farm and comes himself or sends his agent once or twice a year to collect rent and interest?

In our opinion any farm owner, whether he calls himself a retired farmer or not, as long as he is not engaged in actual farming, in work on the farm, as long as he is absent from farm work, is an absentee landlord for whom other people must work to keep him alive. Thus, according to the findings of the department of agriculture itself, nearly two-thirds of the farm owners are really absentee landlords. It is this owning group, one-third of whom are bankers, merchants and professional men, for whose support the mass of farmers are forced to work from sunrise to sunset. This is dismal fact which no one can deny. When the Wall Street farm experts blink this situation they are only helping to perpetuate the present acute distress of the farmers.

The Poor Fish says: Disabled war veterans are now being turned into trained detectives. When able to bribe a jury, frame a radical or rob an orphan they will be given employment by the William J. Burns Detective Agency.

Greeks Eye Moscow.

NEW YORK, March 13.—Reports reach this city, stating that the Greek government is now prepared to join the rush to recognize Russia's regime. Discussions, carried on between Moscow and Athenian deputies in Berlin, have led to agreement.

Song of the Son

By JEAN TOOMER

(From the book "Cane", by permission of Boni and Liveright, publishers.)

Pour O pour that parting soul in song,
O pour it in the sawdust glow of night,
Into the velvet pine-smoke air to-night,
And let the valley carry it along.
And let the valley carry it along.

O land and soil, red soil and sweet-gum tree,
So scant of grass, so profligate of pines,
Now just before an epoch's sun declines
Thy son, in time, I have returned to thee,
Thy son, I have in time returned to thee.

In time, for tho the sun is setting on
A song-lit race of slaves, it has not set;
Tho late, O soil, it is not too late yet
To catch thy plaintive soul, leaving, soon gone,
Leaving, to catch thy plaintive soul soon gone.

O Negro slaves, dark purple ripened plums,
Squeezed, and bursting in the pine-wood air,
Passing, before they stripped the old tree bare
One plum was saved for me, one seed becomes
An everlasting song, a singing tree,
Caroling softly souls of slavery,
What they were, and what they are to me,
Caroling softly souls of slavery.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe declares that he has crime on the run. Yes, very much so. Most every day a man labelled by the police and the capitalist press as a "gunman" walks into the state's attorney's office has his picture taken with one of Mr. Crowe's assistants and leaves freely and jauntily. Other criminals whose minds are attuned to entertainment of a higher order than that to be found in the state's attorney's office amble peacefully around the detective bureau, city hall and Mr. Crowe's office, without, however, going in. The police are prosecuting a vigorous search for them. So we are told.

• • •

Since Mr. William J. Burns quit giving daily interviews on the imminence of a solution of the Wall Street explosion, those who buy the papers for a laugh never had more reason to be thankful than today. The police are looking for Dean O'Bannion, for instance. Tho his name sounds rather familiar we do not know the gentleman, but we read in the papers that he is a prominent florist, bootlegger, gang leader and all-round sport. He is scheduled to appear in court today on a charge of forcibly injecting a few lead pellets into the person of one Davy Miller, a business acquaintance of his.

• • •

The police may discover Mr. O'Bannion if he walks into the station some day and holds out his hands for the cigars. Only the radicals are handcuffed. What we are driving at, however, is not the successful efforts of Mr. O'Bannion and others to live long and dangerously so far as the law is concerned but with the boast of the state's attorney that he has crime on the run. The criminals are running around surely without worry, while Crowe's officers are busy arresting strikers. Perhaps that is what he means by "having crime on the run."

The Chicago Tribune has a real excuse for its daily revolution in Russia. Now, they are fighting for "democracy." If they realized how flat that slogan falls in the rest of the world they would speedily drop it. The Tribune correspondents are very persistent. They have consistently predicted this revolution for over six years and they seem to be just getting their second wind now.

• • •

The local papers carry some story or other every day of convictions for conspiracy. Generally labor cases. The latest case is two business agents of the Candy Jobbers' Union. They got six months in the county jail for asking another jobber to join the union. The organized labor movement in Chicago is not easily excited. Labor leaders are too busy nowadays fighting Communism to have any time to spare for the class struggle.

• • •

The British Labor Party is very successful in exposing its hypocrisy in the house of commons. William Leach, the under-secretary for air and once an ardent pacifist who hated a gun as much as Oswald Garrison Villard, vigorously defended a large air force and while doing so asserted that the flying machines used in dropping bombs on the natives of Mesopotamia and Palestine were "civilizing forces." This defense brought jeers from the house and angry curses from some of the most radical labor deputies.

• • •

The Teapot Dome scandal is acting like a wet blanket on business and industry just as they were about to start up, according to statements made by some of the big industrial chiefs in Chicago. Business, they say, is a good deal like a poet, temperamental, tho, generally speaking, it is anything but poetic. Others, however, do not see why a litle oil graft expose should cause the other buccaneers to stop exploiting the workers. Why should they ?

• • •

The American Federation of Labor in California, the American Legion, and the Native Sons of the Golden West have joined together in defending the present Johnson fingerprinting bill now before congress.

A new cabinet has been formed by Premier Theunis, of Belgium, whose government was defeated a few weeks ago by a combination socialist-Catholic bloc. Vandervelde, socialist leader, went to the king and hat in hand begged for an opportunity to form a cabinet. The king shooed him out the door and asked Theunis, the conservative, to get back on the job. Vandervelde, you may remember, thinks the manner in which the Russian workers disposed of the monarchial fetters was very brutal.

Replying to George Lansbury on a question relating to the freedom of India, Ramsay MacDonald replied that in view of the report made by a parliamentary committee in 1919, the government was not prepared to grant any further extension of self-government to India. MacDonald has the same answer for the Hindoo rebels that Coolidge has for the Filipinos.

SHOW DAUGHERTY IS JUST PLAIN GRAFTER

SULLIVAN'S INJUNCTION TRIALS BEGIN

Hearings Continue Today Before Hostile Judge

With cold, sneering hostility Judge Denis Sullivan heard the cases of five strikers in his court room in the county building yesterday noon where they were summoned to show cause why they should not be compelled to prove themselves innocent of contempt of court for violation of the Sullivan injunction.

All the cases were put down for speedy hearings in spite of the protest of Attorney Sissman that he was so busy with the court defense of arrested strikers that it was impossible to prepare adequate defense by the time given.

Drum Head Court Martial.

Mollie Friedman, Rose Lewis and John Cohn must have their defense all ready by this morning against Dudley Taylor's complaint that they picketed, in defiance of the injunction, in front of his clients' place, at 304 and 308 S. Market street.

Florence Corn and Clara Gabin, the latter one of the expelled militants who has veen very active in the garment workers' union battle, must appear Wednesday morning for final hearing before the contemptible judge for alleged violation of the injunction granted the Francine Dress company at 205 S. Market street.

On Bosses' Side.

The union attorney's objections were scornfully crushed aside by the injunction judge. But courtesy a-plenty he had for LeBosky of the Francine company and Dudley Taylor, the sleek legal representative of the Dress and Skirt manufacturers' association.

Sullivan's animus against the workers leaped out luridly in the examination of Miss Corn. The girl had just denied knowing anything about any injunction for her shop:

"Didn't you know that you were violating that injunction by picketing?" LeBosky rasped at ner.

Sissman interrupted: "Now wait a minute, where was she picketing?"

"Answer the question!" snarled the sallow lips of the judge.

"But she has answered," said Sissman, "she says that her shop did not have an injunction."

"Because I Say So."

"That is not a proper answer," barked back Judge Sullivan.

"Why?" asked the union lawyer.

"Because I say so!" almost shouted the judge.

Dudley Taylor, the attorney for the Illinois Employers Association, who used the state's attorney's office recently for the purpose of grilling union upholsterers and preparing the conspiracy case against them, cross-examined John Cohn, Mollie Friedman and Rose Lewis who were charged with tramping on the picket line in front of the Graceline firms place.

Taylor Does the Talking.

When Cohn asked the court if the injunction covered the premises at 304 S. Market street Taylor did not wait for his black-robed henchmen to reply, but answered himself, saying that other firms at that premises were affected by the injunction—but he did not say whether the firm Cohn spoke of had a writ or not.

After several perfunctory questions the judge declared that Sissman must have written answers ready by this morning to all the affidavits regarding injunction violation which Taylor presented. The union lawyer finally persuaded the judge to remit the demand for written replies but he was unable to obtain a postponement of the case. He was unable because he represented organized labor which Sullivan hates.

You Do and You Don't.

When the two groups of strikers had been properly lectured and told about their rights and also told that if the court said they had no rights: presto, they had no rights, four other strikers were brought forward.

They were Emma Goldberg, Minnie Sugarman, Jennie Liberman and Mrs. Eva Birk. They had all been served with notices to appear in court to tell why they should not be cited to show cause why they should not be punished for contempt of court.

Dennie talked to them and said that he would let them go till sometime in the future and then call

YOUTH REMEMBER COMMUNE, MEET SUNDAY NIGHT

Speakers and Music at Douglas Park Hall

March 16th will set aflame the rebels over the world in memory of their comrades who fought to maintain the workers rule in Paris during the days of the Commune.

Fifty-three years ago the French workers rose against their mighty oppressors and for 72 days held the rule of power by a dictatorship of the workers.

International Demonstrations.

The murderous and bloody hangman of the bourgeoisie, Gallifet, thought that he had buried the movement of the Communards by drowning twenty-five thousands of the rebels, young workers, children and men and women, in a sea of blood. But it only proved to be the first, tho still pale, dawn of the proletarian republic.

In France, Germany, Soviet Russia, United States and other countries demonstrations are to be held in memory of the Communards.

The meeting which has been planned for Chicago promises to be one of the best that this city has ever had. The meeting is being arranged by the Young Workers League and the Workers Party is giving full co-operation to make this demonstration a huge one.

Engdahl Speaker.

J. Louis Engdahl, the editor of the DAILY WORKER, Robert Minor, editor of the Liberator, and Max Shachtman, editor of the Young Worker will speak at this meeting. In addition to the speakers an excellent and appropriate program has been arranged.

The meeting will be held Sunday, March 16, 8 p. m., at the Douglas Park Auditorium, Ogden and Kedzie. There will be no admission charge.

Brookwood Scholarships.

KATONAH, N. Y., March 14.—Brookwood Labor College announces that it has made arrangements or exchange of scolarships with Ruskin College and the London Labor College in England, with the International People's College at Elsinore, Denmark, and the Belgian Labor College.

Bonus Bill up Tuesday.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—Formal agreement was reached in the House today to bring up the new bonus bill for a final vote next Tuesday under suspension of the rules which will preclude amendments.

Senate Oil Probe Adjourns till Tuesday; Walsh Indisposed

WASHINGTON, March 14.—The Senate Oil Committee today was forced to take an adjournment until Tuesday because of the indisposition of Senator Walsh, Montana, chief investigator.

Walsh notified Chairman Ladd of the committee early today that he was suffering from a slight cold and he intended to stay away from his office over the week end.

Ladd then adjourned the committee to meet Tuesday when witnesses subpoenaed to testify today will be heard.

KLAN LEADER CHARGED WITH MANY CRIMES

Young Indicted for Robbery and Larceny

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HERRIN, Ill., March 14.—S. Glenn Young, leader of the Ku Klux Klan raids which precipitated Klan and anti-Klan warfare in Williamson County, was under indictment charging a dozen crimes here today.

The indictments against Young which were returned by a city grand jury late last night, charge kidnapping, robbery, larceny, False imprisonment and assault with intent to murder.

Forty-four indictments returned at the same time as a result of Williamson County's latest "reign of terror," named Sam Sterns and Carl Neilsen, exalted cyclops of the Ku Klux Klan at Marion and Herrin respectively; John Ford, Herrin police chief and other allies of Young.

Young "assumed to take over the government of the city of Herrin by unlawfully deposing and imprisoning the mayor and other officials," the grand jury report stated.

Assassinate Tewfik Pasha.

LONDON, March 14.—Tewfik Pasha, minister of interior of Mesopotamia, has been assassinated, according to an exchange telegraph dispatch from Constantinople, quoting a message from Angora.

Carpenters Plan New Home.

ST. LOUIS, March 14.—Plans are complete for the erection of a new home for St. Louis Carpenters' District council at a cost of approximately $200,000.

DAILY WORKER MAN ARRESTED ON PICKET LINE

Asking Policeman for Number His Crime

Victor Zokaitis, a reporter for the DAILY WORKER, was arrested yesterday morning when he asked a bruiser-policeman for some information.

The information he asked for as Officer 3609 was panting from his exertions in slamming a girl picket against a wall on S. Market street between W. Adams and W. Jackson streets was the number of that officer.

His Russian Face.

It happened that the reporter was born in this country and that he is not of Russian parentage—which is not his fault—but he did not argue that point. He insisted on his right to walk the streets peacefully in the course of his occupation.

The officer who was badly excited already because several strike-breakers who had come up in yellow cabs that morning, guarded by police and "sluggers" had refused to go to work in response to the pickets' persuasion and this meant "hell" for him. So in his confusion he let the girl picket get away.

"That's the boss," said someone.

"Yes," shouted the boss, "and why the devil," he bawled at the cop, "haven't you called a patron wagon for these fellows?" pointing to a couple pickets.

The nervous cop grabbed the DAILY WORKER reporter and shoved him into a hallway. Just then a passing picket waved his hand to the newspaperman and the cop rushed out and clutched him too—Abe Harris, a member of the Workers Party.

The Typographical Union, of which Zokaitis is a member, was arranging his bail but the Garment Workers' Union put up the bonds first. Arraignment will take place in St. Clark street this morning.

The Standard's Fleet.

NEW YORK, March 14.—A statement just issued shows that the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey now owns a fleet of oil transports, aggregating 897,000 tons—to which are added more than 200,000 tons of chartered vessels. This represents one-seventh of the world's tank steamer tonnage.

CAPITOL IS AMAZED OVER MEANS STORY

Astounding Tale of Government Graft Is Told

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Mar. 14.—In the most astounding story ever told a congressional committee, Gaston B. Means, former Department of Justice agent, today bared before the Senate's Daugherty investigating committee the details of alleged secret investigations of cabinet members and congressmen, collections of huge sums of money and other clandestine activities which, he said, were directed by Jess Smith, Daugherty's intimate friend, from an office in the department.

$100,000 Bribe From Jap.

Means' story formed an amazing sequel to the sketchy details of similar "deals" already outlined by Roxie Stinson, Smith's divorced wife.

With breath-taking rapidity Means made these "revelations" and "charges:"

1.—That he had collected $100,000 from "A Jap from the Mitsui Company" in connection with the Standard Aircraft Company case which was before the Department of Justice for prosecution, and that he turned the money over to Jess Smith. The Aircraft case was afterward transferred to the war department.

Harding Trails Mellon.

2.—That the late President Harding had ordered him to investigate Secretary of the Treasury Mellon after reports reached Harding that Mellon had entered arrangements for the issuance of "certain permits."

3.—That he had investigated Senators LaFollette of Wisconsin, Caraway of Arkansas, Bruce of Maryland at the request of Jess Smith and Senator LaFollette, after he had introduced his resolution for investigation of the Teapot Dome lease.

4.—That he had once been suspended as a department agent after "a cabinet officer" had protested that he was "too active in investigating oil matters in Mexico."

5.—That he was assigned to investigate sale of models of United States airplanes to the Japanese government.

Means said his attorney, Col. Felder, warned him yesterday not to go on the witness stand because "the powers that were after me were omnipotent and if I went on the stand I would be indicted on any number of things. Sidney Bieber, of Washington, came and told me I should not hurt the attorney general nor the republican party."

Dempsey Fight Graft.

Means said he handled money "paid over for showing the Dempsey-Carpentier fight films" and turned this money over to Jess Smith. Roxie Stinson told the committee yesterday Smith told her he was $180,000 in the fight film deal."

President Harding and Secretary Hughes, he said, were present at a showing of the film at E. B. McLean's house in Washington.

"Leading up from investigations we had made in Washington that Secretary Mellon had gone into an agreement to furnish certain permits. We did not catch him that time. He slipped thru our fingers."

"Who paid you?"

"Jess Smith. Sometimes Underwood."

"I had Miss Laura Jacobsen investigating Senator Caraway, Arkansas."

"At whose direction?"

"Jess Smith's."

"At the time he was attacking the Attorney General?"

"Yes, and President Harding." . . .

Means said that "everybody was investigating at some time or other."

"Do financial interests have candidates for president investigated?"

"Yes, they want to know what they are up to."

"Was the purpose of the investigation of Senator LaFollette to stop the senate investigation of Teapot Dome?"

Burglarized Office.

"They wanted to know what he had."

"What do you mean by 'going thru Senator LaFollette's office'?"

"Find out what mail comes in, what

'TEAPOT SPECIAL' TANKER LOADS UP AT DENBY TOWN

Wholesale Orders for Big Expose Issue

The "Teapot Special" tanker has taken off a 1,000-bundle at the wharves of Denby's town. Yes, the militants of Detroit have ordered a round thousand copies of the big Monday issue of the DAILY WORKER which will expose their fellow citizen, Mr. Denby, as that uncommon thief has never been exposed before.

This thousand order is just one of many hurry-up calls for the "Teapot Special" in Detroit. It comes from the Workers Party branch there, but numerous Detroit individuals who are making their own arrangements for the best issue of the DAILY WORKER which has not yet come off the presses.

Lowdown of Daugherty.

A rush of orders is coming in at the last moment from the workers and farmers in Ohio where the good Buckeye folks are sweating with impatience for the lowdown on Race Track Daugherty, the patron of bootleggers and the general all-around Platonic pal of the underworld gang in and out of the White House and Palm Beach.

From the oil-soaked shores of California come big orders for Los Angeles and San Francisco where the neighbors of Hiram Johnson want to know why rah rah progressives never breathed a syllable of protest against the giving away of the huge California naval oil reserve to brother Doheny—that is until the senate investigating committee made this steal public property ever so many moons later.

From the Iron Range.

Oil and steel run close together in modern industry and high finance so it is natural to find the comrades on the Minnesota Iron Range eager for the "Special." Just in the last half hour has come an urgent request from the militants at Chisholm, on the Range, for a flock of hand bills to advertise the "Special." Enclosed is a check for a 250-bundle.

"I appreciate the efforts you are putting forth to awaken the workers and farmers to the need of a stand against this system of exploitation under which we are living," and he concludes with a request for subscription forms.

Burns Is Exposed.

The goods on William J. Burns, arch grafting fink, will be in the great special. We'll show up that labor-hating scoundrel as a liar and a crook of the dirtiest water.

Burns says that he has severed connection with his agency, since he went into the Department of Justice. The "Teapot Special" will show over his own signature that he lies,—that he is still closely tide up with the William J. Burns agency, which he uses in his campaign against the labor movement as part of the program of Big Business's Department of Justice.

300 ATTEND F.-L. P. MEET IN MINNESOTA

Obstructionists Still Battle the June 17th Convention

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ST. CLOUD, Minn., Mar. 14.—The convention of the official Farmer-Labor Party of Minnesota, the Pike Organization, went into session here today with approximately 300 delegates in attendance.

State Chairman F. A. Pike made the opening address of the convention. It was a long, rambling speech, made up of time-worn platitudes and a somewhat odious attempt to take a slam at the more progressive elements, without actually calling names. Pike is an unprepossessing individual who reminds one of a fat bleached toad.

Pike's Rough Stuff.

Following the conclusion of his address in which the mention of the U. S. Senator La Follette was all that brought applause, Pike himself nominated a chairman and thereby aroused a storm of protest. He had moved that Baldus of the now defunct Nonpartisan League be made temporary chairman, but after some bitter debate a substitute motion throwing open the nominations was carried and David Evans, the Farmer-Labor Party's first candidate for Governor, was elected.

It was moved, seconded and carried that each district—there are ten congressional districts in Minnesota—select one of the delegation as a member of the credential committee, and that the convention adjourn for one hour.

There is a bitter hostility evident in the convention between the Nonpartisan League officials, who lost out yesterday when their followers voted to join the Farmer-Labor Federation, and the labor group from the Twin Cities and other labor centers.

With what strength they can rally in this convention, which is largely a convention of individuals and not of organizations, the obstructionists, who have been on the job in every one of the conferences so far, are going to try and stage an eleventh hour rally and prevent if possible the indorsement of the June 17th convention, and other decisions of the Farmer-Labor Federation.

In the long run it will make little difference what this gathering does, because it has no economic basis—the unions, cooperatives and other organizations of the workers and farmers being represented by the Farmer-Labor Federation.

Publish Weekly.

It would be the crowning evidence of unity if the convention call and June 17th convention were endorsed here, but if sabotage prevents it the farmer-labor government of Minnesota and the Northwest will have suffered but little damage. One of the most disgusting incidents here, however, is the fact that a few labor men, former radicals, are double-crossing their own delegations from the Twin Cities, and not only voting with the reactionaries, but aiding them to organize their forces. Delegate Vandenberg, of the painters' union, of Minneapolis, and Delegate Call Parsons, of the World War Veterans, of the same city, are two of the traitors whose actions are most obnoxious.

The Farmer-Labor Federation, in its final session Thursday night, decided not to endorse candidates, but to allow members to file in the primaries. William Mahoney, of St. Paul, them. He gave no indication when their cases would be called. They were all charged with violating the injunction of the Francine Dress Co.

Urges Injunction Be Defied.

Garment strikers who filled the hall at 180 W. Washington street yesterday afternoon wildly applauded when John J. Johnstone, representative of the painter's union and the Chicago Federation of Labor exhorted them to defy the infamous injuntion which the notorious Judge Sullivan and the manufacturers were using against the militant pickets of the union.

Johnstone urged mass picketing—with all the forces of the Chicago Federation of Labor taking part in the defiance—and declared that the officialdom of the federation and the unions must throw themselves into the picketing demonstrations.

The immense enthusiasm which greeted Johnstone's militant declarations showed the sentiments of the strikers towards the fighting issue which Sullivan's injunctions have aroused.

From Workers Party.

Johnstone was summoned direct from the Workers Party office as the result of the mass picketing of members of the party yesterday morning when Peter Herd, Abe Harris, Victor Zokaitis and Jack Harvey were arrested.

There was no mincing of words as the speaker took the platform. Declaring that he had seen girls arrested for nothing at all, he cried:

"I want to tell you, brothers and sisters, that if you should go back now without continuing this big fight that you would be in the same position as the steel and textile strikers. It is better to work seven days a week on the picket line now than six days under the conditions in the scab shops."

Johnstone emphasized that this strike dare not be looked upon merely as a garment workers' strike, that it was a strike that affected the entire labor movement and that the entire trade union movement must back it.

Officials Must Picket.

The strikers who had been following his remarks intently cheered him to the echo every time he pointed out that it was the co-operation of all the forces of labor that would win the strike. He urged again that the officials of the labor movement of Chicago must go on the picket line themselves.

Strikers, mindful of the promise of the Chicago Federation of Labor to give them the fullest support, are watching the picket lines for recruits from the Federation. They are watching for the officials of the Federation and the Committee of 15. Tomorrow's meeting of the Federation will be well attended.

On Trial Before Judge Boyer.

Next Thursday at four o'clock, twelve strikers will be tried for disorderly conduct before Judge Boyer, in Evanston police court. They were all arrested Thursday afternoon in front of various dress shops in Evanston, because they picketed.

Thursday afternoon when they were arrested they were peacefully picketing the shops of the dress bosses and the police merely grabbed them and loaded them into all sorts of autos and took them to the police station. There they were charged with disorderly conduct and arraigned before Judge Boyer and the date of their trial set for next Thursday.

The arrests were made following a long fight between the police of Evanston and the union. For some time the police grabbed all pickets who came to the dress shops and deported them out of Evanston. They repeatedly said then that they could not make any charge against them. Last Tuesday the police suddenly changed their tactics. They permitted the strikers to picket the shops and hauled the scabs to and from work in the autos they had been using to deport the workers.

The picketing was successful in spite of the aid rendered the bosses by the police. Most of the shops were working with less than half their force Thursday. So the police again changed their tactics and arrested the pickets for disorderly conduct, for doing the same things they had formerly done and for which the police said they could not make any charges.

John Harvey and Peter Herd, members of the Young Workers League were thrown into the patrol wagon from off the garment strike picket line in the early morning mass arrests by police.

Use Tactics of Thugs.

Thug tactics characterized the actions of the officers of "the law". Girls were shoved about and in some cases beaten as the blue coats and plainclothesmen raided the picket lines where the girls were thinning the ranks of the strikebreakers by their persuasive methods.

Eleanor Sadlowsky saw a detective flailing Elizabeth Holska with his fists on S. Market St. and rushed to her assistance. The victim would have been rescued from the brute had not others come to reinforce him and Miss Sadlowsky and Miss Holska were both arrested and charged with assault—by their assailant.

Picket Is Beaten Up.

Ida Abrams was another picket who was beaten up—this time by a private "slugger". Lillian Haise, Dora Rebinoff, Selma Miller, Fannie Yankes, Martha Mihha, John Pfeifer, Sylvia Martin and Libby Jason were arrested at about the same time.

All the prisoners were taken to the S. Clark St. station and will be arraigned this morning at the police court there where they will demand jury trials. All were freed on bail furnished by the union.

Chicago Council For Foreign-Born Meets Tomorrow

The Chicago Council for the Protection of Foreign Born Workers will hold an important session at 180 W. Washington St., Room 301, tomorrow morning.

The council, which represents strong local unions of the Chicago Federation of Labor and numerous organizations of foreign born workers, was recently organized for the purpose of combining labor's forces against the vicious "exception" laws sponsored by Secretary Davis and other enemies of labor.

Two week's ago the council's resolution for labor unity against this legislation passed the Chicago Federation of Labor without a dissenting vote.

> "The Executive Committee has a comprehensive report to make of the instructions already received and carried out, as well as plans for future work. Additional local unions and fraternal organizations have now selected delegates. We have opportunities to build up this movement and make it a big, really effective effort in the campaign to oppose the passage of the obnoxious laws now pending before Congress.

Label Store Grows.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., March 14.—The Union Label Products Co., a co-operative clothing store here owned by union people, having outgrown its old quarters, has moved to the corner of Market street and Broadway, where it is hoped to expand the establishment to a department store. Shares are being sold among union members by the organization committee, and good progress is reported.

papers are laying around. If there's a servant in his home, a colored servant, get your colored detective, take the servant out, have her write down what's said at the table."

"The reports that you furnished Smith, went to the Attorney General?"

"Yes."

"Did he tell you he was doing it for the Attorney General?"

"Yes. Wait a minute. He didn't say that. We don't do things that way. A man don't have to kick me down with an idea."

"You have delivered messages to Smith and seen him give them to the Attorney General?" Wheeler went on.

"Yes."

"You have seen him get reports from the stock market for the Attorney General."

"I was never in there when he was not getting reports on the stock market."

Threatened to Shoot.

At this point Means made his statement regarding the advice of his counsel, Col. Felder, that if he testified he would be indicted "on any number of things and would soon be unable to put up bond," and charged that Sidney Beiber of Washington advised him not to hurt Daugherty or the republican party.

"Who else spoke to you about not testifying?" asked Senator Jones, Washington.

"I would rather not say, I promised not. I'll ask him."

The committee agreed he might give the information later.

"Anybody else?"

"I got one phone call."

"Who from?"

"Some gum shoe man. He told me I would be shot down and a lot of that junk, trying to frighten me."

Means said he was asked to investigate Elias H. Mortimer, chief witness against Col. Chas. F. Forbes in the Veterans' Bureau inquiry.

"Has there been any attempt to intimidate you since you were subpoenaed?"

Harding Saw Picture.

"Yes, I don't know who he was, but he was from the Department of Justice. He said that I had turned over papers to Bieber in the investigation of Mortimer."

"You don't know his name?"

"No."

Means said his telephone wires were tapped.

"You know something of the Dempsey-Carpentier fight pictures. Was the money paid over for the showing of the Films?"

"Yes, I handled it."

"Who did you turn the money over to?"

"The President, Secretary Hughes ——" Here Means consulted his dairy and then added: "Now as I understood this film matter, the owners of the pictures were Jess Smith, Jap Muma, Will Orr and Howard Mannington."

"Do you know who Mannington represented?"

"No."

"Who was present?"

"Secretary Hughes, Will Orr, Smith, the President, the Attorney General and Ned McLean."

"Money has been paid to you on whiskey transactions and others, that was turned over to Jess Smith?"

"Yes."

"How much money passed thru your hands?"

"Oh, at one time and another maybe between $35,000 and $40,000.

Adjournment was then taken until 10 a. m. tomorrow.

Farmer-Labor Unity Fight Is Now On At St. Cloud Convention

was elected chairman, and Ralph Harmon, secretary-treasurer.

It was decided to publish a weekly paper devoted to the Interest of the farmer-labor movement as soon as arrangements can be made.

The state committee elected by the Federation consists of two members from each congressional district. The last session was a long and trying one and marked by constant efforts of the obstructionists to destroy the unity effected by the fusion of the farmers of the league with the Federation.

Women on Committee.

David Evans was made permanent chairman and Ralph Harmon, permanent secretary. Both elections were unanimous.

The resolutions committee was selected in the same manner as the credentials committee, with the addition of three women, among them Mrs. I. G. Scott, wife of Minneapolis labor alderman.

The desperate condition of the Minnesota Daily Star was brought to the attention of the convention by a report of the Minneapolis Trades and Labor Assembly which showed that something like $250,000 was needed immediately to save the paper.

The convention refused to assume responsibility for financing the Star after a delegate had asked, "Is the policy of the Star the same now as when it started?"

Insistent demand for some sort of a financial report from Chairman Pike brought him back to the platform where he spent an embarrassing half hour disclaiming any knowledge of the financial condition of the organization.

The resolutions committee has not reported yet and the convention is simply killing time. There are enough contentious matters, including the endorsement of the June 17th convention and the matter of a platform, to keep the convention in session until the early morning hours, if the expected attempt to prevent endorsement of these measures is made.

* * *

At press time a report was received from St. Cloud that the Farmer-Labor Convention had unanimously endorsed the call for the June 17th Convention.

Klan Murderer Begins to Serve His Life Sentence

ATLANTA, March 14.—Phil. E. Fox, former publicity director of the the K. K. K. convicted of the murder of W. S. Coburn, attorney for a rival klan faction, was taken today to the state prison at Milledgeville to begin serving his life term.

Fox left Atlanta at noon in company with an official of the prison after the prison commission of Georgia signed an order for his transfer from the county jail where he had been confined since he was convicted in December.

Miss McDowell's 'Strike Settlement' Committee Meets

First meeting of the special subcommittee appointed by Father Frederick Seidenberg, after the "strike settlement" conference in Miss McDowell's office Thursday, was held in her office yesterday afternoon. The meeting was behind closed doors and Miss McDowell said that she was not ready yet to say what the committee was doing.

Another meeting will be held Monday afternooon. The sub-committee was instructed to probe facts on wages and hours prevailing under the various groups of employers and to hold conferences between representatives of these groups and union officials with the purpose of settling the strike.

39 Arrested By San Pedro Bulls As Communists

SAN PEDRO, Calif., March 14.—Thirty-nine workers were arrested by San Pedro police today, in a raid on a roomful of people, whom the bulls say are communists. Manuel Levin, a bookkeeper, was addressing the asembled folks, say the dicks, when the raid took place.

One Day Less In Jail For Alleged Pro-German Editor

WASHINGTON, Mar. 14.—President Coolidge has commuted the sentences of Dr. Edward A. Rumley and two other defendants who were convicted under war-time laws in connection with the purchase of the New York Evening Mail by the German government from one year and one day to one year.

This short commutation of the sentence was directed by the president in order that the defendants could be sent to the Westchester, N. Y., penitentiary instead of the Atlanta penitentiary, where it was first planned to send them.

New York Remembers Commune.

NEW YORK, March 14.—A celebration of the Paris Commune that will be held under the auspices of the Workers Party, Local New York, on Sunday, March 16, at New Star Casino, that will be of particular interest to every militant worker of this city.

In this respect the Commune is of great significance. It was from the Commune that Marx drew the lesson that the workers cannot take hold of the machinery of the capitalist government and use it to abolish the capitalist system but must first abolish the capitalist state and set up a machinery of its own.

Many prominent speakers will discuss these problems, among them Mosaye J. Olgin.

An excellent musical program has been arranged and as in previous affairs of this nature a good time will be had by all.

Admission is only 40 cents including war tax.

8 STRIKERS FREED BY DISGUSTED JUDGE BUT MORE ARE ARRESTED

Proof that Mayor William E. Dever's police are arresting pickets without a shadow of excuse, was again afforded, when Judge Samuel H. Trude discharged the following eight strikers in S. Clark street court yesterday afternoon: Ben Silver, May Rodner, Sophie Altschuler, Florence Corn, Eleanor Sadlowsky, Bessie Katz, Yetta Cornstein, and Sarah Schneider.

The police who arrested them admitted their lack of evidence by failing to appear. The girls were arrested on the "L" station at Canal street, where they gathered before going on the picket line. Judge Trude showed his disgust at the police for making the arrests.

Another set of striker prisoners were taken by the police, just as unwarrantedly, as these were being discharged. They are Fanny Kramer, Emma Rykick, Mamie Butkewitz, Kate Skrzt, Pauline Zork, Victoria Ceislkiwcz and Eugeneia Pryzgloba. Sixteen more pickets were arrested in Evanston by the police there.

Other militant pickets arrested still later in Chicago yesterday, were: B. Lonsford, W. Bernstein, G. Goldberg, P. Yatzina, M. Bolinsky, E. Morris, F. Shapiro, M. Apenheme, L. Katolsky, M. Adelman, W. S. Wilson and J. F. Boyer.

The "Committee of Fifteen" Had Its Picture Taken

WHILE the conference called by commissioner of Public Welfare Mary McDowell was meeting on Thursday, and strong doses of brotherly love were recommended by the assembled liberals as excellent strike weapons, the Chicago police under the authority of Mayor Dever were dragging pickets into the police stations. Dever like Pontius Pilate washed his hands of the strike and turned a solution of the problems created by it over to his commissioner of public welfare, but his policemen continued to take orders from the clothing manufacturers.

The DAILY WORKER would like to know what is the "Committee of Fifteen" appointed by John Fitzpatrick doing? It was organized for the purpose of helping the striking dressmakers, but so far it has accomplished the following results:

1. It had its picture taken.
2. It appointed a sub-committee to interview the mayor.

But Mr. Dever stated to the DAILY WORKER, the day after the sub-committee interviewed him that he was not aware that the conduct of the police was unproper.

Anton Johannsen, is chairman of the "Committee of Fifteen". The DAILY WORKER was informed by John English, organizer of Typographical Union No. 16 that the understanding among the members of the committee was, that after the interview with the mayor, another general meeting would be called if there was any further improper interference on the part of the police with the strikers. No meeting has been held since, the DAILY WORKER has been informed. Evidently the "Committee of Fifteen" is of the opinion that there was no improper interference, since they bid "friend of labor" Dever "good morning!"

Since the Chicago Federation of Labor authorized its president to appoint the committee, there was a splendid opportunity for action. The committee was expected to investigate the office of Robert E. Crowe in its relation to the dressmakers strike. But not alone has it failed to do that but it has not even issued any publicity on the strike or threw even the moral power—not to speak of the physical power—of the workers of Chicago behind the striking dressmakers.

Professors Shame Labor Leaders.

It is typical of the laziness of labor officials that a committee of citizens, clergymen and college professors included, took the leadership in this strike away from the Chicago Federation of Labor. This committee, without any real power behind it at least called attention to the brutalities of the Chicago police, those under the immediate authority of Mayor Dever as well as those who work from the state's attorney office.

The DAILY WORKER has made appeal after appeal to the "Committee of Fifteen" for action. In so doing it was only animated by the desire to help the dressmakers win their strike. It hoped that John Fitzpatrick would do something besides write a letter to Mayor Dever's political enemy Robert E. Crowe. The workers are not interested in a contest between the two capitalist groups who are fighting for the spoils of office in this city.

Constructive Criticism.

We have been told that criticism is easy; that we should tell the "Committee of Fifteen" what to do. We have done that. We advised the calling of a great mass meeting, the organization of a publicity department and we also urged the Committee to demand of the mayor that he pick a committee of special officers from the Chicago labor unions to preserve order in the strike district. All of these demands were practical and quite possible of fulfillment.

But surely there are enough brains on the "Committee of Fifteen" to plan some form of action. What is Mr. Victor Olander doing with his head? And Oscar Nelson, attorney, and Republican politician! These two men alone who boast about their knowledge of the labor movement, should be equal to adopting a plan that would aid a few thousand garment workers in winning a strike.

The DAILY WORKER, however again comes to the aid of the sorely pressed labor leaders, who have allowed the "intellectuals" from Hull House to come to the front in defense of the striking garment workers while they peacefully smoke their pipes in their offices. The DAILY WORKER calls on the "Committee of Fifteen" to 1—Immediately make arrangements for a monster mass meeting of the workers of Chicago and explain the causes of the strike to them. This would bring the whole situation dramatically to the attention of the public.

United Labor Support.

2—A conference of all the trade unions of Chicago should be called with a view to placing the entire strength of the organized workers in this city behind the striking dressmakers.

3—A strike fund should be opened by the "Committee of Fifteen" to finance the striking dressmakers during the strike and to help organize the dress industry one hundred per cent.

4—A demand backed by the Chicago Federation of Labor should be made on Mayor Dever to appoint special law preserving officers in the strike zone recruited from the Chicago labor unions, on the recommendation of the Committee of Fifteen.

Here are enough suggestions to keep the Committee of Fifteen busy for awhile. Every one of these suggestions is practical and within the power of the Chicago labor movement to carry out. The workers of this city are reading the story of this strike thru the columns of the DAILY WORKER. This paper has given real service to the striking dressmakers even tho it has bitterly condemned the policy of the international officials of the union prior to the strike in expelling many of its most militant members.

Smash Bosses' Unity.

But since this strike was declared it had only one object, and that is to help beat the bosses and win the strike for the workers. The suggestions we make to the "Committee of Fifteen" have the same end in view. The DAILY WORKER has given the lie to its detractors, that it and the Workers Party, of which it is the official organ were disruptive forces. The DAILY WORKER has been the biggest constructive force during this strike and while leaders of the Chicago Federation of Labor were sending their best brains to St. Paul and Minneapolis to disrupt the Farmer-Labor conference, the DAILY WORKER was on the firing line aiding the dressmakers where real labor leaders should be.

It is not yet too late to do something. The workers of this city are watching this strike and they are also watching the labor leaders from whom they expect leadership. So far their expectations have not been realized. Let us have action.

Guns Roar and Dogs Bark as Denby Returns

DETROIT, Mich., March 14.—Bands blared, dogs barked, factory whistles shrieked and bombs exploded in a noisy welcome to Edwin Denby as he came home today.

The former Secretary of the Navy, arriving from Washington was greeted by a reception committee at the station; taken to the city hall by motorcycle escort, and there welcomed by acting Mayor Joseph A. Martin.

Frank D. Famin, prominent democrat and a close friend of Denby's, will deliver the formal address of welcome tonight.

Charles B. Warren, recently appointed ambassador to Mexico, will be one of the other speakers.

Girl Striker Beaten, Badly Hurt by Police Thug; Not Arrested

Sophie Altschuller, one of the most active of the union girls, was arrested and severely beaten last night by Police Officer 3181, in the hallway of 287 S. Market street. After the thug finished beating her, he let her go. Friends took her to the Hotel Morrison, where she is confined to bed and attended by the hotel physician. Her condition is serious. She says there was no provocation for either her arrest or the beating she received.

MELLON'S COAL COMPANY NETTED ONLY $11,358,356

No Wonder Andy Fights The Poor Man

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

A profit of $11,358,356 was earned by Mellon's Pittsburgh Coal Co. during 1923, according to the annual report recently made public by R. B. Mellon, president of the company and brother to Coolidge's secretary of treasury. This means that stockholders got a return three and a half times as large as they were accustomed to in prewar years, while the profit per ton was exactly five times that considered fair before the war.

Such profits may reveal some personal reasons for Mellon's passionate advocacy of the repeal of the excess profits tax and later his devotion to the task of reducing the surtaxes on large incomes.

Pittsburgh Coal's Loot

Pittsburgh Coal during 1923 sold 13,915,588 tons of coal for $63,069,472 out of which expenses took $51,710,916. This left profits of $11,358,556 equivalent to 86 cents a ton. After payment of interest and deduction of exorbitant depletion charges there remained $7,309,162 to be divided among the stockholders equivalent to $10.88 a share.

The grossest kind of profiteering characterized the handling of this corporation by the Mellon interests during the war. During the two years 1917 and 1918 when the United States was actively engaged in the conflict the profits of Pittsburgh Coal averaged $10,622,118 a year after all deductions for depletion, depreciation and interest, and after payment of excess profits and income taxes. This meant profits more than five times those earned in the prewar years 1912 to 1914 when the company was actually producing more coal. Profit per ton during the war years averaged 58¼ cents a ton as compared with 10 cents a ton during 1912, 1913 and 1914.

Pretty Good for Mellon

During the five years since the armistice Pittsburgh Coal has reported profits after all deductions totaling $27,121,680, or an average of $5,024,336 a year. This is still two and a half times the prewar average. And these profits have been made on a very much smaller tonnage so that thruout the period the profit per ton has averaged 50 cents or five times that in prewar years.

It should be remarked that these represent the war and post war profits of a corporation whose head is the leading opponent of a soldiers' bonus and the leading advocate of reducing excess profits taxes and taxes on the swollen incomes of the rich. Incidentally it throws an interesting side light on the leading figure in Coolidge's cabinet.

Can Daugherty! Cleveland Metal Workers Demand

CLEVELAND, March 14.—Union labor's resentment of conditions in Washington is shown by the action of this district of the International Association of Machinists in demanding the immediate removal from office of Attorney General Daugherty.

The machinists' resolution states that its members, who are "filled with repugnance and digust" for those responsible for the present era of corruption and misgovernment at Washington. The petition concludes: "We call upon the president to work to the end that all public officials implicated in any manner in these scandals be prosecuted and punished to the full extent of the law; and that failure on the part of the president to perform this duty will, in our opinion, saddle the entire responsibility for the past and present conduct of such officials on the president himself."

Landlords of Both Colors Exploit Negro Tenants in Class 'D' Houses, Daily Worker's Expose Will Show

The Negroes of Chicago do not know how many times they have been the subject of investigations and no paper has yet been put into the hands of the Negro workers, explaining to them how far below the standard of the whites they are living. A small shop-keeper near 35th Street and Indiana Avenue told this story to the DAILY WORKER Investigator yesterday.

"The rich class of Negroes like these investigations by social workers, we are told. It affords a chance for the favored ones to sip tea and have a nice enjoyable social time with the white social workers—to make new friends and to get their names in the papers.

Far From The Slums.

Those Negroes who are living in their large stone houses on southern Michigan Boulevard buy the expensive book which prints the results of these numerous investigations. Meanwhile, the unfortunate living on Federal Street and South Dearborn, does not know he has afforded entertainment for the upper class of his race on the more pleasant avenue.

That is not the kind of an investigation the DAILY WORKER is carrying on. True to its name, the DAILY WORKER is interested in putting into the hands of the worker-negroes of Chicago the facts as to the actual conditions under which they live. For the first time a daily newspaper is being distributed to them which tells them how they can better their living conditions and then, help them to do it.

Black and White Landlords.

There is no excuse for the large real estate dealers—either colored or white—in charging higher rents to the Negroes than they had been charging the whites in the same neighborhood and often in the same houses. It is a clear cut matter of profiteering. The excuse always offered in such cases is that Negro tenants depreciate the value of the property. The DAILY WORKER finds that this is not true.

Even many of the large real estate dealers themselves—such as the Depriests, in mixed neighborhoods turn white tenants out of their apartments, and replace them with Negroes. They do this because the Negro has been accustomed to paying more rent and because the landlord knows he does not have to repair the Negro tenants houses. The DAILY WORKER came across a place near 34th street, where the landlord was forced to get the sheriff to evict his white tenants, who said they did not mind living in the same buidling with Negroes.

The Defender On Landlords.

Our contemporary, the Chicago Defender, says about the profiteering real estate dealers, in their last issue, "There is a curious situation in the problem of real estate and real estate management which puzzles some laymen and some property owners. Many real estate men who are members of the Race do not hesitate to declare themselves as benefactors of the Race because of their successful efforts in securing properties to be rented to our people. As proof that these benefits are not altogether an unmixed evil, the purchaser of some very extensive holdings recently was approached by one or two real estate agents and advised to eject the white tenants already occupying the building, and replace them with Race tenants. The arguments advanced are, that the rents can be increased, and that the income of the building would be worth a great deal more than would be possible if white tenants were retained.

"This seems to be a curious kind of mathematics whereby business men who are members of the Race seem to think it is a legitimate proposition to penalize members of their own Race. Ordinarily individuals would ask themselves whether an apartment is worth more according to the complexion of the tenants. Everybody that knows the housing situation in our large cities knows that it is extremely difficult for our people to get housing accomodations. Some believe that this situation was brought about on account of the prejudice of white owners. When we have begun to study the problem we have found underneath the surface some unscrupulous agents who buy, sell and lease property solely on the basic of color. One would naturally think that it would not be necessary to change the complexion of the tenants in order to increase the rents.

Tenants Penalized For Color.

"No man likes to feel that he is being penalized because of his color, where his money is concerned. Why is it not possible for buildings to be changed over from white tenants to us without such a heavy burden of rent being added to the shoulders of Race men and women? Where the building has been a paying proposition on ordinary rents it seems unwise and very unfair to add to the burdens of the people an unreasonable increase to make people pay because they cannot help themselves and because they do not happen to be white."

As Shakespeare would say, "There be white profiteers and there be black profiteers—I mean real estate sharks." Mary McDowell says that the rumor that Negroes depreciate property values is not true. That "Colored people are compelled to enter white neighborhoods after whites have begun to move out."

Negroes In Class 'D' Houses.

It has been found that forty-five per cent of Chicago's Negro population is living in class "D" houses, the very poorest type. These houses are the very least habitable of all. They are the oldest buildings in Chicago. They are classified as "Frail, flimsy, tottering, unkempt, literally falling apart. No repairing has been done for twenty years."

And yet the Chicago Tribune said some days ago that Chicago's negroes, "Have all the utilities of modern civilization, most of them living well." That statement may be true of the wealthy real estate sharks who live in mansions on South Michigan Boulevard, bought by the life-blood of the rest of the race. It is certainly not true of the large majority who are forced to live in broken down dumps along Federal and South Dearborn Streets.

Something New!

This investigation of the housing conditions among Chicago's Negroes is unlike any housing survey that has ever been carried on. Former investigations have been printed in high-brow pamphlets and expensive books which only the few wealthy Negroes who do not need them are able to obtain. The DAILY WORKER investigator has spent much time in the Negro districts. He has talked to many Negroes of all classes, and he is telling the Negroes themselves, thru the DAILY WORKER, just what their conditions are, and HOW BEST TO BETTER NEGRO HOUSING CONDITIONS. We will advertise meetings of the Negro Tenants' League which has been newly organized to meet the housing problems, and we will print, as much as possible, the news and letters sent in by Chicago's Negro workers.

Farrell Defense Council Gets Goat Of Police Chief

FARRELL, Pa., Mar. 14.—Smarting under the stinging lash of publicity being administered by the Farrell labor defense council, Chief of Police Leyshock of Farrell, and Steel Trust officials, thru the press here deny that the raids on the Workers Party hall and imprisonment of six alleged members was inspired by the Steel Trust police.

It is stated by ex-Burgess Moody, who ruled over Farrell during the great steel strike that his police raided meetings upon authorization from the Steel Trust and the defense has found conclusive evidence indicating that the recent raids were authorized by the same source.

Protesting against circulation of defense literature and threatening to arrest those responsible for its circulation Chief Leyshock again plays the small town hero by the prattling about a committee from the Workers Party waiting on him at his office. Leyshock complains against the circulation of defense literature showing up the collusion existing between the Farrell police and Steel Trust police. The infantile logic of the chief has furnished Mercer County with its own Teapot Dome scandal and the staid rural folks with their brothers in the mills have much to talk about these days.

The laxity shown by the Farrell police in enforcing the so-called prohibition law and their ruthless suppression of workers' meetings is a lurid contrast proving that the Steel Trust-controlled police are more concerned with what the worker reads than what he drinks.

Daugherty Attempts To Get Even With Congressional Foes

WASHINGTON, March 14.—Subpoenaes were issued today for witnesses who will tell a special grand jury about alleged improper receipt of money by congressmen, it was learned at Attorney General Daugherty's office. The grand jury will be convened at once. Assistant Attorney General Seymour, aided by John W. H. Crim, Mrs. Mabel Willebrandt and other members of Daugherty's staff, will have charge of the prosecutions. Names of grand jury witnesses are being kept secret.

KANSAS MINERS APPLAUD HOWAT IN CONVENTION

District No. 14 Solidly Behind Leader.

By TOM TIPPETT
(Staff Correspondent of the Federated Press)

PITTSBURGH, Kan., March 14.—International President John L. Lewis, United Mine Workers of America, will not come to Kansas and debate with Alexander Howat, deposed president of District 14, whose convention is in session here. A wire from President Lewis said that any information on international policy that the delegates wished to know could be obtained from international men attending the convention. The telegram was a reply to one inviting Lewis here to debate the Kansas trouble with Howat.

Rank and File Wins.

These are gala days for the rank and file delegates attending this convention. They have won victory after victory hands down from opposition forces. More laurels were added to their number when word reached the convention that the U. S. supreme court had dealt another blow at the Kansas court of industrial relations, by reversing the action of the Kansas supreme court in the August Dorchy case. This decision frees Dorchy from further jail sentences and concludes the funeral rites to the "slave law" that was killed long ago by these same delegates and their fellow coal diggers who persistently defied it by direction.

The day following the court decision Alexander Howat addressed the convention by special action of the delegation taken the day before. The large convention hall was full when the hour for Howat's speech arrived. Women as well as men came in from the camps to hear the man who has been expelled from union membership two and a half years by action of the international organization. Howat was given a splendid reception, the undivided attention of his listeners and an ovation at the conclusion of his address. He made mention of his own trouble only by inference, saying that he would be in the union when many of those who are now fighting him are forgotten; that no man could keep him out of the labor movement and that his faith is "so strong that, regardless of the obstacles that stand in the way, in the end justice must and shall prevail."

Other highlights of Howat's speech were:

"The coal operators and all other large employers of labor will respect the workers only when the workers are powerful enough to force their respect."

"Kansas coal operators say they will not sign a contract for three years if I am re-instated into the union. I thank them for that compliment."

Howat Hits Slave Law.

Speaking of the industrial court act which Howat termed a "slave law" he said: "The coal diggers of Kansas killed that law by refusing to recognize it and they prevented such a law from being enacted in other states by their action. . . . Law makers must make laws to respect the people if they want the people to respect the laws."

Howat paid his respects to ex-governor Allen, author of the law by calling him a miserable failure and a beautiful liar. When the industrial court fight was on Howat said a preacher came to see him from Topeka, the state capital. He told Howat it was his duty to love Allen and Howat said: "I do love him; like he loves me, or like these miserable coal operators love the coal diggers who produce their coal."

The man of God asked Howat what he thought Jesus would do if he were suddenly to come upon earth. Howat said: "If Christ were to come here tomorrow the first thing he ought to do would be to go to Topeka and clean Governor Allen and the crooked legislators out of the capitol building." The minister left, Howat told the crowd that was beside itself with laughter. Allen now runs a newspaper and Howat finished his reference to him by saying: "If Allen tells as many lies in his paper as he told the people when he was in this district, God help the folks that read that miserable sheet of his."

Howat concluded by pleading for an independent political party of the workers and farmers so that government corruption may be eliminated and so that "85 per cent of the people who produce the nation's wealth might come into their own." He ended by saying that if ever in his life he is confronted with another law that strikes at the workers' rights as did the industrial law he will fight it "just as we did this one." He does not regret a single thing done against the "slave law," he said and thanked those present who stood by him so loyally in the fight. Howat has spent 16 months in jail for violating the industrial court act.

Muscle Shoals Steal Will Be Fought by Senate Progressives

WASHINGTON, March 14.—Senator Norris, chairman senate committee on agriculture, predicts a long fight in the upper house before the Muscle Shoals dam and the steam power plant built by the government at that place shall be turned over to Henry Ford for 100 years.

Norris, Brookhart and other progressives are opposed to giving Muscle Shoals to Henry Ford or to the Alabama Power Co., or to any other private interest. Norris has just introduced the public superpower bill sponsored by the Public Ownershop League of America.

The naval oil lands were given away secretly to Doheny and Sinclair, but the house has openly voted the giving away to Ford of a resource equally important. Norris proposes to show up the betrayal of public interest in this refusal by congress to develop and operate the Muscle Shoals power for the benefit of the people.

Ladd Succeeds Lenroot.

The senate today unanimously approved appointment of Senator Ladd, North Dakota, as chairman of the public lands committee, succeeding Senator Irvine L. Lenroot, republican, Wisconsin, who gave up the post because of ill health.

Youth Organizations Meet to Discuss Reform Problems

BEAR MOUNTAIN INN, N. J., March 14.—Representatives of young peoples' groups of widely-divergent traditions in conference at Bear Mountain Inn, formulated a common program of social reform. Among organizations represented were the Student Volunteers of America, Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., the Christian Endeavor, League for Industrial Democracy, Young Workers' League and Young Peoples' Socialist League.

The program adopted opposes militarism and racial prejudicies, child labor and the open shop, and favors socialization of the mines, railroads and super-power, along with a number of measures of social insurance, birth control education and the furtherance of labor unionism, workers' co-operation and the establishment of an independent farmer-labor party.

Representatives possesed no authority to commit their organizations to any program. The statement of policy was an expression of the individuals at the conference.

Stinnes Newspaper Commits 'Treason'; Gets Away With It

(By The Federated Press)

BERLIN, March 14—The Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, owned by Hugo Stinnes, brings a sensational item to the effect that the reactionary government of Thuringia has discovered a big supply of munitions which the socialist minister of the interior, Hermann, is alleged to have secretly purchased to arm the "proletarian hundreds." Nothing happens. The newspaper appears now as before.

Several weeks previously various working class organs had brought the news that large supplies of munitions had been found in Bavaria, which were intended for the extreme nationalists.

Immediately all these working class papers were suppressed and the indictment of treason brought against some of them, on the grounds that these papers were telling the "enemy" where Germany's hidden supplies of munitions are.

It evidently all depends for what purpose secret stores of munitions are heaped up.

CROSS ATLANTIC RADIO BALKS AT YANKEE RAGTIME

Johnny Bulls Play Our Songs in Vain

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, March 14.—Britain and America are but step brothers as far as radio relations go, judging from the disappointing results accompanying the ambitious linking of nine English radio stations which simultaneously broadcast music and a talk by Marconi to the four winds last night.

Radio fans thruout America waited for the most part in vain, for strains of American popular songs played by the Orphean band at the Savoy hotel in London. Richmond Temple, American representative to the international experiment, built a grandstand around his receiving set in the Ambassador hotel here and waited in anticipation.

Not a Sizzle.

The instrument didn't even sizzle for his guests. Temple was finally compelled to send for a cable of Senator Marconi's opening address to furnish consolatory entertainment for the assemblage.

In spite of the "silent co-operation" of the American stations only a few persons in New York reported receiving the program clearly. From other sections of the country the particular piece "I love you," came over must successfully.

WJZ, operated by the Radio Corporation of America, reported at 10:45 p. m. that it had heard nothing of the London concert altho operators had listened from 6 p. m. to 9:30 p. m. (Eastern standard time) the hours designated.

Super Radio Plan.

The British radio interests had planned to circle the world, setting up receiving stations in Australia, China and other parts of the Far East. By the use of telephone wires every broadcasting station in Britain were linked in a super system of twelve kilowat energy.

Daugherty Days

The oil investigation is taking a back seat. A new scandal is now in the spotlight. Mr. Daugherty, who is charged with the task of ferreting out the criminals of the nation, is now appearing in his true light as the arch-defender of the worst criminals and as an active participant in all the heinous crimes that his own department is supposed to prevent.

The testimony of Miss Stimson before the Wheeler committee has already revealed Daugherty as the perpetrator of sufficient crooked deals to warrant not only his impeachment but his immediate imprisonment for a long term. Yet, it is known by all that thorogoing as the present investigation might possibly be, only an infinitessimal fraction of the corruption and fraud with which the Department of Justice is reeking, will be disclosed.

It is no accident that the man who is the connecting link between the secret chambers of the government bureaucracy and the financiers and industrial Czars should be guilty of the worst crookedness with which our government is infected. It is natural for the man whose task it is to do the roughest and dirtiest work for the employing class to be found selling privileges, dealing in shady oil stocks, and sheltering every notorious lobbyist in the Capital. Who could do a better job in protecting bootleggers, in cleaning up on the Stock Exchange, than the head of the Department of Justice which has railroaded to jail large numbers of workers and has organized an army of thousands of strikebreakers to smash the labor unions and break the strikes? Indeed, it is most fitting for the government officer who personifies the highest degree of the strikebreaking power of the state, who symbolizes all the harshness and cruelty of the ruling class, to be the essence and incarnation of capitalist government at its worst, in the lowest depths of the nadir of corruption.

For the workers and farmers whom Mr. Daugherty has terrorized and hounded these Daugherty days afford a splendid opportunity for action in self-defense. Now is the time when the working masses must force the government to get rid of Daugherty and his ilk. Now is the time to make Mr. Daugherty, at least in part, pay for the crimes he has committed against the workers in breaking the last shopmen's strike and in sabotaging the numerous other struggles of the workingmen. Rattling skeletons in Mr. Daugherty's face is not enough. The workers and farmers must bury Daugherty and all that he stands for as a political force in the country.

A Worthwhile Task

Our attempt to bring home to the great mass of workingmen in the industrial centers and in the rural sections the rude realities involved in the disclosures of the oil investigation is an effort which concerns very vitally every man and woman who is compelled to work for a living.

The primary purpose of our getting out a special edition chock full of facts and giving a sound explanation of the whole sordid drama now being enacted in the national Capital is to prevent the employing class from pulling out of their present hardships unscathed. What we are striving to achieve in our "Teapot Special" is a straight-forward, clear-cut presentation of the relationship between the government and the bosses in such a fashion as to help the organization of the workers and farmers who are only the victims of the conditions giving rise to the vicious thefts which our present capitalist body-politic is sweating from every one of its pores.

The fact that American warships have become the taxis of the Standard Oil interests, the deplorable man-killing conditions of employment in the oil industry, the imperialist world struggle for oil are all part and parcel of the whole capitalist system of exploitation of the workers and poor farmers, and are as much the concern of the laboring masses as is the Teapot holdup. What the working and farming classes must do for their own self-preservation, is to organize themselves politically and economically to uproot every trace and vestige of the capitalist system of production and exchange giving rise to these oppressive conditions.

That is precisely what our "Teapot Special" is aiming at. That is exactly what we are heading for. The distribution of this issue is a most worthwhile task which every workingman and farmer should gladly undertake to carry out in order to hasten the end of all these mortal dangers confronting the working people—in order to make impossible the recurrence of all Teapot tragedies and their dire consequences.

Curfew of "Socialism"

The German Reichstag, in which the Social Democratic Party of Noske, Scheidemann, and Ebert was the majority party, has at last been dissolved. The "Socialist" Reichstag, which has served as the bulwark against the victory of the German workers, is no longer needed by the Stinneses, the Thyssens, and the Prussian military clique. The Crown Prince is again appearing publicly on Unter den Linden!

The same papers that lauded the Noske party and the Reichstag when Liebknecht and Luxembourg were murdered and when thousands of Communists were thrown into jail because they fought against the capitalist militarists who led them into the war are now gloating over the Reichstag being disbanded. The Reichstag which was once the best means for misleading the workers and chaining them to capitalist slavery has become useless, a fetter on the very system of capitalist tyranny it served to preserve. The industrial and financial magnates and the Junkers feel today that they can rule openly with an iron hand. They have no need just now of maintaining the parliamentary illusions of an impotent Reichstag.

But our capitalist press is dead wrong when it heralds the dissolution of the Reichstag as the curfew of Socialism in Germany. The dismemberment of the Reichstag is of two-fold significance. First of all, is shows the power attained by the German employing class. Secondly, it is proof of the fact that the capitalist class of Germany has no use today for the Noskes and Eberts. These hangmen of the working class have outlived their historical usefulness even as assassins of the proletariat. Therefore, the very ones whom they saved from the heavy hand of working class revolution, the very capitalists in defense of whose interests they slaughtered helpless workers by the hundreds, are now throwing them overboard. This is the course pursued by the capitalists everywhere.

All of this does not for a moment mean that Germany has arrived at the curfew of socialism. In so far as socialism, the socialism of Marx, is concerned it is far from dead in Germany. The recent election results nail this lie. As a matter of fact the collapse of the French franc is to no small extent due to the fear of the Poincare government that the coming German elections will witness a tremendous increase in the strength of the Communists. Despite their being declared illegal and being subject to the most ruthless persecution, the Communists of Germany are making remarkable headway.

The dissolution of the Reichstag does not toll the doom of Socialism in Germany. It only presages sharper and more revolutionary class conflicts.

Time to Act

The Workers Party, which has for the last two years waged an energetic campaign for the organization of a national Farmer-Labor Party along class lines, is launching a campaign to redouble these efforts.

No better time could have been chosen for rallying the exploited workers and poor farmers to decisive political struggles against their capitalist enemies.

No one can deny that there is a tremendous wave of disillusionment, disappointment, and enlightenment amongst the mass of workers as to the real role of the government and the constitution in their day-to-day struggles. But this great discontent, this powerful mass action, will peter out and lose its momentum as a force for fundamental social change unless it is organized and turned into channels of effective action to uproot the capitalist control of government and industry. The best and most efficient weapon that the workers and farmers can now employ in this great political crisis is a mighty political party of their own, organized to fight uncompromisingly in behalf of their class interests and against the class interests of the capitalist exploiters.

The appeal of the Workers Party for funds to intensify this campaign of organization amongst the farmers and workingmen should bring a most generous response. The Capitalist interests will pour more millions into their campaign propaganda this year than ever before. The employers see danger ahead. The workers and farmers should utilize the favorable opportunity to organize themselves to strike telling blows. A successful campaign means the sending out of speakers to the shops, mills, mines, and farms. It means the printing of a vast amount of literature that will tell the story of the bosses' plunderbund and its ravages amongst the city workers and farmers. A successful political campaign that will hit the enemies of the working masses where it will hurt most, and when they will be able to stand blows least, involves the expenditure of funds, the spending of money to put over all these activities.

The appeal of the Workers Party is an appeal not in behalf of the Workers Party members, but in behalf of every worker and every farmer. It is a call to action, action which is more pressing than ever, against Teapot politics, farm bankruptcy, government by injunction, low wages, degrading working conditions, and the whole capitalist system of exploitation and oppression of those who work in the city and in the country. This great appeal should meet with the heartiest response. The workers and farmers should give and give until it hurts their enemies. Give to the Workers Party, Room 214, 1009 N. State Street, Chicago, Illinois.

STIR UNIVERSITY STUDENTS TO AID GARMENT STRIKE

Holland and Dr. Gerard Indict Police

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN.

Thomas Holland, labor manager for Hart, Schaffner and Marx, and Dr. Ralph Gerard, of the General Medical College, presented the results of a survey made by Hull House residents of conditions pertaining to the strike of Chicago garment workers before a meeting of University of Chicago students held at the university.

Holland said that essential conditions in regard to labor and its relations to its exploiters had not changed in the last hundred years.

Picketing Best Weapon.

Picketing, he said, was the only effective weapon the labor unions had, and courts of "justice" prohibit that by means of injunctions. He passed about several copies of the injunction against the garment workers to show how the bosses' writ attempted to tie them hand and foot. This injunction prohibits picketing, but does not define the word, leaving the police, whom he said, were subsidized by the bosses for the purpose of breaking the strike, free to arrest anyone they saw fit to arrest.

Because policemen were all on "picket duty" now, he said, cases wherein arrests should be made for actual crime could not be made. He said that on the whole the strike had been remarkably peaceful, most of the disturbance being due to police officers, detectives from the office of State's Attorney Crowe, and thugs, or "private detectives." Holland saw some 35 girls brought to trial Wednesday morning for disturbance of the peace, and all but five immediately acquitted, proof of the indiscrimate wholesale arrest of workers by the boss-subsidized police, for the purposes of intimidation.

Praises DAILY WORKER.

Conditions in the strike area in Evanston were just as bad, said Holland. Here one is taken from the train, put into an automobile and spirited out of the town. There is no pretense at arrest, one is just deported. This had brought a protest to Chief of Police Leggett from certain ministers of the suburban city.

The DAILY WORKER was the only Chicago paper which printed the truth about the strike, declared the speaker.

Dr. Gerard said that State's Attorney Crowe told Meyer Perlstein, president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, to clear out of the city or he would break the union. This he is trying to do by his mass arrests of the strikers, which have already put the union in debt for vast sums for bail. Dr. Gerard said that in the same union's strike in 1917 there were 1,400 strikers arrested, and all but three released afterward, because there was no evidence to convict them.

Militant Amalgamated.

Prior to 1917, Dr. Gerard said, conditions in the clothing industry were horrible. The Amalgamated Clothing Workers led the fight for the organization of the needle workers, and has always been in the front rank of progressive labor organizations.

He divided the 200 odd employers of women's clothing workers into three groups. In the first he put six large employers, who run completely scab shops, and require their workers to sign an anti-union pledge; in the second he put an organized group of bosses whose shops are partly unionized; the third comprised a great number of small, unorganized manufacturers, some 60 or 70 of whom have already signed up with the union.

Tuberculosis In Scab Shops.

Conditions in non-union shops are very bad, he said. Many of the buildings are firetraps, with bad sanitary conditions and poor light. Many are simply filthy lofts, and in all tuberculosis is rampant. Some factories are in good condition, but most of the work done by these is farmed out to individual slaves, who do the work for a pittance in their own homes.

Wages, said Gerard, are on a piece work basis, and the determination of them is solely in the hands of the bosses. The wages paid in Chicago are a third lower than those paid in other cities. Only five per cent of the women's clothing workers in Chicago receive as much as a thousand dollars a year.

He said that there are 5,000 of these workers in Chicago, 3,000 of whom are organized, and 3,500 on strike. They demand a 40-hour-week, a 10 per cent increase in wages, unemployment insurance, since the industry is a seasonal one in which there are only about 30 or 40 weeks' work, installation of machinery which would standardize industry, and, most important, recognition of the union by the employers. The bosses' howl that they cannot meet these demands, he said, was untrue, since the bosses of other cities have complied with them, and their profits still go on.

Visit Strike Area!

In conclusion, Dr. Gerard urged the students to read the DAILY WORKER, to go into the strike area and see the actual conditions, and to organize and get behind Hull House investigations and agitations for the workers.

Several subscriptions to the DAILY WORKER were taken from the students at the meeting.

MENTIONING THE MOVIES

By PROJECTOR.

"THE FOOL'S AWAKENING."

Yes, it's a motion picture described on the billboards as a "super-feature." The title refers to the audience after they have paid their admission.

A taxi-driver wants to be a novelist but his stuff misses fire until he palms off a Russian dairy as his own experiences. Right away he gets a big reputation and a rich wife. He is found out in time, she goes thru the routine "struggle between pride and love," and while she is making up her mind he tries to drive over a cliff. The property man was on the job, however, with a tree properly placed for the rescue, so Harrison Ford is saved for the next "super-feature." Enid Bennet as the leading lady is particularly wooden, but with such story and direction it is well to be charitable.

A nasty little stab of anti-Bolshevik propaganda enlivens the show. The stolen diary was taken from a dead White Guard by an escaping British spy. The White lay under a road sign reading, "To Finland" in three languages so that refugees might make no mistake about the road out of Russia. It is a humane government, after all, that substitutes road signs for sentries at the border. A newspaper clipping also pays its respects to the Reds in this senseless, foolish film.

See Trail of Maniac.

LINDEN, N. Y., March 14.—Three persons, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Whalley, both 55 years of age, and Mrs. Mable Morse, 50 years old, residents of this village, ten miles south of Batavia, were slain recently apparently by a maniac.

Pavlowa Dances Indian Role Before Garment Strikers

Georgeous color schemes, romantic settings and masterful interpretation of life in the dance delights large audiences at the Auditorium Theatre every night this week. Pavlowa and her ballet give to the art of ballet dancing a new charm in their original interpretations of ancient life in Greece and India. Hundreds of garment strikers attended free at her invitation.

On Tuesday evening the Greek Ballot "Dionysus" to the music of Nicolas Teschereрnine proved a most delightful number in her repertoire for this season. And no less delightful was the rendering of "Ajanta" on Monday evening.

"Ajanta" goes back to a period of about 500 years B. C. and brings to life pictures found in the ancient temples of India. There are three scenes in this production. The first scene is powerfully dramatic in its parade of pilgrims on their way to the temple In the second scene the pilgrims, tired and worn with their long journey lie down to rest. The third scene gives us their dream. The picture on the wall translates itself into a living scene in which the drama of 2,500 years ago is re-enacted. This scene is a gorgeous spectacle of beauty and color and the dances are most exquisite. Pavlowa and Novikoff are the two stars of the ballet and the rest of her group accompany them most effectively.

Soviet Russia Observes Women's Day

By ALEXANDER TRACHTENBERG

INTERNATIONAL WOMEN'S DAY, March 8th—a heritage of the pre-war International Socialist movement—has been utilized every year in revolutionary Russia for intensive propaganda and organization work among working and peasant women. Extensive preparations are made each year by the Communist Party and the trade unions to reach proletarian women in work shops, offices, on the land and in the homes, with a call for solidarity with the men workers in the struggle for a better world.

As soon as the Communist International issued its manifesto on the the significance of International Women's Day and called upon all its 52 sections to act aside March 8, for concentrated and systematic work for organizing and propagandizing among women workers, the Russian Communist Party and the trade unions began immediately to make preparations to fittingly observe the day in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

Propaganda of the Party.

On February 6th the secretary of the Communist Party, Molotov, and the head of the Women's Department, Smidoritch, issued official instructions to all party units to organize the campaign for International Women's Day under the slogan "Remember and observe the heritage of Illyitch (Lenin) about the working and peasant women" and his admonition that "The work of the Soviet government will be crowned with success only then when millions and millions of working and peasant women will join the ranks of its supporters."

The party organizations were adjured to bring out in clear and simple manner, before the women assembled at mass meetings, the accomplishments in the field of women's emancipation and in drawing them into the party, delegate meetings, soviets, trade unions, co-operatives, mutual aid societies, committees to aid poor peasants and their active participation in these movements. The party leaders were instructed to make it known to the women that during the campaign of admission of new members into the party "all honest proletarians and true revolutionary women working in shops and factories will be welcomed into the party of Lenin."

The party organizations were also called upon to secure before March 8th, action in the soviets, trade unions, and co-operatives, establishing additional and improving existing children's homes, nurseries, kindergartens, common dining rooms, laundries, etc. The slogan, "Remember Comrade Lenin and teach your children to follow in his footsteps," was to be popularized among the workers in the villages. The party units were also urged by instructions from the Central Committee to arrange on March 8th, special sessions of village soviets with delegates from peasant women's organizations invited to attend as well as exchange delegations between working women's and peasant women's organizations on that day. The significance of International Women's Day was to be discussed at all gatherings, in the light of the present international status of the Soviet Republics, the conditions of the working class in capitalist countries with particular reference to the need of aiding the German workers in their revolutionary struggles.

Program of the Trade Unions.

The All Russian Central Soviet of Trade Unions issued on February 15 under the names of Secretary Dogadov, head of the Cultural Department; Seniushkin, and head of the Organizations Department Iaglom instructions to all subdivisions of the trade union movement to observe International Women's Day under the general slogans prepared by the Communist Party. In addition the following program of action to be carried out before March 8th was outlined for the unions:

1. An inquiry into the results of attracting young women workers and teachers into the various branches of the trade technical education and prepare plans for future activity in this regard.

2. A survey of conditions prevailing in the community houses for women workers, securing their necessary improvements thru the proper administrative organs.

3. A survey of the condition of unemployment of women in private establishments, securing there the strict observance of all labor laws and the proper payment of wages.

4. Appropriation of sums from union funds for the establishment of children's homes and the organization of restaurants and laundries thru the co-operatives.

5. Give additional aid to unemployed women workers and especially pregnant women with small children, from the mutual aid funds of the unions.

The unions were instructed to hold mass meetings devoted to International Women's Day. "Working women's corners" decorated with special posters and appropriate slogans were to be set aside in all labor clubs where women members could distribute information and literature regarding the various problems affecting woman labor. Factory and club libraries were to make a section of books, pamphlets and magazine articles dealing with woman questions for reference and all trade union publications were ordered to issue, on March 8, special editions devoted to International Women's Day.

The Government Program.

"In order to give all women workers an opportunity to celebrate the day of international solidarity of proletarian women, the People's Commissariat of Labor of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics," so runs the preamble of the government instructions sent out by V. Schmidt, Labor Comissar of U. S. S. R., on February 13th.

According to this order all women workers must be released on March 8th two hours earlier than usual, provided that such release would not force the stoppage of work altogether. In establishments, where women are in the majority and where their release would cause the complete cessation of work, the establishments were to be closed two hours earlier than usual. In establishments where the release of women workers may cause injury or inconvenience to the public, such as telegraph and telephone stations, hospitals, public restaurants and food supply stations, etc., the working women were in lieu of their release, to receive for the two hours of work one and a half times their regular pay.

This is how the government, the Communist Party and Trade Unions co-operate in celebrating a labor holiday—International Women's Day. The day is utilized not only for propaganda purposes but also to improve the conditions of women workers. Only in a country where the aims of the labor movement are the aims of the state can a labor holiday be celebrated in a manner as it is now celebrated in Soviet Russia—Workers' Russia.

Historical Parallels.

The international labor holiday of May first had its origin in America. The International Socialist Congress in Paris in 1889 commemorated the struggle for the eight-hour day in America in the eighties by setting aside May 1st as a day which the labor movement, triumphant over the world, should celebrate as a labor holiday. Soviet Russia has declared May 1st a legal holiday and the celebration of every May 1st is equal in grandeur to the celebration of the Soviet Republic on November 7th. Another Soviet legal holiday taken from the calendar of the International Socialist movement is the Paris Commune Day, March 18th.

International Women's Day also had its origin in America. Thru the socialist party, some fifteen years ago, it was accepted by the International Socialist movement. The Communist Party of Russia and the Communist International have perpetuated Women's Day.

I spent last International Women's Day in Moscow. Maria Illiuishka, Lenin's sister who devoted much of her time to the "Pravda" and was in charge of the special edition of the paper on that occasion, asked me to write an article on the nature and extent of working women's movement in America. I spoke that day at a large meeting of women workers. They were glad to have a speaker from the country where Women's Day originated.

America gave birth to May 1st and International Women's Day. What is the next day, the day not only of hope but of achievement which our movement will give to the International Labor movement?

The Farmers for Lenin.

A resolution in honor of Lenin expressing sorrow for his death was adopted by the Skagit County unit of the Western Progressive Farmers of the State of Washington at its session on January 26. The resolution reads as follows:

Whereas, Nicolai Lenin, the greatest of all leaders of the producing class, has passed away, and

Whereas, the best way to honor those who have given their lives for the emancipation of labor is to continue the struggle for freedom with increased vigor, therefore, be it

Resolved, that we hereby express our sorrow at the untimely death of labor's greatest champion, and we pledge ourselves anew to the great task before the producers of America: the abolition of all forms of exploitation, and the establishment of a workers' and farmers' republic.

My City, my beloved, my white! Ah, slender,
Listen! Listen to me, and I will breathe into thee a soul.
Delicately upon the reed, attend me!

Now do I know that I am mad,
For here are a million people surly with traffic;
This is no maid.
Neither could I play upon any reed if I had one.

My City, my beloved,
Thou are a maid with no breasts,
Thou art slender as a silver reed.
Listen to me, attend me!
And I will breathe into thee a soul,
And thou shalt live forever.

"Syracuse. A shortage of toolmakers, machinists and other skilled trades in these lines, while a surplus of laborers, casual workers and unskilled machine hands exists.

"Albany. The large influx of transient labor has created a surplus, chiefly unskilled workmen.

"Yonkers. Labor, both skilled and semi-skilled is fully employed while a slight surplus of common labor is indicated.

"Elmira. A surplus of unskilled labor continues to exist. Altho skilled trades are steadily employed.

"New Jersey. Release of large numbers of semi-skilled and unskilled labor. Building mechanics are very well employed.

"Newark Industrial District, Skilled mechanics are well employed, but there is an increased surplus of ordinary labor and a noticeable amount of unemployment exists.

"Patterson. A shortage of skilled mechanics is becoming apparent. The supply of general labor is plentiful.

"Pennsylvania, Johnstown. A labor surplus exists, principally of unskilled workers.

"Harrisburg Industrial District. With the exception of unskilled workmen labor is fully employed.

"Bethlehem. Skilled trades are fully employed.

"York. Skilled labor generally is well employed altho there is still a small amount of unemployment existing, principally unskilled workers.

"Illinois, Decatur. Surplus of unskilled labor is noted in the building trades.

"Danville. There is a large surplus of common labor evident in this city.

"Indiana. While the employment situation in this state is not bad, the calls for labor (except skilled) are light.

"Indianapolis. Surplus of common labor.

"Fort Wayne. Surplus of workers exists, particularly common labor.

"Michigan, Grand Rapids. Surplus of common laborers.

"Flint. The local workers in this city are all employed, but there is a large number of transients looking for employment. Shortage of skilled automobile mechanics reported.

"Battle Creek. Surplus of unskilled labor and shortage of skilled machinists reported.

"Wisconsin, Milwaukee Industrial District. A slight shortage of machine molders for malleable foundries, pattern makers and skilled machinists is reported. There is a surplus of applicant in other industries and especially of common laborers.

"Ohio, Canton Industrial District. Skilled workers are all employed. Workers out of employment are of the unskilled class.

"Kanas, Leavenworth. Surplus of common labor. Skilled labor is fairly well employed.

"Kentucky. Shortage of skilled mechanics and a surplus of unskilled workers is reported.

"Mississippi, Meridean. Skilled labor fully employed with a slight surplus of common labor existing.

"Louisiana. Skilled labor is well employed, but there is some excess of common labor.

"California, Los Angeles. Common labor is particularly affected in the existing large surplus of labor."

These facts show that unemployment is a mass phenomenon; but today it is still a "privilege" of the unskilled workers, and the labor aristocracy is still unaffected by the economic depression. The skilled workers are fully employed everywhere and we could not cite from the Bulletin more than two or three places were a surplus of skilled labor exists. In spite of all new leveling tendencies in the American working class there still exists a deep abyss between the privileged labor aristocracy and the real proletarian workers. The American Federation of Labor is under the leadership and in the hands of the labor aristocracy, and it, therefore, neglects the organizing of unskilled workers and does not care about unemployment of "common" labor.

"The idea becomes power when it penetrates the masses."
—Karl Marx.

Unemployment and Labor Aristocracy

By JOHN PEPPER.

THE well-paid optimists of the capitalists are trying constantly to make the country believe that we are having a great economic prosperity at the present time. The facts gainsay these official and semi-official fairy tales.

The general economic situation as a whole is continuing to deteriorate. Partial improvements cannot change the situation permanently. In production, pig iron and steel is the only branch of production which increased on a national scale in January and February. The number of employed workers increased in February in New York state and in Illinois. The report of the New York State Department of Labor says:

"Factory employment made a good recovery in February from the dullness of January. The advance amounts to about 1 per cent and brings the level back to that of December. There has been no evidence thus far, however, of a repetition of the upward swing of a year ago." In Illinois the number of employed workers increased 2.2 per cent during February. Nevertheless there were in February 155 registered with the Illinois Free Employment Offices for every 100 jobs reported to the offices. In January the proportion of workers to jobs was 166 to 100, a year ago it was 104 to 100, and during the worst period, during 1920 it was 209 to 100. In Ohio unemployment increased in February. Applicants for work at the thirteen employment bureaus maintained by the state numbered 9,919 for the week ending February 23, and only 2,883 got jobs. In Iowa the Public Welfare Bureau was forced to issue a warning at the beginning of March against the ever-growing unemployment in January and February.

The surprising and sudden increase of pig iron and steel production is most likely only of a short duration. The causes of the increase are probably the concentrated railroad orders, and work for Japanese reconstruction. The New York Times of March 2 reports on March 1 from Pittsburgh concerning the pig iron market that: "There is, however, practically no disposition to buy at this time." And about the steel market: "General buying of finished steel products by jobbers and ordinary manufacturing consumers has been running distinctly lighter in the last fortnight than in January. A fair volume of business is being placed, but the market is distinctly less active. By precedent, if there is any change in the volume of activity at this time of year it should be in the other direction. The steel mills are much less sold up than they usually are when as active as at present."

On the front page and in editorials the capitalist papers continue to spread professional optimism about the economic situation, but in their financial columns they are forced to tell at least a part of the truth. The New York Times of February 25 writes: "Leading mining interests in Illinois and Indiana are preparing to operate more economically and work the most valuable mines, closing the others, thus keeping the supply of coal more adjusted to requirements." Says the report of the New York Times of March 3: "Business conditions thruout the West are spotted. In Minnesota and the Dakotas it is poor because of the small returns to the farmers." Dunn's Review says about the first week of March: "With conservatism still the predominant sentiment, a rapid growth of business is not to be expected." Bradstreet's establishes: "Trade and industry present a spotted appearance, and caution for buying for anything beyond immediate need is still the central feature . . . Nowhere except possibly in the automobile trade does there appear the great onward sweep visible at this time a year ago." The World of March 9 admits in its Business Outlook the same tendency: "Nevertheless, intead of growing more liberal, buying policies have become more restricted in many lines. Inflated costs supply one explanation for the restraint, but loss of confidence must take the foremost position, as a reason for the present hesitation which governs all forward operations. This lack of confidence is not only the average business man's feelings in regard to his markets, but it also grows out of his reaction to the present political discussion." The Chicago Tribune of March 12 gives the attitude of business men highly alarmed over the economic situation: "The more pessimistic look for a Summertime slump. . . . Expansions of mills, factories and shops already are being held back. . . . Already there are indications that expansion is being curtailed in some lines."

The situation summed up shows that the increase of pig iron and steel production and the increase of employment in the state of New York and Illinois during February does not mean at all that the economic depression which began in the middle of 1923 is passing over. On the contrary the general outlook is of aggravation.

The Volume of Unemployment.

It it an unquestionable fact that there exists a heavy unemployment today. If no other proof existed the "Industrial Information Employment Bulletin" of January, 1924, of the United States Department of Labor is an absolute and complete proof. This Bulletin gives a description of the employment situation not only for every state of the country, but for the most important industrial centers within the states. This very important report is so detailed that we cannot repeat it here. But it gives the best basis for judging the situation to everyone who takes the trouble to study the report carefully. With very few exceptions the picture presented by this report of the whole country is of an increasing and spreading unemployment.

But if we wanted to size up the true volume of the present unemployment we would have to compare it with the unemployment of other periods. If we should want to form judgment as to whether the present unemployment is of a mass character or not, we could do so by comparing it with the last great mass unemployment in the last great economic crisis of 1922-23. Never in its history did the United States experience a greater and deeper unemployment than in the crisis of 1921-22. The best study, the work of Wilford Isbell King, "Employment Hours and Earnings in Prosperity and Depression, United States, 1920-22," says: "5,033,000 fewer workers were on the pay rolls in the early part of 1922 than were employed in the third quarter of 1920. However, part of this decline was seasonal. If we compare the third quarters, we discover that there were 4,102,000 fewer people at work in 1921 than in 1920, or about one-seventh of all who had been employed at the earlier date." The maximum decline of employment during the great crisis when 4,100,000 workers were out of jobs was 14 per cent. Today on the present depression we have no figures which we could compare with this general figure. But we have two partial figures: the volume of factory employment and the volume of railroad employment. The March report of the Federal Reserve Board gives the following new index numbers for facotry employment:

Year	Factory Employment
1919	100
1920	104
1922	90
1923 (June)	103
1924 (January)	98

The year 1920 has the index number of factory employment, 104. The year 1922 shows 90. That means a decline of 14 per cent. The figures of King's book show that the maximum number of factory workers in 1920 was 11,370,000 and in 1922, 8,621,000. That's a decline of 2,749,000. That shows that a decline of 14 per cent was a decline of 2,749,000 employed workers.

The volume of factory employment declined from June, 1923, to January, 1924, from 103 to 98, a decline of 5 per cent. As the number of employed factory workers in the middle of 1923 was almost the same as in 1920, therefore, a decline of 5 per cent means a decline of about 975,000 workers.

The heaviest unemployment ever experienced in the economic history of the United States showed during the crisis of 1921-22 the maximum decline of 2,749,000 factory workers. The present depression shows a decline of almost one million factory workers. This figure alone justifies the assertion that unemployment is a mass phenomenon today.

The other figures that we can compare are the figures on the railroad employment situation. The number of employed railroad workers in the peak month, August, 1923, was 1,973,505. From then till the end of the year 1923, 179,726 railroad workers were laid off, which means 9.1 per cent. We can judge how heavy an unemployment this 9.1 per cent decline means if we bear in mind that during the greatest crisis of our economic history, the maximum decline of employment of the railroad workers was not more than 22.2 per cent.

But the decrease of the number of employed railroad workers does not give the complete picture of the catastrophic economic situation of the railroad workers. An ever growing number of railway workers are employed only part time. In August the number of full time employed railroad workers was 1,713,000. In December only 1,524,000. That means that the number of full time jobs declined by 11 per cent and the number of those working part time increased no less than 189,000.

We have still a third figure which is not as fully significant as the others because it is not a national figure; but it illustrates the mass character of present unemployment. In Massachusetts, according to the January report of the State Department of Labor, the reductions of employment between October and January show that almost one-tenth of the workers in the State of Massachusetts were laid off during that period.

Unemployment and Labor Aristocracy.

The facts analyzed above show clearly that the working class of the United States is facing a heavy unemployment. Almost one million fewer factory workers are employed today than in the middle of 1923. And in adition to that about 180,000 less railroad workers are employed today than half a year ago. And again, in addition to that, we must add the increasing number of unemployed coal miners. But all these figures, as I showed in my previous article, still do not give the complete number of unemployed worker. They give only the figures showing by how much the number of employed workers decreased. But these workers whom the capitalists drive out of the factories, railroads and mines are only a part of the growing industrial reserve army which is being constantly increased thru hundreds of thousands of dispossessed farmers, and new immigrants.

The unemployment is very heavy and has a mass character; but it is not as heavy as during the great economic crisis of 1931-22. The greatest difference between the two periods is the condition of the metal industry. In the previous period the metal industry was most heavily affected. Today the metal industry does not yet show the full effects of depression.

The present unemployment has a mass character, and the working class suffers greatly from it. Part-time work and wage cuts are a general phenomenon today. It is in sharp contradiction to these facts that the official labor movement and the press of the American Federation of Labor simply take no cognizance of this unemployment. How is that possible, and what is the solution of this contradiction?

We can give a clear answer to this question if we study carefully the "Industrial Employment Information Bulletin" of January, 1924, of the United States Department of Labor.

The facts show that unemployment does not affect equally all strata of the laboring masses. The masses of unemployed consist of unskilled workers. And at the same time the labor aristocracy is fully employed, and in many cases there is even a scarcity of skilled labor.

We could cite scores of examples proving that fundamental fact, but we will present here only a few citations from the above-mentioned Bulletin:

"New York. There is a surplus of labor in many sections, principally in the larger cities, consisting of

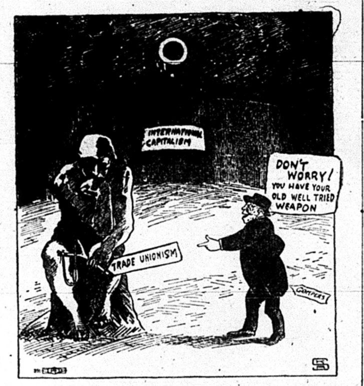
The Unequal Struggle



Zinoviev's Speech to Leningrad Communists

(NOTE—The DAILY WORKER today publishes the sixth installment of the great speech delivered by Gregory Zinoviev to the party conference of the Leningrad District. Those of our readers who have read lurid reports of war between Communist leaders should follow this discussion closely. It is true that Trotsky had a difference of opinion over questions of party organization with Zinoviev and others. But the enemies of the Soviet Republic may rest assured that a discussion on tactics will not give them the opening to rush in their war dogs and lap up the blood of the emancipated Russian workers. A further installment will be published Monday).

ZINOVIEV CONTINUES:

THERE are two further questions to which I must still refer: that of the economists, and that of the difference of age among the members of the Party.

With reference to the economists, I must state that we of the Lenin trend of thought make every endeavor to agree with the economists of our Party. The matter is frequently represented in such a manner that one might think we regarded the economists as Party members of a second class.

What is our actual attitude towards the economists? I know, as all of us know, that we in the Party do not choose the work accorded to us, but are given it by the Party. It is, therefore, ridiculous to find fault with the economists.

The Party has placed them in the position they occupy; they did not go there of themselves. Would any self-respecting Communist take up economic work if he were not convinced that he had the Party behind him, that the Party does not consider him a be a Communist of inferior quality?

There are a large number of old revolutionists, excellent functionaries, who have on many occasions proved their devotion to the Party, now engaged in economic work. We have not yet gathered together the whole stratum of the economists, but we are doing so, we are feeling our way and doing our best. This is a most important and responsible matter. This alliance of economists can only fulfill its tasks properly if it feels that it is backed up by the support of the whole Party.

It is unallowable to regard the economists are second-class Party members. They form a group of decisive importance, everything depends on their success, and their attitude is the criterion upon which our non-partisan comrades form their judgments.

But it is possible, comrades, to go to the other extreme. Among one small section of the economists we sometimes come across the following feeling: Why does the Party control me to such an extent? There is the government Party headquarters, and their organizations, and the district headquarters and its organization department, and the collective—it is more than the strongest man can bear.

We need not seek to cover up the sin: We worry the economists frequently with regard to trifles. This cannot be allowed.

What we have to say to the economists, and what every honest economist knows by himself, is that the conditions induced by the NEP expose the economists to the danger of division. Comrade Preobrashensky is right here.

In the course of the speech which he recently made in Moscow, he pointed out that the economists are forced, under the conditions brought about by the NEP, to leave the trenches and fraternize with the enemy. This is very true. Anyone who is obliged to co-operate with the bourgeoisie is actually forced to hold intercourse with the bourgeoisie, even if it is not an actual fraternization. This involves danger.

Every profession has its attendant danger. The Party has to admit this openly and definitely, and no self-respecting economist will deny it—it is an incontestable fact. And there is only one remedy against it; Party control, comrade-like alliance, and discipline. And there is no need to fear this.

Comrades, quite at the beginning I told you that we must differentiate between the New Economic Policy and the "NEP."

When Comrade Lenin said: "Learn to trade," some comrades interested in the practical execution of the idea took it to mean that the NEP implies dirty work, that it smells somewhat of the devil. It is an unavoidable zone thru which we have to pass.

Under the "Nep"—so they think—it is impossible to be an out and out Communist, the tasks of the revolution have to be more superficially viewed, and so forth. But when this has been overcome, and we arrive at a fresh one, then we can put on clean clothes again, so to speak, and become real Communists. This interpretation is not correct, and does not accord with the the idea expressed by Comrade Lenin.

The meaning which Comrade Lenin intended to put into his slogan was:

Do not let yourselves be deceived, you must co-operate with the bourgeoisie in such manner that the advantage is to the workers' state. The NEP—the NEP is a whole chapter in the history of the workers' revolution, it is not merely a zone thru which we can hasten with closed eyes, with the intention of becoming Communists after we have got thru. No; make it your endeavor to be Communists during the Nep itself.

We must make it clear to ourselves that in the Party there can be no division into economists, trade unionists, purely Party workers, etc. Such a division would destroy us if not unified.

We must be a Party in which the various departments perform their duties on the basis of a definite division of work. No shadow of difference in our relations to the economists as if they were second-grade Party members, is to be allowed. At the same time, we must not ignore the special dangers to which those engaged in work connected with the NEP are exposed.

We Come to the End of "A WEEK"

YESTERDAY morning they had occupied the town. Only yesterday shots had been thundering in the streets, but now all those little houses seen from the hill looked so quiet and peaceable. But Gornuikh knew that yesterday's flame had been thrown up by them. He knew, and feared a new eruption, and was taking precautions against it. This fear had made him instantly suppress the sobbing that had shaken him over Klimin's corpse, the sobbing caused by almost a week's lack of sleep and the most terrible nervous strain, take on the management of the enquiry, and, tho he was not actually the senior of the surviving Chekists, the direction of all the work of the Cheka had somehow fallen of its own accord into his hands.

Few of the bandits left the town. The red-headed fellow, wounded during the seizure of the Communist Company's Headquarters, had been made prisoner, and Gornuikh confronted him with the other bandits, with the peasants from the neighboring villages who had been caught in the town and were now mild, timorous and dejected as if after a drunken headache, and had no difficulty in discovering in him one of the leaders of the revolt. And Gornuikh, who had already appointed the day and hour when he was to be shot, now promised him pardon, now threatened, now wheedled, and was tireless in the use of a thousand cunning tricks of cross-examination. And sometimes it seemed to the red-headed one that he had fallen into the hands of an attentively quiet devil, or rather into the teeth of a merciless machine, one of those ingenious, precise, American machines which in ten minutes turn a living, squealing pig into a silent mound of sausages.

If Gornuikh was not himself cross-questioning, he was walking thru the rooms of the investigators, not interfering, but following the questions, reading the protocols of the evidence, and now and again going off by himself to his office, where he shut himself up, sat there alone for a long time, propping his shaggy head on his hands, and apparently without a single thought, staring at the sheet of paper lying before him on the table, and now and again carefully, sparingly, writing down a word, another, as the course of the revolt became ever clearer and clear to him. Now, in half a dozen sentences he told Karaulov the whole result of the many hours of the minute labor of the enquiry. Suddenly Karaulov interrupted him:

"You see that girl standing there? She's a schoolmistress . . . went thru a lot during the revolt and can tell you something of the murder of Robeiko. I told her to come to the meeting to meet you. There, standing by the entry. . . . Comrade Gratcheva, come here."

And Gornuikh saw the pale face of a girl, long straight locks of pale flaxen hair falling on forehead and cheeks, frightened blue eyes, and heard a trembling voice:

"I want to give evidence . . . about the murder of Comrade Robeiko. . . . I was present at it. I lived in the same flat as he, and . . ." She began to tell of the appearance of Repin, so handsome, kindly and cunning, of Mr. and Mrs. Senätor, and of her relations with them, of her wandering thru the town during the night of the revolt. Now and again she went off into unnecessary details, and then Gornuikh gently and confidently asked questions, and steered her story in the direction he needed. At first her shyness interfered with her talking, and she spoke disconnectedly, but afterwards she was more and more carried away, her voice grew more and more confident, and she even began timorously to gesticulate. When she told of the murder of Robeiko her eyes overflowed with tears. . . .

"Listen, Gornuikh," said Karaulov, when Gornuikh left Lisa, "I've been watching you just now and been amazed to see what a capable fellow you are. For example, how well and quietly you questioned that young lady. And then. . . . Do you know if it had not been for your fifty railwaymen they'd have taken the station and then . . . things would have been bad. Then I could have done nothing to help with my battalion. The liquidation of the revolt would have dragged out for a month. That's a fact. And how many more comrades would have died. . . ."

Then Karaulov said with shaking voice:

"You, now, are working like a horse, hurrying everywhere, you are in the Cheka, you are looking after the wood-getting, and have written an article for the paper besides. . . . But I . . . I can't do anything. As soon as I learned from that young lady that they had killed Robeiko, I saw red, turned into a wild beast and went for the bandits with my own sword. And then I learned that Ziman too, and Stalmakhov, and Klimin. . . . And Klimin and I went thru the whole civil war together. . . . And now there's nothing for me to do. The town has become absolutely empty to me. Swear at the old man if you like, but remember, I am thirty years older than you. . . . And yesterday I got drunk from wretchedness. The thing is, I can't weep when sober. But get drunk a bit and it's as if some one opened your soul and you howl. Then you are ashamed, and after that you feel better. Wait and you'll find it out for yourself, and will remember old Karaulov. . . . Well, well. . . ."

Already the bell had tinkled, the room had grown silent, and from the middle of the arena, stuttering and blushing, the secretary of the Town District Committee was proposing the election of a President. . . . A heavy puzzled murmur rolled along the benches. Whom were they to elect, when the very best, the most staunch and capable were lying in coffins covered with red flags. Some one shouted the name of Klimin, some one doubtfully named Simkova. . . . But these names the secretary did not write down.

"Comrade Karaulov," came the thin, sugary voice of Matusenko. But Karaulov refused. . . . He did not know how to preside. Of that the comrades were well aware. Besides, today he was not well. . . .

And suddenly, from above, from the gallery, a strong voice threw the name:

"Gornuikh! . . . Comrade Gornuikh!"

And at once he was seconded from various sides:

"Right . . . Gornuikh . . . Comrade Gornuikh. . ."

"Who is this Gornuikh!" several asked loudly

And again from the gallery the same powerful voice proclaimed to the whole Circus:

"Gornuikh . . . the Chekist. . . . Who came to us in the Depot, got us all on our feet and took command. . . . A fighting fellow."

It was the first time in his life that Gornuikh had had to preside over so large a meeting. . . . Gornuikh lost his head a little, did not know what to do, while the meeting, like a tamed beast of prey, lay submissively at his feet, grew quiet, and fixed its many-eyed gaze on him, its master. And instead of the common sentence, "I declare the meeting open" and the reading of the agenda for the day, from his tongue came other words, heavy and sharp, which entered into the consciousness of his audience, like nails into wood under the heavy blows of a hammer, words smelted and wrought by Gornuikh's strong judgment and determination during that critical week.

He told how grave had been the danger of the revolt already past, and how the Communists were walking on thin ice, under which was surging the savage elemental force of the peasants, ready to drown and destroy the work of the Communists, how this elemental force must be tamed not only with bayonets and bullets but by the organization of socialistic exchange of goods between town and village.

"Comrades, it will be more difficult for us now. . . . In the Executive Committee nine are left, in the Party Committee four workers. In the Politdep both the Chiefs are gone, and in the Cheka, the President, Vice-President and three workers. The center cannot send us reinforcements. There is little to be hoped from it. And the work has now become more complex. It's not enough to get seed-corn. We must get ready for the sowing campaign and carry it thru over the whole of our trackless country. And the bandits are still not finally liquidated. It amounts to this, that we must carry heavier loads. Take me for example. I am now acting as President. That is because we have no Klimin, no Robeiko, no Simkova, who would carry these duties out better. . . . So it will be everywhere, we must take on our shoulders the work of those who have been killed. It will be hard, but, if we remember their example, we shall manage it. . . ."

And then the "Internationale" was sung, and the meeting turned to questions of business, he guided it quietly, confidently and clear-sightedly, like the steersman of a heavily loaded barge in a winding, shallow stream. . . .

THE END.

Youth Views

By HARRY GANNES

Military Training Camps Start Campaign.

No effort is being wasted by the United States War Department in seeking enlistments for the Citizen's Military Training Camps. Even tho the date for the actual opening of the camps is several months off, posters and advertisements are being plastered up all over the country at a very great expense.

During the last two years, the quotas had not been filled due mainly to the fact that rotten food had been served in the camps. The news spread far and wide and even the capitalist papers could not overlook the disclosure that boys joining the training camps might be poisoned because of rotten food.

In the advertisements by the government this year they assure the youth of the United States that good, wholesome food will be offered. Whether that is so or not is not so very important (tho the government has failed to take care of the sick and wounded soldiers in proper manner). There is no doubt that brutal treatment awaits the young fellows in some form or other, whether it is intensive training or abuse from the arrogant officers.

The purpose of the Citizen's Military Training Camps is to build up an available fighting force in the event of a capitalist war. Tho the armed force has grown to tremendous proportions in recent years, the War Department has a plan for the building up of a mass armed force which it can put into action at a moments notice. The Citizen's Military Training Camps are a necessary cog in this new military machine.

The militarists in the United States have one hope for the success of the Citizen's Military Training Camp this summer, and that is wide-spread unemployment. It is a known fact that hungry men are not very particular whether they eat the rotten food of the Citizen's Military Training Camp or the refuse of garbage cans.

Samuel Gompers has expressed himself as in favor of this form of military training. While overlooking the fact that the vast mass of working youth are unorganized, Gompers finds time to express himself agreeable to organizing this youth against labor in the military forces of the United States.

The Citizen's Military Training Camp holds nothing that is in the interest of labor; it is strictly against the good of the organized and unorganized workers to see its success. More than once have the armed forces of this government been used against striking workers. The Citizen's Military Training Camp is no exception.

The Commune

By SIMON FELSHIN

Blood of the Communards crying to me!
Thirty thousand massacred
In the streets of Paris,
And the blood flowed in the gutters,
And the blood flowed in the Seine.
Nor was there pity
For the children, the women, and the old men
Because these also fought on the barricades
To defend the Red Commune.
Oh there are wounds that would not heal!

You the bourgeoisie—
Your motto "Liberty, Eqality, Fraternity"
Was seen to be a pretension and a mockery.
You the enraged ruling class—
You hunted the Communards
And you shot them where you found them.
I have seen the Wall of the Federates
Where you slaughtered the prisoners with mitrailleuse,
And you buried them where they fell.
Betrayal and fratricide—
This was your vengeance
Upon the defenders of the Red Commune.
Blood of the Communards crying to me!
Oh there are wounds that would not heal!

Awakening of the masses,
Stirring of the downtrodden,
Battlecry from the lower depths,
A sounding of the tocsin,
A building of barricades,
A lifting of the red standard,
Vanguard of the proletariat in revolt—
This was the Red Commune.

Federates,
Men of the Sections,
People of the faubourgs,
Embattled proletariat of Paris,
Your stand on the barricades
Was a challenge
Forever to be remembered,
The lifting of the red standard—
A heritage,
A shining memory!

We trample filial reverence under foot.
Hat on head,
We sit down impudently,
Legs crossed and heels kicked up.

You do not like our bloody laughter,
Our refusal to wash again the rags already washed a million times,
Our sudden daring
To bark a deafening bow-wow!

Ya-a, backbone
Upright like a telegraph pole,
Not mine alone,
All Russians, hunchbacked for centuries.

Who on earth is now more clamorous than we?
Bedlam, you say,
No mile-stones nor signposts—
To hell! Our red cancan is a splendid sight.

You would not believe it: multitudes,
Droves of clouds under human orders,
And the sky spread out like a woman's wrap,
And not a single sunray.

Christ is on the Cross again, and Barabbas
Promenading over Tversky
Who can stop—who—galloping Scythian steeds?
Bowstrings singing the Marseillaise?

Did any hear of blacksmith
Forging railtrack bracelets for the globe,
Puffing his cheap plug with the air
Of an officer clicking spurs?

You ask: What next?
Next—dancing centuries,
We break into every door,
And no one dares threaten: Here take that!

We! We! We're everywhere,
At the very footlights of the stage;
Not quiet lyricists,
But flaming clowns.

Rubbish, all rubbish into a heap;
And, singing like Savonarola, chuck it
Into the fire. . . No matter! Who is there to fear
When tiny worlds of petty souls are vast spheres now?
Every day—a new chapter in the Bible,
Every page—an inspiration to a thousand generations.
It will be said about us:
Happy they who lived in 1917.

And still you whine: We are lost!
And still you whimper!
Blockheads.
Is not Yesterday squashed like a pigeon
Under an automobile
Rushing madly from a garage?

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

There is less talk nowadays in the capitalist press about alleged graft in Soviet Russia than was common before the Teapot Dome spilled its oily freight over the pages of current history. On the contrary the little that seeps thru the capitalist censors about the Workers' Republic indicates that officials who take liberties with the institutions and property of the Russian workers receive scant consideration even tho in the past they have made sacrifices for the cause.

Ex-Senator France of Maryland on his way back from Moscow declared that Russia has the most efficient and businesslike government in the world. I listened to a debate several years ago between John Spargo and Tom Mann, in which the former held that the workers could not manage industry. Our Russian comrades are giving the lie to the renegade Spargo, despite the obstacles placed in their way by international capitalism and the reactionary labor leaders.

He depends on Sam Gompers for enlightenment on that phase of his duty.

The fighting strength of the British navy is now massed in the Mediterranean sea for maneuvers. This means of course that England having disposed of the German fleet and the threat from the Baltic is now guarding the route to the East. The enemy is now France and Italy. The Italian and French press which makes no pretense of not being inspired by their governments, comments unfavorably on the presence of the British armada so close to their shores. But the markets of the capitalists and their colonies must be protected. Ramsay MacDonald does not want to lose India.

By JOHN EDWARDS.

FORWARD to a revolutionary mass organization, has been the watchword of our party, the Workers Party of America.

Within the past year, we have made mighty strides towards our goal. Our work within the existing craft unions for amalgamation into industrial unions, our campaign for a labor party, the launching of a daily paper, has connected us definitely with the organized mass of workers in this country. This has been done principally by setting up systematically of factions within the union. Since then, every forward step we have made on the political and economic field—all our campaigns towards the ends enumerated, have been advanced and furthered among that section of the workers which we have reached, by our union factions (especially by the aid for the party committees, city, district and central executive).

The greater proportion of our membership, which has no union offiliations, has been able to do little in the way of mass activities, outside of distributing and selling literature.

Our successes in the past have been, for the most part, among the organized workers. Now it so happens that the great mass, the vast majority of the workers in America, are not organized, either industrially or politically. For example, the real proletariat, the factory hands and the unskilled workers, steel workers, metal miners—have practically no organization. They are at the complete mercy of the master class. Yet these machine slaves, according to Marx, are the most revolutionary strata of the modern capitalist society.

For a Mass Party.

In order to become a mass Communist party, in the true sense of the word, we must press the slogan: Organize the unorganized into action! The Workers Party must definitely connect itself with the most extremely exploited section of the working class. Our party must lead them in the every day struggle for better living conditions, and thereby gain their confidence. We have to prove by deed and action that our slogans and revolutionary words are not empty phrases. A positive influence must be left upon the working class, which must transform itself into an organizational form in order to establish the progress of our activity.

How are we to go about a systematic work among the unorganized masses? Factions is an impossibility where there is no working class organization. Is our present form of territorial party structure suitable for such a task? Let us examine our present form of party structure.

The branch, the lower unit of the party, made up, as it exists, of men and women who live in a given territory, without regard to their occupations, may have in it building trades men, machinists, clerical workers, clothing workers and "intellectuals," and other kinds of workers, too numerous to mention. It is not far fetched to say that a branch of 40 members will represent over a dozen occupations. It is next to impossible to discuss intelligently all the problems met with "on the job," in the shop, let alone to map out any kind of work for the comrades within the work place.

Another thing must be taken into consideration, and that is that the branches usually meet but twice a month. At these semi-monthly meetings of the branch, is taken up routine business, such as reports of branch official, reading of minutes and communications, orders from higher bodies, education in the form of lectures and discussion. There is no time for the discussion of work in the shop.

Mobilizing The Workers.

Now let us consider another thing, which is essential for a Communist party. That is, to be able to mobilize our membership in the shortest possible time for work. In the case of any crisis within a shop or industry, our party could not bring together its members (if it had any within the particular shop), within less than several weeks' time for the following reasons: The branches do not meet at the same time each month; and when they do meet, not half of the members attend, due, in part, to other activities within the party, and many times out of sheer neglect. While so far as the bosses are concerned, they can mobilize their forces, whether thru the state, or within the shop, almost momentarily, and thereby frustrate any attempt on the part of the workers themselves to organize for action during and after the crisis.

The Russian Communist Party, organized along the lines of shop nuclei, can place the entire working population of Moscow in the street, ready for any kind of action, in five hours time.

A good-sized volume could be written on the weaknesses and the antiquated state of our present branch structure. Our present form of organization is a heritage from the old, decrepit and outworn, socialist movement, following the lines of the social democratic party of Germany. The Communist movement with its different methods, tactics and aim, must have a different and distinct structure of organization.

Altho our present territorial branch does not fit precisely the needs of a Communist Party, we cannot simply say that it is of no value whatever, and drop that form of organization and immediately proceed on a new basis. To do so without preparation would be political suicide. Our entire organization would be destroyed. Comunists are not utopians. We realize if we wish a ney party structure there must be a transitional period, a bridging over from the present form to the new form.

Any great change in the structure of any organization, whether political, industrial, or social, can be brought about only by a gradual process.

Our present party structure is inadequate for the task of reaching the great mass of workers. We must have a new form to meet the new needs. What shall it be?

The answer is: The party structure must be built on the place of work of the membership, rather than where the comrades live. As one of our comrades puts it: "The party is at present organized where our members sleep rather than where they slave."

This is not a new idea. The Communist Party of Russia is organized on the basis of the work shop; not only since it has taken state power, but many years before. It was this form of organization which made it possible for the Bolsheviki to mobilize the entire working class against the ruling class of Russia. The form of party structure based on the work place is called the shop nuclei. It consists of members, who work in any given shop.

Method to Reach Workers.

The advantage of the nucleus over the territorial branch is this: Modern capitalism has brought together thousands of workers under the same roof. The class struggle finds its sharpest contact right in the shop where the worker is reduced to the position of a machine and where he feels mostly his exploitation and can be reached on the basis of the misery of his conditions, while to reach him after work, when he is trying to rest from his bitter exploitation, puts our members at a disadvantage. The minute the whistle blows the worker hurries home, either to do the little job around the house, or else to spend the time he has looking for pleasure in the picture show, the saloon, etc. In the factory a job agitator meets his fellow worker every day; the workers know one another; the workers feel they have something in common; they are more inclined to listen to a shop mate. Whereas, if he meets a Communist he does not know, he is suspicious of him and thinks him at best some poor misguided fool. The worker outside of the shop is hard to propagandize.

To make job agitation effective it must be organized and systematic; it must deal with the every day struggles of the workers in the shop, using the bad shop conditions to point out to them the nature of capitalist exploitation. The agitator must point out the necessity of the workers being organized industrially to carry on the every day struggle for the betterment of their conditions under capitalism; also, the necessity of political organization for the conquest of power, the prelude to taking over the industries to be owned and operated by the workers themselves.

Where two ar more of our comrades work in the same shop, they should consider the matter of actually forming a shop nucleus. They should get together and work out a systematic course of shop agitation based on the above outline. When they have succeeded in gaining new adherents to their ideas, they should call a meeting of the interested members within the shop, and form the shop necleus, which becomes a regular part of the party.

No Time Wasted.

Not only does this new nucleus take up the problems of the shop, but it also acts as the lower party unit receiving orders and instructions from higher bodies in carrying out the campaigns and work of the party. It affiliates itself to the nearest territorial branch, reports regularly to that branch, receives orders and instructions from the branch. This has another effect, it stimulates the interest of the territorial branch to which the shop necleus is affiliated in the problem of building more shop units. It makes the branch a live and driving force in the labor movement. Especially has the nucleus this advantage over the branch; It can meet at almost a moment's notice. Instead of putting nights into barren branch meetings, the members have more time for party work, as they confine most of their activities directly on the job where they come in contact not only with a few workers, but thousands whose conditions and psychology they understand.

In the territory of the shop where the first nucleus is formed, when one or more nuclei are created, the nuclei come together as a nuclei branch; that is, about three or more nuclei consolidate themselves into a larger form of organization, the nuclei branch which is a higher unit of the party than the nucleus itself. Comrades who are not in large industry, as, for instance, building trades workers, small office workers, who live in the territory of the nuclei branch, shall belong to the nucleus branch. The branch composed of nuclei does not usually comprise members working in the same industry.

The new form of nucleus organization means that we have our roots buried among the masses of the workers and have a continuous, strongly-linked chain to the highest unit of the party.

It does not require a very vivid imagination to see what this would mean to us as a Communist organization. We could rapidly mobilize our entire party for work and action and could better meet the immediate problems of the day. When our party, for the most part, becomes a nuclei organization, it becomes a mass organization, and cannot be exterminated by any amount of oppression and persecution by the combined forces of the capitalists, thru their state or otherwise.

No Harm to Federations.

To those comrades who have raised the bugaboo in their minds that to start the formation of nuclei will hamper the federations and weaken the branches, the writer would like to point out that just the opposite would be fact. In no case will we find in any branch more than one or two workers who work in the same shop. In most cases, not even that. Our problem is not so much the reorganization of the branch as the organization of new nuclei. We start at the factory, where there may be four or five Communists who belong to different branches of the party. For them to establish a nucleus, with more members now not in the party, strengthens our party structure; and the nucleus, at the same time, becomes affiliated to a territorial branch at first, which tremendously strengthens this branch. In no case will it hurt the branch to transfer several comrades to the factory unit, for that is already being done in some instances to form new territorial branches. If there are foreign speaking members within the nucleus, they can maintain their connections with the present federation branches. They will need language propaganda for the shop.

The comrades who express fears against the nuclei have conceived of the idea of setting up separate shop shop apparatus with no regard to changing the present structure of the party. In the first place, if this was to be done, we would have to set up separate apparatus all thru the party—district, city units, branches, which would be a dual organization and unworkable. This sort of an apparatus would, in the second place, have to confine itself only to the problems on the job or, if it attempted to take up the regular work of the party, the members would have to repeat such work again in their branches, which could not be effectively done. Again, workers joining the nucleus, if they happened to be Italians, Greeks, or of other nationalities, would have to be sent into the branches of that particular federation, or might have to be sent miles away from the factory to some territorial branch. The new members would think this a very strange procedure, and probably could not be induced to join our party under such circumstances.

The nucleus must be an integral part of the party, or else it is not a nucleus. Shop factions, industrial branches, etc., are impossible, and attempts to establish such forms of organization would be syndicalistic and hamper the political activities of our party.

We must never lose sight of the fact that our party is a political organization; and that all our campaigns and work should be directed toward the strengthening of our party organizationally.

The Ku Klux Klan and the Miners - By J. W. JOHNSTONE

IN the mining industry the Ku Klux Klan is becoming a menacing factor that will have to be reckoned with in the very near future. They are making a bold bid for control of the miners' union, notwithstanding that membership in the Klan is sufficient grounds for expulsion. It is generally taken for granted amongst the miners that the klan has already gained complete control of the Indiana district.

The recommendation of Van Bittner, speaking for the resolutions committee at the national convention, that the clause against the klan be stricken from the constitution, the open support given to the klan by Hessler, of Indiana, the fact that Lewis seemed willing to let it go over, forced many of the delegates to leave the convention firmly in the belief, that the Lewis machine, was either deadly afraid of the influence of the klan, or were actually members of it. This recommendation coming from the resolutions committee was made unquestionably with Lewis' approval. It was his own hand picked committee, and every delegate knew that none of the committees reported on any question to the convention, without first consulting with Lewis.

Klan Is Not Molested.

This is what helps to make the klan a dangerous factor in the mining industry, and explains why no real organized expose of the klan has been made by the miners' officials, altho the homes of their members have been invaded by the klan, and a veritable reign of terror is being carried on against the foreigner in many states, reaching a high water mark in the mining towns in southern Illinois. The Communists and even the mildest of progressives are hounded by the Lewis-Farrington machine, are boycotted in the mine, expelled from the union, because they want to make the United Mine Workers of America a real militant fighting force, but the klan is left free to carry out its work of terrorism and disruption.

The domination of the klan in Herrin, Johnson City, West Frankfort and other mining towns, is a standing challenge to organized labor of Illinois, which has not as yet been accepted. It is an open insult to the miners of Illinois whose members are mostly of foreign birth. As long as the klan is allowed unrestricted license to do as they please, it will be difficult to tell just who compose its members, but the morons and cowards who make up the klan, could very easily be exposed to the light of day, if an energetic public campaign was carried on against them, led by the miners' officials and the Illinois State Federation of Labor.

The resistance against the klan in these towns is led by miners, in spite of the passive attitude of their official. Senator Sneed, who is also an official of the miners' union in the Herrin sub-district, should be leading the fight in that town, but he is afraid of his political job. Frank Farrington and John H. Walker should be leading a state fight against this gang of hoodlums, but it is not considered good politics to take this fight up. The fact that the three of them are miners, and it is the members of their organization that are the victims, seems to have no weight with them.

Declares Klan Members Cowards

The utter cowardliness of the klan members is shown, not only by the fact that they do their dirty work generally in the dead of night, hooded and in gangs large enough to insure safety, but that they are afraid to admit openly their membership, altho the organization is legal. Only a few of them come out in the open, such as Glen Young, and he has to get a big, fat fee for doing so, the rest of the cowardly crew sneak into the darkness of secrecy.

The smoke screen behind which these mental dwarfs work is prohibition. In reality they are being used as a white guard organization, and if the present congress passes any of the numerous anti-foreign born bills that are now pending before that body, the klan will be the secret service organization which will spy upon the foreign born workers and take upon themselves the regulation of their political and economic advancement.

That this is no idle forecast was shown in the election of delegates to the miners' state convention in Illinois. The issues were clear, you were either for the Lewis-Farrington policies, or you were against them, and the progressive miners do not see any particular difference between Farrington, Lewis, and the klan. In one local union where two suspected klansmen were badly defeated, and where the majority of the delegates elected were foreign born workers, a notice was posted in the mine, stating "That interpreters were wanted to go to the state convention," etc. A notice like this, appearing for the first time would have meant but little, but in the tense atmosphere of these southern Illinois towns, where everybody goes armed after dark, it took on a more significant aspect.

Trade Unions Oppose Knights.

In these towns everything is union, it is hard to find a non-union man anywhere. The entire official trade union movement is opposed to the Ku Klux Klan. Where then does the klan get its strength. It is led by the small business element, financed by all business groups, its purpose is to destroy the trade union movement, or reduce it to klan control. They are ably assisted by the weak-kneed passive attitude of the officials of organized labor, and have the active support of these damn-fool American born workers whose understanding of life goes no further than the A. P. A.'s of the early '90's. They do not see that the attack against the foreign born workers, under the slogan of a 100 per cent Americanism, is an attack on all workers in general, irrespective of the place of their birth, and upon the labor movement in particular.

How could the Ku Klux Klan in cities like Herrin, Johnson City and West Frankfort, etc., create a reign of terrorism, raid the homes of miners, place themselves above the law, arrest hundreds of men and women, herd them into special cars at the point of a machine gun, if they did not have at least the passive consent of union officialdom.

The effect of this attack upon the foreign born, instead of making citizens of them, really keeps them from becoming citizens. In actual practice the foreigner finds that he can get better protection from the foreign consul than he gets from either his union or the local law enforcing bodies, and the foreign consuls are advising their countrymen not to take out their citizenship papers, because in doing so they can get no protection from him or from the government that he represents. Strange as this may seem, yet it is true, as witness the vigorous protest of the French consul against the raids of the klan on the French colony in Johnson City.

Terrifying Effect of Secrecy.

Where are all those fighting miners that made such a glorious record for organized labor in the State of Illinois? How can they stand idly by and not accept this challenge. In the city of West Frankfort, which is 100 per cent organized, the fiery cross of the klan burns day and night in the center of the town, yet not a half dozen men are known publicly to be members of the klan. The terrifying effect of the klan upon the population is its secrecy and its ruthlessness. The average man does not care to take the risk in leading the fight against these monsters for fear of their vengeance, which is swift, brutal and extends to all members of the family alike.

The cause of this abnormal situation is the inaction of the leaders of organized labor. If instead of fighting the radicals or assisting to keep in office such tin horn politicians as Governor Small, they would start an organized public campaign against the klan, they could clean it out of Illinois within 48 hours. I doubt if there are a hundred workers in the entire state who would have the courage in the face of such a campaign to come out openly in support of the klan, and the miners have the power in their hands to force the business men to change their opinion about the Americanism of the klan. The miners must demand that their officials wage a fight against the Ku Klux Klan until it is driven from the coal fields of this state.

Lenin's Successor--A. I. Rikov, Soviet Russia's New Premier

ALEXIS IVANOVITCH RIKOV was born March 19, 1881, in Saratov (the capital of the province of that name in Central Russia) to which city his peasant father moved from the Viatka Province to engage in trading. When Alexis, who was the youngest member of the family, was eight years old, his father became very poor and soon died, a victim of cholera.

The young Alexis was placed in the Gymnasium (a school with a course of study equivalent to high school and two years of college) by his oldest sister, a teacher, who maintained him up to his sixteenth year. After that he was forced to earn his own livelihood and take care of his tuition fees.

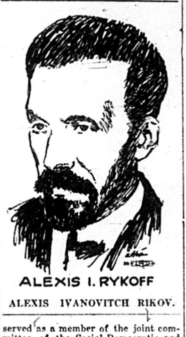
Rikov's first contact with the revolutionary movement came during the attendance of the gymnasium where he joined the secret study circles and participated in the issuance of an illegal journal. It was during this period that Rikov got acquainted with the works of Karl Marx and other studies of the Socialist and labor movement of Western Europe. Suspected of participating in revolutionary circles, he was prohibited from entering the universities of the capitals (Leningrad and Moscow).

In Solitary Confinement.

Upon graduation from the gymnasium in 1900, Rikov entered the university of Kazan (now the capital of the Tartar Soviet Republic) where he immediately became active in the workers' organizations and was chosen to membership on the leading revolutionary committees. The underground Social-democratic organization of Kazan, in which Rikov played an important role during his short student life, was liquidated by the secret police in 1901 thru wholesale arrests of the leaders.

After nine months of solitary confinement, Rikov was sent to Saratov, to live under police surveillance. Returning to his own home town, Rikov engaged again in active revolutionary work among the railroad and metal workers. He organized the May Day Demonstration of 1902 and served as a member of the joint committee of the Social-Democratic and Socialist-Revolutionary parties. After this demonstration Rikov was obliged to assume an illegal existence, and from that time on we find Rikov in the ranks of the so-called "professional revolutionists," whose whole life is devoted to the cause of the revolutionary movement.

Lenin's Successor



ALEXIS IVANOVITCH RIKOV.

During the period of 1902 to 1905, Rikov occupies a prominent position in the Jaroslaw, Nijni-Novgorod, Moscow and other social-democratic organizations. The third congress of the Social-Democratic party in 1905 in London elects Rikov a member of the Central Committee of the party to which position he was re-elected by several successive party congresses. Rikov served as organizer of the Moscow district and was a member of the Russian Bureau of the Central Committee, i.e., that part of the C. C. whose members resided and worked in Russia. Rikov visited the emigrant revolutionary centers—Paris, London, Geneva—only when important matters concerning the revolutionary movement were being dealt with by the leading party elements, compelled to live outside of Russia.

Betrayed by Agent-Provocateur.

Rikov was arrested soon after the third London Congress at a secret meeting of the Leningrad Committee. Freed by the revolution of that year, Rikov was elected a delegate to the first Soviet of Workers' Deputies, where he served until that body was disbanded by the authorities.

On May 1, 1907, Rikov is again arrested and after June 28, 1908 lives under police surveillance by order of the Minister of the Interior. Having been later sent out of Russia, Rikov returns with an illegal passport, but on Feb. 1, 1910 is again arrested and sent to the province of Archangel for three years. He soon escapes from there and joins the Central Committee of the party at Paris. In the summer of 1910 Rikov returns to Russia again to organize the work for the coming national congress of the party. He is turned over to the police by the agent-provocateur Briandinski soon after his arrival. In August, 1911 Rikov falls into the hands of the authorities in Moscow and after serving nine months in prison, is sent back to the Archangel region where he remains till February, 1913.

In October, 1913, Rikov is exiled by order of the Minister of the Interior to live four years in the far away region of Narim in Siberia, but he escapes from there Sept. 20, 1914 to Samara where he is arrested in a month and sent back to his place of exile. Altogether Rikov spent seven and one-half years in solitary confinement in prison and several years of exile in Archangel and Siberia from which he managed to escape on three occasions.

From the very beginning of the March revolution in 1917, Rikov works in the Moscow Bolshevik organizations, and in August of that year is again elected member of the Central Committee of the Social-Democratic party (Bolshevik) as the Communist party was then still called.

Held Important Posts.

As a member of the presidium of the Moscow Soviet, Rikov prepared and secured the passage by the Soviet of resolutions, censuring the Kerensky government and the Mensheviks who were supporting him. When the All-Russian Congress of Soviets voted to take over the powers of the State in November, Rikov was a member of the Executive Committee, and when the first Bolshevik Cabinet was formed upon the successful conclusion of the proletarian revolution, Rikov entered it as a Commissar of Internal Affairs. He was later transferred to be head of the Supreme Council of National Economy when that body was formed, with the cooperation of the Council of Factory Committees of Leningrad.

When Russia was living thru her most critical years—counter-revolution and blockade—Rikov was charged with the provisioning of the Red Army and the re-establishing of Russian industry. With the illness of Lenin in 1921 came the need of a substitute. Rikov was made associate chairman of the Council of Commissars and that of the Council of Labor and Defense at the suggestion of Lenin. Since 1920 Rikov serves as a member of the Central Committee of the Communist Party, and when he was chosen Chairman of the Council of Peoples' Commissars in place of his teacher and brother-in-arms Lenin, he was a member of the All-Russian Council of Trade Unions, Member of the Central Executive Committee of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics and Chairman of the Supreme Council of Public Economy.

Rikov is now 43 years of age.

The Farmer-Laborites at Crossroads

By JAY LOVESTONE

NOT since the country was torn by the class conflicts over the question of chattel slavery and its attendant problem of state rights versus national centralized governmental supremacy have we been confronted with a political situation so fraught with the likelihood of so many fundamental changes.

The two-party system, supposedly based on the granite facts underlying Americanism, is in a far more serious danger of being thrown overboard than ever before. The divisions among the various layers of the employing class have not been as rife and as acute in the last three score years.

Class Farmer-Labor Party.

The chances for the organisation of a national farmer-labor party along class lines; the probability of the launching of a third progressive party supported by the small business elements, the large numbers of the poor farmers, the aristocratic, skilled, upper crust of the working class and even a great mass of the lower strata of the working and farming masses whose discontent is still vague, unclear, tho steadily increasing; the serious deep-rooted dissatisfaction with and lack of confidence in the government and all its subdivisions and ramifications arising from the experiences of the working class in its recent national railway, mine and textile strikes and the shocking revelations of the Teapot Dome explosion—these are only some of the outstanding manifestations of the storm that is now hovering over the political horizon in this country.

Add to this veritable magazine the unstable economic and political conditions prevailing in Europe and the multiplying signs of a revival of dangerous colonial unrest and revolt against the world capitalist imperialists in Korea, in Japan, in Mexico, in the Philippines, in India and you will find that the American working masses are on the threshhold of a period of critical and decisive struggles.

Some may ask: Why draw Europe, the Far East, and Latin-America into a consideration of our national political problems? The matter of fact reply to this question is that: tho the class conflicts in the various countries may be fought very often along the limits of the respective national fronts and are colored by the immediate local conditions at hand, yet the class struggle everywhere is fundamentally and in essence international. Our national economic and political situations are inextricably interlaced with the prevailing economic and political situations in the other countries of the world.

The Economic Situation.

In order to comprehend the serious disintegration that has set in the Republican and Democratic parties, the rise of the insurgent bloc in congress, the spread of the Farmer-Labor movement, the problems confronting these groups and the tactics employed by them, it is necessary to consider first the economic conditions out of which the impending political battles arise and under which they are to be fought out.

For some time there has been waged a ceaseless campaign to convince the country that we are now enjoying the blessings of prosperity. But beneath the surface of these hollow boasts one can detect a strong undercurrent of lack of confidence on the part of our financiers and industrialists in the economic situation today. Financial observers call it, in the language of their technique, "the uneven tone of business," "the strong spirit of caution." Buying today is on a hand to mouth basis, a "small order basis." Short time orders are in vogue. Bradstreet's in one of its latest weekly trade reviews said anent the keel of business navigation that "something like a slackwater appearance is presented. . . . Neither trade nor industry appears equal to a year ago at this time."

Just now the car loading figures are impressively high. But so competent an authority as the New York Times Annalist finds the situation here "uncomfortably impressive." There is mighty good reason for this feeling. The figures for car-loadings are so much higher than the index of production that it is clear to the careful observer that the freight-loadings reflect a shelf-clearing process rather than the approach of a revival of industry. We have today a much bigger freight traffic on a smaller base of production than last year. Such a condition cannot properly be counted as a sign of impending prosperity.

Steel Production Wavering.

Even the production of steel which is put forward as the bright spot of the present situation, is beginning to worry many students of business. The last few months have seen a relapse from the steady fall in steel production thruout the summer and early winter months, largely because of the railway, construction and Japanese orders. Now steel is wavering again. It is showing a positive trend of decline. The Iron Age finds that the orders for May and June delivery are far below the normal volume at this time of the year. Some manufacturers of steel are thinking of lowering the price of steel in order to stimulate buying, because the advance orders are petering out.

The January figures of the Federal Reserve Board, it is true, do show an increase over the December production. But this must not be taken as the herald of prosperity. The trend of economic development can be judged with scientific accuracy only by basing conclusions on conditions prevailing over a long representative period and not over a brief period of a month. This is essential in order to allow for fluctuations in the economic development. Thus, the Annalist sums up the situation by saying that "taken as a whole, production is not extremely active, and the general tone of business is far from resembling that of a progressive boom."

Fear Repetition of 1920.

Some financial experts, like Arthur D. Welton in the Philadelphia Public Ledger, even display fear of a repetition of the 1920 disaster despite the highly advertised boasts that the mistakes of the last great depression have been learned by the capitalist class of this country and will never be permitted to recur. How childish these claims are when they are made in good faith and how helpless the employing class is before superior economic forces inherent in the capitalist system of production and exchange can be seen from the following confession of Mr. Welton writing from Chicago two weeks ago: "The shadows of coming events as they fall across the path of Melvin A. Traylor, president of the First Trust and Savings Bank, are warnings and bad omens. Overexpansion of business is one of his fears. The building industry and railroad development are evidences of it. . . . The railroads have been buying equipment and the tonnage of a million cars a week have been incentive to the purchases, but borrowing money on the assumption that the tonnage will be further increased may lead to trouble and perhaps disaster."

An analysis of the records kept by the free employment offices in New York, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Ohio, Illinois, and Wisconsin shows that the number of jobs available for each hundred applicants "has fallen nearly three-fifths of the way back to the lowest point of the depression of 1921."

Unemployment Increase in Wisconsin

In Wisconsin for instance, the analysis of the payroll records made by the Industrial Commission shows a steady decline in average weekly earnings and the total payroll since October, 1923. The total of employes has been falling continuously since August, 1923.

For the first half of February the Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry has found "that the common labor market in the majority of the cities remains glutted. In the Philadelphia building trades, according to this report, the "field continues to be heavily flooded with mechanics in nearly every trade."

And the latest findings of the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the Department of Labor on the employment in selected industries in the United States show a decrease "in employment of 1.5 per cent in December over the previous month and a decrease of 1.7 per cent in the total payrolls and of 0.2 per cent in average weekly earnings."

One phase of our present economic conditions cannot be overestimated. The writer refers to the economic crisis amongst the agricultural masses. Just as in 1860 the country could not avoid a crash while its economic structure was divided against itself—half chattel-slave production against half capitalist commodity production—so today the country cannot avoid being overwhelmed by a depression far more serious than the 1921 economic collapse, because the agricultural industry—our largest single industry, an industry having about 49 per cent of the country's total population dependent on it—is hopelessly immersed in the slough of a fundamental economic crisis.

Basil Manly's Views.

This situation was well expressed to the writer the other day by Basil Manly, the noted economist, when he said: "The country cannot avoid an economic depression of the most serious proportions, as long as agriculture continues in its present state of bankruptcy. A wave of acute economic depression is sweeping East to the manufacturing centers. It will hit the industrial areas sooner than most people think it will."

A strikingly similar view is taken by the conservative observer of the Annalist in his last weekly review of the business outlook. Said the Annalist: "Unless all economic theory is wrong, however, there is in sight a new readjustment of American business to world conditions, and one which may be accompanied with some internal business friction. The day is apparently not tomorrow, but it may well enough be the day after tomorrow."

It is under these extremely unsettled and basically disturbed economic conditions beclouded by the menace of an oncoming dangerous crash that the next political struggles are to be fought out in this country. It is out of these very conditions which are part of the general fundamentally unsound economic millieu inherited by all the countries of the world, in some form or other, from the imperialist war that our present class divisions and class conflicts have arisen. As we analyze the rift in the various sections of our employing class and as we examine the growing political consciousness of the working and farming masses, each particular case will appear in its true light as having taken root in these world economic conditions.

Unemployment In Montreal.

MONTREAL, March 14.—Unemployment has become so serious in this city that a special organization has been formed to deal with it, in addition to the provincial employment bureau and a number of commercial employment agents. It is estimated that 50 per cent of the skilled workers of the city are out of work.

The Farmer's Real Problem

IT IS not generally known, declares C. F. Warren—that is the capitalist press does not let it be known—that we are in the midst of the "most serious agricultural crisis ever experienced in the U. S." One million farmers have lost their entire life-time savings and a still greater number have debts larger than their resources. There are 6 million farm owners; 2½ million are tenants and 1½ million are mortgaged owners. The latter groups are those chiefly affected by the present agricultural depression.

Those farmers who are in comparatively comfortable circumstances are looking towards price fixation as a means of getting a greater income from their farms. But the farmers that are now in financial difficulty are not so much interested in the price they can get for their products as in the amount of taxes, interest and debts they must pay. For it is these items which are the chief cause of their present troubles. Taxes have increased an average of 122% from 1914 to 1922. The total average value of crops per farm in the U. S. is $1075 of which an average of $400 is expended in taxes, interest and the repayment of debts. The poorer farmers desire relief in the form of a reduction in these main items of their yearly expenses.

Danger of Inflated Prices.

Mr. Warren explodes several panaceas peddled out by farm politicians to help the farmers. The farmers have been blamed for not having saved money during the war period, with which they might now stave off disaster. The author explains this matter throroly and concludes that many men would now be better off financially if they had not saved money and thus would not have bought or added to their farm holdings at inflated prices. In a disgression he warns young families against a similar loss in their savings if they insist on buying homes at the inflated prices now prevailing. As to the advice that the farmer reduce production, he states that upon a drop in prices the farmer must "work up more units of his product to meet expenses". "It is true", he continues, "that the status of all farmers might be better if production were reduced, but the farmer is primarily concerned with his own individual status". Besides, high prices with a small individual crop might avail the farmer nothing. Mr. Capitalist Anarchy of Production is obviously breaking the back of the farmer. Mr. Warren agrees that the movement of the farmers towards the cities will create a greater demand for farm products, leading towards an improvement in the range of agricultural prices. But he emphasizes that this adjustment will take a decade. The author does not even mention diversified farming as a possible relief, nor does he urge further deflation of labor by capital as an aid to the deflated farmer.

Depression to Continue.

The writer is not optimistic about a quick return to agricultural prosperity—"the depression is likely to continue for many years", the inference is 10 or 15 years. If this analysis is true it means that formation of a strong third or farmer-labor party is practically inevitable. He enumerates the economic conditions that must prevail before a renewal of good times can be hoped for, but he offers no way out for the millions of farmers now in distress. His entire analysis, however, is solid proof that the farm planks of the Workers Party and the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, namely the land to the users and a 5-year moratorium on mortgages, are exactly suited to the needs and desires of the 4 million tenant and mortgaged farmers in the country. It would seem, however, that the added demand for a decrease or suspension of tax payments for this group of farmers would strengthen our program.

The article includes a valuable array of statistics. W. K.

The Rebel Miner

None can be found who envy him
Of his work underground.
He is even little thought of,
Except when winter comes around.

Few of life's joys are his to share
But of burden's he has plenty.
Each year seems like a double decade
E'en tho that means twenty.

There's scarcely a thing he can call his own
Except his labor power.
But with each day he sells to the sons of greed
His life's blood ebbs lower.

Yet when he asks for the things
That are his by right,
He finds he is always forced to face
The power of might.

'Tis then he resolves to better his lot
And escape the bitter oppression,
Only to find that the one's he must fight
Are those who gave him the lesson.

Each battle he enters with increased vigor
Emerging always with gains,
Until convinced that there's nothing to lose
But misery plus the chains.

THE CANADIAN FARMER - -

By P. ANTONIUK

SEVENTY-ONE cents a bushel for wheat has driven the Canadian farmer into the camp of rebellion against the existing capitalist system.

Facing foreclosure by banks and loan companies, sinking lower and lower into debt, the toilers on the vast prairies of Western Canada are engaged in a hopeless struggle against bankruptcy and ruin.

The well-to-do farmers, organized into the United Farmers of Manitoba and Ontario tho themselves greatly reduced in means, can still well afford to play petty politics, engage in sham battles against the Winipeg grain exchange and wear out the floors of the lobby of the Dominion parliament in Ottawa.

But not so with the dirt farmers, who as a rule are last to gain advantages and the first to lose them.

In Saskatchewan (a province fairly representative of the plight of the poorer farmers), in the northeastern part of that province, practically 50 per cent of the farmers are facing ruin. In that section of the country every little town is fairly thick with notices of auction sales due to foreclosure.

Crisis in Canadian Agriculture.

The crisis in Canadian agriculture has lowered the material welfare of the farmer. Reduced to the shadow-line of poverty the farmer began to kick and as a result his social outlook has broadened.

"The Canadian farmer is no longer a baby capitalist," said Mr. Swartz, the secretary of the Farmers' Union of Canada in addressing a meeting of farmers.

The Farmers' Union of Canada was organized in December, 1921. Today the Farmers' Union of Canada has 178 locals numbering ten to fifteen thousand members in the provinces of Saskatchewan and Manitoba. The formation of the Farmers' Union of Canada was a result of secession from the well-to-do United Farmers—and also due to the amalgamation of six separate farmer unions in Saskatchewan and Manitoba. The Farmers' Union of Canada explicitly recognizes the class struggle as seen from the following excerpt from their preamble:

"Modern industrial society is divided into two classes—those who possess and do not produce and those who produce. Along side this main division all other classifications fade into insignificance. Between these two classes a continuous struggle takes place."

The activities of the Farmers' Union of Canada tho far from those of a political party—which it is not—have manifested the spirit of class consciousness and class solidarity.

Farmers Support Strikers.

When in Sydney, Nova Scotia, the British Empire Steel Company used government troops to crush the striking steel workers—the Farmers' Union of Canada along with the advanced workers of Canada raised its voice in protest. But the keynote of the Farmers' Union of Canada trend of mind was struck by one of its locals in Sturgis, Saskatchewan, on the question of unemployment. The resolution passed by that local says in part: "That the unemployment in the cities is also due to the policy of the Canadian capitalists who, in order to lower the standard of living, have imported a large number (about 16,000) of workers from England. As an act of humanity as well as in the interest of organized labor—these workers are to be helped in order that the plans of the capitalists may not be realized." The Sturgis local of the Farmers' Union of Canada made a point that the food donated by the farmers be distributed by the trade unions.

Thus far the Farmers' Union of Canada movement is attempting to immediately relieve the misery of the farmers. There are plans for the formation of a wheat pool for the cancellation of interest on all debts, and the funding of the farmers' debts along the lines of the funding of the debt of the Canadian Pacific Railroad by the Canadian government.

Solidarity With City Toilers.

The Farmers' Union of Canada is so far shunning the field of political action. But from its action so far—the Farmers' Union of Canada will not be slow to recognize the fact that solidarity with the city workers means more than the extension of material help—it means the alliance of the factory workers with the farmers. The Farmers' Union of Canada's motto: "Farmers of the World Unite" will soon be changed into: "Farmers and workers of the world unite for the overthrow of capitalism and the establishment of a farmers' and workers' government that will do unto the capitalists as the capitalists do unto us."

Girl Striker Is Brutally Beaten by Police

OFFICER 3181 BEAT SOPHIE ALTSCHULER

Union Picket Plans to Tell Court of Attack Today

If the doctor, under whose care Sophie Altschuler now is, will permit her to leave her bed, she will go to the S. Clark Street police court this morning to ask Judge Samuel Trude to issue a warrant charging assault against Police Officer No. 3181.

Friday night Sophie was beaten so severely by this policeman that she has been under the constant care of a doctor ever since.

Active on Picket Line.

Sophie Altschuler has been one of the most active girls on the picket line in the strike of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union. Every day and at all hours she has been on the picket line trying to persuade the girls who are working in the dress shops to quit and come out on strike with the union girls. Altho she has been arrested often she has not been charged with assault which proves that she has done her picketing in a peaceful manner.

Friday evening she and another girl were walking up and down S. Market St., when her old boss, a Mr. Reinhart, a dress manufacturer, pointed her out to either Officer Collins or Officer Schroder of the States Attorney's office and told him that Sophie was one of the most active pickets. She was arrested and taken into the hallway of the building at 237 S. Market St., where she was placed in charge of Officer No. 3181.

Threatens to Kill Girl.

Officer No. 3181 had seen Sophie arrested before and knew her as an active union girl. When he saw her brought into the hall Friday night he began to swear and curse at her.

He said that he would kill her. He repeatedly yelled at her, "I don't want you to live. I will kill you." He began twisting her arms and fingers. Sophie tried to defend herself. This infuriated him the more. He then took her head in the crook of his arm and squeezed it.

He threw her to the floor and Sophie fainted. She revived shortly after and the policeman began beating her again. He took her to the rear of the hall and threatened to throw her down the stairs. A couple of plain clothes officers were attracted to the hallway by her screams and they called to the policeman to stop beating Sophie.

Would Throw Her Down Stairs.

The policeman yelled and shouted and told them to mind their own business. They did not try to separate Sophie and the policeman. The fiendish brute opened the door to the cellar and tried to throw her down the stairs. She took hold of the door and held with a strength born of desperation. Then she fainted and the next thing she knew she was being put into a patrol wagon along with Carrie Siever.

Carrie Siever says that the policeman who had arrested her and Sophie, it must have been either Collins or Schroder, told the officer in charge of the patrol to tell the matron at the police station not to book Sophie and Carrie till after six o'clock.

Carrie and Sophie were taken to the S. Clark St., police station and put in a cell in the rear of the women's quarters. Other strikers were brought in but they were not permitted to know that either Sophie or Carrie were arrested.

Matron Is No Different.

The other strikers were bailed out and still Sophie and Carrie were held without being booked. Carrie called the attention of the matron to Sophie's condition. The matron said, after looking at Sophie thru the bars of the cell, "Oh, she's all right. The skin has not been broken."

The matron refused to call a doctor in spite of the fact that there was a city physician on the next floor of the building.

Sophie lay on the hard bench of the cell from 4:30 P. M. till after 6:00

WORKERS HEAR THE DEMAND FOR MASS PICKETING

Johnstone in Strike Plea to Federation

The ladies' garment workers' strike threw the Chicago Federation of Labor meeting yesterday into the greatest excitement it has seen this year.

The excitement came when John J. Johnstone, of the Painters' Union, threw down a ringing challenge to John Fitzpatrick and Oscar Nelson, the leading officers of the Federation, to organize mass picketing and to defy the infamous Sullivan injunction as American Federation of Labor conventions have ordered in injunction cases.

Enthusiasm Greets Demand.

Ethusiastic cries greeted the demand from the strikers present and the rank and file of the Federation delegates. President Fitzpatrick rose to defend the policy of inaction, declaring that the Federation had no authority to lead off, that it could only take such action when it was invited by the striking union.

Then Anton Johannsen, chairman of the "Committee of 15," appointed to assist the strike, arose and declared that such a request had been made, that Vice-President Meyer Perlstein, of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, had urged the Federation to come forward with 70 to 80 pickets.

Johannsen urged the necessity of such active support by the union men of Chicago and said his only fear had been that there were not sufficient men "with guts" to do the work.

He recited the militant declaration of the 1914 convention of the American Federation of Labor held at Philadelphia declaring that union men must ignore injunctions absolutely and go to jail if necessary in defiance of the writs against their freedom and that they should not even get counsel to fight injunctions, but go about their union business without regard to them.

Johannsen Urges Action.

Johannsen then urged all union men who were willing to fight the injunction to give their names to the Nation's Capitol Looks Forward to Another Week of Thrills in Daugherty and Teapot Probes

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 16.—The Capitol is awaiting the developments of tomorrow's Daugherty quiz, keen for new revelations.

Never in the history of the United States government was there such an orgy of exposures. Since the lid blew off the Teapot Dome until Gaston B. Means took the witness stand, sensation has followed sensation in quick succession. Anything is liable to break thru the barricade of silence now.

Worst Yet to Come

Senators are to have special seats reserved at the Daugherty investigation tomorrow. It is the belief around here that the worst is yet to come.

The attorney general is furious, those in close touch with him admit. He feels that he is being made the goat. He is now talking of doing a little bean-spilling himself. What makes him mad is to see statesmen, who are up to their necks in the same adventures that have gotten him in trouble, getting off without even getting their Vandyke whiskers ruffled while he must bear all the odium.

He's Sore About Means

Daugherty is particularly sore on Means. His testimony, bad as it is in itself, is also dangerous in that it took the padlock off the lips of other department of justice ex-agents who have a grievance against Daugherty, and who hate William J. Burns for making the "D. of J." an annex of the William J. Burns International Detective Agency.

Burns is also sitting on pins and needles. Despite his outward calm, he fears that before Wheeler gets thru with his investigation the relation between the Department and the fink agency will be exposed.

Burns Sees Trouble Ahead

In the present temper of the American workers, Burns can forsee trouble in store for him.

The most sensational testimony of Saturday's session was the admission made by F. C. Quimby, New York fight promoter, that a pool of which he was a member, made $125,000 on the Dempsey-Carpentier fight pictures which were transported in violation of the law with the aid of Harry M. Daugherty and his boon companion, Jesse Smith.

Of the $125,000 made on the pictures, Attorney General Daugherty

FARMER-LABOR CONVENTION IN N. Y. NEXT SUNDAY

Teapot Adds Force to F. F.-L. P. Call

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, March 16.—The recent oil scandal where prominent politicians, both Republican and Democratic were involved, together with the effort of Congress to lay the burden of taxation more and more on the workers and small farmers, has given great impetus to the movement that has for some time been on foot to form a strong Labor Party in the interests of the exploited workers and farmers of the nation.

The Federated Farmer-Labor Party of New York has called a convention for Sunday afternoon, March 23rd, to be held at Central Opera House, 67th street and Third avenue, where the delegates from many labor and fraternal organizations will meet to work out plans for the formation of a national Labor Party.

In this connection it is worth while remembering that a national convention will be held in the near future in St. Paul with thousands of workers and farmers organizations participating, for the purpose of organizing such a Labor Party.

Every worker must see to it that his union or the fraternal organization of which he is a member sends delegates to the local convention of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, Sunday afternoon, March 23rd, at Central Opera House.

Organizations of less than 200 are entitled to two delegates, those between 201 and 1,000 to three delegates and all organizations having more than 1,000 to four delegates.

STAGE IS SET FOR UNITY AT JUNE 17 MEET

Last Step Taken by St. Cloud Convention

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

The last link welding together the farmer-labor forces of the United States for the June 17th convention was forged when, following the forty-minute speech of William Mahoney, of St. Paul, for the unanimous recommendation of the resolution committee, the convention of the official Minnesota Farmer-Labor Party, without a dissenting vote, endorsed the call for the June 17th convention, previously ratified by the St. Paul conference of northwest Farmer-Labor parties and the Minnesota Farmer-Labor Federation.

The climax came after a week of conferences during which the reactionaries in the Minnesota labor movement, aided by Buck, Brown and Rodriguez, of Illinois, and William V. Mahoney, of Washington, D. C., had used every possible method of sowing dissension and distrust in an attempt to thwart the formation of a mass Farmer-Labor Party by preventing endorsement of the call and splitting away of sections of the movement.

June 17th Applauded.

The answer of the farmers and workers of Minnesota to the disruptionists and their hysterical denunciation of the reds was the unanimous vote at St. Cloud for a call that includes every section of the working-class movement which subscribes to the program and purposes of the farmer-labor parties sponsoring the June 17 convention.

William Mahoney was constantly interrupted by applause altho he made no oratorical efforts whatsoever. He told of the work that had been done in preparation for the St. Cloud convention, of the failures and successes, of the hopes and fears of those who had taken the lead in the work. "We must", he said, "go on record here for consummation of our efforts on June 17 that the millions of workers and farmers who are watching this convention will know that we want no fusion with the capitalist parties, will make no deals with them, but that we are trying to build a powerful farmer-labor party.

"Can't Depend on C. P. P. A."

"LaFollette will run on this platform," he said, and the convention broke into wild applause. "We cannot depend upon the Conference for Progressive Political Action", he continued. "That organization is controlled by international officials who have never been distinguished for progressive principles. We who have taken the lead in this movement in Minnesota have placed our dependence upon the rank and file and we believe that this confidence is not misplaced."

When the vote was taken the delegates rose to their feet, cheering Mahoney and the resolution.

State Senator Taylor of Montana, editor of the Producers News of Plentywood, was called upon to address the convention and in a short but eloquent speech thanked the delegates for the action they had just taken and assured them that they had expressed the sentiments of the workers and farmers of Montana and of the Northwest.

The Last Gasp.

One Schier, correspondent of the Jewish Daily Forward, who had been co-operating with the anti-farmer-labor forces in the convention as a delegate from Minneapolis, secured the floor after the vote had been taken and attempted to attack Mahoney but was hooted down by the convention. This was the last gasp from the obstructionists.

Had the disruptive elements succeeded in getting as their temporary

"Teapot Special" Held up 2 Days; Out Wednesday

"THE TEAPOT SPECIAL" Edition of the DAILY WORKER has been held up for two days. This will be welcome news, we know, to the hundreds who have not yet managed to get in their orders for this history-making issue of the DAILY WORKER.

But there will be no further delays. "The Teapot Special" arrives exactly on time this Wednesday morning, March 19, and we can take no orders later than ten o'clock on Tuesday night.

* * * *

Flooded With Orders.

We had to delay the issue:

1. Because the large number of orders for this edition, received during the week-end outstripped all expectations. We had not anticipated such a great demand, with the result that we found our stocks of white paper were insufficient to run off the full issue. It was impossible to get a new supply during the Saturday half-holiday.

2. The great mass of material, exposing the whole history of oil under the American capitalist regime, proved to be so great that we felt it could not be confined to a regular six-page issue.

* * * *

An Eight-Page Issue.

That ought to be good news, the best kind of news. That will make of "The Teapot Special" a veritable broadside that will awaken the nation. We want to make this the most widely circulated issue of THE DAILY WORKER.

Our press is being got into good condition for the big run.

Our writers have put the finishing touches on their articles. These are being put into type.

* * * *

Will Have Rogues' Gallery.

Our artists have done their best. There are cartoons by Fred Ellis, Maurice Becker, Lydia Gibson, Robert Minor and others. Our own cartoonist, Fred Ellis, has gotten up "A Rogue's Gallery" of all the oily politicians and capitalists in the country. It is a scream. It is daring and provoking.

Robert Minor has written the history of oil in a short, terse form, carrying conviction in every paragraph. William Z. Foster tells about "Oil and the Oil Workers". John Pepper tells about the revolutionary significance of Teapot Dome, while C. E. Ruthenberg writes about oil and imperialism. Jay Lovestone, head of our research department, has prepared a host of good material. Did you know, for instance, that they wanted to make the "Oil King" Doheny a candidate for vice-president in 1920? Well, they did! William F. Dunne has written on "Senator Walsh and the Teapot Dome". He knows Walsh.

* * * *

All the Latest News.

Then we will have all the latest news, by special wire, about the startling developments before the two investigating committees in Washington, D. C., the oil committee and the special committee investigating Daugherty. This special edition will be up-to-the-minute and up-to-the-last minute, but it will be a document worth preserving for all time, even after the whole oily capitalist system has gone its way. Are you going to help speed it along? If so, there is yet time to act. The delay of two days will help you get in your order on the accompanying blank.

BURNS' LABOR SPYING BARED BY LETTERS

D. of J. and Private Agency Sensationally Exposed

Proof that William J. Burns, head of the Burns International Detective Agency, lied when he told U. S. Senator Wheeler that he had severed connections with his private detective agency since entering the government service is given in a startling expose of the Burns labor spy in the copper mining industry which the Industrial Workers of the World are making public.

More than 200 confidential letters, written by Burns and the agents and managers of his private agency, and by representatives of the Department of Justice during the last year, have come into the possession of the union and are being made public thru Industrial Solidarity, its official organ.

They bare the record of spies operating in the Industrial Workers of the World and the American Federation of Labor.

Direct From Washington.

One of these letters is reproduced in this issue of the DAILY WORKER over the signature of William J. Burns itself. It is on the official stationary of the Department of Justice and is directing his private detective agency from Washington in a drive on the I. W. W. and radicalism in the Arizona section of the copper industry. You will notice that Burns orders G. P. Pross, his Los Angeles manager, to send two men to Globe, Arizona, to do some labor espionage for the Old Dominion Copper Company and he offers to dispatch a Department of Justice operative to assist in the work.

Still Runs Agency.

This shatters Burns story that he has severed conections with the William J. Burns fink outfit since entering the government service for he not only is directing its stool-pigeons activities but he supplies it with the additional services of an Uncle Sam operative. That means that Burns uses government spies, paid by the government, to assist his agency in the labor smashing work for which it is paid by the copper companies.

Raw graft, of course! But the graft is the least evil as far as the workers are concerned. The evil is the formidable alliance between the government, the copper companies and the most powerful labor spy agency in the world.

This is only one letter. There are some two hundred letters in the possession of the persecuted union. There are confidential letters exchanged between the operatives and managers of Burns and the Miami Copper Mining Co., the Tom Reed Gold Mines Co., the Inspiration Consolidated Copper Co., the United Verde Extension Co., the United Eastern Mining Co., the Old Dominion Copper Co. and others still to be made public.

Two Stools Exposed.

Two Burns operatives have been uncovered thru the letters and expelled from the union. They are "Fellow Worker" Fred Haines, alias

RUSS COMMUNIST PARTY GETS NEW 100,000 MEMBERS

Nation Winning Fight on Illiteracy

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, March 16.—The Communist Party is enrolling ten of thousands of new members. 100,000 new members—all of the workers in the factories—is the goal set by the party.

Twenty thousand, eight hundred and forty-six applications for membership have reached the party up to Feb. 11, from factories in the government of Moscow.

Eighteen thousand applications were counted in Leningrad.

Pravda says that 57,7561 workers in provincial cities have applied for the membership in the party.

The 100,000 mark set by the party is almost reached but still application are pouring in.

Liquidation of Illiteracy.

An all Ukrainian Congress for liquidation of illiteracy held on Feb. 11, in Ckarkov, has mapped out plans for instructing 4,000,000 illiterates during the coming three years. Seven hundred thousand will receive instructions until May 1, 1924. It is being reported from Odessa that of the 1,1132 schools scheduled to be opened in 1924 in the village for the liquidation of illiteracy and of the 334 intended for the city, 1,130 are already operating in the villages, 291 in the city with a total of 42,600 pupils.

In Kiev, a large net of schools for the same purpose is being established.

Wheat Acreage at Normal.

Wages in some industries of Odessa have reached the pre-war level. The leather workers pre-war wages equalled 48 rubles (monthly), the present wage—60 rubles. Metal workers' pre-war wage—38 rubles, at present—36 rubles.

Grooming a Dark Horse to Jockey Democratic Jackass

William E. Dever, the know-nothing-about-the-strike-mayor of Chicago is now touted by Democratic boss George E. Brennan of Illinois as a dark horse presidential candidate for the presidential nomination on the Democratic ticket.

This announcement was made by George E. Brennan, member of the Murphy, Taggart, Brennan machine in the Democratic party. Mayor Dever will be boosted as a "man of the people." No doubt Brennan did not make the announcement until he came to the conclusion that there was no oil in Dever's system.

If Dever happens to get elected, and in view of the lack of honest candidates in the Democratic ranks the idea is not to be sneezed at, the striking garment workers are of the opinion that if Mr. Dever shows as little interest in what is transpiring in Washington as he has in Chicago events, he might wake up some day in the White House and find everything stolen, not even excepting the bedclothes.

Mayor Dever will run on his record as a warrior against violators of the prohibition laws. That he did this while openly sympathising with the anti-Volsteadians is proof that he is a man who never lets his personal inclinations interefere with his duty. So say his friends.

With know-nothing Mayor Dever running on the Democratic ticket and Silent Know-nothing Calvin Coolidge on the Republican ticket there would be a real opportunity for a Farmer-Labor candidate to make his voice heard.

Today Sees Crucial Hour in the Brave Struggle of Garment Toilers

Today is the crucial day of the strike. All the striking garment workers know it. They intend to act accordingly.

If the strikers manage to keep the picket line well filled on all fronts then the strike is won, if the picket line is deserted then all is lost.

There is not a striker who believes that the picket line will not be well filled today.

In every strike the third Monday following the calling of the strike is the test day. Today, the third Monday following the calling of the strike, finds the unionists filled with confidence. Saturday night when the pickets started home they were all assuring each other that today would find them at their old places on the picket line.

Want Strikers to Forget.

Saturday was the first day of the strike that passed without the police arresting anyone for picketing. Just why no one was arrested the strikers have not been able to find out.

They don't think, however, that Democratic Mayor William E. Dever, or Republican State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe, had a sudden change of heart toward the strikers and ordered the police to be more decent.

They are rather inclined to believe that the police are hoping that the union will be led to forget the beating up of Sophie Altschuler Friday night if no arrests were made the day following. The union officials have said that this is a vain hope.

Saturday four more strikers were arrested by deputy sheriffs and brought before Judge Denis Sullivan to prove to him that they had no contempt for the court he represents.

They were: Martha Giese, Isaac Greenberg, Lewis Rosenthal and Hyman Thaler. After a preliminary hearing their cases were set to be heard Wednesday morning at 10:00 o'clock and they were released on their own bond of $500 each.

Charged With Injunction Violation.

They had all been arrested for violating the injunction obtained by the Graceline Dress company. Dudley Taylor questioned them, assisted by the judge who tock every possible occasion to lecture them. This time the judge spent more time in telling the workers that the dignity of his court would not be violated by any workers. He did, however, permit Dudley Taylor to violate the dignity of the court by the way he questioned the workers who had been hauled into court.

Imagine the scene. Here is Dudley Taylor, rich, influential, learned in the law and the use of words. Able to make words mean what they were never intended to mean. He is questioning Martha Giese, a woman who has worked all her life and who has never been in a court before.

But all the dirty, cheap tricks that Taylor could perform for money could not confuse Martha Giese. Several times "Dennie" had to say, "This woman is a woman of intelligence."

But Dennie said it reluctantly. Miss Giese told a simple straightforward story. She told how she had gone on strike for a decent living and decent conditions under which to work. She told how the injunction, which was intended to stop the strikers from talking to the workers who were not on strike, had not prevented the police from swearing at and cursing the strike pickets.

"The police swear at us. They use vile language. They try to make fools of us," she said. "Is that right? Is that lawful? Doesn't that violate the injunction?"

Doesn't Hear Questions.

The questions were addressed to Dudley Taylor but he didn't hear them.

Once when Miss Giese tried to explain her answer the judge interrupted, "I don't want any speeches here today."

Some of the other workers who have been hailed before "Dennie" have taken the opportunity to give him an earful and he was not anxious to get more. But Miss Giese had her say and said it well.

When the other three workers had been sworn, the judge tried to question them. He was evidently afraid of hearing part of the workers' story. He rushed the job of questioning them and set their trials for next Wednesday at 10:00 a. m.

When the questioning of those workers had finished the cases of Mollie Friedman, John Cohn and Rose Lewis should have been called. The judge had told them to be ready Saturday morning to show cause why they should not be punished for contempt of court. But it was too late for the over-worked judge. It was almost 1:00 o'clock. He set their cases over until Wednesday morning. No matter how much the court's dignity is smirched he does not intend to work overtime worrying about it.

Discharge Daily Worker Reporter.

Victor Zokaitis, a reporter for the DAILY WORKER, and Abe Harris, who was arrested with him, were discharged Saturday when they were arraigned in S. Clark St. police court. Their "trial" lasted one and a half minutes. "What were you doing in S. Market street yesterday?" Judge Trude asked?

"I saw this officer slam a girl picket up against a wall and I asked his number," Zokaitis said. "I am a reporter for the DAILY WORKER and I was sent there to see how the police treat the strikers."

"Discharged," the judge yawned.

All the strikers who were arrested Friday and arraigned Saturday asked for jury trials.

Pete Herd and John Harvey, both members of the Young Workers League, who were arraigned in Boys' Court, Saturday, were told to come back today and bring their parents. Both boys were arrested for walking along S. Market street, Friday.

When a bull asked them what they were doing there, they said they were out to see some of their friends who were on strike. They were taken to jail.

Girl Striker Brutally Beaten

P. M. without being able to get even a bit of water to bathe her head.

Finally at 6:30 o'clock she was booked and bailed out at once, by the union. She was rushed to the Morrison Hotel, where the union has an office, and she was given emergency treatment by Mrs. Sophie Rodriguez because the hotel physician could not be gotten.

Sometime after she had been given this emergency treatment the house physician of the hotel, Dr. James F. Maltman, was called and after his examination and treatment in a written report said:

Statement of Doctor.

"I attended this evening Sophie Altschuler who had been seriously beaten about the head and face. Her wrists were twisted and are badly swollen."

"Signed JAMES F. MALTMAN."

This report was made out five hours after Sophie had been beaten. Sophie was kept in the hotel under the care of Doctor Maltman Saturday and Sunday. It is not known if the doctor will permit her to go to court this morning to answer the charge of disorderly conduct that was placed against her or not. When she does go to court to answer the charge she will ask that a warrant be issued against Officer No. 3181, charging assault.

Saturday the union, thru its attorney, Oscar Nelson, took steps to bring Officer No. 3181 before the trial board of the police department and to institute the same proceedings against the matron who refused to call a doctor to treat Sophie.

Nelson was also instructed to look up the law to see if Sophie could bring civil suit against either the officer or the city or both for damages.

The officer is said to have made the defense that he was struck by Sophie. That is obviously a lie. Even if it were not, it would still not be justification for his beating her the way he did.

Discard 3rd Degree Testimony.

ST. LOUIS, March 16th.—Police third degree methods of compelling suspects to confess to crime was jolted again by a St. Louis jury, when Leslie Houston was found not guilty of highway robbery. The jury deliberated five hours and a half. Houston repudiated a so-called signed confession which he testified he signed after police torture. He said the police knocked him down and beat him until he signed the confession to escape further torment. Without the confession, the state's case was decidely weak, depending on the testimony of the victim of the holdup, who testified Houston "looks like" the robber.

Workmen's Compensation.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 16.—Employers and vested insurance interests of New York appeared in full array to crush the proposed reforms of the workmen's compensation bill in the legislature here. The amendment, which especially incensed the feudal gentry, would give the state fund a monopoly in workmen's compensation insurance.

Charge Big Liquor Steal.

Evidence is in the hands of Federal Operatives here incriminating a former high prohibition official for the district including Illinois, Iowa and Wisconsin in a $1,000,000 "liquor steal," it was made known today.

STAGE IS SET FOR UNITY AT JUNE 17TH MEET

chairman Boldus of the Nonpartisan League whom Pike, chairman of the official Minnesota Farmer-Labor Party, had tried at the beginning of the session to foist on them, they might have succeeded in postponing the endorsement or even in splitting the convention. The progressives were on guard however and the attempt did not succeed. The reactionaries had planned to present a resolution denouncing the Communists which had been prepared by Mahoney of Washington and thus divert attention from the major issues. Without their chairman they had not the courage to make the attempt and after Mahoney of St. Paul had told his namesake of Washington that he was "a dirty, lying disturber" the latter gentleman subsided.

The progressives in Minnesota are jubilant over the elimination of all friction and all eyes are now on June 17.

Emil Holmes of the World War Veterans addressed the convention in behalf of the military prisoners and received its endorsement for his resolution urging amnesty for them.

Numerous resolutions dealing with all phases of the farmer-labor movement were passed by the convention among them a condemnation of the management of the Veterans' Bureau and a number denouncing war.

Complete Unity Established.

Complete unity has been established between the workers and farmers of Minnesota thru the Farmer-Labor Federation. The last obstacle to this unity was removed late this afternoon when the delegates to the non-partisan league convention here threw their reactionary officials overboard and voted to join the Farmer-Labor Federation representing the interests on the political field of all economic organizations of the workers and farmers in this state. No development of greater significance in the Farmer-Labor movement in America has taken place within the last decade. The decision of the Non-partisan League delegates came after the Townley machine had exhausted every effort to prevent favorable action. Magnus Johnson and Hendrick Shipstead were induced by the Townley machine to denounce the Farmer-Labor Federation as a Communist organization; every device calculated to prejudice the farmers against radicals and labor men was used: O. M. Thomason, of Benson, henchman of the Townley machine, read extracts from the DAILY WORKER, but without any perceptible effect upon the farmers who wanted unity with the wage workers, were determined to get it and did get it. Some of the most remarkable speeches ever made in a gathering of this kind were delivered by farmer delegates to whom the desire for unity with the organized workers was stronger than the influence of leaders whom they had trusted.

Old Prejudices Shattered.

The Minnesota farmers represented by the Non-partisan League Convention have, by this decision, shattered for all time the belief advanced by obstructionists that farmers are afraid to trust their fortunes to an organization comprising both groups of exploited workers.

There was a great demonstration in the Farmer-Labor Federation convention when their negotiation committee returned with the news that the farmers had decided to become part of the unity organization. A speaker was on the floor talking on an important organization question, but all business was suspended for ten minutes while the delegates stamped and cheered, leaped on chairs and tables, threw their hats in the air and yelled themselves hoarse. Tension relaxed immediately and it was evident then that the workers had almost given up hope of complete unity; they acted like children relieved of a threat of punishment and gave their emotions full play. Even the dignified William Mahoney, chairman of the Farmer-Labor Federation Convention, yelled till he was red in the face, and his grey hair completely disarranged. Too much credit for the decision of the farmers' convention cannot be given to Charles E. Taylor, of the Montana Farmer-Labor party, and "Dad" Walker, of the North Dakota Farmer-Labor party; they knew personally many of the delegates and more than anyone else were responsible for counteracting any prejudice that might have been aroused by the red baiting of the machine element. It was necessary for the Townley machine in order to poll any kind of a note against unity to collect delegates from paper organizations such as women's auxiliaries and county groups having no existence. Desperate efforts still left them several votes shy of a majority, and with their loss of a majority went forever their leadership of the farmers' movement in Minnesota.

Great Day for Militants.

It was a great day for the left wing of the labor movement in Minnesota. The yellow element, the defeatists, the disciples of the "this is not the time" philosophy, the politicians and the official element generally had been loud in their predictions that farmers would never join an organization of workers in whose ranks were members of the Workers (Communist Party.) The chronic croakers and their ability to forecast developments in the worker and farmer movement have been completely discredited. There is no lonelier individual in the Twin Cities today than the one who said that the Communists were the greatest obstacle to unity of the workers and farmers. As a matter of fact, this is not only a victory for the farmers and workers of Minnesota, but a tremendous victory whose importance cannot be exaggerated for the Workers Party of America, and the Communist movement of the world. Any hostility toward the Communists that was in evidence before the action of the Non-partisan League Convention plugged the last gap in the working class political movement of this state has disappeared. The Workers Party of America and its members who have given their time, money and energy to the building of a class farmer-labor party based on the economic organizations of both groups are now given the credit that is due them for their unceasing devotion to the cause of the workers and farmers and also for their organization ability which contributed so much to the result.

The path has not only been cleared for the Farmer-Labor party in Minnesota, for a splendid mass class organization in this state, but for the national convention on June 17th, and for the farmer-labor movement of the entire northwest. The Farmer-Labor Federation, composed now of all farmer and worker organizations in the state, has adopted into the declaration of principles, the program for the June 17th convention, adopted by the St. Paul conference of Northwest Farmer-Labor parties last Tuesday, and which did so much to influence the decisions made by the Farmer-Labor Federation and Non-partisan League conventions.

There Is No Division.

There is no division in the ranks of the workers and farmers of Minnesota today. They are united around a common program and organizationally as well. They have escaped the pitfalls dug for them by reactionary leaders, the yellow traitorous elements and the self-appointed advisors clustered around their movement. The work that has been done for unity in the past week, which was preceded by months of careful preparation, is something for which the labor movement owes those who did it a debt of gratitude. It should be a source of pride to the Workers Party of America that in a task which at the outset seemed a super-human one they have played a leading part. The last doubt that this year will see the beginning of a nation-wide political movement of the workers and farmers has been removed by the events of the last week here.

From now until June 17th will be a period of intense organizational and educational activity in Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana, Idaho, Washington, Oregon and all other states where economic pressure is forcing workers and farmers to think and organize.

Prepare for June 17th.

Already the labor movements of the Twin Cities is preparing for the June 17th convention and without question it will be the largest and most representative gathering ever assembled in the United States. It will be an assemblage of workers and farmers who are thinking politically, representing great masses who are learning to think politically.

The workers and farmers of Minnesota and of the Northwest, by sinking their minor difference in the interests of a common objective, have, during the past week, delivered the greatest blow to American capitalism that it has yet received.

Who Is Behind Officer 3181?

Police Officer 3181, wearing the uniform of Mayor William E. Dever's police forces, arrested Sophie Altschuler, member of the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union who was doing picket duty, took her into a hallway and there severely beat her. Officer 3181 made the arrest on the orders of a clothing manufacturer.

While the brutal policeman was beating her, Miss Altschuler screamed for help. "I don't want you to live. I will kill you" was the policeman's answer to her screams.

Who is behind officer 3181?

On whose authority did officer 3181 arrest Sophie Alschuler and brutally assault her? These are important questions.

No doubt vicious attacks will be made on police officer 3181 by certain labor leaders while those who give orders to him are conveniently ignored. Since this strike started, the DAILY WORKER urged the "Committee of Fifteen" appointed by the Chicago Federation of Labor to take action; to do something that would aid the striking dressmakers. But the committe has done very little so far. They seem to be afraid to even open their mouths for fear it might be illegal.

Unscrupulous Bosses.

The bosses are not troubled by any scruples about illegality. Was it legal for Officer 3181 to brutally assault Sophie Altschuler? And her case is only one of many.

The DAILY WORKER from the first day of the strike until the present laid the blame for the police brutalities squarely on the shoulders of state's attorney Robert E. Crowe and Mayor William E. Dever. The police officers—officer 3181 included—are only the tools of the men higher up. Some of them are more brutal than others. But why blame the subordinate and let the principal go off scot free?

The DAILY WORKER offered suggestions to the Committee of Fifteen which if followed would have prevented the dastardly assault on Miss Sophie Altschuler. We now charge the "Committee of Fifteen" with criminal negligence and with indirect responsibility for the sufferings of the striking garment workers at the hands of the tools of state's attorney Crowe and Mayor Dever.

The "Committee of Fifteen" may feel that its hands are tied by the injunctions. They may feel that the suggestions made by Meyer Perlstein who is in charge of the strike are illegal and cannot be carried out. Of course, according to the terms of the injunction it is illegal to speak, whisper or bid the time of the day to a striking dressmaker. But even Samuel Gompers would defy an injunction from the seclusion of a hotel suite! Surely the leaders of the Chicago Federation of Labor long heralded thruout the United States as "progressive" are at least as courageous as the toothless Gompers.

Police Brutality.

This strike would have been won in the first week but for the brutality of the officers of Crowe's and Dever's offices. Dever is responsible for the conduct of both. But the "Committee of Fifteen" after listening to John Fitzpatrick read a letter charging Crowe with abuse of office and getting its picture taken, appointed a sub-committee to see the Mayor and the matter ended there. The understanding was according to John English, a member of the committee, that in the event of further police brutalities, the committee would hold another general meeting. Does the committee require a couple of murders before it takes action?

The DAILY WORKER again urges the "Committee of Fifteen" to get busy, call a mass meeting, organize the trade unions of this city behind the strike, issue publicity concerning the strike, demand that the Mayor appoint trade unionists to preserve order in the strike zone, raise a strike fund and call for volunteers from the trade unions to protect the girls who are picketing the scab shops.

The workers of Chicago have watched this inactive committee long enough. They are suspicious that partisan or factional capitalist politics is the cause of its inactivity. If the committee does not intend to do anything it should promptly quit and leave the way open for a committee that will act. The fortunes of the slaves in the factories, the safety of the girls on the picket lines are more important to the rank and file than the continuance of any friendly relations that may exist between labor politicians and certain officials of Cook county.

Dever and Crowe Real Culprits.

The DAILY WORKER claims that officer 3181 is not the real culprit. The men who should be held responsible for his acts are the official heads of Cook county, Mayor William E. Dever and state's attorney Robert E. Crowe. They are the men who should be brought before the bar of organized labor.

Again we ask the "Committee of Fifteen" to act in behalf of the thousands of striking dressmakers.

Arthur Brisbane knows a little bit about everything, even about the Standard Oil company. He seems to be on the inside of Wall Street. The French franc tottered precariously for a few weeks, but Arthur kept on warning the people not to drop their francs. Suddenly Morgan made a hundred million dollar loan to France and the Franc took another breath. Arthur said "I told you so." But the French franc will not rise very high. According to all indications it will go the way of the mark.

The Irish Free State was presented by certain officers in the army with an ultimatum, which told the Cosgrave government in unminced words that unless some consideration was given to the republican ideal which they fought for earlier in the struggle, the soldiers might take matters into their own hands. After some stage-play the Free State government swallowed its chagrin and decided to make the best of a bad situation. The mutineers are still at large. They took their guns along with them. Guns are rather convincing arguments. If the soldiers had not taken their guns along the firing squad would have delivered a verdict by now.

Father Seidenberg, of the committee of citizens investigating the dressmakers strike, is in sympathy with the workers, but he thinks that the unionists get too personal at times. He interviewed Mr. Weiss, the notorious hard boiled gentleman who refuses to deal with a union organizer. Mr. Weiss showed him a leaflet which the union got out dealing with the conditions under which the employes of Mr. Weiss labored. The circular happened to mention the boss's name so it wounded the sensibilities of that retiring individual and also earned a rebuke from Father Seidenberg. "That is personal," declared the Rev. Father, "you should not mention his name."

• • • •

Mr. Weiss, employs sluggers to beat up pickets. It is even said that in order to keep the sluggers at the proper pitch of exaltation and spiritual excitement, he provides them with booze with a high alcoholic content, after partaking of which the sluggers mentally transport themselves back to the reign of Attila and imagine they are carving their way to wealth, thru hordes of weak, civilized human beings, who stand between them and affluence. This is their frame of mind toward the pickets. Of course the strikers cannot see things the way Father Seidenberg does, but we have reason to believe if the holy man got smashed over the head by a club wielded by an alcohol-guzzling fink that he would not consider it beyond the limits of propriety to mention the name of the gentleman responsible for such attentions. Father Seidenberg was good enough to go on the picket line, and whenever an enraged policeman was about to bring his club down on his head he had only to show his priestly garb and apologies came. Unfortunately the strikers are not priests or even rabbis.

Harry Daugherty has done nothing that the Republican national committee should be ashamed of. He only employed Jess Smith to blackmail criminals and hold them up for graft. Ordered investigation of senators who introduced resolutions to investigate robberies of government lands. Instructed his agents to stop arresting bootleggers. Helped to start revolutions in Mexico. Violated the Interstate Commerce law against the illegal transportation of fight films, etc. Harry is a good fellow. He is not a communist.

BURNS' LABOR SPYING BARED BY LETTERS

"D. of J." and Private Agency Involved

Harris, operative W-1, in the Burns agency and Delegate MM-448 in the Metal Miners' Industrial Union of the I. W. W. and Operative J. J. Spear, "Z-3", in the agency, and active member of the I. W. W., recommended for a delegate-ship by Haines in a letter to the headquarters of the union.

We find Manager Pross, of the Los Angeles agency, writing Mr. R. W. Burns in New York, under date of June 23, 1923, that the mine companies of Arizona are greatly pleased with the work of "W-1" (Haines) and he refers complacently to the stool's progress in the union as follows:

Stool Appoints Stools.

"Investigator W-1 has been made an organizer and it is only a matter of a week or so when he will be made a general organizer and he will then be in power to make delegates and organizers and he will of course immediately make my other men D. & O. so as to put them on the inside. We are working in direct touch with the Dept. of Justice . . . . . . whom the Governor (Burns) transferred from Butte . . . . . ."

That is the game. The under-cover man becomes an official and then appoints his own men to the posts where they can do the most effective union smashing.

Turned All Wobs In.

Haines was what is known in the I. W. W. as a "traveling" delegate. He made the rounds of the copper mining camps of Arizona and his instructions were to make himself solid with the organization by lining up a lot of members. This he did but as fast as they were lined up their names were reported. His letters tell exactly who was stamped up with dues stamps, who pasted stickers in the county jail, who is working for which mine. They state that certain shifters in the mines will not hire any but members of the I. W. W. and that "Officer Searles of the Police Force" is an I. W. W.

He tells of conferring with mine managers and searching fellow workers rooms and teaming up with Department of Justice agents. In particular he tells of reporting to "Department of Justice Agent Noonan"—this in his letter to manager Pross, June 19, 1923.

Stopping U. S. Mail.

Burns agents even have power to stop United States mails.

Note this letter from Haines to Pross, June 19: It refers to halting the mails and suggests action against a good fellow worker.

"I am sure that Matthews is wanted either in Taft or Bakersfield, Calif., I am to get in touch with D. J. agent Noonan upon my return to Globe, for further information, you should put a stop on all mail at Prescott, for John Graham and Matthews."

That radicals mail is not sacred is nothing new. The DAILY WORKER'S mail has been opened too. But we wonder what explanation the arch dick will make when Senator Burton K. Wheeler asks him on the witness stand what authority the agents of a private detective agency—which he is shown by his own letters to be still directing—had to stop United States mail. If Burns lies again the agency's letters will be at hand to burn his eyes.

Two days later on the 21st of June the stoolpigeon's report is a wail: A crude policeman at Superior, Arizona, took him for an honest-to-god I. W. W. and threw him into a vile can. Hear his lament to Manager Pross:

In the Course Of Duty.

"In about an hour officer R. L. Wilkinson came in the jail with officer Pat Gorham, and they searched me and took all my papers and books, and then took my key and went thru my room, and such a ragging I got, there was no drinking water to be had, and I was sick at the time, high fever and dyssentery. . . .

"Officer Poole stated he would hold me 48 hours, for investigation, and so I was up against it, no light in the jail, and it was infested with dozens of mice, bed bugs, and lice, and I was utterly exhausted, and fell on the old cot, and while lying there the mice would crawl over me . . . . I discontinued at 12 Midnight, in jail."

But W-1 finally got word to Noonan, the Department of Justice agent and they got him out. He was pretty sick from one night in the jail that he spends his lifetime trying to railroad workers into, and many letters between the managers of the Burns agency refer sympathetically to this poor stoolpigeon's experience.

Exploiting Martyrdom.

The stool pigeon makes the most of his martyrdom. He draws up a letter to Lee Tulin, secretary of the Metal Mine Workers Union at Butte, and shows this letter to "Assistant Managers H. A. G. and R. C. W." for their approval. It cleverly follows the harrowing jail experience story with the request that Tulin put "an old time fellow worker", J. J. Spears (Z-3) on the organizers' roll.

"Dear Sir and Fellow Worker", he begins:

"I will drop you a line, to let you know where I am now for a while, as things got hot in Globe, Miami, and Superior, Ariz. On the 6-20-23 I was arrested at Superior, Ariz., and thrown in jail, a rotten, rat-infested hole, those stoolpigeons of the damn Copper Co. are as active as they can be. . . . ." (None should know this better than Haines!)

"I made an old time fellow worker, J. J. Spear, a member again, and he is an old time miner. I would suggest you make him a working delegate, as he is situated so as he can do good work around Globe, Miami, Superior, as Matthews and I are away, Fellow Worker Spears, is about the best person you can get now, and he knows the game."

New Stool Busy.

We also find a letter dated July 20, sent from G. P. Pross, Los Angeles Manager of the Burns Detective Agency, to Mr. Jack Noonan, Care of Department of Justice, Phoenix, Arizona.

(Note once more the close connection between the Burns agency and the Department of Justice).

The letter says:

"My Dear Jack: I have another under-cover man named J. J. Spear. He is at present at Prescott Hotel, Prescott, Ariz., and will wait there until you call to see him, or you instruct him where you want him to come to meet you. Any instructions you may have for him will be carried out. Let me hear from you once in a while.

"With kindest personal regards, and best wishes, Yours very truly, G. P. P., Manager."

Getting Radical Shot.

The adventures of Z-3, and the further disruptive tactics of others include an attempt to get an Austrian fellow worker sent back to Europe where he would be shot for leaving the beaten Austrian army. Z-3 says, "This ought to be a good way to get rid of one Red." They also tell the story of Burns' detectives deliberately creating violence, and advocating the overthrow of the government by force and violence. The object was to fasten this gospel of individual acts of violence upon the I. W. W., to create evidence for use in criminal syndicalism trials.

The story of how Burns used the Department of Justice to build up his private agency will be continued tomorrow. The record will also show his pull with Doheny's McAdoo.

Bureau of Investigation
Washington, D. C.

WJB-S

Mr. G. P. Pross,
624 I. N. Van Nuys Bldg.,
Los Angeles, California.

May 23, 1923.

My dear George:

I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 10th inst., inclosing the reports on radicalism throughout Arizona, for which please accept my sincere thanks.

I have just received a letter from Mr. Dowell in which he suggests that he have two of our Agents in Arizona call on Frank Carlock, Special Agent of the Old Dominion Copper Company, located at Globe, Arizona, so that they together might be able to suppress some of the activities of the I. W. W. radicals.

He also states that he is going to have you go to Arizona next month in order to familiarize yourself thoroughly and get acquainted with some of the people he would like to have you know.

Let me know what he is doing in this matter and if you agree with him that I should send a man to Globe Arizona.

You ought to wire me a night letter on receipt of this letter.

With best wishes, I am Sincerely yours,

W J Burns
Director.

THE PROOF THAT BURNS IS LYING

BIG N. Y. TEAPOT DOME MEETING AT COOPER UNION

Manley, Gitlow and Lore Will Speak

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, March 16.—The real meaning of the Teapot Dome exposes will be driven home to a large audience at Cooper Union, Thursday evening, March 20, at 8 o'clock by Workers Party speakers.

Joseph Manley, national secretary of the Federated Farmer-Labor party, which is holding its New York convention three days later, will open the attack on the oily thieves and he will be followed by Ben Gitlow, editor of the Freiheit, and Ludwig Lore, editor of the Volkszeitung. Juliet Stuart Poyntz will act as chairlady.

"The Teapot Dome oil scandal," begins a statement of the Workers Party announcing the meeting, "has become an act of discussion thruout the country among all classes of people. The great masses of the people are beginning to realize that it is an individual or a set of individuals that is guilty in this crime but that the entire capitalist system and the government that protects it are the cause of the Teapot Dome scandal. As in the past it is a conspiracy of the ruling class and the kept government to rob the nation of its resources.

"In this scandal there is not a member of the government that can lay claim to innocence. The Congress, the Senate, the president and his cabinet must bear the responsibility of this act.

"The Workers Party Local New York is anxious to bring the truth of this affair before the vast number of workers against whom this crime has been committed. To reveal the many acts of our kept government that the capitalist press has seen fit not to publish.

"There will be an admission charge of 25 cents to help defray the expense of the meeting.

"Come and learn who owns the government."

Employe's Insurance.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 16.—A new development in the progress of industrial feudalism has appeared in the group insurance plan for employes worked out by the Industrial Association of San Francisco. The result of the plan will be to attach thousands of employes to a group of employers rather than to a single contractor or plant in such a way that the employers of this city will alway have a labor pool to draw from.

EXPOSE JUDGE WHO RAILROADED JIM MCLACHLAN

Harris Is Besco Lawyer, Commons Hears

By JOHN ROBUR.
(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

OTTAWA, March 16.—A significant comment on the conviction of J. B. McLachlan, deposed official of the Nova Scotia miners, who has now been released on ticket leave, has been furnished in the house of commons by J. S. Woodsworth, leader of the Labor group, who gave an account of the close connection of the judges of Nova Scotia with the British Empire Steel Corp. Here is the record as he set it forth:

A Steely Crew.

Chief Justice Robert E. Harris—president of the Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Co. before his appointment. Justice Mellish, who presided at the McLachlan trial—formerly counsel for the Dominion Coal Co. Judge D. D. McKenzie, formerly local solicitor for the Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Co. at Sydney. Judge Ritchie appeared in cases for Dominion Coal Co. before appointment. Judge Rogers, formerly solicitor for Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Co. Only two members of Nova Scotia supreme court—Russell and Chisholm—have not been known to be connected with Besco or its subsidiaries.

One particularly glaring case of impropriety was cited by Woodsworth in connection with the explosion at New Waterford, Cape Breton, in 1917, when 65 or 70 men lost their lives. The miners charged that the explosion was caused by company negligence.

Raw Stuff.

The case for the Dominion Coal Co. was being prepared in the office of the law firm of McInnes, Mellish, Fulton, and Kenny of Halifax. While the case was in preparation Mellish was put on the bench, and his first important work as judge was to preside over this trial, while his former partner, Hector McInnis, was chief counsel for the company.

Woodsworth further stated that E. M. MacDonald, minister of national defense, who sent the troops to Sidney last summer, has been, if he is not still, a solicitor for the coal companies.

Schenectady Labor Declares Itself For Labor Party

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., March 16.—The Trades Assembly overwhelmingly endorsed the organization of a labor party. Delegate Verhagen introduced the following resolution:

"All the actions of the government in power during recent years," says the resolution, "show that under the republican and democratic administrations alike the existing government is the agency of Wall Street, and the specially privileged class, using its power to aid in the exploitation of the farmer and industrial worker by this privileged class, and

"Whereas, the exposures in connection with the Teapot Dome naval reserve oil leases," it adds, "have again proven that both the republican and democratic parties are but tools of the privileged interests for the looting of the nation, and these exposures have involved men of both parties, including so-called "good men" and "bad men," thus proving the utter hopelessness of the workers and farmers of achieving anything for themselves by voting for candidates on the old party tickets, and

"Whereas, the only means thru which the exploited farmers and industrial workers can secure relief from the evil conditions which they are subjected to by the capitalist exploiters is by organizing their political power in a Labor Party and fighting their own political battles thru such a party;

"Therefore, be it resolved, That the Schenectady Trades Assembly declares itself in favor of the organization of a Labor Party and independent political action by the industrial workers and farmers, and

"Be it further resolved, That a conference be called of the different unions, workers' political parties, and other organizations who believe in independent political action, in order to form such an organization in this city."

Troops Leaves Herrin.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 16.—Removal of all troops from Williamson county with the exception of eight men under Major Powers, Decatur, who will be stationed at Herrin, was ordered today by Adjutant General Carlos Black.

The order went into effect immediately and it is expected that the departure will be completed this afternoon.

Real Estate Shark Brazenly Admits Rapacity Towards Negro Tenants; Segregation Policy Is to Blame

The brazen affrontery with which the significantly large real estate companies located in the Negro district are robbing the colored residents of Chicago, was manifested everywhere to the DAILY WORKER investigator in a canvass of these impudently independent firms yesterday.

The replies given to the DAILY WORKER at the commodious real estate concern of R. M. O'Brien and Company, 3457 Indiana Avenue, were typical in showing just what the Negroes of Chicago have to put up with.

"Rents are unusually high, and flats unusually scarce," said the advertising manager of the O'Brien Real Estate Company." The DAILY WORKER investigator put the charge that the real estate offices, which seem to prosper in this section, with their many-roomed suites all covered with gilt letters, have been turning out white tenants, filling their houses with Negroes, and charging much higher rents for the same flats.

Proud of Profiteering.

"Sure, we do that as agents when the landlords want us to," the O'Brien representative replied pugnaciously. "Yes, many of them are doing that. Why not, if they can make more money at it? But let me tell you," he continued, trying to shift the blame to someone else, "That the Negro landlords whom we represent are playing that game much more than the whites. We have Negroes looking for housing accomodations, come in here almost every day and ask us if we have any flats for rent by white landlords. The Negro tenants themselves would rather have white landlords than Negro. The Negro landlords are more heartless about raising the rents and it is harder to get them to make repairs."

"But both white and Negro landlords are raising rents on colored tenants after they have induced the whites to move out?" we asked.

"Yes," came the answer, "The Negro landlords not only learned from the whites the game of gouging Negro tenants, but they are going white landlords one better in their gouging and in charging a high rate of interest."

As far as the large, scrouging landlords are concerned, the DAILY WORKER finds, it does not matter whether the landlord is white or Negro, the Negro tenants are being discriminated against just the same. The DAILY WORKER came across a house at 49th and Champlain, where a white landlord forced a white tenant who had been paying $60 a month to move out and installed instead a Negro tenant, charging $105 per month for the same flat.

Many Fire Traps.

These houses where the rents are being raised are the worst accomodations in the city. Along Federal and South Dearborn Streets, south of 32nd Street, the DAILY WORKER investigator counted 26 broken front windows which had been patched up with boards or burlap, in two blocks. Not one porch on these streets as far south as 40th was in good repair. Rotting boards, cracks in what few brick houses there are, littered steps, were noticable on every house. Not one house was freshly painted. Alleys back of these streets are strangers to rubbish collectors. Huge piles of junk, sawdust, rotten mattresses, manure, ashes, garbage, add their depressing aroma to the air, which is clogged with the cinders and smoke drifting over from the adjacent Illinois Central railroad tracks. Fire escapes are unknown. Fences are broken down, rain spouts fallen to the ground, many porches are so fallen in that only one entrance in the house can be used. From 3100 on Federal and Dearborn Streets, as far south as the DAILY WORKER investigator walked—about a mile—all the toilets are back privies. What little plumbing there is in the houses is so rusted and broken that in many cases the roomers have to go next door even to draw a pail of water.

Advises Against Loans.

Charles Duke, a Negro civil engineer, who had much to do with the zoning of the South Side, told the DAILY WORKER that from Wabash to Wentworth and from 18th to 39th Street, the property is so old and ill-repaired, that when asked by Chicago bankers, he could not conscientiously recommend a loan on any property within this section. Mr. Duke explained that the cutting thru of Grand Boulevard from 26th to 35th Streets, and the demolishing of over 250 houses to make room for the street had dispossessed almost a thousand additional Negroes, adding to the distress caused by the profiteering landlords.

At the South Side Y. W. C. A., Mrs. Lula Lawson, said that it has been increasingly difficult for her to secure good rooms at moderate rates for the young women who come to her. "Many of the houses which were formerly on our list have not only increased their rents to a prohibitive degree, but have deteriorated so in quality that they are not fit places for us to send our girls," Mrs. Lawson said.

Sleep in Bathtubs.

Inquiries for rooms and apartments have increased at the Soldiers and Sailors Community House, 3201 Wabash Avenue, according to Mrs. McKinney, in charge. "Housing conditions are frightful in this section," we were told by Mrs. McKinney, "Several families have reported to us that they have been forced to take lodgers into their already overcrowded dwellings because they had no place to stay except on the streets. Sleeping on floors and in the bathrooms is a common occurence in this locality. Rents are so high that children are forced to leave school in some cases, and go to work in the lamp shade factories. In all my years in this neighborhood, I don't remember a house going up around here. They are all old houses on which no repairing is done."

These conditions prevail not because the Negroes are used to a lower standard than whites, nor because they like to live in uncomfortable inadequate surroundings. The Negroes are poorly housed because they are forced by the whites to live in restricted areas, because the landlords of both colors take advantage of the present housing shortage, and because they have not up until the present time organized to protect themselves against profiteers.

The Negro workers are learning that there are parasites in every race. They know, now, that the loyalty of the wealthy Negroes to their group does not prevent them from charging higher rents to the Negroes, that the lust for the dollar by wealthy classes of all races can only be successfully combatted by the organized power of all races of the workers.

MOSCOW, March 16.—Text of the Chino-Russian agreement by which China grants full diplomatic recognition to Russia, was made public here today.

Diplomatic relations will be resumed immediately. The Dantzig Free State also has recognized Soviet Russia it is announced.

Work Daily for "The Daily!"

Real Estate Sharks Profiteer on Negroes

A canvass of the real estate offices on the South Side Negro District shows how openly profiteering is going on against the Negro tenants. The entire area around Indiana Avenue and 35th Street is dotted with large, luxurious real estate offices, both white and colored. All replies to inquiries are—"Rents are unusually high and flats unusually scarce." This would not be the case if the workers who are forced, in some cases, to sleep on the floor or in the bathroom, would demand that flats be rented to Negroes for the same price that is charged whites. Negroes are living in the worst houses in the city, while the wealthy real estate profiteers of their race are comfortably situated on Michigan Boulevard. Read tomorrow what the DAILY WORKER says about joining the newly formed NEGRO TENANTS LEAGUE.

GERMAN SCHOOL KIDS SHOELESS; NEED DESPERATE

Detroit and New York Lead Relief Work

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Mar. 16.—Striking facts of German misery are brought out by the report given to the Central Administration of Berlin by Herr Leid, the mayor of the district of Wedding. This report, up to Jan. 4, 1924, covers a decidedly working class section. It shows that 169,189 persons out of a population of 350,400 were supported by public means.

About 23,900 school children of the district out of 40,000 lack linen and underclothing and few have a whole pair of shoes. Skin disease, vermin—every corruption of famine conditions, moral and physical, is attached to the sorry plight of this section.

Discriminate Against Labor.

Governmental relief of any country goes thru agencies "where it will do most good." Seemingly it does most good to feed the opponents of progressive labor. Officials of these agencies—as happened in the case of the American Red Cross in Hungary—openly boast of it.

The American relief agency have already established two soup kitchens in Germany and are maintaining them at a monthly expenditure of $2,000 for each kitchen. They are reaching all workers without discrimination, selection or bias. A third is being established by the New York branch of the Friends of Soviet Russia.

Detroit Bazaar for Germans.

The Detroit Committee of the Friends of Soviet Russia and Workers' Germany are not content with only house-to-house campaigning, as in other cities. On Saturday and Sunday, March 22 and 23, afternoon and evenings, a bazaar and dance will be given in the House of the Masses, corner Gratiot and St. Aubin Aves.

The campaign for relief which goes toward maintaining soup kitchens for the starving and give aid to enable the German worker to help himself, has received the support of labor and fraternal organizations who will cooperate in giving this bazaar. The admission charge for each day is only 25 cents and the bazaar will end with a dance to be given on Sunday evening, March 23.

U. S. Labor's Food Stations.

Further stimulus has been added by the fact that the Friends of Soviet Russia and Workers' Germany (Committee for International Workers' Aid) has already established the second food station in Germany. The first, called "American I," was established in the North East part of Berlin, Petersburger Platz No. 3 and has even a gymnastic hall. The second, "American II," is located in Wlimersdorf, Paretxerstrasse corner, Aachnerstrasse.

At the same time this affair will be given in Detroit, the New York branch that has already established the third kitchen in Berlin—which it is maintaining itself—is holding a tag day.

Theatrical Bosses Offer Compromise To Actors' Union

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, March 16.—Signs that the theatrical managers' offensive against the Actors' Equity Association is weakening are evident from an unofficial offer which has just been made to the actors' union. The informal offer suggests an "80 per cent Equity shop." In other words, the managers would be prepared to recruit four-fifths of their casts from the organized actors, providing they might draw the other fifth from non-union sources. The Equity, according to the Federated Press' information, will not consider this proposal. Either the Equity Shop, or nothing, is the organization's policy.

IMPEACH COOLIDGE!

Keeney Is Acquitted.

FAYETTESVILLE, W. Va., March 16.—C. Frank Keeney, president of district 17, United Mine Workers of America, was acquitted by a jury in Fayette circuit court here today on a charge of accessory in the murder of John Gore, deputy sheriff of Logan county, during the armed march of miners in 1921. The jury was out one and one-half hours.

LONDON, March 16.—Between forty and fifty passengers are reported to have been drowned when a train crossing a bridge three miles from Bareilly, India, was struck by a cyclone, according to a news agency dispatch from Delhi.

WORKERS HEAR THE DEMANDS FOR MASS PICKETING

Replying that the fight against the injunction must be carried on by the Federation, in an organized way, and not by individuals, Johnstone issued his challenge to Fitzpatrick and Nelson:

"Why doesn't John Fitzpatrick and Oscar Nelson, the heads of the Federation, go on the picket line themselves with an organized body from the Federation. Individuals cannot do much by themselves, they must act in an organized manner."

Fitzpatrick Gets Agitated.

Fitzpatrick, greatly agitated, broke in and decried Johnstone's demand as "bunk," and repeated his previous assertion that the Federation had to be asked. He said that Johnstone knew the trade union movement as thoroly as any one there, and ought to know his demand was wrong.

Alderman Nelson, the corpulent lawyer, formerly a postal clerk, came to Fitzpatrick's rescue with the argument that the discussion was "out of order." Then forgetting his own ruling he began a tirade against Johnstone.

"Fosterism," he shouted, his big body shaking. He charged Johnstone with being the lieutenant of Foster and with playing into the hands of the bosses by going on the picket line without authorization from the union.

Johnstone had earlier told of police brutalities he had seen while on the picket line, and Nelson seized on his statement to make the point that picketers who acted without authorization from the union, were a disruptive force. He continued to sneer at Johnstone because he "had not been arrested."

He alleged that the radicals had disrupted the garment workers' union and cried out in rhetorical indignation, "Don't scuttle the ship of the Ladies' Garment Workers' Union which is composed 85 per cent of defenseless girls. Lay off."

Act Under Union Orders.

Johnstone did not have the opportunity to answer all of these lies for Fitzpatrick, the presiding officer, kept pounding his gavel and crying in a loud voice that he was out of order, and Nelson continued his disorderly interruptions.

But Johnstone did succeed in getting before the house the fact that the volunteer pickets who have been working with him were acting under the orders of the Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and the strike commitee, one of whose members was Dora Lipshitz, one of the expelled left wingers.

Sick of Lawyer's Dope.

Nelson's noisy cries of "Fosterism" aroused the disgusted response from Nills Kjar, a carpenters' delegate, who took the floor and said he was sick of having the issue sidetracked with this talk about "Fosterism." He challenged "Lawyer" Nelson and the president of the Federation to do something for the garment workers by going on the picket line. Wederberg, another carpenter, said that this "Old Stuff," as he called Nelson's personalities, would not get him anywhere.

Johnstone's original speech, calling for militant mass action by the Federation led by its officers, was the feature of the session.

Cites Howat's Fight.

"If Alex Howat had only appealed to the country, the Kansas slave laws would have been repeated all over the land," he said. "But Howat led a militant strike against the court and went to jail for 16 months—and the court was killed."

The Ladies' Garment Workers' Union was facing a batle for its life here, he urged on the delegates, and it must have militant support. The union was not strong enough by itself to smash the injunction, the entire labor movement must aid it.

Johnstone pointed out that the injunctions were coming more frequently, that sooner or later the life of the Chicago Labor movement as a whole would depend on their militant resistance to these infamous writs and he declared that the Federation had better begin now.

Even Gompers Says "Defy."

Samuel Gompers himself had insisted that injunctions must be disobeyed and the authority of American Federation of Labor was behind that. He demanded that the Federation, led by its officials, go out to smash the injunction issued by the "notorious" Judge Sullivan.

The cheers which greeted his call for action gave enthusiasm to the strikers who were present, tho they nonplussed the do-nothing forces on the conservative side.

Volunteers on Picket Line.

Many volunteers from the Chicago labor movement will be on the picket line this morning and there is reason to believe that the Federation thru is Committee, may line up for organized action for the strikers, where it will do the most good, on the picket line.

The "Commitee of 15," in its report to the Federation, told only of the official acts of the committee in holding one meeting and then seeing the mayor, week before last, but individual members of the committee are showing a disposition to force action on the strike line, not merely in the politicians' offices.

Gament Pickets of The Highest Courage Determined to Win

To a reporter for the DAILY WORKER, who called at the Hotel Morrison to inquire about Sophie Altschuler, the picket who was black-jacked by a police thug Friday afternoon, and is still confined to bed, Vice-president Meyer Perlstein said that the girls were showing the highest courage and that police brutality was not able to stop them from doing what they believed to be their duty.

Two more employers were settling, said Perlstein. The girls who are being arrested wholesale know their devotion is not in vain. He told of twenty-five girls being arrested at a time, day by day, some of them beaten, but they are undaunted. Their idea is that it is better to work for the success of the strike, even tho they are arrested, than to sit at home and let the strike be defeated and find themselves going back to work at the vicious sweat shop scab conditions they have determined to end.

Nation's Capitol Looks Forward to Bunch of Thrills

and his associates got $65,000. Daugherty advised "Jap" Muma, Ed. McLean's representative in the fight picture deal, when the pictures were shown to the Harding administration in McLean's house, to see Attorney Alfred R. Urion of Chicago, formerly lawyer for Armour and Company for methods to dodge the law.

Little Profit in Chicago

The pictures were shown in Chicago, but so heavy was the rake-off that there was very little profit.

The scheme, hatched by the Daugherty Department of Justice crowd, was to show the pictures, pay a fine of $1,000 and continue to exhibit them pending, further interference on the part of the Department of Justice.

Captain Baldwin, former department of justice agent, testified that he was forced out because of his activity against law violators. Under attorney generals Palmer and Flynn, the department of justice carried on the same policy as under the present administration, he claimed. Agents who took their tasks seriously soon found themselves out in the cold. Since Daugherty came into office, he was warned by the attorney general to cease his activities in investigating federal district attorneys and other department of justice officials in Texas. Baldwin was finally forced out.

Captain Baldwin told how William Hanson, a close friend of Albert B. Fall, went to the Mexican border in 1922 to foment revolution. Hanson is now immigration inspector along the border and is still busy aiding Mexican counter-revolutionaries, Baldwin continued.

Joseph Klingsbury, a political boss of Texas, wanted Baldwin to make an investigation with a view to blackmail of those involved with Dr. Cook of Fort Worth in the oil fields, but Captain Baldwin refused.

Federal agents were told not to pay any attention to violations of the liquor laws along the Mexican border, testified Captain Baldwin. He even caught a dry agent selling a still to a bootlegger.

F. C. Quimby, the New York fight picture promoter, testified that Jesse Smith, Daugherty's crime partner, had an interest in the contract between Tex Rickard and others for the distribution of the pictures. Rickard vigorously denied that he had anything to do with the pictures a few days ago.

Captain Baldwin told of a raid made on a whiskey cache by members of a whiskey ring in Dallas, Tex. The bootleggers began to fight among themselves. They complained to the attorney general who happened to be "red-hunter" Palmer. Nothing came of it but there was considerable drinking around the Federal Building.

Business done, the Chicago Federation of Labor marched, with brass band pealing, all the way from the Musicians' hall on 175 W. Washington street, to Aryan Grotto, at 8th street and Wabash avenue, to witness the "New Disciple", the labor film which is running for two weeks in Chicago.

Strikers who saw John Fitzpatrick and his followers, marching with measured steps to the tune of the musicians' union band, hope to see the same labor officials and the same brass band, parading for the cause of the sweated garment strikers before it is too late. As one put it: "The 'New Disciple' is just the picture of a strike. Down on S. Market street, there is a real strike, where these labor marchers are much more sorely needed."

Concert for Novy Mir.

The Chicago Russian branches of the Workers Party with the assistance of the Society for Technical Aid and two other Russian organizations, Zvukee Rodini and Leera, will give an interesting program on Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, and Sunday evening, March 23, at Schoenhoffen Hall, Milwaukee and Ashland avenues, for the benefit of Novy Mir.

Tickets 40 cents; at the door, 50 cents.

$8,000 FOR EACH WORKER IN U. S.; THAT'S HIS SHARE

Did You Get Yours? Is Economist Query

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Do you own $8000 worth of property with at least $3400 of it in stocks and bonds? If not why not? That is your share, as one of the 40,000,000 gainfully employed persons, of the country's total wealth. And if you haven't got it then someone else must be holding back your share.

The wealth of the United States, according to the latest estimate of the United States census bureau, amounted to the huge sum of $325,000,000,000 on Dec. 31, 1922. This represents an increase of 73½% since Dec. 31, 1912, when the total wealth of the country was figured at $187,739,000,000.

But as the wealth of the country increased an ever larger share was getting into the hands of the capitalists who own stocks and bonds which facilitate the absentee ownership of property.

The proportion of the country's wealth controlled by stockholders and bondholders increased from about 33% in 1914 to more than 43% in 1924. The following table shows the wealth represented by the New York stock exchange in 1914 and in 1924:

CLASS OF SECURITY.

	1914	1924
Stocks (with par value)	$13,178,436	$18,828,080
Stock (no par value)	......	6,253,638
Corporate bonds	12,894,233	18,430,624
War bonds	......	14,584,000
Total ...	$26,072,669	$58,106,342

This huge mass of capital never stops growing. During the last 12 months it increased by nearly $3,000,000,000. And every increase means an added burden of interest and dividends for the country to carry. According to the Wall Street Journal:

Greatest Wealth In World.

"The New York stock exchange represents more wealth than any institution in the United States. An evidence of this is shown by the fact that 'total interest payable on all bonds not including liberties amounted to $896,216,000 annually on January last compared with $856,345,000 on the corresponding date of last year, a gain of $35,871,000.

"Including the war bonds annual interest payments aggregate a total of approximately $1,500,000,000. These heavy annual interest payments give one a good idea of the great amount of money available for interest at the end of each month, particularly on January 1 and July 1. It is probable dividend and interest payments on securities listed on the New York stock exchange aggregate a total of between $2,000,000,000 and $2,500,000,000 annually."

But, according to the Journal, even this enormous flow of money to the owners of stocks and bonds does not fully reflect the wealth and prosperity from corporations, many of them Standard Oil companies, interest on municipal and state bonds, notes, etc., not listed would add heavily to the stock exchange total.

Income Without Work.

As a matter of fact the U. S. department of commerce reports total dividend and interest payments during 1923 at $3,587,844,000 while the total amount represented by stocks and bonds is estimated at $136,000,000,000. This is the modern embodiment of power. It gives owners the right to require a certain amount of income, i. e., goods and service from the country each year without furnishing any service in exchange. And what is more it gives them a right to direct the work of an ever larger portion of the population, that is, to govern.

Revolutions Don't Stop Oil Gushers In Mexican Republic

By ELLA G. WOLFE
(Staff Correspondent of Federated Press)

MEXICO CITY, March 16.—Uncle Sam has a real nose for oil. That explains his very friendly interest in Mexico. You push a button in Mexico and out comes an oil gusher. On the oil lands belonging to the Transcontinental Oil Company, in the state of Vera Cruz, a new gusher was discovered on Feb. 21. It has a depth of 564 meters and an initial daily production of 477 cubic meters. On the lands of the Corona company (Holland-Mexican) a new gusher was discovered on Feb. 19. It has a depth of 860 meters with an initial daily production of 15 cubic meters. This is only a sample day's report.

In the United States there is constant talk of the fact that the oil companies here have stopped production, also that the oil fields are deteriorating, or that the revolution has made production impossible. This is probably an attempt to raise oil prices and counteract the price lowering of the 400,000,000 barrels of oil now in the United States.

Probe Gasoline Prices.

Probe of gasoline prices, ordered some time ago by the National Attorneys General Association, will be continued at a closed session of the executive committee of the attorneys general here today.

THE PARTY AT WORK

Farmer-Labor Success Depends On $15,000 Campaign Fund That Workers Party Is Busy Raising

The call for a $15,000 Farmer-Labor Campaign Fund issued by the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party is bringing an increased volume of support from the party units. During the past few days the National Office has received remittance from the following party branches:

Lithuanian Branch, Zeigler, Ill.	$10.00
Russian Branch No. 1, Detroit, Mich.	15.00
English Branch, Linden, N. J.	5.00
English Branch, Utica, N. Y.	5.00
Northwest English Branch, Chicago, Ill.	12.00
Tomansburg, New Mex., MAL.	1.00
Russian Branch, Pittsburg	12.00
German Branch, Lawrence, Mass.	25.00
English Branch, Superior, Wis.	5.00
Russian Branch, Milwaukee, Wis.	9.00
Scandinavian Branch, Chicago, Ill.	19.00
Greek Branch, Canton, Ohio	10.00
Finnish Branch, Mass, Mich.	10.00
Lithuanian Branch, Wilkesbarre, Pa.	6.00
Ukranian Branch, No. 1, Chicago, Ill.	1.00
City Central Committee, Syracuse, N. Y.	5.00

With the call for the National Farmer-Labor Party Convention in the Twin Cities on June 17th now out, the campaign for the Farmer-Labor Party Fund becomes of even greater importance.

There must be built up in every state of the union Farmer-Labor organizations during the next three months. Without such organizations the work of the National Farmer-Labor Convention will not have great results. There must be organizations which will do the necessary work to build the election machinery and to carry on campaigns.

Up To Our Party.

A great part of this work falls on our Party. It is to meet the great task which the party must fulfill between now and June 17th that the Farmer-Labor Campaign Fund is being collected.

Every party unit must raise its quota for this fund—$10.00 from branches with less than 25 members, $25.00 from branches with more than 25 members.

If we can do our full duty in the Farmer-Labor campaign this year the workingclass movement will make the greatest stride forward in the history of this country. That is the opportunity we have before us.

Act quickly to collect your quota of the fund. Every branch of the party should send in its contribution before the end of March.

TRAITOR EBERT EXTENDS RULE OF TYRANT GENERALS

"State of Emergency" Continued 15 Days

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER.
(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

BERLIN, Mar. 16.—Dictator Hans von Seeckt, has decided that Germany no longer needs to be governed by generals. In a letter to President Ebert he states that the "state of emergency" which officially existed since Sept. 26, and which was given an especially sharp interpretation by the appointment of Seeckt as dictator on Nov. 8, is now over.

"My mission has been fulfilled," says the general; "the authority of the state has been so established that the recovery of our civic and industrial life, initiated during the state of emergency, can now take place without the latter."

What the Generals Did.

Under the "government by generals" the eight-hour day has been virtually made a myth, the trade unions have been made powerless. Twenty per cent of the population are suffering from unemployment due to the "recovery" process of dismissing employes right and left. The Communist party has been made illegal, likewise the extreme nationalist Voelkische party. And capitalism is enthroned in Germany as it has never been before, as the dictator says: "My mission has been fulfilled."

Nevertheless President Ebert, who still counts himself a Socialist despite the fact that his own trade union has excluded him and that his district has moved his exclusion from the Socialist party, will wait 15 days before allowing the suggestion of the general that the state of emergency end immediately.

Too Much for Vorwaerts.

This is too strong medicine for the Berlin Vorwaerts, organ of the Majority Socialists, which has hitherto defended Ebert thru thick and thin. The Vorwaerts comments as follows: "The cancellation of the military state of emergency is long due and overdue. It should have taken place just as soon as it became apparent that it was ineffective as an instrument against the Bavarian reaction.

Ebert on his part has sent an effusive letter of appreciation to the general, thanking him for "reestablishing safety and security in the fatherland."

The one thing for which the whole military action was ostensibly set in motion, namely as an antidote to Bavaria, has failed miserably. The monarchistic and nationalistic elements of Germany still find Bavaria their haven of rest. General von Lossow, who openly defied the federal government and even tried to persuade generals in other districts to mutiny, still continues to draw federal pay and the Bavarian state assembly in which the motion for ending the state of emergency decreed by the Bavarian government for the state, is defeated over the votes of the Democrats, Socialists and Communists.

Another Effort Will Be Made to Unite Building Councils

The executive council of the Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor will hold a meeting today with five representatives of the two building trades councils and officers of the international unions in an effort to bring peace to the warring factions in the city of Chicago.

The Building Trades Council was divided in June, 1922, over the question of obeying the Landis building award. Various efforts to bring them together since have failed.

New York to Lift Lid of Oily Teapot At Mass Meetings

The Teapot Dome oil scandal will be stirred into and clarified at a mass meeting in New York City, on March 23, at 1 P. M., at the Educational Centre, 62 E. 106th street, under the auspices of the Harlem section of the Workers Party.

The speakers will explain that behind the surface manifestations of graft is the canker of profit which is the core of the capitalist system. The names of speakers will be given in later issues of the DAILY WORKER.

Round the World Flight Will Start Tomorrow Morning

SANTA MONICA, Cal., March 16.—One hundred airplanes among, them the four scheduled to start tomorrow morning at dawn on their globe-encircling flight, participated today in one of the greatest air carnivals ever staged in the United States.

Aviators performed every imaginable feat, close formation, military formation flight, exhibition of sky writing, exhibition of formation flying, exhibition flight, Martin bomber and aerial smoke screen.

LENIN'S WIDOW DEVOTES SELF TO HOMELESS KIDS

Thousands of Orphans In Distress

By JESSICA SMITH.
(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

MOSCOW, March 16th.—Notwithstanding her great personal grief, and the intense strain she has undergone during the past few weeks, Krupskaya, Lenin's wife, has not only remained at her post, but thrown herself with more vigor than ever into the educational work of the government.

She is giving her life to caring for the thousands of homeless children who still ride back and forth over Russia smuggled away in trains or wander from villege to village, or throng the streets of the cities—wild little creatures who have gone thru the unspeakable scenes and events that accompany war and famine, and who, if they are not cared for, become hardened little criminals, opium fiends, child bandits.

In accordance with Krupskaya's request, money that would have been spent on memorials to Lenin is being gathered instead into a fund to care for these children.

In her latest article Krupskaya speaks on the necessity of adequate material help for these children. But the material help is only the beginning. They must be taught, she says, to live well, to feel themselves real citizens of the republic. The desire to study and to work must be awakened in them.

With the little children the problem is not so difficult. Better children's homes must be established for them, and special attention must be directed toward making them strong and healthy.

But with the older children whose lives have been shattered, who have developed into independent little hooligans, some begging, stealing, and knocking about, the problem is more complicated. It is difficult to win their confidence, to confine them to a regulated existence, and it has been almost impossible to keep such children satisfied in the regular institutions.

The way in which Krupskaya is urging that this problem he handled is first of all, to provide shelter and food for these youngsters, by way of night lodgings, community homes, general dining rooms, not with the idea of forcing them into institutions, but where they will come of their own free will. Then around these lodgings and dining rooms all kinds of work and play will be built up with the idea of gradually attracting the childrens' interest. Thru storytelling and reading the children will gradually be drawn into creative work. Regular courses will be built up, where the children will be able to learn a trade, along with the elementary education most of them have missed.

At the present time most of the work of caring for the homeless children in Moscow is being carried on by some 2,000 students of the pedagogical courses, who receive no pay at all for this work. Many more workers in this field are needed.

In order to make it possible for these children to earn their living, Krupskaya suggests that special cooperation is needed from the trade unions.

Metal Trades Workers To Hold Dance and Entertainment Soon

The Chicago Metal Trades group of the Trade Union Educational League has arranged an entertainment and dance at the Workers Lyceum, 2733 Hirsch Boulevard, Saturday evening, March 22, in order to raise funds for the publication of the Metal Trades Amalgamation Bulletin.

The Bulletin is published by the National Committee for the Amalgamation of the metal trades. This again promises a large attendance. A big variety of entertainers is guaranteed. A Henry Moss Jazz band will furnish the music. All militants in the metal trades organizations are invited to be present.

Die In Mine At Taylorville.

TAYLORVILLE, Ill., March 16.—W. E. Baker, this city, was electrocuted and Martin Paccotti, a fellow worker, was seriously injured when the engine which they were riding while at work in a coal mine, became shorted. Efforts to revive Baker were futile. Paccotti was unconscious for four hours. He is in a local hospital.

Thaw Still Seeks Freedom.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 16.—Mrs. Mary C. Thaw, 82 year old mother of Harry K. Thaw, slayer of Stanford White and former husband of Evelyn Nesbit, today admitted that she would aid her son to obtain his freedom from the Pennsylvania hospital for the Insane at Philadelphia.

Poincare Faces Big Fight in the Senate; Franc Recovers Little

PARIS, March 14.—The $100,000,000 thrown into the French treasury momentarily stopped the downward dive of the franc and encouraged Poincare to continue his obstinate fight for a victory in the senate on his proposition for authority to make laws governing immediate economies and fiscal measures by simple decrees without ratification by parliament.

Poincare is now facing the fight of his life in the senate. The opinion in government circles is that he will win by a majority of five or six votes, but his supporters are gradually deserting him. It is believed that the artificial stimulation of the franc will have only a temporary effect, and that the hundred million dollar loan was made on the assurances that he would win in the senate.

That the Poincare forces have little hope of victory, however, is evidenced by their estimate of a victory with only four or five votes to spare.

Poincare stated to the senate that the Ruhr occupation last year netted French business 650,000,000 francs and this year would bring three billion francs. Of this France would take 52 per cent; the rest would go to the Allies.

Poincare boasted that General Dawes, of Chicago, one of the American experts, justified the Ruhr occupation, and he expressed hope that the reparations committee would bring about a settlement. He also praised Ramsay MacDonald's attitude of loyalty to France.

The Belgian franc is very nervous and King Albert has signified his willingness to head a society for the support of the Belgian franc. European exchange is contracting the malady that sent the mark to perdition, even the Danes being obliged to take heroic measures for the defense of their currency.

Negro Has Scorn For "Leaders" Who Opposed Unionism

To The DAILY WORKER: The Negro Press Association at its recent convention, held at Nashville, Tenn., passed a resolution, backing up Coolidge and calling upon the negroes in the United States to resist all forms of unionism and economic radicalism, and to support capitalism.

In other words these negro leaders advised their Race, of whom 98 per cent are wage workers and poor farmers not to form unions or other organizations to fight for living wages, shorter hours and to improve their economic and social status, but to be submissive slaves to the American capitalists.

The cowardly and treacherous actions of the frock coated Charlatans and gum shoe politicians is without precedent.

Even the capitalists themselves must look upon these bended knee, flattering tongued and crying soul fake negro leaders with scorn and contempt.—Gordon W. Owens, Chicago, Ill.

Workers School and T. U. E. L. to Hold Ball at Tammany Hall

NEW YORK, March 16.—THE WORKERS' SCHOOL and the TRADE UNION EDUCATIONAL LEAGUE are running their first annual Spring Festival and Costume Ball at Tammany Hall on Friday evening, April 4th.

The noted Clef Club Orchestra has been engaged to furnish appropriate music. Other attractive features which will be announced later, are being arranged to afford a variety of entertainment.

Here is an opportunity for you and your friends to have a real good time and at the same time contribute directly to the support of these most necessary working class organizations.

Big Grain Harvest In Black Sea Area Of Russia Reported

CHARKOFF, March 16.—The harvest last year in Ukraine permitted to put on the market 215,000,000 poods of grain. Seventy-five per cent of this amount was collected in the states closer to the Black Sea: Odessa, Ekaterinoslav and Donetz Gubernies while the other twenty-five per cent were collected in the states of Charkoff, Poltava, Kieff and Podolsk. The states of Chernigoff and Volynsk have not been touched at all. There is a big demand abroad for Ukrainian rye.

CONGRESS GETS UNION'S BILL TO END LABOR BOARD

Senate and House Both Get Measure

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, March 16.—Senator Howell of Nebraska and Representative Barkley of Kentucky have introduced in the senate and house the proposed railway labor act, prepared and indorsed by the 16 railroad labor organizations, the American Federation of Labor, the Longshoremen, the Marine Engineers and the Masters, Mates and Pilots' organization. The Seamen are not supporting the measure because they have not yet advanced their wages to a point where they can afford to accept the decisions of an arbitration board.

Conference, conciliation, and, in last extremity, the arbitration of major disputes between workers and employers in the transportation industry is the purpose of this bill, which makes peaceful effort at adjustment of any dispute a duty upon both parties.

Repeal Esch-Cummins.

1. Repeal of the labor provisions of the Esch-Cummins law.
2. Abolition of the railroad labor board.
3. Establishing as a duty upon both parties to a dispute that they "exert every reasonable effort to make and maintain agreements" concerning wages and working conditions.
4. Settlement by conference if possible, and sending of disputes not so settled to an adjustment board, in which the two parties have equal representation.
5. Creation of four such adjustment boards—(a) train service, (b) shopmen, (c) clerks and miscellaneous, (d) marine workers.
6. Changes in agreements only after this machinery has been used to bring them about.
7. Board of conciliation, to act only when both parties have agreed to accept the award.
9. Challenge and appeal of award on grounds of error and fraud.

Adjustment Boards.

The adjustment boards will not handle wage changes, but are relied upon, by the railroad and marine workers' union, to handle most of the disputes which may arise. Direct conference between spokesmen of the railroads and of the nationally organized crafts has all along been favored by rail labor as the best means of maintaining industrial peace.

This bill provides that the members of these boards shall be made up of an equal number of men from these elements, to be nominated to the president, appointed by him and confirmed by the senate, to serve three-year terms at $7,000 a year. Decisions will be made by majority vote, and must be rendered within 90 days.

The conciliation board is to be made up of five "impartial" members named by the president, their salaries to be $12,000 and their terms seven years. They are not to be connected with the industry.

If they fail to bring peace, the dispute may go to an arbitration board of three or six persons, and the decision must deal only with the issues submitted in writing. While the parties are to accept in advance the award thus made, it is specifically provided that the award shall not be construed to prevent any employe from quitting work.

Zinoviev's Speech to Leningrad Communists

(NOTE—The DAILY WORKER today publishes the last installment of the great speech delivered by Gregory Zinoviev to the party conference of the Leningrad District. Those of our readers who have read lurid reports of war between Communist leaders should follow this discussion closely. It is true that Trotsky had a difference of opinion over questions of party organization with Zinoviev and others. But the enemies of the Soviet Republic may rest assured that a discussion on tactics will not give them the opening to rush in their war dogs and lap up the blood of the emancipated Russian workers. Trotsky's speech begins on Tuesday.)

* * * *

ZINOVIEV CONTINUES:

AND now to the difference of age among the members of the Party. This is again one of the most important and interesting problems. What is the present state of affairs? The Party can look back upon a history of at least 25 years, and even if we only calculate from the Second Party Congress, that is, from the time of the decisive split of the Party into Mensheviki and Bolsheviki, still we have 20 years to look back upon.

But nine-tenths of the persons composing the Party have not 25 years of Party membership behind them, but only two to three years since the year 1920. This is the main mass of our Party. This is a really remarkable phenomenon. Other parties, formed under conditions of a peaceful parliamentary atmosphere, have developed in a more staid manner.

Three Important Strata.

In these parties the development was as follows: The party was formed, worked for one, two, three, or five years, and gradually gathered around it a personal party staff. In our case the process has been reversed. The main mass of our Party did not stream in until after we had overthrown czarism and Kerensky, and, therefore, happens that a Party whose history extends back over 25 years has nevertheless an extremely young personal staff.

It has one group which has taken over the work of the last twenty years, and which incorporates the traditions of twenty to twenty-five years: it has another group incorporating the five or six years old traditions of the civil war; and finally it has the main mass, incorporating still younger traditions. This has created an exceedingly characteristic and peculiar situation, which cannot be ignored.

Our fundamental group, representing twenty to twenty-five years of development in our Party, and forming the cement holding the Party together, is worthy of the highest place is our esteem, but it is small, it is dying out, and it has not kept up with life in every respect, is not entirely competent for present tasks.

Rise of a New Stratum.

A new stratum is arising from the other side, ready to attack broad questions and responsible work with greater rapidity than the old; often it has a perfect right to do this, but often it is insufficiently prepared. It is one of the most intimate problems of the Party to find out the required golden mean for accomplishing the useful amalgamation of our fundamental stratum, incorporating the history of twenty-five years, with the new stratum, brought into being by the Party during the civil war.

It is imperative that the right basis of mutual relations be found, for these twenty-five years of experience must not be lost to the Party, the gigantic political capital accumulated by the Party during this period must not be squandered in vain, and on the other hand it is equally important that this group of old members throws no obstacles in the way of those young members who are striving for more active participation. It is the task of the old group to transmit its political experience to the young, to further participation in the work under their leadership.

General Situation and Tasks.

Let us now strike a balance. In regard to the working class our cause is in no bad position; the situation has improved. Confidence in our Party is growing among the working class; if we do not commit very glaring economic mistakes, we shall gain the confidence of the working class.

In any case, there is an increase of confidence in the Party on the whole. The dissatisfaction brought about in Summer by the economic situation has proved to be merely an episode. Those organizations which were not able to deal competently with the discontent and strikes in the Summer are now being reorganized and strengthened by us.

Our relations with the peasantry have also improved. The peasant nuclei have themselves eliminated many unsuitable elements, and are in a better position than before.

With respect to the rest of the population, there is something new to record. There is a great stream of sympathy for the ideas of the Soviet power from among the intelligenzia, lower and higher alike, and from every class of the student youth, not only among our own ranks, but from the ranks of other classes. This is the new element characterizing the present moment, for this was not the case two or three years ago.

Necessary Co-Operation.

It possesses one extremely positive side. These are people who can set our schools upon their feet; the scholars can lend positive aid to our higher educational establishments, and can do much towards the solution of that problem raised by Comrade Trotsky in his letter to the savants: It is war which rules chemistry and aviation.

Our positive gain lies in the fact that we obtain the support of cultured and semi-cultured strata which can bring us that which we are lacking. And the attendant minus is that we shall be enveloped in the predominately petty bourgeois influences of these strata, which will take effect upon our party thru a thousand channels unseen except to the most watchful observer.

But we are Marxists, and we must be able to observe phenomena at the very moment when their germ is beginning to break the outer husk.

We point out these new phenomena to you, and say to you: here is a fresh stream of mass sympathy from the intelligenzia, from the student youth, from the teachers; this sympathy bears witness of our strength; accept it and utilize it for our purposes and tasks. But do not forget that it possesses its negative aspects. Be on your guard.

I am of the opinion that we must not permit the discussion now started to assume the forms of that discussion before the Party Congress, when Comrade Lenin was obliged to write that the Party had been attacked by a fever, and that the tempearture must be lowered. We can no longer allow ourselves this luxury.

Inner Party Democracy.

In the first place it is entirely unnecessary; we shall pass matured resolutions on the question of the intensification of Party work and the inner Party democracy—unanimous resolutions.

We shall put the workers' democracy courageously into actual practice. Everything which can and must be done will be resolved upon and put into execution without delay. And we cannot allow ourselves this luxury, in the second place, because the international situation is full of tension and responsibility. Each week may bring fresh surprises. The White Guard press is naturally seizing eagerly upon our discussion.

Surprises may await us in the international situation. This must not be forgotten. And then we have the inner Party question. At the time before the Tenth Congress we seriously pushed the matter to an extreme.

But at that time we had some one whose opinion was absolutely decisive for the whole Party. This was Comrade Lenin. At the present time Comrade Lenin is still so ill that he cannot take any part in our discussion. This throws an even heavier responsibility upon the rest of us.

The Central of our Party, which is composed of a group of Comrade Lenin's scholars, has to make the most responsible decisions. At present it is only possible for the Central to work, to carry out responsible functions, to alter the course when circumstances require it, to remove evils in the Party, and to maneuver on the international front, when it is conscious of possessing the fullest confidence of the decisive fundamental strata of our Party.

Importance of Central.

We can and will accomplish the realization of the principle of election. We must effect a number of improvements in the spheres of trade union and economic work, and correct a number of mistakes. Our Party Central must remain the army staff of the Party. It is only such a staff which is capable of leading the Party during the period of proletarian dictatorship.

Here we must consider everything twenty times before acting; every decision must be accorded the most careful thought, and then finally made with that maximum of determination and that maximum of unanimity which is characteristic of our organization.

Detroit Workers Party Finns Have Fine Labor Temple

By LEMPI SIMONSON
(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., March 16.—The Detroit Finnish Branch, with membership of about 500, has achieved the remarkable success of building a $150,000 Labor Temple just completed. The building has one of the finest gymnasiums in the city, as well as an aduitorium, seating 1,000 people, together with a modern and an up-to-date stage. Besides these large halls there are numerous smaller rooms, stores and offices, equipped with all modern improvements. Since the dedication of the building, overflowing crowds have been attending all the entertainments and meetings.

In the three business meetings that have been held in the new hall at least 100 new applications for membership into the party have been received. The meetings are generally attended by at least two or three hundred members and seem to increase from time to time. Enthusiasm and interest in party matters runs high and a very successful and a prosperous year is expected. One of the most important decisions made by the branch is the arrangement of a two-weeks' lecture course to be held in the evenings. The lecturer Comrade K. Tuominen, is a very able speaker and lecturer, and we are sure that these lectures will be largely attended.

The Finnish branch also boasts of having organized one of the largest YWL Circles in the city, whose membership already reaches 40, and the drive hasn't even begun. The Circle is holding an entertainment Monday evening, the 17th, at the gym, which is free to all.

A large number of the members being Auto Workers, have also interested themselves in organizing into the Auto Workers' Union, a mass meeting having been held Sunday, the 9th, wherein a number joined.

The Land for the Users!

WITH THE YOUNG WORKERS

CONDUCTED BY THE YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE

National Conference of Y. W. L. to Consider Immediate Problems of Youth Organization

By HARRY GANNES

MAY 30, 31 and June 1st, are the dates set for the Mid-Convention Conference to be held by the Young Workers' League of America at Chicago, Illinois.

The last convention of the Young Workers' League was held in May, 1923, and a number of resolutions on the many matters confronting the league, were passed at that gathering. Since that time, the Communist youth organization has grown to almost twice the size reported at the last national meeting. The league has spread to many parts of the country which heretofore had never heard of a communist youth organization.

The many new resolutions such as the shop nuclei plan, the economic struggle (which includes trade union work), anti-militarism have laid the basis for a vast experience, and it is the end of the Mid-Convention Conference to gather the loose ends of the organization together on the basis of the work done. Because of the wide stretch of territory, the N. E. C. of the league deems it advisable not to wait for the time of the next convention. The constitution of the YWL provides that a convention shall be held four months after the Congress of the Young Communist International.

The next Congress of the YCI will be held in September of this year, and that would put the next Young Workers' League convention in January. It is very evident that some sort of national gathering should be held before that in order to benefit from the experience of our various districts.

To those who have studied the problems of the working youth in the United States, it is unquestioned that there is no need for changing the policies of the YWL. There is much need for detailed enlargement of the work; for specific discussion of local problems and the application of national policies in the many different sections of the country. The districts must be brought closer to the national organization. Especially does the shop nuclei work need clarification on the basis of experience.

The proposed conference is expected to jump right into the real tasks of the YWL. The representation will be somewhat smaller than a convention, which lends itself better to detailed work. More articles will appear from time to time on the coming YWL conference.

Actors' Strike Vote Carries by 16 to 1, Managers Weaken

By FREDERICK KUH
(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, March 16.—Sixteen hundred against two.

This is the vote in favor of a strike on June 1, to enforce the demands of the Actors' Equity Association unless the Producing Managers' association yields before that date.

When the actors' organization met at the Equity Theatre here, Hugh Frayne, national organizer, American Federation of Labor, arose to give renewed assurances of the solidarity of the trade unions with their stage colleagues.

Word has reached the Equity that the Shubert group which controls 70 per cent of the leading New York playhouses, is weighing the possibility of breaking away from the Producers' Association, founding a separate employers' federation, and accepting the Equity shop as the basis of agreement with the actors. Shubert has already anounced his acceptance of the Equity demands.

Inquiries in theatrical circles by The Federated Press conveyed information that the managers are prepared to make concessions. They are aware that Convention Week opens in New York at the outset of June. A strike at this time would catch them in their tenderest spot—the box office.

American Officers Grossly Mistreat 6 Haitian Editors

NEW YORK, March 16.—The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, 69 Fifth Avenue, today made public a letter from Le Temps, a daily newspaper of Port au Prince, Haiti, in which it is charged that American officers had mistreated imprisoned Haitian editors.

The letter, written by H. Berthoumieux, publisher of the Courrier Haitien charges that Lieutenants Johnson and Edwards, chief and assistant chief, respectfully, of the American military prison, had entered the cells of Messrs. J. Jolibois, Jr., Guerin, Pierre Paul, Petit, Savain, and Lemaire, and had forced these gentlemen to strip naked. Furthermore, that these editors had been forced to spend entire days unsheltered in the full sunlight. H. Berthoumieux's letter is published in Le Temps of Feb. 20, 1924.

Iron Workers Win $1.50 An Hour.

ST. LOUIS, March 16.—Structural iron workers are the latest craft to win the scale of $1.50 an hour for which local building trades are striving. Wages are increased 25 cents an hour. Sheet metal workers are negotiating, with good prospects for an early settlement.

Protect the Foreign Born!

The Tale of a Ship.

BALTIMORE, Md., March 16.—A tale of a ship which had been battered by storms for three days suddenly turning over and going down with her captain lashed to the bridge, her engineer and his assistants down in the hull and the crew scrambling for the boats, was told by 10 survivors of the Ward liner "Santiago" when they arrived here recently.

TOBACCO LORDS MADE GREATEST PROFITS IN 1923

R. J. Reynolds Happy At $23,039,876

By LELAND OLDS.
(Staff Correspondent of the Federated Press)

Profits of $23,039,876 made by the Reynolds Tobacco Co. in 1923 promise common stockholders the largest return in the history of the company. In fact, these profits are the largest ever shown in the history of the industry which fattens on its ability to overstimulate the nicotine habit among the men and women of America.

These profits are equivalent, after preferred dividends, to $6.76 a share on the 3,200,000 shares of common stock which have a par value of $25. This means a return of 27 per cent for the year. But if we take into account a 200 per cent dividend in 1920 and a 33 1-3 per cent stock dividend in 1922, it appears that stockholders now hold four shares for every share originally purchased. In other words, the real rate of profits for 1923 is over 100 per cent.

Four Times As Many Fags.

The extent to which these huge profits are based on the increase in the cigarette habit is shown by figures compiled at the U. S. department of commerce. Four cigarettes were smoked in the United States during 1923 for every one smoked in 1913. Such is the effectiveness of the huge advertising campaigns which aim constantly at increasing the number of cigarettes smoked each year. The number smoked during 1923 reached the surprising total of 64,450,680,000, while nearly seven billion cigars were consumed.

During the year 1921 the country was induced to spend more for cigars and cigaretes than spent for butter and sugar combined. Expenditure on this habit absorbed approximately one-half as much as the entire country spent for the purchase of automobiles and 30 per cent as much as for clothing. The total expenditure amounted to $806,748,865. The country's expenditure for the benefit of cigarette millionaries during 1923 probably exceeded one billion dollars.

Camel King Swells Profits.

Profits of Reynolds Tobacco Co. have more than doubled since 1919 and have increased eight-fold since 1913. During 11 years this company has rolled up $117,878,212 in profits out of which it has paid cash dividends totaling $48,281,250. The remaining $69,596,962 has been stored up as undivided profit for the benefit of common stockholders.

Spur Philadelphia Workers to Fight Vicious Davis Bills

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., March 16.—The conference called to organize a Council for the Protection of Foreign Born Workers at 521 York Avenue, had forty-two delegates representing twenty-five political, fraternal and labor organizations.

Great indignation was voiced by the delegates at the proposed bills to further discriminate against the foreign born workers. The union delegates particularly pointed out that the legislation was aimed at the trade union movement with the object of hindering the organization of foreign born workers and eventually crushing the labor movement.

A program of action was adopted and all delegates volunteered to visit labor organizations with the object of pointing out the menacing aspect of these bills and to ask for delegates to the Conference. The Resolution is enclosed. A provisional executive committee was elected consisting of the following delegates: R. Baker—Local No. 159 Int. Ass'n of Machinists; J. Wackshell—Local No. 1073, Bro. Carpenters and Joiners; H. O. McClurg—Local No. 587, Bro. Painters and Decorators; J. Stemple—Local No. 1039, Bro. Painters and Decorators. A. Bail was elected provisional secretary.

A motion to endorse the DAILY WORKER for the splendid fight it is making against these bills, was unanimously carried.

The next Conference will be held on Monday, March 31st, at 521 York Avenue.

Get Daugherty

The investigation of the Department of Justice and Attorney General Daugherty have only begun. The disclosures have already revealed evidence of crookedness and corruption on the part of cabinet officials which are far more grave than those brought to light in the Teapot exposures.

Everybody knows that the worst is yet to come—if it will be permitted to come. One tends to get suspicious nowadays whether the whole truth will be allowed to come out about the strikebreaking head of the Department of Justice. Such suspicions and misgivings are especially warranted in view of the gentle treatment accorded McLean by Senator Walsh when the former was given a chance to get away without telling the committee who is the "principal."

These investigations must be pressed to the limit. The workers and farmers have a vital interest to go all the way down the line in these investigations. The workingmen and poor farmers are the only ones who are genuinely interested in getting to the bottom of the whole rotten affair. Obviously, these examinations will dwindle into nothingness unless the workers get on the job and force things a bit.

First of all, the workers, particularly the organized workers, the railway organizations, the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor, and all other agencies of the trade union movement should immediately arrange to come before the Senate Committee and tell the whole country about the conduct of Attorney General Daugherty in the shopmen's and other strikes. Alongside of the crimes and outrages committed by Daugherty and his gunmen in strikes against the workingmen and poor farmers all the infamy and all the blackness already fastened on Daugherty appear angelic.

The whole story of the Daughertys, Mellons, and Hughes will never be told unless the workers force the telling. Regardless of political or other differences, all workingmen ought to line up in one mighty effort to get Daugherty, to get rid of the most brutal enemy of the workers and farmers. The first step in this direction is the disclosure of the crimes of Daugherty against strikers and other workers.

March 17th

Saint Patrick was one of the most useful saints Ireland ever produced. He is worth the weight of his tomb in gold to the American politicians. Democrats and republicans who get their knowledge about Ireland's long struggle against British domination from the caricatures in the so-called comic weeklies and from the burlesque stage, show an intense interest in Ireland on the 17th of March, which is set apart as Ireland's national holiday for what reason the Gods alone know.

They do this for very good, sound political reasons. The capitalists realize that there are millions of Irish workers in America, who, like all the other national groups here, are very interested in the events taking place in the land of their birth.

The politicians capitalize this interest and by pretending a great love for Ireland, and giving an occasional twist to the lion's tail, manage to get the Irish votes on election day.

But while the Irish-American capitalist lackeys honor a dead saint and seek to hold the Irish workers in America at the tail of their political chariot, there are thousands of Irish workers spreading Communist propaganda among their fellow workers.

They are teaching them that the question of freedom for Ireland can only be solved when the capitalist system is overthrown in Europe and thruout the world. They are telling them that the duty of Irish workers in America is to join a fighting party, the Workers Party, that believes in and works for freedom in all lands and for all peoples.

A Forbidden Path

The capitalist press, particularly the financial and industrial newspapers, have been commenting extensively on the rapid growth of the German merchant marine and shipbuilding industry in recent months. They have been pointing out repeatedly that is was the cheapness of German labor that has enabled the capitalists of Germany to forge ahead and that the employers of this country ought to take their cue from the German capitalists.

We are glad to announce that the German workers oppressed by their own capitalists, social patriots and allied imperialists have declared a general strike in the shipyards of Hamburg, Bremen, Lubeck, and Stettin. We feel sure our capitalist masters will no longer ask us to follow the path of the German workers. It is plain that only that which brings profits to our bosses is meritorious.

JOIN THE WORKERS PARTY

Ignorance of the Law

In the courts controlled by the capitalists, ignorance of the law is officially and formally banned as an excuse or a reason for immunity from punishment in case of legal violations.

But this rule is applied in true employing class fashion only when it hits the workers and poor farmers. Whenever the bosses are concerned, this method of legal procedure is dropped either outright or lost in one of the many winding dark alleys of the intricacies of legal technique.

The utter hypocrisy of the pleas of the employers and their apologists regarding their courts and law being based on principles of absolute justice above all economic classes is obvious. The wealthy who make the laws and who have professional legal experts at their disposal are the ones who have all the chance on earth to know what the law is.

For them ignorance of the law is inexcusable. The poor, the workingmen and expropriated farmers, who have to slave away their lives piling up profits for their employers and the bankers and manufacturers, have neither the time nor the money to acquaint themselves with the ponderous statute books. For the workers and farmers ignorance of the law really should be a reason for freedom from punishment under the law.

Yet, what do we find under our capitalist class dictatorship, under our present legal system based on the supremacy and perpetuation of private property interests? Here is the Honorable Secretary of State Hughes, whose latest claim to distinction is his nightmare in which he saw a red flag being hoisted over the White House, pleading ignorance of the law in order to be excused for taking in the Carpentier-Dempsey prize-fight picture show which was run in violation of the law.

Mr. Hughes surely has gall. Does he really think that the masses will fall for this buncombe?

How comes it that one of the leading jurists of the country and a former member of the United States Supreme Court is ignorant of so elementary a law as that involved in the violation of a federal statute thru the bringing in of these fight films?

Yes, ignorance of the law is no excuse for the the violation of the law—when a workingman or a farmer is to be punished. It is, however, a good and sufficient reason when a capitalist, an employing class spokesman, an ex-member of the United States Supreme Court and one of the leading lights of the American Bar Association, is involved.

What better evidence could we want for the capitalist class character of our government and laws? What more eloquent proof do the workingmen and dispossessed farming masses want before they get on the job to get rid of the present government financiers, industrial magnates and plunderers of the resources of the country and establish a Workers' and Farmers' Republic in the United States?

Funny But True

There is a silver lining to the black clouds of capitalist corruption and filth that have been hovering over the national government in Washington. Occasionally a ray of humor pierces the stifling atmosphere saturated with the revelations of sinister and heinous crimes against the masses.

The other day, Senator Moses, known to be the clown of the august upper house of the government, remarked at the Wheeler committee investigating Daugherty that it would be better to ask Gaston B. Means, the former Burns agent, what senators he has not investigated instead of asking him for those he has gone after. This was a highly practical suggestion. We are pleasantly surprised that a man of Mr. Moses' mental and financial caliber could offer such valuable advice. Much to our regret the committee did not adopt the Moses plan for leading the hearings out of the wilderness of shocking testimony.

Then, Mr. Longworth, the multi-millionaire floor leader of the reactionary republicans in the house of representatives made another commendable suggestion, humorously of course, but nevertheless very much in order, that "the rules of the House should provide that when the roll is called that, instead of members responding 'yea' and 'nay,' they should answer 'guilty' or 'not guilty.'"

Both of these suggestions were made in a light vein. They may be funny, but they are very much in place and necessary just now. These proposals have much more in them than the levity accompanying their release. In effect they would surely tend to afford a true and accurate index of the condition of the government today. Funny as these remarks of Moses and Longworth may be, their very birth reflects fundamental change of a state of mind, of attitude towards the whole governmental system of the country that is rapidly being assumed by increasing numbers of the great mass of the population.

Fighting For Morgan

The democrats will make a desperate effort to displace the agent of the Boston bankers, Coolidge, with an agent of J. P. Morgan and Company at the White House.

Should the democrats succeed in this attempt it will not be the first time in the history of their party, or the country, that an attorney of J. P. Morgan & Co. shall have been president of the United States.

In the four-year interval between his first and second term Grover Cleveland was working for the Morgan law firm of Stetson, Jennings & Russel, and was especially picked to be the elder Morgan's personal attorney. John W. Davis, one of the prominent democratic presidential aspirants, is now connected with this same firm.

Tales of the Scab Shops

By ESTHER LOWELL

IF THE sub-committee of the Citizens' Committee is really interested in investigating the striking garment workers' denials of the bosses': "Nothing wrong in my shop. Conditions fine. Everyone working!" let them call on Mrs. A. R. Bock, 4300 N. Ridgeway street, to testify. She and her friend, Miss G. Williams, formerly at Mitchell Bros. Shop, attended Commissioner Mary McDowell's conference of employers and strikers, hoping that they might present their case for the girls. But in the "tea-party" which the conference turned out to be for all but a couple of bosses and the union officials, who met in private with a few "citizens," these eager workers were practically ignored.

Contrary to the bosses' statement that the girls work 45 to 50 weeks in the year, Miss Williams found that in six months' employment at Mitchell Bros. she worked barely ten full weeks.

Exploiting Married Girls.

"We have to go and sit in the shop every day, even if we get only one garment to work on," (piece work plan) Miss Williams, told me, and when we propose a shorter week so that the work will be more evenly distributed, the boss says the girls would rather sit around his shop than home alone. When two thirds of the girls are married, you can guess how glad they are to let their household duties slide while they sit unemployed in the shop."

"Five girls got married during the time I worked at Mitchell's, continued Miss Williams, "and within three weeks each was back at work. Before they were married they say they don't have to join the union because they're going to be married and then they'll work for too little afterwards because they are only supplementing their husbands' meager wages."

Say "Union" and You're Fired.

Mrs. Bock stated that at all the big shops, Arthur Weiss, Francine Frocks, Mitchell Bros, or Lipson Bros., if a girl even says the word "union" she is discharged. Mrs. Bock worked six weeks at Arthur Weiss' and discovered that the girls in the shop all favored organizing but for fear of losing their jobs took no action.

"A year or so ago Miss Grossman, the manager, took a vote of the girls for or against unionizing," explained Mrs. Bock. "The girls were all in favor, but Miss Grossman, contrary to her promise to accept their decision, took 'two weeks to think it over' and has never done anything more.

"Yellow Dog" Contract.

"I was discharged after two and a half days at Mitchell's because of my union affiliation," said Mrs. Bock. "On the third day two other girls and I were asked to sign the 'yellow dog' individual contract by Mr. McLain, the manager. When we asked leave to consider it over our half-hour noon, Mr. McLain became angry. It looked to the other girls in the shop as tho we had refused to sign. When I came back from lunch he told me to go, because they had found out who I was."

The vicious individual contract calls for two weeks' notice to the boss if the girl declines to join the union and states that the employer will give the same notice if he intends to sign up with the union. It demands that none of the girls even speak to a union representative. It offers protection in case of "trouble."

"One of my friends was discharged from Mitchell's because she was seen giving her address to a union girl," exclaimed Miss Williams. "And the boss even discourages any sort of intimacy between the girls. He gets suspicious every time two or more are getting friendly."

Piece Work Discrimination.

Both Mrs. Bock and Miss Williams protested against discrimination in the pricing of garments. Investigators may find sanitary conditions good, but they don't realize how the older employes are favored. If girls complain of price discrepancies on garments that take approximately the same time for completion, the boss tells them to leave.

"I was actually paid five dollars a week extra not to say nothing about prices," Mrs. Bock indignantly asserted. This was at Ribback's in Evanston. "Mrs. Horwitz said that he could send the dresses to the 'farmer' girls at Freeport who were glad to work for less while they were 'learning how to make their own clothes!' I found at Freeport that there was no farmer girls employed, but just the same type of workers as in the larger cities.

$15 Maximum Wage.

"Fifteen dollars is the maximum wage guaranteed the girls in Evanston now," remarked Mrs. Bock. "And when I asked the girls here what they average yearly they say $18 to $20. That is for the old-timers. And when they are busy and make as high as $35 they work from 7:30 in the morning to 8:00 at night, and sit at their machines thru lunch!"

At Lipson Bros. ten to fifteen colored girls are employed, according to Miss Williams. One of the brothers personally supervises the girls and on the pretext that the colored are not so efficient, he discriminates in distributing the dresses. When a white girl protested against this practice, she was offered five dollars to keep quiet.

Benevolence at a Price.

"The boss brags of his benevolence to the girls, giving them three entertainments a year," said Miss Williams, "but he makes the girls themselves pay. Mitchell offers a picnic, a dance and a Christmas party and each time he sells tickets for 50 cents and the girls have to bring their own food. He takes them to the public forest preserve for the picnic, giving them only a half holiday. He uses a rent-free park pavilion for the dance but charges the girls admission. What money is left after paying musicians is supposed to go for the Christmas party, but then again the girls supply the lunch. He does give them each a two-pound box of candy and that's all his touted generosity amounts to."

Won't Hire Jews.

"They ask the girls at all the big shops if they are Jewish," asserted Mrs. Bock. "The bosses won't employ their own people, knowing that they are most likely to be interested in the union.

"Mr. Mitchell asked me how I could associate with that 'riff-raff' in the union," contributed Miss Williams, "and when I retorted that he was associated with Jewish employers, he replied that that was different.

"I have never worked at a place where more effort was made to create race hatred than at Mitchells'," Miss Williams concluded.

Both she and Mrs. Bock have long been active in the union, Miss Williams at Cleveland, Ohio, chiefly. Mrs. Bock was in the movement twenty years ago for ten years and has been back only the last year and a half after ten years outside. She finds the bosses just as hard to deal with as before, altho shop conditions have been considerably improved.

Mitchell has written to married girls who scabbed during the 1917 strike to help him out again now.

Boys Need Hero--Get Electric Chair

By J. O. BENTALL

A new way has been discovered to rid the country of crime.

Give the boys a hero!

This divine plan was given the world by Supreme Court Justice James C. Cropsey, about two minutes after he had sentenced four young men to be killed in the electric chair during the week, beginning April 7.

Morris Diamond, Joe Diamond, John Farina and Anthony Pantano are the four boys who were convicted in Cropsey's court of the murder of two bank messengers in Brooklyn last November. The four bandits were evidently trying to imitate other more prominent members of the robbing fraternity and were less lucky in covering up their exploits. So they were caught, tried, found guilty, sentenced to die.

It is not so often that a bunch of four comes before a judge at the same time to get the death penalty. Even a hardened judge feels a bit creepy about an episode like that. The occasion, however, furnishes him with a text and his sermon is likely to be printed. The judge took advantage of it and told the anxious race that crime must be stopped at once and that the way to stop it is to give every boy a hero.

Which so softened my little heart that I limbered up immediately and gave in to the holy impulse to assist the good judge in placing the desired galaxy of most famous heroes face to face with the tender saplings of our growing generation and help them see the good ways of heroes.

One of the nicest heroes I have ever met was Saul, an early king of Israel. I thot he was about as good as they make them, for he had killed piles and piles of people and God had blessed him in his labors and the story of his reign is still a source of inspiration to every Sunday school boy in Christendom. But one Sabbath morning our preacher shocked me greatly by reading the beautiful song of the lovely women in the Bible who, sure enuf, liked Saul, but had also begun to make goo-goo eyes at an even greater hero, who was said by himself to be a man after God's own heart, and finished up their adoration by singing, "Saul has slain his thousands, but David has slain his tens of thousands."

But that is a little off, perhaps. Let us come closer in time and space. Here is our own exalted national hero whose monuments will adorn parks and courthouse squares and whose yellow stripes will decorate telegraph poles along the highways from coast to coast from now on till the Bolshevik revolution, that great man with the big stick, Roosevelt, gone but not forgotten. How proud we were of him when he donned the Rough Rider rags and led his brave on the run away from the perils in San Juan, and how gloriously he shot a fleeing Spaniard in the back. How thrilled we were when Teddy came back from Africa and told us the glad story of how he had shot a female monkey in her breast and described how the little animal had put her hand over the hole from which flowed a steady stream of blood, and brought grand applause as he remarked, "how cute it looked."

This hero was such a fine example to his brood that one of his offspring became honest and upright enough to stick up the public oil messengers in the dark and get enuf grease to lubricate his transmission gears for several decades.

A later and even more heroic hero, who lied so gently, and kept us out of war, so lovingly, by plunging us into the prettiest little murder game that an envious history has ever beheld, must also be kept in front of the erring youth until the day of the bolshevik revolution. How amateurish Nebuchadnezzar and Herod and Nero and Ivan the Terrible look the minute America's war president appears upon the scene. Here at last we have the great drillmaster of our youth. Even at Wilson's funeral we were told that never before in the history of the world have so many young men been instructed in so short a time and made perfect murderers as under the efficient leadership of the gigantic hero of the world war. It was Wilson who marshalled the four million men of our country and taught them the beautiful art of killing. It was this hero who inspired the churches and the Y. M. C. A. to force all the ferver of religion into the hearts of the soldiers and promise the mthe flow of God's blessings in proportion to the human blood they might be able to spill. It was under the moralizing influence of this arch hero that the song of hate reverberated thruout the whole world and made every brutal instinct in the human heart respond to the impulse of murder on a large scale. Beside him the kaiser became a piker almost unworthy of the name, hero.

Then we have the heroic heroes in the Veterans' Bureau who served a dying multitude of deluded soldiers with nice pieces of thievery out of the hospital larder, and the heroic heroes of the teapot fraternity who seem to have avoided the formality of toil in connection with getting their living, just as the four boys who robbed the bank messengers, attempted to do. Line up your fine, greasy American heroes before the eyes of the boys—Denby, Fall, Roosevelt, Doheny, Sinclair, McLean, Coolidge, Dougherty, Palmer, Burns. Fine heroes, these.

And shall we not add the hero who sentenced the four young bandits to the electric chair, to our exalted list? Had not his action and demeanor at these trials been brazen and arbitrary enuf to cause the comment of even the most reactionary of our newspapers and the keenest lovers of vengeance? Were not his rulings so contrary to constitutional provisions that even the case hardened attorneys stood aghast The papers said:

"Motions for new trials, based on many grounds, were made. Justice Cropsey's actions during the trial o the men were specifically attacke But the judge sat staring ahead wit out any emotion whatsoever. Whe the lawyers had finished he quickly spoke: 'Motion denied' "

This budding hero should help the kids considerably to keep the finger off the trigger.

A FRENCH MUSSOLINI

By JAY LOVESTONE.

THAT the class struggle today is international in its fundamental features is clearly evidenced by the historical events that are taking place in the conflict between the employers and the workers in the various countries of the world

In Russia, in Italy, in Spain, in Germany, the social-patriots, the renegade socialists, had at one time or other been fighting the communists because, we were asked to believe, that the proponents of the Soviet system were opposed to "pure" democracy without which the working and farming masses could never get along. Yet it was invariably found that these renegade socialists always lined up solidly for an iron capitalist dictatorship over the workers when the latter made any attempt to assert their political power to check the aggression of their exploiters.

In France we are about to be treated to a Fascist escapade in order to save "pure" democracy of capitalism. A dictatorship unlimited in ruthlessness is proposed. The Comite des Forges, representing the powerful iron and steel ring that has been throttling France, is the dynamic force behind this move. M. Laurent, a former ambassador to Berlin, one of its members, declares that the safety of France lies only in "suspending constitutional rights and establishing a dictatorship in the Italian manner." "Reforms" are being demanded which in effect mean a dictatorship of the banks over the workers and lower middle class.

The usual preliminary steps to an open attempt at the establishment of this dictatorship are now being taken. Gustave Herve, the ex-socialist, who, during and since the war, has become afflicted with a hatred of the working class and its aspirations for freedom comparable only to his love for unrestrained capitalist tyranny under the guise of "pure" democracy, has come forward with the probable program of the French Fascisti. Herve, who has fought with assault and battery, with lies and calumny, the Workers and Farmers' Republic of Russia because it denies the exploiters of labor the right to decide the fate of the poor workingmen and farmers, is now, a la Mussolini, coming forward with a program of Fascist "reconstruction", aiming to chain the masses like gallery slaves to be ores of their imperialist masters, the capitalists of France.

Mr. Herve's plan for a capitalist dictatorship in France demands that there be levied a tax on bread and sugar; there be issued bread cards; that the government monopoly on matches, tobacco, railways, telegraphs and telephones be relinquished and that these industries be turned over to private capitalist exploiters. Mr. Herve advocates the immediate abolition of the eight-hour working day in order to help the French capitalists tow over the critical period in which they now find themselves financially. Mr Herve demands the organization of a cabinet consisting solely of capitalist experts, business specialists, who will be able to rule the country with an iron hand.

In short, Mr. Herve who was so much in love with democracy when the interests of the capitalists were endangered by the rising power of the workers is now the first one to throw overboard the most elementary principles of his much-beloved democracy when these interests can best be served by a capitalist regime of construction offered by Herve is the most dangerous program of enslavement of the workers that any imperialist has dared propose in France to date.

Mr. Herve is acting true to the policies that the socialist renegades of all countries must logically follow once they fight the attempts of the workers to become the ruling class in society. The form in which Mr. Herve's Fascism manifests itself may be somewhat different from the form it has appeared in Italy in the person of Mussolini. Only the difference in the local conditions prevailing in the two countries is responsible for this outward difference. In essence Mussolinism and Herveism are the same. They both arise out of the policies of socialist betrayal pursued by the apostles of the Second International. In times of stress the capitalists of every country have called on these socialist renegades to save their political and financial necks, to save them from the wrath of the revolutionary oppressed and exploited masses.

Gustave Herve may not be the one to be chosen the French Mussolini but it will be the program of Herve and the spirit of Herveism, at its worst, that will be the driving force in a French Fascist government once it is established.

The workers of the world have a miserable object lesson in the development of Herve and those who stand with him. Mr. Herve has rendered considerable injury to the working class of France and at least as much service to the French imperialist plunderers. But if the workingmen of France and the other countries shall have learned from this case of high treason against the proletariat that in the final instance, in the decisive moment of struggle between the exploited and the exploiters there is no middle of the road, there can be no golden mean and that only the organization of a proletarian dictatorship can save them from the incalculable suffering and misery attendant to the only other alternative, the capitalist dictatorship of Fascism, then they shall have learned a most valuable lesson from this costly experience of theirs with the Herves, the Mussolinis, the Eberts, and the lesser lights of capitalist darkness.

"FRACTION" NOT "FACTION."

In the article "Shop Nuclei—Only Road to a Mass Communist Party, by John Edwards, appearing in Saturday's issue, March 15, 1924, the word "faction" should read fraction."

MILL DOORS

By CARL SANDBURG

You never come back.
I say good-bye when I see you going in the doors,
The hopeless open doors that call and wait
And take you then for—how many cents a day?
How many cents for the sleepy eyes and fingers?

I say good-bye because I know they tap your wrists,
In the dark, in the silence, day by day,
And all the blood of you drop by drop,
And you are old before you are young.
You never come back.

'DAUGHERTY AND BURNS, CROOKS'

Picket! Defy Injunctions!-Says A. F. of L.

STRIKE GAINS WITH PICKETS UNDAUNTED

Remember Sophie Altschuler! Girl Militants Cry

Hundreds of pickets patrolled the skirt and dressmaking zones in the Loop, Northwest and West Side districts and many scabs took notice and stayed away.

The strikers have decided that they will stand by the decision of the conventions of the American Federation of Labor that injunctions shall "be wholly and absolutely treated as usurpation and disregarded, let the consequences be what they may." (1916 convention.) They know that the strike will be won, and won only by militant picketing.

Drunken 'Sluggers."

A small army of police and private "sluggers," some of them reeking with the liquor supplied by the bosses and most of them flying green gorgettes, or shamrocks, tried in vain to crush the militancy of the pickets.

The 'sluggers" flocked to the district in the yellow taxicabs conveying the scabs the bosses were able to get, and as soon as they had gotten past the picket line—where that was possible—the "sluggers" draped themselves around the doorways of the factories and began jeering at the pickets.

Yesterday was the beginning of the third week of the strike and the strikers considered it the crucial day. They considered that the picket line would be the test of the spirit of the strikers. The picket line was filled by strikers and in addition scores of members of the Workers Party and the Young Workers League were also on the line. Still more pickets are needed.

Remember Sophie Altschuler.

"Remember Sophie Altschuler!" was the slogan of the pickets as they marched past the blue-coated slugger friends of Officer 3181.

Only two arrests of girls were made in the morning by the officers who seemed awed by the indignation with which the Chicago labor movement has been flaming since the girl striker was beaten into a helpless condition. The girls arrested were Lena Moritz and Lilliam Libbin, on S. Market street below W. Adams

Sophie Still In Bed.

"Remember Sophie Altschuler: Long live Solidarity!" cried Miss Moritz to the other pickets as the police were hustling her into the patrol wagon.

Sophie Altschuler was not on the picket line. Her doctor would not permit her to leave her bed. She has not fully recovered from the effects of the beating that Officer 3181 gave her Friday night. She hopes to be able to go on the picket line this morning.

Arrest Cloakmaker Official.

Morris Bialis, manager of the cloak makers' union, was arrested by detectives from the state's attorney's office. He was taken to the office of the state's attorney where he was turned over to an assistant state's attorney and questioned.

He had been arrested because one of the bosses on Market street had pointed him out to the detectives and said that he was a leader of the strike. Bialis' union is not involved in the strike.

Bialis Released.

When word was taken to the union that the state's attorney had Bialis in custody, Oscar Nelson was instructed to go at once to court and get a writ of Habeas Corpus demanding his release.

Nelson went before Judge Walter Steffin sitting in the criminal branch of the superior court. Steffin issued a writ returnable at 11:30 and the state's attorney released Bialis at 11:15. Crowe's men knew they had no right to arrest Bialis and were

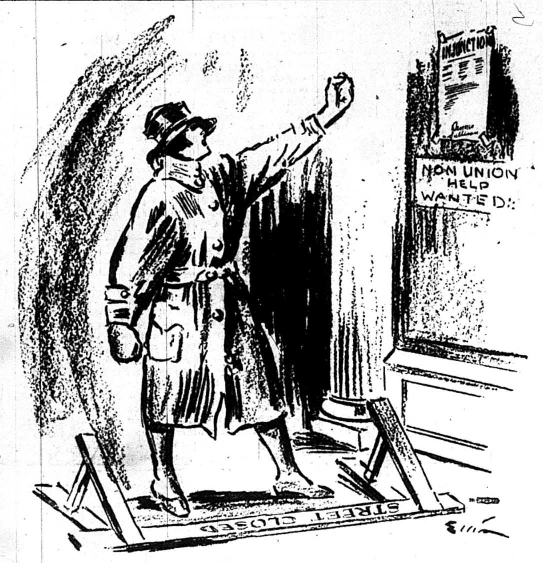
"REMEMBER SOPHIE ALTSCHULER!"



6 MORE BOSSES YIELD TO UNION, ARRESTS LESSEN

Labor "Committee of 15" Meets Thursday.

Six more Chicago garment bosses surrendered to the International Ladies' Garment Workers yesterday afternoon and negotiations are going on with several more who are weakening. More than 70 employers have now settled with the union since the walkout to enforce union conditions was called.

The bosses who yielded are Blecker, Arnold and Engelberg, 237 S. Market St.; C. H. Eisenstein & Co., 334 S. Market St., Perfection Skirt Co., 1011 Roosevelt Road; Broadway Dress Co., 12 N. Market St.; Karlin and Munvers, 308 S. Market St., and Du Fine and Krelstein, 334 S. Market St.

It will be remembered that at the peace conference called by Miss Mary McDowell and the citizens' committee that Blecher, Arnold and Engelberg were represented and declared that they were desirous of a settlement with the union and certain other companies were also.

Message to Mayor.

The special sub-committee of the citizens' "strike settlement" committee met yesterday afternoon and sent a message to the mayor. The contents of the message were not announced but it is known that the commitee has taken the stand that the mayor must stop police brutality at once or face a publicity campaign that will be disastrous to him. The beating of Sophie Altschuler aroused keen indignation.

Arrests lessened somewhat yesterday. Sophie Young, a picket, was arrested yesterday afternoon, being seized on S. Market St., below Adams and charged with assault by employers' pug uglies. She was taken to the S. Clark St., bailed out and appears in court this morning.

Other arrests yesterday, besides the three mentioned on the front page, were of Fannie Batt, Ethel Schrager, Shirley Corngold, Anna Welcher, Ida Siekoff, William Simon and Morris Sher. Fannie Batt and Annie Welcher are working in shops which have settled. They were arrested when they stopped to talk with friends on the picket line. All will be arraigned in S. Clark St. police court this morning. They are out on bail.

Federation Picketing.

The committee of 15 of the Chicago Federation of Labor will hold an important meeting Thursday at which the issue of mass picketing by the Federation itself will come up for decision. Meanwhile members of the labor unions affiliated with the Chicago Federation are acting on the announcement of the chairman of the Committee of 15 at the Federation meeting Sunday afternoon and are volunteering their individual services to the Garment Workers' Union for the picket line.

GARMENT BOSS KEEPS POLICE AND SLUGGERS SOAKED WITH LIQUOR

"Sluggers" and city policemen used by Stein & Seiden, are kept constantly soaked with alcohol by the two bosses of that firm, declare strikers who have been picketing the building at 212 S. Market St.

The girls say that both members of the firm are constantly escorting the thugs up to the offices on the second floor for liquor.

"Come on boys, have a drink!" Stein and Seiden say, right in front of the pickets. The "sluggers" and policemen come down a little later, flushed and bulldozing and ready for any act of brutality, such as the beating of Sophie Altschuler.

The same kind of evidence was given the citizens' committee at Miss McDowell's conference last Thursday regarding the firm of Arthur Weiss on W. Adams street. These drunken bullies are the creatures Mayor Dever considers fit to preserve "law and order". Fortunately they arouse only the contempt, not the fear, of the striking girl garment workers.

Fire Wipes Out Family.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., March 17.—Mrs. Susie Stoval, 41, Negress, and her five children ranging in age from two months to 14 years were burned to death today in a fire which destroyed the house in which they were sleaping.

OIL COMMITTEE TO END THE TEAPOT QUIZ

"Principal" Mystery Is Still Left Unsolved

WASHINGTON, March 17—As the capitalist press thruout the country is limbering up for a campaign to sidetrack the oil investigation on the ground that it is destroying confidence in the government, it was announced today that the committee is approaching the end of its labors.

Already the Hearst press is featuring inspired cartoons, insinuating that no evidence has been produced so far nothing in fact but a large crop of rumors.

Whitewash Coming Soon!

There is a general belief that the refusal of the committee to definitely fix the "principal" telegram on Coolidge, and the ease with which Ed. McNeal was let down, indicated that the probers had reached the limit of their usefulness.

"What will LaFollette do when the Walsh investigation quits, leaving the men higher up unsmirched?" is the question now asked in Washington progressive circles. It was La Follette who introduced the original Teapot Dome investigation resolution.

May Institute "Court Action."

1.—Institution of court action to cancel the leases and promise of criminal proceedings against at least three of the principals.

2.—Resignation of Secretary of the Navy Denby who signed the leases and investigation of the official acts of Attorney General Daugherty now under way by a separate senate committee.

Women's Peace Conference May 1-7.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—The first international peace conference to be held in America since the world war will be that of the Women's International league meeting here May 1-7 in its fourth biennial congress.

Attorney General and Pal, Both Identified as Ringleaders In Great Picture-Graft Conspiracy

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, March 17.—Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty was identified as the man behind the plan to exhibit Dempsey-Carpentier fight films in more than a score of states, by Jap Muma, one of the promoters of the plan, G. O. Holdridge, former agent of the Department of Justice, testified today before the Senate committee investigating Daugherty.

Holdridge said under oath that Muma told him Daugherty and William J. Burns, head of the department's secret service, were both involved.

"He accused the attorney general with being the head of the conspiracy and Burns with aiding and abetting it," Holdridge testified.

Holdridge also brought in the name of E. B. McLean and related a story Muma told him of the occasion on which the fight pictures were given a private showing at McLean's house in Washington. Muma said, according to Holdridge, that at that time, in the presence of "Cabinet members, diplomats and Congressmen," there was a general discussion of the law against shipping fight films in interstate commerce and it was agreed the law was aimed primarily at pictures of the Jeffries-Johnson fight.

Thinks They're Both Crooks.

He never reported to them the result of his investigation of the fight film "conspiracy," he said, "because I had never heard of a precedent where an agent would have to tell his chief, the attorney-general of the United States, Burns, or anybody else that they were crooks."

"Do you think they are?" Senator Ashurst asked Holdridge.

"I certainly do," he responded instantly.

Thomas P. Dowd, manager of the Postal Telegraph, Washington office, submitted to the committee copies of telegrams that passed between Gus T. Jones, former department of justice agent, former Secretary of the Interior Fall, E. L. Doheny and Harry F. Sinclair at San Antonio, Texas, from December 1, 1923, to March 7, 1924.

The telegrams were asked for in connection with investigations of an alleged conspiracy to run guns and ammunition into Mexico.

Wheeler Charges Conspiracy.

Holdridge said he investigated the pictures of the Dempsey-Carpentier fight about November 1, 1921.

Wheeler read a letter which notified department of justice agents that "there was an apparent conspiracy" to show the pictures in various states.

"Keep a careful lookout for any violations and attempt to ascertain evidence that may be used to prosecute a conspiracy charge," the letter dated November 16, 1921, stated.

"The department is looking for this evidence so that further showing of the films may be stopped."

The letter was signed by William J. Burns, chief of the bureau of investigation of the department of justice.

"Prior to the receipt of that letter had the pictures been exhibited in Albany and in other New York cities?" Wheeler asked.

"Yes, sir."

Wheeler asked him to describe a visit he made to New York after receipt of the letter.

"In New York I met Spellacy and he told me that we ought to see a

One More Day, Then Our Teapot Special Arrives

FROM every nook and corner of the United States letters stream in clamoring for "The Teapot Special" of the DAILY WORKER, which will appear tomorrow. The workers are impatient. They want us to rush their orders, not to lose a moment.

From the mountain communities of Kentucky, where the native-born American workers are illiterate even tho America is supposed to do a lot for its people, from the mining towns of Pennsylvania, from way down Florida (not Palm Beach), from the big cities of New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Cincinnati and the rest, from the two coasts, from the Middle West, from local unions, from unemployed miners, from every part of this vast country, there is a flood of orders and with them warm messages full of eagerness and enthusiasm.

The workers and farmers over the country are aroused. They are expressing their indignation. They want to get at the bottom of this whole thing. They want to know the full truth about this enormous corruption within the rotten government, and they know where to get the truth. The DAILY WORKER will give them all the truth, for it is the enemy of the government and has nothing to hide from the workers and farmers.

In a few hours our presses will be working beyond capacity turning out the enormous "Teapot Special" edition.

Never before was such enthusiasm aroused among the masses. By their great demand for "The Teapot Special" the masses are demonstrating against the criminal lackeys of the capitalists, against the whole robber capitalist class, against the whole rotten system from top to bottom, against the capitalist government honeycombed wih graft, sold to the millionaires, serving its rich masters and crushing the workers and farmers.

From Denver, Colorado, we receive a letter which says: "Rush (1000) one thousand copies of the "Teapot Dome Special". We held off because we expected to raise enough money for 5000 copies."

From Livingston, Ill.: "Enclosed please find $1 check for 50 copies of The Teapot Special and let me express my opinion that if we had this DAILY WORKER for many years, it would be close to the tumble of this existing system of today."

And so the letters read one after another, all of them expressing their confidence in the Workers Party whose organ the DAILY WORKER is, expressing solidarity with the Communist movement.

The Workers Party is carrying on the fight against the oppressive capitalist government, and one of its mightiest weapons is the DAILY WORKER. The workers and farmers of this country are beginning to realize who is championing their cause, and they are turning to us, they are eagerly grabbing up the DAILY WORKER, which is their paper, and which fights against their enemies.

Workers and farmers of the United States get aboard the "Teapot Special" and take a trip to Washington and elsewhere to get a close view of what the exalted government of the grand old capitalist democracy is up to!

Wire Orders will be received up until 10 this evening.

Send wire orders to DAILY WORKER, 1640 N. Halsted Street.

VANDERLIP PREDICTS EVIDENCE THAT WILL "SHAKE THE NATION"

WASHINGTON, March 17.—Evidence yet to be brought forward in congressional investigations "will shake the nation" Frank A. Vanderlip, New York financier, said in a formal statement here today.

Declaring that most of the charges of corruption so far made are proven, Vanderlip said "there are departments other than the department of justice about which there will be shocking revelations."

Vanderlip took issue with statements that the country is in a state of hysteria as a result of disclosures of corruption by the inquirers, declaring that it is "as yet almost in a state of coma."

D. OF J. TOOL OF PRIVATE BURNS' FIRM

Letters Show How Labor Spying Was Divided

How William J. Burns used his job with the Department of Justice in Washington to drum up trade for his private detective agency with the copper companies of the Southwest is told in the letters from G. P. Pross, manager of the Burns Los Angeles office, to the head office of the agency in New York.

These letters are among the 200 Burns labor spy letters which have fallen into the hands of the Industrial Workers of the World and which are now being made public thru Industrial Solidarity. They constitute one of the most startling exposes of the labor spy published in years.

Getting In With McAdoo.

In one of the letters we read how Burns was planning to hold his Department of Justice job should McAdoo win the White House post.

In another letter, which follows, the Los Angeles manager tells how the expenses of the Burns labor espionage is pro-rated among the various mining companies and how the agency is aided by Department of Justice operatives.

"Getting Line" On Radicals.

The letter is dated Los Angeles, California, May 19, 1923, and is addressed to William Garven, Manager, New York office, Burns Detective Agency. Extracts from it follow:

"I am enclosing some reports of one of my investigators, who is making a tour of all mining camps thruout the State of Arizona. This tour is being made so as to get a line on the radical movement thru the entire State, and our clients are all the big mining interests of Arizona, they having formed an association, and I am to do all the work for the Association.

Costs Are Pro-Rated.

"Since the first investigator (whose reports I am enclosing) left, we have added another man to start from the southern end of Arizona around Tucson; then on the 5th of this month I am to start a third man, etc. What one investigator misses the others ought to pick up, and still it makes the investigation very cheap, as the charges for time and expenses are to be pro-rated between the different companies, and there being some thirty odd companies you can readily see that the investigations will not cost them more than two or three dollars a day each.

Burns Drummed Up The Trade.

"All arrangements on this operation were made while the Governor (Burns) was here in Los Angeles. I am also sending copies of each report to him so that the Department of Justice will have full records of all going on; and, in fact, the agent in charge of the Department of Justice in Arizona is to work in conjunction with our investigators so that should anything in particular come up, that would need immediate attention, the agent in charge will be ready to go with us.

See The Guggenheims.

"I will keep sending these reports from day to day as they come in so that you will be thoroly conversant with this radical situation, and it may come in good stead for you in New York City, as you well know the Guggenheimers and other big interests are always interested; and it may lead to your being able to obtain some work which we can handle for you."

Then on June 23, Pross wrote to Mr. R. J. Burns, Prest., care of the New York office as follows:

Mine Managers "Pleased".

"My Dear Raymond: Since May 2nd we have had our investigator W-1, tied up on an investigation for the Mining Interests of Arizona . . . the mine managers of

ROBERT E. CROWE STARTS ANOTHER ELECTION STUNT

Fake Crime Hunt Does Not Fool Criminals

Robert E. Crowe, who has turned over his office to the Chicago Chamber of Commerce for use in its open shop campaign, has now on the eve of an election announced a great campaign to clean up criminals.

This is the usual stunt of the politically and morally bankrupt politicians who have sunk so low in the estimation of those who elect them that they must continually create artificial situations to get before the public and be proclaimed heroes by the capitalist press.

Sewer-Pipe Propaganda.

It is reported around newspaper circles that this stunt of Crowe's has been planned by himself and his backers in conjunction with the Chicago Tribune and Daily News, the two main sewer pipes of the Brundage-McCormick-Lawson republican machine. No doubt these papers will carry columns for many days on the great man-hunt headed by State's Attorney Crowe.

He is out to arrest every murderer, burglar and gunman in town. He should start with his own gunmen who are out in the dressmakers' zone every day clubbing union workers and throwing them in jail. Is it surprising that murderers and thieves should escape when the officials of Cook county seem to be entirely concerned with strikebreaking activities? Boyle O'Roche once said "That no man could be in two places at once unless he is a bird." Crowe is a blackbird but even a Crowe cannot be arresting strikers and apprehending criminals at the same time, no more than he can be drunk and sober simultaneously.

Arrests Strikers Only.

State's Attorney Crowe expects to arrest 75 persons before his great campaign is over. He also declared that robberies totalling $3,000,000 would be cleared up. So far his thugs have arrested more than 75 dressmakers but not one clothing boss. We are of the opinion that if he wants to clean up robberies he should start with his own office and end up in the local office of the Burns agency. Other unlicensed operators may have gotten away with a few dollars, but he would probably find the bulk of the loot on the persons of the so-called protectors of the public.

Crowe's campaign is only an election stunt.

Standard Oil Is Back of McAdoo's Boom in Montana

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HELENA, Mont., March 17.—The state committee of the democrat party here is for McAdoo for president. The Standard Oil interests represented in this state by the Anaconda Mining Company are solidly behind the McAdoo candidacy following his endorsement by Walsh and the clean bill of health given him by officials of railway unions at Chicago.

Rank and file democrats are charging that the state committee has packed the state convention for McAdoo and exhibit the following telegram sent to prospective delegates as proof of their contention:

> Democratic state central committee meeting, Helena, March 18, will be asked to pass resolution endorsing candidacy of W. G. McAdoo for president. If you have given your proxy for that meeting and favor candidacy of Mr. McAdoo please advise your proxy by wire to vote for such resolution. It is essential to Democratic success that we have railroad and other labor vote which is solidly behind McAdoo. We feel that failure to adopt the resolution would be interpreted by THEM as meaning we do not want their support. Similar resolutions were offered by all railroad organizations in America and unanimously passed at Chicago. Senator Walsh has repeatedly endorsed McAdoo's candidacy. No other candidate is seeking endorsement. Send copy telegram to Governor Stewart.

Railroad labor here is not for McAdoo but is swinging rapidly towards the Farmer-Labor party which is conducting a very successful organizing campaign.

Safe Place to Get Killed.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 17.—To the bible class of the First Congregational church here, which he was bidding farewell as its teacher, Curtis Dwight Wilbur, secretary-elect of the navy, said "the one policy I have formed is a determination to make the American navy a safer place for the boys of American mothers to work or live."

"Picket! Defy Injunction!" Is Advice of the A. F. of L. In An Official Declaration to Workers not anxious to go into court and tell a judge so.

Y. W. L. Members Discharged.

Pete Herd and John Harvey, both members of the Young Workers League, who were arrested Friday morning and who were arraigned in boys' court yesterday morning were lectured to and discharged by Judge William E. Heilander.

"Dennie" Still Mule-Headed.

The motion of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union to dissolve the injunction obtained against them was heard yesterday by "Dennie" Sullivan. As was expected "Dennie" refused to either vacate or modify the injunctions.

Peter Sissman, attorney for the union, first tried to have the judge modify the injunction to permit the union to have one picket at the shops of the various bosses to attempt to peacefully persuade the strike-breakers to join the strike.

Law Against Sullivan.

Injunctions are supposed to be issued in order to prevent strikers from intimidating people who are working during the strike. Sissman said that the United States Supreme court has held that a single picket does not constitute intimidation. "Dennie" asked for Illinois law on the question. Sissman said that there has never been any decisions made by the state Supreme Court which covers this point and that therefore the court was bound to accept the law as laid down by the U. S. Supreme Court.

"Dennie" asked Dudley Taylor to say his piece against the arguments advanced by Sissman. Taylor said that the injunction was predicated upon the allegation of a conspiracy on the part of the union to raise wages and that any means used to further that conspiracy however lawful became unlawful when used to further the conspiracy.

"Dennie" Defies Supreme Court.

As expected "Dennie" upheld the position of Dudley Taylor in face of the decision of the U. S. Supreme Court and denied the right of the union to have a single picket on the picket line.

Next the question of the injunction taken out by the Chicago Dress and Skirt manufacturers association was taken up. Leo LeBosky represented the bosses. Sisman tried to have the injunction vacated on the grounds that it was obtained on "information and belief" and the Appellate court of this state has held that that is not sufficient grounds on which to issue an injunction. This, too, was denied and the injunction stands as originally issued.

Licks Taylor's Boots.

The attitude of "Dennie" was interesting to watch while the various lawyers talked to the court. When Sissman was addressing the judge he sat with his eyes closed and a look of boredom on his sallow mug. But when the famous union-fighting Dudley Taylor rose to talk, the judge sat up and listened with every sign of attention and respect.

It has not been announced if the union will appeal the decision of "Dennie" on the injunctions.

Daugherty and Burns, Crooks!

man named Muma. We called him up and went to see him at the Ansonia Hotel," Holdridge said.

"What was said by Muma?"

"He talked about general things and then asked me if I was acquainted with a man in the secret service with a foreign sounding name. I kidded him about not knowing the name and he said that a friend knew the secret service man who was 'apparently looking for a shake-down.'

Old Friend of Burns.

"During this first visit Muma showed me an autographed photo of William J. Burns taken about 15 years before. It was torn in the middle and pieced with plaster. Muma said Burns and Daugherty were old friends of his. He had two letters from Daugherty which he showed me. In each of the letters the salution was 'My Dear Muma.'"

"What did the letters say?"

"In both cases they were apparently answers to letters sent to Daugherty by Muma. They were in connection with someone getting promotion in the postoffice department, I think.

Daugherty Back of Muma.

"When I went back to Albany I prepared to write a report on the Dempsey-Carpentier fight pictures when Spellacy got me and told me, very excitedly, that Muma was running the conspiracy to show the pictures. Spellacy said that Fred Quinby was getting excited over an investigation being made by a department agent named Navarro. Spellacy gave me to understand that Attorney General Daugherty was behind Muma, and he wondered what we should do."

"The statements that Muma made to Spellacy were later confirmed by you?"

"Yes."

"What were the nature of the statements?"

"He accused the attorney-general with being the head of the conspiracy and Burns with aiding and abetting it."

"Why didn't you report it?" asked Wheeler.

"I wanted to find out about the credibility of Muma," replied Holdridge, continuing. "I came to New York again and went to see Muma to find out who was behind him. I told him I understood a big newspaperman was behind the conspiracy to distribute the fight films. Spellacy had previously mentioned Edward B. McLean, publisher, and friend of President Harding."

Holdridge refreshed his memory by reading from a personal memorandum made at the time and continued as follows:

"I read the report to Muma I was going to make to the department of justice and Muma told me this story: 'On or about July 4, 1921, Mr. Muma left New York for Washington, acting on arrangements previously made, with copies of the freshly developed films. He didn't explain with whom he made arrangements but said he'd had everything fixed.'"

SOUTHSIDE WORKERS TAKE UP THE FIGHT FOR BETTER HOUSING

Response to the campaign being carried on by the DAILY WORKER for better housing conditions among the Negroes has been warm and immediate. Everywhere favorable comment can be heard about the work the DAILY WORKER is doing for the benefit of the Race.

A large mass meeting has been arranged under the auspices of the Negro Tenants' League, newly formed by some of the prominent South Side Negroes. At this meeting, which will be held March 31st in Oddfellows' Hall, 3335 S. State street, Lovett Fort-Whiteman, Gordon Owens, Bob Minor, Otto Huiswood and J. Louis Engdahl have been invited to speak. Already many workers on the South Side have declared their intention of attending this meeting, and doing all in their power to curb the white and Negro real estate sharks who have been fleecing the Race.

Dr. W. E. Charles, of S. Michigan Boulevard, has been following the DAILY WORKER housing campaign with keen interest.

"Every Negro in the country should read the DAILY WORKER," said Dr. Charles, "and should come to the meeting on March 31 at Oddfellows' Hall to learn what can be done to secure better housing conditions for the Negroes."

The Publishers' Service Bureau, of 3621 S. State street, has arranged to distribute the DAILY WORKER to news stands on the South Side. If you do not see the DAILY WORKER on your news stand ask for it, or go to Hayes' Book Store, 3640 S. State street.

Draft Evader May Return.

BERLIN, March 17—Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, American draft evader, may return shortly to the United States, it was reported today at both Eberbach, the slacker's present residence, Berlin.

14 Bake Shops on South Side Sign up With Bakers' Union

"On its toes and fightin' active," is the way Louis Kullor, secretary of Bakers' Union, Local No. 2, describes his union. At the last meeting of the local, 23 new members were brought into the union. It was decided to renew the agitation for the union label on all bread and also to renew the fight against the scab Ward Baking Co. The publicity recently given the breat trust in Washington, makes the members believe that the workers are anxious for the truth on the Ward concern.

It was reported by the business agent that 14 baking shops on the South Side have signed agreements with the union.

Oppose Only One Term.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—The Senate today defeated overwhelmingly a proposed amendment to the constitution limiting the president to one term of four years. The measure was proposed by Senator Willis, republican, Ohio. The vote was 70 to 4. Senators voting for it were Willis, Harris, Adams, Colorado, and Underwood, Alabama.

Cheats the Gallows.

ATLANTA, Ga., March 17.—J. B. Satterfield, sentenced to hang for the murder of his brother-in-law, escaped from the "death row" in Fulton tower today. Investigation showed that small saws smuggled into the cell, were used to cut the bars.

Fire Truck Hits Auto.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 17.—Mrs. Charles F. Canterbury, 58, of this city, was killed and her husband and two daughters injured when their automobile was struck by a fire truck answering an alarm.

$2,000,000,000 Bonus Bill

WASHINGTON, March 17.— The bonus bill before Congress will apply to 1,477,412 persons. It is estimated that total cost of the insurance provisions would run to $2,025,889,696 spread over a period of twenty yea

NEGRO STRIKERS TO HOLD ROUSING MASS MEETING

Demand All Colored Workers Organize.

"Colored Workers Organize!" is going to be the slogan of the committee of Colored strikers involved in the strike of the garment workers at a mass meeting which will be held at Unity Club Hall, 3140 Indiana avenue, Wednesday evening.

The meeting has been called by the colored strikers in order to present to the Negroes of Chicago the issues of the strike and arouse them to help the strikers win.

Deal With Scab Issue.

Some Colored workers have been induced to scab in the present strike. They have been told that they will be well-taken care of after the strike if they do the dirty work of the bosses now. The Colored workers, who have been in the garment industry, want to tell the Colored workers generally what they can expect from the bosses once the strike is ended.

The committee of Colored strikers have presented their case to many Colored workers on the South Side thru churches and Negro newspapers and thru the columns of the DAILY WORKER. Thru this mass meeting they hope to reach hundreds of others.

Leo Krzycki, of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers; Robert L. Mays, of the Railway Men's Asociation; Meyer Perlstein, vice-president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and others will speak.

Whiteman Will Speak.

Lovett Fort-Whiteman will speak for the Workers Party of America and tell the Negro workers about the larger aspects of this strike and the attitude of the labor movement toward colored workers.

In addition to the fine speakers there will be an unusual musical program. The Harmonic Glee Club will sing. Miss Alpha Bratton and Miss Elmira Brown will also sing.

The meeting promises to be the first move of this group of militant Colored workers to bring the message of unionism to Negro workers of Chicago.

Sees Intelligence In Trade Unions, Not In The House of Commons

(By The Federated Press)

OTTAWA, March 17th.—"If one-half of the intelligence displayed in trades unions' meetings were in evidence in the house of commons we would not be in such a mess," said J. S. Woodsworth, leader of the labor group in parliament at a dinner held by the local union of the Steamfitters' and Plumbers' Association of Canada.

"The fact that the labor party has brain," he continues, "is beyond doubt; but the trouble is that we who make up that party have no confidence in ourselves. The great need is for self-assurance. Great Britain has given us a wonderful lead. There the formerly despised labor people have been found fit and capable to look after the British Empire. It is not sufficient for us to rejoice in that triumph, but we must turn to and work out our own salvation."

Supreme Court Sides With Tobacco Trust Against Investigators

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, March 17.—The Supreme court today decided that the Federal Trade Commission in pursuing an investigation into the trade transactions of a private corporation could not enforce a blanket demand for all correspondence and other data in the possession of the company being investigated.

The American Tobacco Company and the P. Lorilard Company refused to turn over to the commission correspondence and telegrams exchanged with their agents thruout the country. Lower courts sustained the companies and the commission appealed to this court.

The Latest Labor Newspaper.

The new working class paper, the Farmer-Labor Voice—which is the national organ of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party—is developing a large circulation thruout the Dakotas, Montana, Nebraska, California and Washington. And it has already gained a strong foothold in large industrial centers, because of its having been formerly the Voice of Labor.

The readers of this newspaper find its contents especially interesting because of the close attention which it gives to the basic grievances of the farmers and industrial workers. At the present time, Farmer-Labor Voice is more strongly stressing the farmers' critical situation, the problems of the worker in the agricultural districts being right now the more urgent. Each issue of the paper has been carying special articles by prominent farmer-laborites—in the various Northwestern states particularly, where the present crisis is not acute.

The newspaper also carries as a regular feature its FarmerLabor Forum, which should prove to be of especially absorbing interest to the farm and city workers alike.

Let "Committee of 15" Adopt Slogan of "On to the Picket Lines!"

THE Chicago Federation of Labor should not allow an injunction by the corporation tool Denis Sullivan prevent it from striking a strong blow in behalf of the dressmakers now battling against the bosses. Its duty is to appear on the picket lines and call on the trade unionists of Chicago to follow suit.

At last Sunday's meeting of the Chicago Federation of Labor delegate Jack Johnstone of the Painters' Union brought up the question of "mass picketing." Attorney Oscar Nelson, republican politician, who is in the faction of that party opposed to State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe, was immediately on his feet branding Johnstone's suggestion as "Fosterism." When another delegate, who happened to be born in Denmark, applauded this sentiment of delegate Johnstone, lawyer Nelson turned to him and said, "Why don't you go back to where you came from?" This is fine language from a man who is making a good living defending unionists who are fighting for unionism, many of them foreign born workers.

"ON TO THE PICKET LINES!"

Oscar Nelson opposed "mass picketing" as Fosterism. John Fitzpatrick called it "bunk." Oscar Nelson is a consistent reactionary who is in the labor movement solely for the benefit of Oscar Nelson and nobody else. John Fitzpatrick got a reputation as a fighter and progressive, but he uses most of his energy nowadays pounding the gavel and drowning the voices of those who would speak for progress. Even Samuel Gompers, toothless old reactionary, would defy the injunction at least in a meeting hall. He was actually convicted once for disobeying an injunction and is never tired boasting of it. He criticised John L. Lewis once for cringing before an injunction and hoisting the white flag. Surely John Fitzpatrick is at least as progressive as Samuel Gompers.

"ON TO THE PICKET LINES!"

The striking dressmakers are waging a splendid battle on the picket lines. They need assistance. The leaders of the Chicago Federation of Labor are not afraid to be seen in public. They marched last Sunday to see the PICTURE of a strike—marched thru the streets with a band at their head and a capitalist reporter at their heels.

They are not afraid of publicity. The "Committee of Fifteen" got its picture taken in the Federation Building on the day it held its first and only meeting. There is a real chance for the "Committee of Fifteen" to get its picture taken on South Market Street. It can also verify the truth of the report made by Mayor Dever that the police are conducting themselves properly toward the strikers. The committee can also see a real strike, a much better one than what was shown on the screen.

"ON TO THE PICKET LINES!"

The call made by delegate Johnstone for mass picketing cannot be sidetracked by cries of "Fosterism" or "bunk." Mass picketing was not invented by Foster. Mass picketing was used two years ago in a Rhode Island textile strike and it defeated the textile barons who had called out the state militia to keep the pickets from the mills.

Mass picketing would soon sweep Robert E. Crowe's thugs off the streets and would make a scrap of paper out of the injunctions. There is no danger that the leaders of Chicago Federation of Labor will be mistaken for "reds." But unless they wish to be known as "yellows" they must take action, and not merely make excuses for inactivity. They are on trial in this strike.

"ON TO THE PICKET LINES!"

The DAILY WORKER calls on the "Committee of Fifteen" to get on the picket line.

ST. LOUIS POLICE IN BRUTALITIES JUST LIKE COPS ON STRIKE DUTY

ST. LOUIS, March 17.—Eight city detectives may become involved in serious charges as a result of allegations that after shooting and wounding Claude Mitchell, they beat him to death with the butts of their pistols. The officers claim that he failed to heed their command to halt. His mother alleges that when she attempted to go to her son's aid, she says the detectives pushed her to the ground.

Seek Building Trades Unity

International officers of the Building Trades Unions met all day yesterday in the Hotel Morrison on the issue involved by the dual building trades' councils which exist in Chicago.

The solution that it is rumored they will devise for the split that arose over the Landis award is the formation of a conference board in which every local union in the building industry would be represented. This conference board would be authorized to work out a plan for bringing together the two councils.

Student Burns to Death.

MARION, Ala., March 17.—Jefferson Bryan Meharg, senior student at Marion military institute, was burned to death here today when a dormitory of the school was burned.

Planes Collide in Mid-Air.

PENSACOLA, Fla., March 17.—Two naval lieutenants were killed here today when their airplanes collided in mid-air 155 feet above Corry flying field.

Courts Prove Good Friend of Illinois Traction System

(Special to The Daily Worker)

EDWARDSVILLE, Ill., March 17.—Mrs. Phoebe Naylor, widow of Thomas W. Naylor who was killed near here at a deathtrap crossing of the Illinois Traction system in September, 1922, received a severe blow in a decision of the court of appeals just handed down. Mrs. Naylor had received a verdict against the I. T. S. in a lower court for $10,000 damages for the death of her husband.

The appeals court reversed the verdict and held the traction company blameless and not liable. Besides her husband, Mrs. Naylor's son was killed in the automobile accident which claimed three lives. As the case now stands, Mrs. Naylor is without remedy at law.

Dream of Aviators, Flight Around Earth, Starts in California

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CLOVERFIELD, SANTA MONICA, Calif., March 17.—A flight around the world, the dream of aviators since man first flew, started today when three United States army planes took off from Cloverfield.

A fourth plane followed shortly. The air men will fly northward and westward, to cross 30,000 miles of territory and 23 countries on their journey, which it is expected will take four months.

The weather conditions, greatest concern of air men, were favorable to the start.

"We have implicit confidence in our plans," Major Frederick L. Martin, commanding the world flight fliers, said just before the start.

BOSSES OPEN WAR ON UNION IN ST. LOUIS

Plans for Wage Cut Are Launched

By MARTIN A. DILLMON

(Staff Correspondent, of Federated Press)

ST. LOUIS, March 17.—Alarmed at building trades labor's progress, the contractors here have formed one big union of employers, to fight the workers, or as its sponsors say, "in order that these demoralizing wage increases be stopped and the building industry of St. Louis be stabilized." The new organization calls itself the Associated Building Interests of St. Louis. Every employer of building workmen in any capacity is eligible to membership. The A. B. I. is composed at present of the Master Builders Association, and the "masters" of the following trades: Plumbing, painters, insulators, cement, sheet metal, plasterers, and electrical work. Sub-contractors are being enrolled. An advisory counsel composed of architects, construction engineers, the Society of American Bankers, and the real estate exchange, is provided for. Its declaration of principles says among other things:

"It is essential that there be a close association of employers of building trades workmen in order that demoralizing wage increases be stopped, . . and this association is organized for the purpose of building up proper resistance to the above mentioned unreasonable demands of building trades workmen."

The first craft of workmen to be marked for attack is the building laborers. The laborers are asking for an increase from 67 cents to 87 cents an hour. About 90 per cent of the employers had settled on that basis before the employers' O. B. U. got on the job. The 10 per cent of the 1,500 members of the laborers' district council, on strike, the new O. B. U. attempted to dictate by offering 10 cents an hour, with an ultimatum that unless the offer was accepted within 48 hours it would be withdrawn and strikebreakers would be employed. The strikers refused.

Strikers Will See 'Polikushka,' Fine Russian Art Film

Hundreds of garment strikers will attend the showing of the great Russian Art Film "Polikushka" tomorrow evening at Orchestra hall on Michigan Boulevard and Jackson street. The tickets have been distributed by the Friends of Soviet Russia and Workers Germany which is exhibiting the picture.

This great adaptation of Tolstoy's immortal story of serfdom stars the celebrated Ivan Moskvin. It was produced in Russia by the group of players who have made the Moscow Art Theatre famous.

Proceeds go to the food stations which the F. S. R. is maintaining in Germany for the starving workers there. If you do not come early to avoid the rush you will regret it. Tickets 50 cents and $1.00. Performance begins at 7 p. m., and again at 9 p. m.

Filipino Leaders Voice Independence Demand in Frisco

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SAN FRANCISCO, Mar. 17.—An international mass meeting, to demand independence for the Philippines will be held at California hall, Polk and Turk streets, Friday evening, March 21 at 8 o'clock.

Abdon Ilorente, Philippine commercial attache and member of the Philippine Independence commission to the United States, will lead the speakers and will be followed by Gabriel Q. Arellano, editor of the Philippine Independent News of Salinas, former secretary of the Filipino Laborers' Union of Hawaii and by James H. Dolsen, district organizer of the Workers Party.

Jack Carney, editor of Labor Unity, will act as chairman. The meeting is under the auspices of the Workers Party and the combined Filipino organizations of San Francisco. Admission is free.

This Prosecutor Got Very Handsome Fees on the Side

(By The Federated Press)

ST. LOUIS, Mo., It has been discovered that A. L. Schweitzer, prosecuting attorney here, has been realizing handsome fees on the side by private practice in addition to his official duties for which he draws his salary. Schweitzer and his assistants have appeared as attorneys in a large number of divorce cases since they took office, January, 1923. In one case the records show Attorney Phillipson, Schweitzer's assistant, representing the plaintiff, and Schweitzer the defendant. Section 722 of revised statues of Missouri directs that: "Prosecuting and circuit attorneys and their assistants . . shall devote their entire time to duties of office."

Fight for Deep Waterways.

WASHINGTON, March 17—Favorable action on the Illinois deep waterway project was urged before the House rivers and harbors committee today by trustees of the Chicago sanitary district, engineers and civic leaders of the city.

KANSAS MINERS ASK AUTONOMY FOR NOVA SCOTIA

Seek Reinstatement of Tom Myerscough

By TOM TIPPETT.
(Staff Correspondent of Federated Press)

PITTSBURGH, Kans., Mar. 17.—A resolution was passed by the convention of District 14, United Mine Workers of America, in session here, demanding that the autonomy of District 26 (Nova Scotia) be immediately restored and that an election be held in which the deposed officers are permitted to stand for office so that the Canadian miners may select their own leaders. The vote was practically unanimous.

Another resolution calling for the re-instatement of Thomas Myerscough was passed after a lengthy debate. Myerscough was expelled in the Pittsburgh, Pa. field for affiliation with the United Mine Workers' International Progressive committee. This is an organization within the miners' union termed dual by the international organization.

Human Side Comes to Surface.

The human side of the Kansas trouble was again revealed when a proposition was introduced to bring relief to those members of this district who lost their cards in the Industrial court strike and who have not yet been permitted to rejoin the union. Altho the expulsion was nearly two and one-half years ago many men are still outside of union ranks and are still unemployed.

The union regulations are that men must first have employment in the industry before union membership can be had. It is this "joker" that is used to blacklist many of the sympathetic strikers—according to argument on the floor. It is also charged that the provisional organization co-operated with this blacklisting that has caused so much suffering and bitterness in Kansas.

Restrict Officials' Expenses.

Many old men and others sick at the time of the trouble lost out in the local union charter revocations altho they took no part in the strike. Local unions were instructed to accept these men without initiation fees and a special dispensation was asked for from the international union to apply to all men who lost their membership in the trouble of three years ago.

Pennsylvania Miners Meet.

By EVELYN PRESTON.
(Staff Correspondent of Federated Press)

ALTOONA, Pa., March 17—Opening sessions of the biennial convention of District No. 2, United Mine Workers of America, meeting here were taken up with discussions pro and con of the conduct by the district officials of the long Somerset strike. Two hundred and sixty delegates representing 40,000 miners in central Pennsylvania are attending the convention.

District President John Brophy in his report reviewed the policy of the international since the strike of 1922 up thru the last agreement with the operators guaranteeing a three-year contract at the existing wage scale.

He showed how the 17 months' strike in Somerset county had to be finally called off, principally on account of the dull state of the coal market, which enabled operators to be satisfied with a production equal to 30 per cent of normal, and made it difficult for men in the union fields to pay the assessment.

That the Somerset strike was worth while, however, despite the hardships entailed, is seen in the fact that the Somerset operators have raised the wage rate, and that a skeleton union organization continues in the region, he said.

A significant feature of Brophy's report was the stress he laid on workers' education. At present there are two members of District No. 2 at Brookwood Labor College on scholarships established by the district. A friend of labor gave $15,000 to District No. 2 in support of the Somerset strike on condition that the money be used later on for workers' education. Brophy proposes to use this sum to establish workers' classes in the district.

Brophy emphasized the need of a labor party if legislation in the interests of the miners is to be passed in the state. All bills legalizing checkweighmen, establishing miners' examining boards, preventing eviction without notice, and so on, failed to pass the Pennsylvania legislature. The report suggests that the executive board be authorized to survey the whole problem of unemployment to see how other industries and other countries meet the problem, and to continue its work of encouraging consumers' co-operation. He reminded the delegates of the need of a permanent fact finding and publicity agent to make public the truth about the coal industry. District No. 2 presented many briefs revealing the wages and living conditions of the miners to the federal coal commission.

Labor Party and Foreign Born Are Wilkes-Barre Issues

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., March 17.—A resolution asking for a condemnation of the various anti-foreign born bills now pending in congress was introduced at the Wilkes-Barre Central Labor Union at its last meeting held Thursday, March 13. The resolution also calls for the formation of a political party of industrial and land workers. The discussion showed no opposition to the resolution. It was decided, however, to delay final action until the Executive Board has had an opportunity to secure the text of some of these bills.

A large majority of workers in this region are foreign-born. The resolution will finally be acted upon at the next meeting of the Central Labor Union.

PAINTERS STRIKE FOR WAGES AND SAFE SCAFFOLDS

Detectives Ordered Out Of Union Meeting

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ST. LOUIS, March 17—The painters of St. Louis, numbering 2,300, are on strike today as a result of the contractors refusing to meet the terms submitted to them. The capitalist press here is already lined up with the bosses. Stories appear in the press in advance of the strike that disorder and violence are anticipated if not already taking place.

After holding several conferences with the bosses the best terms offered to the painters is $10 a day. Everything else to remain as it is. The union demands $12 a day with the five-day-week. Other demands insist on sanitary drop-cloths and rags. The bosses are now using drop-cloths and rags that have been in use for years and are filthy, endangering the health of the workers.

The union also demands the right of its representatives to examine all scaffolds, ropes and other equipment as to their safety. They further demand the discontinuing of the practice of having members haul the bosses' tools to the job. In hiring painters, the bosses generally give preference to those who are willing to donate the use of their cars for the purpose. This results in gross discrimination against those painters not having automobiles.

Last Sunday at a mass meeting the painters committee was instructed by unanimous vote to stand pat for these demands. The bosses after learning the decision of the men in the mass meeting began using the usual dirty tricks by turning in fake police calls and having detectives come to the meeting. The workers voted unanimously to order the "dicks" out of the hall, and condemned strongly the action of the police.

The union is standing solid and it is generally believed that the contractors will begin to weaken as soon as they see that the strike is 100% effective.

The men working for the city were given two weeks in which to either reach a settlement as based on the demands above or else quit work. This extension of time to the city employees was given to allow the Aldermen to vote on the new budget to meet the demands of the painters.

Aid Homeless Children.

MOSCOW, Mar. 17.—Newspapers all over Russia are conducting a campaign for the aid of the homeless children. There are thousands of homeless orphans, the remnants of the famine and civil war, in all the big cities of Russia. The many organizations which have been created for the purpose of aiding the orphans, are unable to cope with the situation for the lack of funds. Public appeals are being made, conferences called and meetings held. A new mass organization has been created, the Friends of the Children. It is counting already thousands of members.

During the famine of 1921-22 the transportation of children from the Volga district saved 200,000 lives, according to official reports. About 90 per cent of those children have been returned to their homes. About 25,000 children are still to be returned. The children's homes are overcrowded.

BERLIN, March 17.—During the month of January the Russian Trade Mission has sold 314,236 tons of grain for 23,273,171 gold rubles. Besides Germany, also Holland, Belgium, Denmark and other Scandinavian countries bought. Holland has the first place as a buyer of Russian bread from the Berlin mission having bought 177,155 tons out of the 314,236 tons.

POST OFFICE WORKERS FARE ILL UNDER NEW

Coolidge Backs Lame Duck's Policy

By LAURENCE TODD
(Staff Correspondent of the Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, Mar. 17.—Harry New, lame duck postmaster general in the Harding-Coolidge cabinet, has been challenged by Senator Couzens of Michigan to defend the starvation wage for postoffice clerks which has become the first test of industrial policy of the Coolidge phase of the administration.

Couzens is not radical; it was not long ago that he defended, in an interview, the idea of an anti-strike law covering the transportation industry.

New has the backing of President Coolidge in declaring that the postal workers cannot be paid more money. New and Coolidge want the postal workers to take up their belts another hole or two, and advise their wives and children to eat less and to waste less money on clothing and frivolities. Some one has got to sacrifice, in view of the proposed reductions in the taxes on millionaires and why not let the postal workers' families enjoy the sacrifice

For the Rich.

"I can conceive of no justification," says Couzens, "for the position you have taken, when it is based solely on the government or more properly put, on the cost of the users of the postal service. You have put the cart before the horse. This additional cost is estimated by you at from $123,000,000 to $150,000,000. Your contention seems to be that this money should be saved to the users of the service by deducting it from the just compensation of the employes.

"There never was a more unsound as well as unwise policy than this. There is no justification for any service existing, that cannot pay its employes more than a living wage. There is plenty of evidence to sustain the conclusion that the existing wages are not even a living wage to say nothing of a wage that makes life worth living."

High Cost of Living.

Government figures show that the cost of living, last December, was 73 per cent higher than in 1913. The increase in wages for postal clerks during the same period was only 64 per cent, yet the wage scale in 1913 was notoriously inadequate and the employes were desperately appealing to congress for a chance to live.

"I do not believe," says Couzens, "that the users of this service want any subsidy such as they are now getting taken from the pockets of the employes. Why should $123,000,000 to $150,000,000 be taken out of the pockets of these employes and half of it or nearly half of it turned over to the publishers of magazines and periodicals? . . . . You know if this matter was taken to the country as it will have to be unless the congress and administraion remedy the evil, that there will be no hesitancy on the part of the country in approving this modest increase for the empolyes."

"Keep Your Damn Mouth Shut," Mayor Orders Preachers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Mar. 17—"Keep your damn mouth shut," is Mayor Hart's advice to the ministers of Wilkes-Barre who dared to denounce him for breaking up the Lenin Memorial meeting arranged by the Workers Party. This polite advice is contained in a statement issued by the mayor in reply to the Civil Liberties Union's threat to take court action against him in case he again decides to interfere with Workers Party meetings.

"We are not opposed," the statement says, "to free speech, preachers, governor or other local notoriety seekers to the contrary, notwithstanding. We are for free speech, but not the so-called oratory of those law breakers whose attempt to destroy the greatest government in the world will never get a foothold in Wilkes-Barre. . . . The preachers should remember what Jonah said to the whale, 'We wouldn't be in this trouble if you kept your damn mouth shut.' By the whale, I mean the preachers."

Arrangements are now being made by the Workers Party to hold a free speech test meeting in the near future. An attorney was already engaged by the Civil Liberties Union to take court action against the mayor, if necessary.

In Memory of Lenin.

MOSCOW, March 17.—The Central Executive Commitee of the International Society for Workers' Aid received information from Essen, Germany, that over 100 political prisoners went on a 24-hour hunger strike after they had been prohibited to hold a memorial meeting for Nikolai Lenin.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

Mayor Dever is blissfully ignorant of any misconduct on the part of the police officers toward the dressmakers now on strike. Perhaps he is too busy boosting the military program of the imperialists to waste any time on such a trivial matter as a strike. The Chicago Tribune carried his picture in yesterday's issue, while His Honor was in the act of giving a big pushball the initial shove down Michigan Boulevard on its way to Washington and New York. The object of this stunt is to advertise the citizens' military training camp movement. Of course the mayor does not know anything about the strike. He is too busy recruiting strikebreakers.

* * * *

With the mayor were several leading Chicago business men. One important personage was the exalted ruler of the Elks. He helped Mr. Dever start the ball rolling. What would the papers say if a group of trade unionists, even the most reactionary start a movement to train unionists to the use of arms, the movement to be under the direction of the trade unions? There would be an immediate demand for swift action against the rebels! Many workers are members of fraternal organizations like the Elks. No doubt they will feel proud to have their exalted ruler lead a movement to make brave soldiers out of them.

* * * *

Premier Poincare won another victory, tho a slim one. He slipped thru the senate barrage with a bare thirteen majority. He has a new scheme to make the United States government pay the French cost of the war. After reading the reports of the many investigations now taking place in Washington, no doubt he concluded that there is enough graft lying around the Capitol to pay the cost of all the world's wars since David slew Goliath. Poincare's proposition was that all the nations that engaged in the war should measure their sacrifices and then to arrange the war debts on the basis of equal sacrifice.

* * * *

But Charles Evans Hughes will have none of it. The Republican party has nothing more to give away. Poincare was met by a blunt refusal from Washington. This angered Poland, Checko-Slovakia, Roumania and Jugo-Slavia exceedingly. These countries are building up huge armies under French direction and at French expense. They now fear that France will close the satchel and that the soldiers will begin to prowl around looking for something to eat. They may have to eat the heads of the various governments unless a good Samaritan appears in the offing.

* * * *

The Catholic church has not the same set of rules in all countries. There are slight variations in the manner in which that institution does business. Take the confessional, for instance. In Lithuania, Catholics must purchase a spiritual meal ticket at Easter every year and whenever they go to confess their sins the priest punches a hole in it. In Ireland there is less competition so the priests are not obliged to put the faithful on rations.

* * * *

The Prince of Wales was advised to ride an old nag by the "President of Cornishmen," his susceptibility to getting unhorsed causing some of his countrymen considerable nervousness. Much good British money has been invested in making the Prince a popular figure. Even the "socialist" Ramsay MacDonald likes him. He is a valuable asset and must be taken good care of. Why not give him a hobby horse to play with? Perhaps he might be able to manage a real steed if his liquor was taken away from him.

* * * *

The job of commissioner of the Church of Scotland was handed to a Scotish Socialist. This is the first time the position was taken out of the hands of the aristocracy. No doubt the American socialist remnants will hail this as another example of what evolutionary socialism can accomplish. Look at Millerand! He has "evoluted." The new commissioner of the Scottish church, his name is Roberts, will fill the high office with all the dignity at his command. This he assures us. He will not let Karl Marx or Lenin or anybody else prevent him from being dignified.

* * * *

The Chicago Tribune very properly says that if the German Social-Democracy accomplished nothing else they have at least succeeded in preventing the "Communists" from taking over power in behalf of the proletariat. After they had done that to the satisfaction of the bourgeoisie, they have politely stepped out and turned the country over to the Fascisti. They are willing to make any sacrifice—even giving up office—for the sake of democracy. They have not given up office this time, however, out of a spirit of accomodation; they were compelled to do so because they lost the confidence of the workers who are fast turning to the Communists.

WORKERS PARTY DEMANDS LIBERTY FOR PHILIPPINES

Staging Big Meeting for Island Speakers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, March 17.—A big mass meeting of workers to protest against Coolidge's attack on the movement of the 11,000,000 Filipinos to secure freedom from their Wall Street rulers will be held in New York City April 2.

Honorable Manuel Roxas, speaker of the Philippine Congress, and one of the greatest orators in the Philippine Islands, will address the meeting. Mr. Roxas is the representative of the Filipino people to whom Coolidge addressed his hostile letter.

Island Labor Leader Speaks.

Commissioner Peuro Guevara of the Philippine Independence Mission to the United States, founder of the Seamen's Union and leader of the first strike in the Philippines, Scott Nearing, the noted lecturer and economist, and Jay Lovestone of the DAILY WORKER staff and director of the Research Department of the Workers Party will be other speakers.

In view of Coolidge's bold defiance of the Filipinos and his brazen rejection of their plea for national freedom, this question is particularly timely now. Congress will act on the whole problem the first week in April.

Probe Oily Wood!

There is also a likelihood of a Congressional investigation of General Wood's oil concessionaire regime in the Philippines being opened within a few weeks.

A large crowd is expected to turn out for this meeting which is to be held under the auspices of the New York District of the Workers Party. The meeting will be held in Cooper Union, at 8th St. and Third Ave.

Workers Party In Drive for New Members

Meetings are arranged thruout the city of Chicago by the local office of the Workers Party to acquaint the workers with the policies of the party with a view to bringing them into the organization.

Thursday, March 20, at the Community Center, 3201, S. Wabash ave., 8 p. m., J. W. Johnstone speaks on "Communists in the Labor Unions."

Thursday, March 20, at the Emmet Memorial Hall, Ogden and Taylor avenues, 8 p. m., Harrison George speaks on "Anti-Alien Laws: The Menace of a Super-Blacklist."

Tuesday, March 25, at Workers' Lyceum (Bear Hall), 2733 Hirsch Blvd., 8 p. m., Tom O'Flaherty, Associate Editor DAILY WORKER, is scheduled to speak on the subject "Farmer-Labor Unity and the Crisis in the American Capitalist Parties."

Wednesday, March 26, at Milda Hall, 3138 S. Halsted street, 8 p. m., William F. Kruse will speak on the subject "AntiAlien Laws: The Menace of a Super-Blacklist."

Monday April 7, at Jewish Insistitute, 3322 Douglas Blvd., 8 p. m., Sam Hammersmark of the DAILY WORKER staff, will speak on the subject "Anti-Alien Laws: The Menthe Crisis in the American Capitalist Parties."

California Hangs 20-Year-Old Boy Who Defended Self

(By The Federated Press)

SAN QUENTIN, Cal., March 17—In the face of a petition for delay signed by 140,000 citizens, Aurelio Pompa, a 20-year-old Mexican boy, was hanged here for murder. Pompa insisted that he shot the dead man, William McCue, in self-defense; McCue was foreman over Pompa, and had abused him for some time. McCue's widow stated that this was the case, and tried to get Governor Richardson to commute the sentence. Pompa also stated that a witness at his trial had sworn falsely, and that the only actual witness had not been called.

The Mexican Blue Cross and thousands of other persons worked indefatigably to prevent Pompa's execution under such circumstances, but Richardson stated the boy was "a cold blooded murderer," and refused to permit even a few days' reprieve.

Seeking the Red Hats.

ROME, March 17—American archbishops Hayes and Mundelein who are to be elevated to the cardinalate, arrived here today with their suites. Monsignor O'Herne and prelates of the American college were in the fore of a throng which gave the Americans an enthusiastic welcome at the station.

Show Department of Justice Mere Tool of the Burns' Dick Agency

Arizona are greatly pleased with the investigations. . . .

"I left Los Angeles Sunday, June 17th and returned to the Office Friday, June 22nd, with Mr. H. D. Dowell, who is in charge for the mining interests of Arizona, handling the under-cover work for them. Dowell, whom Sherman has met, is a good smart fellow, who was formerly a manager for the Thiel Service and he has made a close study of Radical Work and the Mining Work.

With The D. of J.

"Investigator W-1 has been made an organizer and it is only a matter of a week or so when he will be made a General Organizer and he will then be in power to make Delegates and Organizers, and he will of course immediately make my other men D. & O., so as to put them on the inside. We are working in direct touch with the Dept. of Justice Agent, whom the Governor transferred from Butte, Montana, to Arizona, and he is a real fellow and knows the game. I spent two days with him while in Arizona and had a good chance to judge him. He is also well thought of by the Mine Managers and they put a great deal of trust in him.

D. of J. Again.

"My men are not confined to any especial district but are at perfect liberty to go to any part of the State where they think they can do most good. This of course they take up with the D. of J. Agent so that he will know at all times where they are so that he can keep in close touch with them, and while they are all under cover he is out in the open, but as fast as any of the real wobblies get too rambunctious or hostile, the D. of J. Agent will put them on their right foot or act accordingly. We are getting wonderful co-operation. . . .

"Very Sincerely yours, LOS ANGELES OFFICE MANAGER."

"P. S.— . . . I Know it has done us a great deal of good, as I also met the biggest Attorneys of the State, and further the beautiful part of the trip was that we were allowed time and expense for the entire trip."

Los Angeles "Tight-Wads".

Then we have another letter, in regard to money matters especially, in which it apears that the business men of Los Angeles are "tight-wads" and do not want to pay $10 per day for investigators when they can get them for less. Some of the business men are now, however, to frame a law in California that will exclude the other, cheaper agencies while permitting the Burns crowd to operate as a monopoly!

"We" Get The Business.

This letter is from Pross to Mr. W. Sherman Burns; at the time the letter was written, July 20, Sherman was holding down the New York office. Extracts follow:

"Dowell and I have been doing other missionary work and we at this time are getting all the concerns in Southern California in a body, the same as we have the mining companies. All the business is to be given to my office and I really believe that there will be at least twenty men, or investigators, from the Los Angeles office assigned to this case.

"Your Newspapers".

"The I. W. W.'s are giving plenty of trouble in San Pedro. You have been receiving our Investigator W-1's reports and, no doubt, your newspapers are carrying big articles. Well, this situation is going to be a whole lot worse before it gets better, and I really believe after six years of hard work on my part, we are showing the corporations, individuals and business people in general that what I have been predicting for six years has come upon them.

A Camouflage Agency.

"What these companies have asked for after they had committee meetings is that I take charge of this entire situation in Southern California. They have even asked that I handle an outside office, not in connection with the Agency, and, possibly, under another name—i. e., some investigating bureau. This office would be established in the same building with the Los Angeles office, and, of course, my time and expense would be charged the same as an investigator. I would be manager of this investigating bureau, which in reality will be the William J. Burns International Detective Agency. However, the idea that the consolidated business men wanted to establish is that they are using their own investigating bureau.

Hit Rival Agencies By Law.

"The business men have seen how private detective agencies have been mulcting them of their money and in reality causing trouble instead of endeavoring to abate trouble and this fall they intend to go before the State Senate and Governor of the State at Sacramento, California, and have a law put thru that will make it tough on those so-called detective agencies to keep on in business.

"As I wrote in my letter to both you and the Governor, the situation has become so big it is impossible for me to write and tell you what it all means. The Governor has a bit of an idea from his last trip here, but it has grown immensely since then.

All Reports to D. of J.

"Meetings have been held semi-weekly, and altho I have not been an attendant at these meetings as yet, they expect to build all under the one plan which was explained to the Governor on his visit here, viz.: that the Los Angeles Office will put the under cover investigators to work, and copies of all reports are to be supplied to the Department of Justice, or, in fact, to the Governor personally. The Department of Justice is to have a man who is fully versed on radical situations in Los Angeles, and the Governor is to handle the radical situation after we have obtained the information.

$10 A Day.

"This is a situation on which I have written the New York Office many letters. I have not been getting my share of the work, owing to the fact that ours is a $10 per diem rate, while other agencies are taking this work for $8, $6, and as low as $5 a day; and I again must admit that we have the cheapest bunch of "skates" calling themselves business men in Southern California that I, or any other human, has ever come in contact with, but they have become educated and realize that the lower rates they have been obtaining have been costing them ten times more than it really looked to them, as these agencies who are doing the cheaper class of work have realized that unless they cause trouble they could not keep their work going.

Merchants and Manufacturers.

"We have even gone so far that the M. & M. have been told that they must take their under-cover service out of the district. It has practically come to a stage where the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association will be ruined and put out of business if they do not pay attention to what we have to say. In fact, I wrote a letter to the Governor about one month after he left Los Angeles, showing where Mr. Hayes Rice, head of the Manufacurers' Association was automatically dropped from the committees on which he was serving for the interests of the business people, owing to his having raised an argument or trying to start trouble after the Governor had delivered a talk.

"Cause Trouble."

"No need of my going into details of the 'brotherly love' held by the M. & M. against the Burns Detective Agency, but we have still done our work in an upright manner, and the business men realize that the M. & M. have had to cause trouble in order to keep themselves going and to have something to report on.

"I held a lengthy conference with Mr. Isadore B. Dockweiler today. He is a personal friend of the Governor's and is chairman of the Democratic State Committee.

McAdoo and Burns.

"The outlook for the next Presidential campaign is Harding on the Republican ticket, and, most likely, Hiram Johnson on the Progressive ticket. If such be the case, it is going to be a very tight race between McAdoo and Harding, with McAdoo a slight favorite.

"Mr. Dockweiler informed me that should the Democrats win the election and McAdoo be elected President he would personally demand of McAdoo that the Governor again be placed in charge of the Department of Justice. There is absolutely no question that should Harding be re-elected the Governor would, again, stay where he is. . . .

"Yours very truly, G. P. PROSS."

Death Puts Off the Arraignment of Col. Forbes to Wednesday

Arraignment of Colonel Charles R. Forbes, former head of the Veterans' Bureau and John W. Thompson, contractor, on charges of conspiracy and bribery, was postponed to Wednesday on account of the death of Federal Judge Francis E. Baker.

Forbes and Thompson will appear in person Wednesday before Feder Judge Carpenter.

A federal grand jury indicted Forbes and Thompson on charges of juggling Veterans' Bureau contracts in favor of Thompson's construction firm.

Snow Blanket Anyway.

OMAHA, Nebr., March 17—Nebraska is covered with a blanket of from half a foot to several feet of snow today. The snow began falling Sunday morning and will continue over most of the state today, weather bureau officials said.

TEAPOT SCANDAL HAS NOTHING ON MISSOURI GRAFT

Politicians Soaked in Beer Graft

By MARTIN A. DILLMON.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

ST. LOUIS, Mo., March 17.—Attention of the Missouri citizenry has been attracted from the Teapot Domo scandal at Washington to wholesale bribery and political corruption within their own state. Several perfectly good political reputations are threatened with disaster as a result of the confession of a St. Louis brewer, that he paid large sums of money to certain state officials for "protection" in the manufacture of real beer.

For sometime past rumors had been afloat to the effect that "protected" beer was being widely sold in this city. The rumor reached Washington, and federal investigators were dispatched to St. Louis intending to raid the Griesedick brewery, which was under suspicion. Evidently there was a leak somewhere and state dry agents made a spontaneous raid on the brewery and confiscated a huge quantity of bottled beer.

One Dollar a Case.

Taken into custody, officials of the brewery made confessions in which they said they paid $1 for each case of real beer sent out of the brewery on the condition that there would be no intereference from dry enforcement agents. During a period of fourteen weeks, the confession says, about 15,000 cases of protected beer were sold by the brewery for a total of approximately $60,000, of which $15,000 was paid in bribe for protection. The confession names the recipient of the bribe money as "a prominent state official."

The "prominent state official," according to the confession, took the lead by proposing to the brewers that they resume the production of real beer, for which the firm had paid fine and penalties of $17,000 as a result of a previous raid. The state official, the confession continues, professed to be acting for another state official and for a third party in official position. He further represented to Griesedick, according to the confession, that two other St. Louis breweries were being protected for cash, and that "he could take on one more brewery."

Brewers Squealed.

The brewer was told his "protection" would cost him $1 for each case of real beer sold, and that in consideration of the bribe, he would not be molested. "I accepted the proposed terms and began the manufacture of beer," the brewer says. Several times the brewer complained to the bribe taker that $1 a case for protection was excessive and did not leave the brewery a fair profit, risk considered. The "prominent state official" refused to consent to a reduction, and collected his graft until the raid, February 21.

Following promptly the brewer's accusation of the mysterious "prominent state official," Charles S. Prather, State Food and Drug commissioner, handed Gov. Hyde his resignation. Prather is known as a close pal of the governor, and has been regarded as his confidential political adviser. Prather figured in the Lowden slush fund scandal in the Republican national convention, 1920, the result of which sent Warren G. Harding to Washington as President of the United States.

Labor Head Mentioned

The name of Heber Nations, state labor commissioner, has been mentioned in the investigation of the bribe ring. He is a brother of Gus O. Nation, chief of prohibition agents in St. Louis. Both Nations and Prather are appointees of Gov. Hyde. Prather received a re-appointment last June for a four-year term. Nations was appointed by the governor last year.

With several other appointees of the governor under fire, including the recent charges that revolting conditions exist in some of the state penal institutions, and with the explosion of the beer scandal, it is recalled that Arthur M. Hyde made his race for governor on a "housecleaning" platform. Hyde waged a sham battle with some of the unpopular men in the Republican party, of which he is a member, and walked into office hands down.

Hyde captured many votes on his mock pretenses as a "friend" of labor. That friendship was demonstrated when he lent state troops to the railroad companies as scab herders during the strike of shopmen. There was no violence in the strike centers. When it became known that the Governor had ordered out the militia, R. T. Wood, president, Missouri State Federation of Labor, headed a delegation with him to reconsider. But Hyde then was safely in office, election day was far distant, and he laughed the labor men out of court.

Labor Union Foe

Filling a vacancy on the St. Louis Police Board, Hyde selected Clarence M. Howard, president, Commonwealth Steel company, an outstanding wage slave owner and a bitter foe of labor unions. At the time of the appointment, Howard's employes were and are yet on strike for union recognition. Protests from Organized Labor were kicked into the discard. Howard may now se the St. Louis police department further his strikebreaking ex-

"NEW DISCIPLE"—LABOR FILM.

After a constant stream of hostile pro-plute propaganda films it is a pleasant relief to see a "labor film," even tho its ideology be wishy-washy and its technique imperfect. "The New Disciple," revived by the Chicago Federation of Labor for a run at the Aryan Grotto, is one of three pictures made under labor auspices and with the backing of the A. F. of L. It tells a good labor story: a small capitalist, enriched by war profiteering, widens the gap that separates him from his erstwhile fellow-workers, and listens to the advice of the Big Business representative who secretly plots his ruin. There is an unsuccessful strike and a lockout and some good material against the so-called "American Plan." Finally the schemes of the Trust to buy up the plant and dismantle it are thwarted by the local business men and farmers who see their own ruin if the wage-workers do not quickly get back under the yoke of exploitation.

But the film does not say it that way. Its ideology would certainly not stand the test of Communist principle, from Main Title to "The End" it reeks with the "social compact" reformist viewpoint of those who call their unionism "pure and simple." The picture is just this—pure enough for the babies and simple, too,—too simple. It even has the praise of Sam Gompers.

The main title, specially made for the Chicago presentation, is a gem of fundamental misunderstanding. It is almost impossible to credit to John Fitzpatrick, whose excellent statement on the need of a labor press immediately follows, the authorship of such inane bosh. "Strife often follows misunderstanding," begins the title, and goes on to justify the mere existence of the labor movement because "it enlists the thoughts, energies and ideals of great numbers" who seek protection against "employers who seek profits so greedily that they disregard the welfare" (of the worker). "The New Disciple," it concludes, "has a purpose in society. It is to help bring about a public understanding of labor and unionism to the end that ignorance and bigotry may not be used by selfish individuals to fan the flames of industrial antagonism."

Not a word of class conflict of economic interest inherent in the wage system as the explanation of "industrial antagonism!" It is all due to "misunderstanding" and "selfish individuals" who use "ignorance and bigotry" to fan the flames of class war. Precisely the charge made by the Chamber of Commerce against the labor movement!

This main title is truly the keynote thruout the picture and at times the attitude is entirely naive. Woodrow Wilson's "The New Freedom," is referred to constantly thruout the film and the advertisement indicates that the picture is founded on this bunk book. The picture cannot rise much higher than the meagre intellectual and ideological foundations upon which it is built.

There is nothing wrong with the picture except its little faulty lighting on interior sets. The acting and casting, generally is superb. The actors are finely chary and make-up and behave like real human beings. But the titles! The many different varieties indicate that many changes have been made during the life of the picture, probably to adapt it to different audiences. This last adaptation must have been the least successful of all since a very small crowd came out to the first performances despite the backing of the Chicago Federation of Labor. Bad weather might have contributed to keeping the attendance small. Two musical numbers and a Musicians' Union band rounded out the program.

This picture could be titled into a ripping picture. But it would take a straight class struggle viewpoint to put the lacking punch into it. When it was first produced Woodrow's sacred passages and his sanctified phiz may have been desirable camouflage to get it passed by censors and such. But today, when worker and farmer has his back to the wall, such stuff misses fire. A labor picture today must have fire, it must have punch. But even as it is "The New Disciple" is a pleasant relief from the puerile stuff fed us by the commercial producers, and Daily Worker readers will spend an enjoyable evening at the Grotto during its run. Any effort at labor film production deserves the support of every worker, and it is to be expected that our first efforts in this field will leave some things to be desired.

Czech "Oil" Scandal Forces Resignations of Dollar Statesmen

PRAGUE, March 17.—In connection with the scandalous implication of the Czechoslovak government in their little teapottery—this time an affair of a corrupt deal in alcohol—Communists in parliament here placed a souvenir upon the bench of Prime Minister Svehla.

The souvenir consisted of a whisky flash, filled with wood alcohol. The indignant premier swept the flask from his desk, spilling the contents upon his colleagues. Confusion ensued.

The scandal involves the sale of adulterated spirits, mostly for military purposes, to the army, with the knowledge of cabinet members. It is alleged that many aviators met death, owing to the fraudulent gasoline used in their machines. The senate president and one cabinet minister have resigned.

CITIZENS CAN BE DEPORTED UNDER IMMIGRATION BILL

"Joker" Paves Way for Grossest Tyranny

A joker in the Administration's Immigration Bill which by two words would "permit the wholesale deportation of aliens and indeed of American citizens and would subvert all settled principles of procedure" was revealed at a hearing before the Senate Committee on Immigration by Walter Pollak, New York attorney, representing the American Civil Liberties Union.

The joker, according to the union, is contained in section 23 of the bill, which puts the burden of proof on any individual whose right "to remain in the United States" is challenged. According to the argument presented to the committee, it applies equally to citizens and aliens, and would require anyone challenged to prepare an elaborate defense of his right to remain in this country.

Liberties Union Fight.

A brief on the law and the practical dangers of the section by Walter Pollak and Albert DeSilver was submitted to the Senate Committee on behalf of the American Civil Liberties Union, with the request that the words "or remain" be stricken from the bill.

Under this section, the attorneys declare, the mere change of a deportable offense against an American citizen or an alien would force upon him the burden of proving his innocence, "contrary to the presumption of innocence, one of the strongest known to law."

"A woman could be deported unless she could prove that four, or five years before, and at a place perhaps 3,000 miles away, she had not been guilty of prostitution or some connection with prostitution," the brief states. "A man who lives in Portland, Maine, might be suddenly threatened with deportation in Galveston, Texas, by reason of some occurrence, real or fancied, in Seattle, Washington."

The brief makes five points against the section. They are:

Unconstitutional.

1st. It would make possible deportations in the entire absence of evidence and would therefore be unconstitutional;

2nd. It would violate all settled practices and presumption of orderly procedure;

3rd. It is inconsistent with basic principles of both constitutional and common law, and would create immeasurable confusion in practice;

4th. It would involve intolerable hardship to poor and obscure persons and pave the way for private and official corruption and tyranny;

5th. It is without example in our jurisprudence; the Chinese Exclusion Act—which provides for judicial and not summary administrative action and affords the alien a definite mechanism for establishing his right—constitutes no precedent.

Citizens or aliens challenged to prove their right to remain in the United States would have to prove their sanity, freedom from disease, and innocence of crime, according to the attorneys. "The citizen or alien can be deported even if there are no witnesses against him. There may even be no hearing in the case. He will lose his right to remain in the United States altho there is not one scrap of evidence against him. The mere fact that there is no evidence in his favor will be fatal."

Russian Workers Send Contribution To Daily Worker

How much importance the militant workers of the world and particularly the militant workers of Russia attach to the success and establishment of the DAILY WORKER is indicated by the action taken recently by a group of Russian workers in Soviet Russia.

Great enthusiasm has been manifested in Soviet Russia over the establishment and the successful beginning made by the DAILY WORKER and in order to back up enthusiasm by deeds, a small group of Russian toilers raised among themselves the sum of $61.00 which they have sent to the DAILY WORKER thru Comrade Leo Wishnak, representative of the JEWISH DAILY FREIHEIT. "The rank and file of the Russian workers is tremendously enthusiastic over the showing made by the DAILY WORKER, said Comrade Wishnak, in making the remittance to the DAILY WORKER.

While the leaders of the Russian government have also expressed themselves on the importance of the establishment of a daily communist newspaper in the English language, it was surprising to many to note how much interest all of the workers in Russia have been taking in the success of the DAILY WORKER. To them it is a revolutionary event of the greatest importance and they were very proud that out of their small means they have been able to collect $61.000 which measured by the Russian buying power of this amount of the money is a very large sum.

CHARKOFF, Mar. 17.—The Central Committee for the fight against unemployment appropriated 298,000 gold rubles for the needs of the Odessa, Kieff, Charkoff and Ekaterinoslav labor exchanges.

ECONOMIC SUICIDE FOR NEGROES TO OPPOSE UNIONISM, SAYS NATION

Opposing labor unionism is economic suicide for Negroes, says the New York Nation, in an editorial commenting on the following declaration against unionism and "economic radicalism" which passed the reactionary Negro Press Association's convention at Nashville, Tenn.:

Be it resolved, That it be the policy of the National Negro Press Asociation, in its efforts to husband strength in and further the industrial destinies of our people, that we as vendors of news will discourage and discredit all forms of unionism and economic radicalism.

The Nation's comment follows:

Fortunately for the Negro the National Negro Press Association is not representative of the entire press of the Race. For to oppose unionism among Negroes is to advocate a form of economic race suicide. The African Negro belongs by compulsion to the working class, and the color of his skin wins him preference from his employer only if it means that he will work for a lower wage. The open shop employers in the North who encourage Negro labor do so because for the present it is unorganized and therefore cheap. The Negro can fortify his industrial position only by alliance with his white fellow-workers. That has not always been easy; but the bars are falling. The American Federation of Labor has officially indorsed the policy of organizing colored workers on an equal basis with white, and some unions, like the Molders, are justly proud of their record of no race discrimination. The Negroes, too, are learning the old American lesson that in union is strength. The extraordinary "Negro Sanhedrin" recently held at Chicago was one symptom of the growing race consciousness; the resolution advocating unionization which almost passed that conference, made up largely of conservative Negro organizations, was another sign of progress.

In Honor of Lenin.

MOSCOW, Mar. 17.—The Pravda is running every day a few columns in memory of Lenin, where reports of official action in connection with the immortalization of his name are printed, also incidents of his life are related by soldiers, workers and peasants. A Lenin Institute has been created by order of the government.

Conductors' Vice-President Dies.

ST. LOUIS, March 17.—William C. Turner, Order of Railway Conductors, died at his home here last week at the age of 68. He was elected grand lodge officer in 1913. For many years the deceased had been chairman of conductors on the Missouri Pacific. He is survived by the widow, one son and two daughters.

Can't Forget Englewood.

When the list of meeting places of the Chicago branches of the Young Workers League was published, the Englewood branch was omitted. Englewood branch meets at Prospect Hall, 64th St. and Ashland Ave., on the second and fourth Thursday of each month.

Chicago's Contest For 1,000 Subs Was a Whiz; Heinrichson Winning; Race For Second Thousand Begins

Tabulation of the scores of Chicago's campaign contest for "1,000 New Subscribers by March 10th", has been concluded. John Heinrichson of the Englewood English Branch leads the list with exactly 400 points to his credit, and in appreciation of his efforts, received a Remington Portable Typewriter given by THE DAILY WORKER.

The second prize, a Gold Watch, goes to Comrade Plav, of the Northwest English Branch, with a score of 144 points. Anna Fox, leading subscription getter of the Douglas Park English Branch, with 88 points, receives a fountain pen as third prize.

Englewood Scores 460 Points.

The Englewood Branch, scoring 460 points, easily carries off the prize offered for English Branches, a fine framed picture of Nicolai Lenin. A similar prize goes to the West Side Scandinavian Branch, which stands at the head of the list of the Language Branches with 69 points. The latter branch is one of the smallest branches in the city, with but 10 members. Considering its small membership, the score can be considered as a creditable showing for the branch.

Another Scandinavian Branch, the Lake View Branch, wins second prize, a slightly smaller framed picture of Lenin. This branch is also one of the smaller ones and considering the fact that most of its members can barely get along in the English language, the score is very good.

John Reed Branch Wins.

A similar prize as that given to the leading English and Language Branches, goes to the John Reed Branch, the leading booster among Young Workers League Branches.

Honorable mention must be made for the efforts of the Irving Park, Douglas Park, and Northwest English Branches, whose scores have been increased considerably during the last two weeks of the contest. This indicates a greater competition for the new contest starting today. The Northwest Russian, Karl Marx Scandanavian, and First South Slavic Branches, while not carrying off any prizes, have made fairly good showings.

So much for the contest that is concluded. Preparations for the new contest for 10,000 new subscribers by June 15, have been made and Chicago considers that its quota, one-tenth of the total set as a minimum by the DAILY WORKER office, is easily within its reach.

The special two-months trial subscription, should make it possible for Chicago to reach the figure of 1,000 new subscribers long before the contest closes but yearly subscriptions will be emphasized. The special offer to subscription getters, in the way of half-year subs for either the Liberator, the Labor Herald, and Soviet Russia Pictorial, leading magazines in their respective fields, will serve as a special inducement.

Keep Old Subscribers.

In addition to getting new subs for the DAILY WORKER, Chicago is paying special attention to keeping its old readers on the list. Every subscriber is visited by city DAILY WORKER boosters before the subscription expires and thus very few subscribers are lost. Comments of old subscribers on the merits of the DAILY WORKER as the ONE Daily in the English language representing and furthering the interests of city and farm workers in the United States, serves as a great help in getting renewals and new subscriptions. Getting names of friends of present subscribers boosts the number of new readers of the DAILY WORKER.

A prize for the highest individual DAILY WORKER booster in the form of a very fine camera, has been donated by Comrade Milson of the First South Slavic Branch. With the DAILY WORKER moving into its new home very shortly—still greater enthusiasm for the Daily is noted and the list of active boosters is on the increase.

Labor Organization Is Negroes' Hope, Despite Urban Leaguers; Very Few Get $1,000 Per Year

The economic conditions which face the Negro in industry to a large extent determine the standard of living of the Negro family, and hence must be considered in any discussion of the Negro housing problem.

The Negro, who is forced to live in the worst dwellings in the city, is at the bottom of the ladder as a wage earner in American industry.

A family of three cannot live decently with sufficient nourishment for a fair amount of health and efficiency, on less than $1,800 a year, according to the United States Department of Labor.

And yet the latest income tax figures show that less than six per cent of all the country's wage earners are receiving a salary of $1,000 or more.

Under $1,000 a Year.

Under five per cent of America's Negro wage-earners receive a salary of $1,000 or more, which is 800 dollars less than the minimum amount required to live decently.

Over half the colored women who are wage earners are mothers also. They have the burden of industry, the burden of motherhood and the burden of race prejudice as well as the burden of the wage earner's world. Is it any wonder that the Negro homes are in such a terrible state and that the Negro family life is being destroyed?

The Negroes' only protection is by legislation and organization, we learn from Mrs. Humphrey Ward, who made a study of this subject. "The standard of living is being raised, if at all," Mrs. Ward tells us, "by the organized effort of the Negro workers themselves."

Must Organize.

"In the wage earning world the Negro worker must forget his past and press on toward better and better conditions with the white workers," a recent investigator of Negro wage earning conditions declares. "If the white workers do not receive him, he must organize on his own account and cease being the cheap and exploited worker. He must make the white workers recognize him as a fellow in the struggle toward a higher social and industrial life. Workers dare not longer fight each other in this industrial world of competition and monopoly.

"They must organize and demand for each class and group of workers the same standards. Humanity is of greater worth than property. Not stocks and bonds but human beings of a high standard should be the national asset."

The Negro workers are paid such low wages that they cannot afford to rent adequate and sanitary dwellings, even when such are available. That is why the Workers Party and the African Blood Brotherhood at the recent All-Race Sanhedrin, showed the necesity for an alliance between the black and white workers, at the same time that it scored the reactionary real estate sharks who sabotaged the fight against segregation at the Congress, and condemned the chamber of commerce interests that sabotaged efforts to place the Sanhedrin on record for solidarity between the oppressed of both races.

Quiz Urban Leaguer.

It will be remembered that the social welfare type of leaders at the Sanhedrin, such as Dean Kelly Miller, tried to keep the labor issue off the floor. It was in an effort to determine the position of the social welfare people that the DAILY WORKER secured an interview with A. C. Thayer of the Urban League, a member of the recent Lowden Commission on Race Relationships.

Mr. Thayer willingly admitted that a terrible housing crisis prevails at this time among the Negroes in Chicago. He told the DAILY WORKER reporter how many of the Negroes have members of their families sleeping in bathtubs. "Nine out of ten families in the Negro quarters have taken in lodgers," Mr. Thayer declared. He conceded after a long questioning that they have taken in lodgers not only because of over-crowded quarters, but because the wages of the Negroes are so low that they must take in lodgers to pay their excessive high rents.

Soft Pedals Wage Issue.

For some reason or other, the Urban League representative did not want to admit that the wages of the Negroes were lower than wages of the whites. Finally it was dragged out of him that very few trades are open to the Negroes. "I have now several trained stenographers and accountants whom I have been unable to place," he said, "and if I did secure them jobs they would have to work at lower wages than the whites receive for the same work. However, when we secure jobs for unskilled Negroes, they work at the same wages as the whites."

"The Negro is pushed from two sides," Mr. Thayer continued. "He not only must pay to both white and Negro landlords higher rents in restricted areas, but he finds it difficult to secure jobs for which he is trained and must work at the very lowest wages in unpleasant positions. The only remedy I see for the present housing crisis is publicity."

What About Organization?

The DAILY WORKER agrees with the Urban League in describing the condition of the Negro as deplorable, and it is glad that the Urban League has from time to time in the past, conducted extensive housing surveys which prove the Negroes are living at a lower standard than the whites, and paying higher rents. But the DAILY WORKER does not agree that publicity is the only remedy for the housing evils, and it has a few questions to ask the Urban League.

Why is the Urban League so passive in ORGANIZING the Negroes to fight their own battles for better economic conditions? Is the Urban League an employment bureau for securing cheap Negro labor for the employers?

The DAILY WORKER is informed that Mr. Hill, head of the Urban League, has gone on record as being in favor of the Negro girls acting as strikebreakers in the present garment strike in Chicago. The DAILY WORKER wants to know if the organizations like the Urban League have as their directors large Negro landlords who are reaping a golden harvest from the congested housing situation.

Can't Trust Scab Agents.

The Negro workers of Chicago must learn that they cannot put any faith in prominent members of their community who are always willing to sell them out to gain profits for themselves. How can the workers expect aid from members of their race who advocate scabbing on a union which contains many Negro members? The Negroes are pleased to go to fashion shows, and see the clothes worn by a woman who made a million dollars off of them. The Associated Business Clubs, and various church and civic organizations make good reading in the paper.

But the Negro workers have nothing in common with leagues and societies that profiteer on them. They can expect no material help from strike-breakers, grafting landlords, bribe-taking politicians, keepers of dens of vice, and large property owners. Chicago's Negro workers must help themselves.

NORWAY HARBOR STRIKE FORCES COAL RATIONING

Bosses Retaliate by Big Lockouts

By PAUL HOYER.
(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

CHRISTIANIA, Norway, Mar. 17.—The employers of Norway have embarked upon a great offensive. Thirty thousand men have just been locked out, a second batch of 35,000 are expected to be locked out soon.

The rumpus started with a strike of the harbor workers. The unions had taken the usual course prescribed by law and had tried to arrive at an agreement with the bosses. The question was chiefly one of higher wages. The harbor workers contended that, since the government had embarked upon a policy of higher import duties, they must have higher wages to cope with the increased cost of living.

Bosses Stiff-Necked.

The bosses, fearing that the granting of the demand of the harbor workers would lead to a demand for increased wages all around, declined.

While negotiations were in progress between the two parties, the bosses suddenly appeared with an entirely new and unheard-of demand. They insisted that a clause be inserted in the new agreement, by which the unions were to agree to deposit a sum of money in a bank, this money to be paid over to the employers in the event of unauthorized and "unnecessary" strikes breaking out. The unions were even to make themselves responsible financially for unorganized workers. The unions declined and the lockout resulted.

24,000 Locked Out.

The trades affected by the first lockout of 24,000 are: Building trades, masons, shoe factories, textile, tobacco, furniture factories, mining industry, sawmills, tailors, and dynamite industry. The further lockout involved brewery workers, the electro-chemical industry, the typographical trades (with the exception of the newspapers) and chocolate manufacture.

It is evident that the bosses are trying to use the economic crisis of Norway—there are already 19,000 jobless out of a population of 2,500,000—for forcing the workers to their knees.

Meanwhile the strike of the harbor workers is making life so serious in Norway that coal has had to be rationed.

Woman Violin Champ Performs Difficult Scotch Fantasia

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN.

Olga Eitner, winner in the violin section of the Society of American Musicians' contest, was soloist with the Chicago Symphony orchestra at the popular concert in Orchestra Hall, last Thursday night. Of late there has been an epidemic of women violinists, and two, Erika Morini and Cecilia Hansen, have become quite well known. Miss Eitner's performance of the difficult and wild music of the Bruch Scotch fantasia showed her to have much of the warmth and beautiful interpretation of Miss Hansen, coupled with much of the brilliance and cold fireworks of Erika Morini.

The orchestral part of the program was mainly given over to light music. There was the brilliant overture to Mignon, by Thomas, and the tinselled "Nutcracker" suite of Chaykovski. Edward MacDowell's A Minor suite is a romantic set of pastoral pictures. "A Sketch of the Steppes of Central Asia," by Alexander Borodin, that queer Russian chemist-musician, a melancholic description of desert plains completed the program.

Better Than Balzac

To the DAILY WORKER:—Am reading "A Week." The author certainly does paint the actors in glowing colors. I think it is as good if not better than "The Chouans," a French Revolution story, by Balzac. The author has all the present day writers beaten to a frazzle, not counting Jack London.—W. J. D.

Every new DAILY WORKER reader means a new recruit in the ranks of militant labor.

Negroes Mostly Workers

LESS than five per cent of the Negro wage earners of this country earn more than $1,000 a year in wages, altho the United States Department of Labor finds that a family of three cannot live decently on less than $1,800 a year. Negro workingmen are forced to take lodgers into their already crowded homes to offset the starvation wages they receive, and to pay their high rents. The Negro welfare organizations tell the DAILY WORKER there is no solution to landlord profiteering and low wages except publicity. They do nothing to really organize the Negro workers. Is this because the welfare workers themselves are real estate owners who are reaping profits of the working class members of their race? Can the Negro workers expect real help from clubs and societies that are quietly fleecing them behind their backs? The DAILY WORKER investigator does not think so.

Constitution of Miners' Union and Rights of Membership Are Violated By the Pay-Roll Vote

By J. A. HAMILTON.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 17.—What the Lewis machine must have in a United Mine Workers' convention is control of enough delegates and votes to decide the action of the convention on important matters.

District Five, Western Pennsylvania, has long been a source of supply for these delegates and votes. But the strong progressive wave in that district put the machine into difficult straits when preparing for the 1924 convention.

It was unable to carry the vote of the District Five delegation strongly for the machine as has been the rule in the past.

An unofficial count of the roll-call vote on the removal of the appointive power of the International President shows 197 votes for the machine and 218 against it. In the 1922 convention the District Five delegation voted on the Howat case, 231 with the machine and 135 against; in the 1921 Convention, on the Howat case, 264 with and 130 against.

Thus a machine majority of 134 votes in 1921, and of 96 in 1922 was turned by 1924 into a progressive majority of 21, a change in sentiment of 155 votes from 1921 and 117 votes from 1922.

Machine Violates Constitution.

When the sources of these 197 machine votes are examined, it is seen that to run up this total the machine indisputably violated the Constitution in some cases; almost certainly violated it in others; and perverted it in others; in order to defeat the wishes of the rank and file.

The whole system of pay-roll representation is contrary to the interests of the membership. To speak of one of the pay-roll "representing" a certain local union is to joke; the pay-roll represents neither the locals from which they have credentials, nor the interests of the membership as a whole, but solely the Lewis machine. Out of the 197 machine votes, 109 were cast by elected or appointed employes or well-known henchmen of the machine and out of the 109 votes, 63 were illegal or questionable. Most or all of these votes would not have been cast at all had the constitution been complied with and had the system of pay-roll misrepresentation not been in vogue; or at least the machine would have had a considerable amount of trouble to secure the votes.

The other 46 pay-roll votes and the 88 machine votes by rank and file delegates by no means indicate that the sentiment of the members for whom these votes were cast, was in accordance with the machine on the appointive power issue.

Preponderance of Pay-Rollers.

When a member of the pay-roll by hook or crook gets a credential from a local, there is one or more votes cinched for the machine on anything or everything. A rank and file delegate even tho friendly with the machine is more or less subject to being influenced by fear of the membership of his local union. The pay-roll delegate is little bothered by what one or two locals think.

When the delegates get to the convention they find that for every two or three rank and file delegates there is a pay-roller. The District five delegation included 169 delegates of which 39 were appointed or elected officials, 110 were well-known henchmen of the machine, and 120 were from the rank and file. There was thus a quite sufficient force of pay-rollers to keep in touch with all the rank and file delegates and to keep under control all delegates subject to any of the many forms of influence the machine knows how to exert.

The methods used by the District Five delegation to roll up the votes are typical of what the Lewis machine does thruout the union whenever the occasion demands and wherever the opportunity affords. Not only is the District Five Administration responsible but the International Administration is more responsible for allowing and encouraging the manufacture of votes in a subordinate division and for profiting from the results.

In some districts, for example in Illinois the manufacture of votes does not go on as it does in District Five and other sections. But it is of vital interest to the Illinois miners that District Five and other such sections be cleaned up because otherwise the Lewis machine will be able indefinitely to manufacture and control enough votes to overcome a very strong opposition from Illinois and other states.

Illegal Votes—Delinquent Locals.

Article XII, Section 6 of the International Constitution states, "Any Local union becoming delinquent must comply with Section 18 of Article 14 and be in good standing for four months previous to the month in which the Convention is held, before it will be entitled to representation."

A local delinquent Sept. 1, 1923 or becoming so later would not be entitled to representation because even tho it would comply with Article 14, Section 18, it would not be in good standing for the required four months, the convention having been held in January. Nevertheless, there were delegates seated from four locals which were on the delinqent list Jan. 17, 1924. These locals are 1372 Cecil; 2555, Bridgeville; 3140 Vandergrift; and 3303 Imperial, all "represented" by the pay-roll outfit.

Illegal Votes By Appointed Employes.

Article XII, Section 10 states, "No appointed employe of the organization shall be delegate from any other local union than his own." The pay-roll bunch transfer their membership whenever the interests of the machine demand it so it is hard to tell in what local a certain one holds membership at present. But when an appointed employe represents more than one local, he is clearly and indisputably violating this section of the Constitution.

Four District Organizers and one International appointed employe each represented more than one local thus casting illegal votes to the number of 10, and representing illegally 8 locals. (Organizers Frank Dobbins, 3143 and 4370; Jas. Malone, 2501, 274, 2271, 2597; John Busarell, 1046, 4001, 1589; Robt. Gaitens, 1247, 3141; Convention Sergeant-at-Arms Thos. Dobbins, 3081, 3149.)

Mine On Strike.

2230 belongs to Lilly Mine, West Brownsville where there has been a strike since the spring of 1923. Reports are conflicting about the status of this strike, but it seems that the mine is operating, and that many of the original strikers are no longer on strike. It is doubtful if there are enough on strike to be entitled to two votes, after 8 or 9 months with mines working all around. Many would leave for other mines. This local paid on 217 men the six months ending Jan. 1, 1923, before the strike started.

Questionable Votes By Appointees.

Eleven locals with thirteen votes were represented by appointed employes who formerly belonged to other locals. If any of these employes did not belong to the local represented, the vote was illegal; and even if they all did belong, the fact remains that their transfer of membership was merely for the purpose of being able to better serve the machine and defeat the interests of the membership. (Frank Dobbins, 3143; Carlile Wolcutt, 4338; Percy Thompson, 4874; Thos. Naylor, 1678; Jas. Riach, 408; David Hickey, 2932; F. P. Hanaway, 3882; John Grecula, 2682; Pete Maracini, 4840; Thos. Dobbins, 3081; Bozo Damich, 963.)

Article XIV, Section 1 states, "Local Unions shall be composed of ten or more workmen, skilled and unskilled, working in or around coal mines, coal washers, or coke ovens."

Section 11 states, "Any member becoming three months in arrears for dues and assessments, unless officially exonerated from the payment of same, shall forfeit his membership." Section 23, provides for exoneration only for those who have not worked more than four days in the month.

Machine Performs Miracles.

The pay-roll "represented" 15 locals, with 17 votes, which are located at non-union or abandoned or long-idle mines. Two of these locals (3149 and 3521, 2 votes each) have appeared in no tax report as far back as the one for six months ending Jan. 31, 1920. Eight have paid nothing since July 31, 1921; (1201, abandoned; 3081, 3138, 4652, 3143, 3983, 3140, at non-union mines; and 963 at Manown mine, now part of Mongah mine, local union 408). One (4400) has paid nothing since Jan. 31, 1922. The other four (3141, and 849 at non-union mines; 2501 and 1372 at long-idle mines) have since July 31, 1921, paid tax regularly or now and then but only on an average of less than ten members.

Every one of these 15 locals has thus for years been composed entirely or almost entirely of exonerated members. If there really are the number of exonerated members in these locals which the machine claims there [illegible] when it represents these locals, it is a miracle how they can live so long without work.

It may well be doubted whether there are really enough members in any of these locals to entitle them to existence.

What Does This Mean?

Local 849 is at Albany mine, near Brownsville, which has been non-union for years, if not thruout its existence. 3149 is at Brackenridge, where Fannie Sellins was murdered by a company thug Aug. 26, 1919, during an attempt to establish the union. According to reports this ended the campaign, with the exception of passing on some relief in a very loose manner. 3521 is at Natrona, whose one or two mines have been non-union for years, if not during their existence.

The other non-union mines are in the Kiskiminetas River Valley which was once well organized.

In the report for the six months ending July 31, 1921, 22 Kiski locals appear, paying tax equivalent to 1482 members. In the reports since that time, from 2 to 5 locals appear, paying on from 5 to 160 members in the various reports. This has been due to the action of the Hicks Coal Co., the chief operator in this field, which broke the contract before its expiration April 1, 1922, and which with practically all the other operators in the Kiski valley have been able since to establish the open-shop.

"Graveyard" Locals.

The pay-roll "represented" 16 locals which during the year ending July 31, 1923, were real respectable. But in the next four months report, ten of these locals do not appear (3516, 3120, 2597, 2244, 615, 2555, 1247, 3303, 4001, 2728) and the other six paid an unusually low amount of tax (4338, 4874, 4740, 816, 4724, 671). This means that these mines were idle for all or most of this four months, which means for six months before the convention. With mines operating all around these idle mines, there would be very few members left in these locals by the time the convention rolled around. It is therefore extremely probable that at least some of these locals had lost members until they did not have left the required ten members, and were therefore unentitled to representation in the convention. Sixteen votes from these.

"Peanut" Locals.

The pay-roll "represented" 20 locals with 20 votes which in the year and for months ending Nov. 30, 1923, paid tax equivalent to an average membership of 50 or less. (3128, 5027, 3214, 4223, 5116, 2456, 2367, 3123, 4219, 3716, 1943, 4808, 5626, 2932, 4993, 4325, 5533, 1361, 4370, 5180). Such locals are constitutionally entitled to representation, even tho the membership is only ten, (Article XII, Section 2) and can combine with other small locals to send a delegate (Section 5), and by custom, a small local is often represented by a delegate from a local of more than the one hundred membership specified in Section 5. But in practice, very few locals of less than 100 members, let alone less than 50, are represented if left to themselves.

The Constitution exempts them from penalty for failure to be represented; and the burden of the delegate's hotel and wages, the bother of combining with other locals, and the knowledge that the small local does not have much influence, act together to keep the locals from sending delegates from their membership.

But one of the pay-roll can easily get credentials from these small locals because it costs the local nothing, and thus add to the machine vote in the convention votes which would not be cast at all did the pay-roll system of representation not exist.

The "representing" of these "peanut" locals is all the worse because of the unusually small number of members represented by a vote. These 20 locals paid tax according to the last report equivalent to a total average membership of 515, while 10 locals in the Canonsburg section whose 20 votes were cast against the machine, paid on an average membership of 2167. It would be possible for 200 members in 20 locals of ten members each to exert as much influence in the convention as 3000 members in 20 locals of 150 members each; each local is entitled to one delegate and one vote. Ordinarily the small local however, will not be represented; but the machine upsets the rule and perverts the constitution to help defeat the wishes of the membership.

Remove Violators From Office.

The violations of the constitution and the rights of the membership pointed out herein should be sufficient grounds for removing the whole District and International Administrations. They are jointly responsible, either for actually committing violations or for aiding and abetting them or for failing to protest against and stop them.

Amend the Constitution.

It will be very difficult to prevent these violations as long as elected and appointed officials are allowed to act as delegates. A constitutional amendment should be made to prevent anyone on the pay-roll from being a delegate. Any official or employe whose knowledge or advices can benefit the convention can be allowed to speak but not to vote. This would not prevent the President and Secretary from exercising their present duties; they do not need to be delegates.

The present procedure for securing exoneration is very loose. It is doubtless all right except when it comes to establishing the membership of the local for election or convention purposes. A provision should be adopted requiring the request for exoneration for members who will be entitled to vote in district and national elections, or entitled to representation in a convention, to specify the names and addresses of the persons applied for. This list should be sworn to by the local officers.

A provision should be adopted permitting any delegate to inspect the credentials of the delegates, and the sworn applications for exoneration.

At present one is led to doubt whether there are really any credentials from some of these flunky locals. No one but the machine ever sees the credentials.

The credential report should also be required to give more information. It should show for each local the number of paid and number of exonerated members entitled to representation, and in the case of a local in which all or a part of its vote depends on the exonerated members, the report should state why these men have been exonerated. The report should also contain a list of the men representing more than one local with the numbers of the different locals he represents.

The constitution is loose regarding the disposition of the charter of a dead local. As soon as the membership falls below ten for a certain time, say three months, for any reason, the charter should automatically be suspended and the International Secretary should be required to publish the fact. Then if the membership remains below ten for an additional period of say three months the charter should be automatically revoked.

At present the disposition of such local is left to the discretion of the International President who has the sole right to revoke charters, but is not given any instructions as to the use of this power.

When a local's paid membership for a certain period is less than ten, say for six months, the local should be investigated to see if there are really enough persons entitled to exoneration to keep the local alive. If so, the local officers should be required to furnish a sworn list of the names and addresses of all exonerated members, and the fact should be published that the local has been found to be still in existence.

The financial reports should be required to include the number of exonerations from each local, and also should give the local number and location of all locals chartered, suspended, revoked, and investigated during the period of the report.

Officials determined to override the wishes of the membership can evade all sorts of constitutional provisions. What is needed is officials who try to serve the membership instead of trying to make the membership serve them.

An Awakened Membership.

To amend the constitution and to elect and retain honest officials requires a membership attentive to the good of the organization. If the membership does not object to being exploited by a corrupt officialdom, there will not be much trouble in finding the officialdom to do the exploiting.

THE POWER COLUMN

Put Your Name on the Honor Roll!

ON Saturday, March 15, the campaign for 10,000 new subscribers for THE DAILY WORKER was opened. On Monday, March 17, the first results of the campaign reached THE DAILY WORKER.

It appears that the employes in the business office are in for a few months of stiff work if the returns keep coming in at the rate in which they have commenced. So far the majority of the new "subs" sold under the special terms of the new drive have been sold by Chicago patriots.

Very likely this is caused by the fact that Chicago has a start on the rest of the country because Chicago readers receive their paper sooner and can get their letters in to THE DAILY WORKER office more quickly. But Chicagoans claim that they are off to a flying start and that they will lead the campaign from start to finish.

* * * *

Watch Friday's Paper for Honor Roll.

IT is impossible to enroll the names of those who have sold subs in this new drive in today's paper. Beginning on Friday, March 21, and continuing every Tuesday and Friday thereafter, the names of the live wires who are making THE DAILY WORKER grow will be published in the Honor Roll.

For more reasons than one the Honor Roll will be an historic document. On it will be enrolled the names of the best fighters in the American labor movement, those who know that there is no better way to build up the militant movement than by increasing THE DAILY WORKER circulation.

Is your name going to be on this Roll of Honor? Sell a subscription to THE DAILY WORKER and put it there. Sell a trial "sub," two months for $1.00; or, better still, sell a year's "sub" at the regular rate and secure for yourself a half-month's sub to "The Labor Herald," "The Liberator" or "Soviet Russia Pictorial," free!

AUTO INDUSTRY FACING DECLINE, DECLARES OLDS

Says Flivver Business Is Inflated

By LELAND OLDS

(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Employment in Michigan factories has reached a peak which threatens increasing insecurity to the wage earners in that state, acording to figures made public by J. L. Lovett, general manager, Michigan Manufacturers' Association. He pictures an inflated employment market, especially in the automobile industry. Employes should begin taking steps to protect their interests when the automobile industry reaches the saturation point.

Employment Inflation.

The number employed in Michigan factories, according to Lovett, exceeds that in any previous year in history. The number of workers on the pay rolls is greater even than the number employed during the post-war inflation year, 1919, while nearly twice as much money is being paid out each week in wages.

In Detroit 79 firms employing about two-thirds of the city's industrial workers report approximately 241,000 employers on their pay rolls. On this basis Lovett estimates the total employed by the 3,000 Detroit factories at over 361,000. In 1919 the federal census bureau estimated peak industrial employment of Wayne county, which includes Detroit, at 256,000.

Grand Rapids employment figures show a gain of 5,000 over 1919 altho the furniture industry is operating at not more than 70 per cent of capacity. Flint with a total employment of about 35,000 shows a gain of 15 per cent. Pontiac with a total of 15,000 reports a gain of 10 per cent. Lancaster and Kalamazoo both report gains of 3,000 over 1919. While Jackson reports a gain of 2,000, Battle Creek a gain of 1,000 and Muskegon a gain of 1,000.

Carrying Eggs in One Basket.

A glance at the census of manufacturers would seem to indicate that Michigan is carrying too many eggs in one basket. Like the man who invests the greater part of his savings in a single venture Michigan has invested over half her jobs in the making of automobiles, automobile bodies and accessories. In 1919, according to the census, 197,881 of the 471,242 industrial workers in Michigan were directly engaged in the production of automobiles and auto parts. Since 1919 the automobile industry has grown materially. As a matter of fact 50 per cent of all the workers employed by the automobile industry in the United States now work in Michigan.

Cal Coolidge Cuts Short Interview with The Passion Players

WASHINGTON, March 17.—The president cannot receive public addresses from people of a foreign nation unless presented thru the usual diplomatic channels, President Coolidge declared today in a letter to Anton Lang, the Christus of the famous Oberammergau Passion Players.

The president's letter, which was addressed to Lang in care of the German embassy at Washington, was in explanation of the action of Mr. Coolidge in cutting short the audience which the Passion Players had at the White House on Saturday.

LABOR COUNCIL FLASHES S. O. S. FOR RUTHENBERG

Must Have More Funds To Make Appeal

Attorneys' fees and supplementary legal expenses took $2,170 of the $3,991 paid into the Labor Defense Council during the month of February, as shown by the financial statement, just made public. This indicates that unless the returns are increased, the Council will be unable to free itself from the burden of debt which is hampering its operations.

The Labor Defense Council announces that it is in debt to the amount of $7,000.

February's receipts were largely stimulated by the Labor Defense Council's special premium offer, under which everyone selling a full sheet of Ruthenberg Appeal Coupons receives a free copy of Iury Libedinsky's stirring novel "A Week." This is illustrated by the fact that returns from the sale of Ruthenberg Appeal Coupons during the month totaled $1,371, constituting the largest single source of revenue.

Subscription lists were second in amount of revenue produced, accounting for $1,348. Local branches of the Labor Defense Council sent in $1,042 to the National Office as a result of the month's activities. The remaining $209 was realized from trade union contributions, collections at meetings, and contributions from individuals.

Two months ago, the Labor Defense Council announced that it had to have $15,000 by March 1. Only $7,612 has come in since then. The L. D. C. is again sending out the call to GET BEHIND THE RUTHENBERG APPEAL.

June 17 and the Next Task

The states where genuine farmer-labor parties exist have united their forces for the gigantic convention that is to be held in the Twin Cities June 17 and hope and enthusiasm now should be the attitude of the militant workers and farmers who have made this tremendously important development possible. They have worked unceasingly to unite the farmer-labor movement of America and they have been successful. Only those who know with what devotion the militants throw themselves into work of this character can have any idea of the strain they have been under. They have had to foresee and forestall the organized campaign of sabotage launched by the disruptionists; they have had to encourage the despondent elements, bolster up the backbones of the weaklings and unite all elements around a minimum program.

The task seemed almost superhuman at times, but it has been accomplished and all over the nation the workers and farmers are looking forward to the convention on June 17 that will be a milestone in the march of the masses to control of their destinies.

There is no longer any doubt that the economic breakdown of American capitalism with its misery for the masses has brought the inevitable but long-awaited move toward mass political expression.

The ravens of the labor movement had said that it could not be done; that unity of the workers and farmers on the political field was a dream and a delusion; that officialdom of both the farmer and worker organizations was against it and that the rank and file would do as they had always done and follow their misleaders. As always, not content with prophecy, the backward and dishonest elements united to justify their predictions. No stone was left unturned in an effort to make abortive the series of unity conferences held in Minnesota; the "menace of Communism" was brought to the center of the stage and from Washington, D. C., to Minneapolis a united front of reactionaries was set up for the purpose of splitting the movement.

The unity conferences are history now and that history records the fact that at the time that the most advanced elements of the workers and farmers of America were striving to forget their differences and unite for joint action against American capitalism the tribe of Gompers, Brown, and Rodriguez, the C. P. P. A.'ers and the so-called liberals, the S. P.'ers and the politicians, were the enemies of the united front.

It is the future that interests us at present. The disrupters and traitors have failed, unity prevails and will be cemented on June 17. The efforts of the militants from now until that date must be directed towards making it the greatest possible success, towards expressing in organizational form and in the platform that will be adopted the needs of the masses whose pressure from below has nullified all attempts to keep them divided.

June 17 must see a convention of such size and unity of thought and purpose that American capitalism as well as the masses will recognize it for the expression of a movement that is here to stay and work and fight until political and economic power in America is in the hands of the workers and farmers.

There is reason now for optimism and the croakers must be discouraged; the progressive elements of the workers and farmers have shown that the bogeymen of American capitalism frighten them no longer.

It is now a question of solidifying the organizations of the workers and farmers and building in every state powerful workingclass parties that after June 17 will be ready to carry on the work for the program that will be endorsed by the greatest mass gathering that America has yet seen.

While the Rev. J. Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the house of representatives, was offering prayer at the recent memorial joint session to the late President Harding among those standing in reverent silence was Harry M. Daugherty. With head slightly stooped and thumbs in his trousers' pockets, he appeared to be offering up a prayer for Burton K. Wheeler.

March 18th is the anniversary of Grover Cleveland's birthday. He was famous for having a good taste in liquor, for wearing a size twenty-two collar and six and a quarter hat. Needless to say he was a 100 per cent American.

The Chicago Tribune in a cartoon advises the democratic and republican parties, represented as fat dogs, that while they quarrel, public confidence, in the form of a rather clean bone, would go to the radical—a skinny dog. The fat dogs are doing a little worrying.

The Bonus Controversy

The tug of war over the bonus is about to come to an end. Unless unforeseen circumstances intervene the question of granting adjusted compensation to the ex-soldiers will come up for settlement in the House of Representatives within a few days.

Thru the medium of the War Finance Corporation the government has granted millions of dollars in bonuses to the big companies for having put their organizations at the disposal of the government during the world war. To be correct, one should state that these corporations were given a chance by the government to clean up billions in profits and then were given a bonus on the side.

The railroad capitalists, the coal magnates, the shipping magnates, the aeroplane manufacturers, and numerous other agencies of the owning class were likewise rewarded in millions for their loyalty which was so profitable to them.

Why then all this noise about the workers and farmers who endangered their lives during the war while the capitalists were staying home and clipping dividends? Why is it that the Wall Street Journal has even stooped to call so patriotic an organization as the American Legion disreputable because of the soldier bonus controversy? Why is it that a bonus for capitalists is perfectly honorable and assumed as the natural course of business operations, while the granting of a long overdue adjusted compensation to those who fought and bled in the war in which they had no interests of their own at stake is denounced and fought so bitterly?

The answer to these queries is very simple. The government of the United States is dedicated to serving the employing class. It will never make the slightest move in behalf of the interests of the working and farming classes unless it is compelled to do so by the dangerous pressure of these masses. This strikebreaking agency of ours, parading as the government of, by, and for the people, will not grant a bonus to the soldiers. It is too busy granting bonuses to the employers. Some members of Congress and the Senate may vote for some sort of a half-hearted bonus measure, but this will be more with the idea of repairing their own political fences than with the objective of giving the poor ex-soldiers even a fraction of what is long overdue them. These so-called friends of the ex-soldiers are sure that Coolidge will veto any attempt to enact bonus legislation, hence they can afford to pretend being solicitous of the soldiers' welfare. The whole capitalist coterie infesting the Senate and House chambers and the White House are playing the game of their masters, each in his own way, of course, but each using the fate of the ex-soldier as a pawn in the game of perpetuating the hold of the exploiters of labor on the governmental apparatus.

Shamrocks and Strikers

On St. Patrick's Day the striking garment workers and other interested observers on South Market Street were regaled with the spectacle of Jewish bosses handing out silk shamrocks to the Irish policemen who were clubbing and arresting their former employes.

The capitalist class of this country has profited greatly by fomenting dissension between the workers of Jewish and Irish birth and extraction, but the Market Street incident is ample proof that racial and religious differences are easily reconciled when the bosses and their lackeys are face to face with revolt on the part of the workers.

It has long been our opinion that an Irish catholic employer would worship Jahveh in a synagogue if by so doing his profits could be increased. By the same token a Jewish boss will cater to the most ignorant prejudices of members of another religious sect if this will aid him in combatting workers of his own race and religion.

An Irish policeman clubbing strike pickets while proudly wearing in his coat lapel a shamrock greasy from the fingering of a sweatshop owner of Jewish birth is an example of tolerance for the beliefs of allies that the workers would do well to emulate.

Capitalist Jew and catholic lackey unite against workingclass Jew and Catholic while the preachers of both sects hold up their hands in holy horror when the class struggle is mentioned.

The problem of Calvin's silence has been solved. Every time he gets ready to make a statement a new disclosure occurs and Cal has to prepare a new alibi which in turn becomes passe before he can utter it. The famous New England vocal chords have atrophied from lack of use.

When William J. Burns lauded Gaston B. Means as "the best man he ever had" he probably did not know that the well-informed Mr. Means was about to upset the apple-cart.

Had the Prince of Wales been Richard the Third he would doubtless have said, "My kingdom for a horse from which I cannot fall."

Some men are senators, attorney-generals and department of justice officials and get mixed up in oil scandals and others are just ordinary liars.

Another St. Patrick's day has passed and Ireland is now free from everything but British and Irish capitalism.

60 Years of Oil In the United States; Events Leading Up to Teapot Scandal

Editor's Note.—We want our readers to get the fullest benefit possible out of our "Teapot Special Edition" that appears tomorrow (Wednesday) without fail. We are, therefore, today publishing an introductory article, a chronology of oil in the United States, prepared specially for the DAILY WORKER by Robert Minor, editor of "The Liberator," the monthly Communist magazine. This introductory article takes the reader from the time the first oil well was drilled in the United States, up to the time that William Gibbs McAdoo left the Wilson cabinet, and received an introductory retainer of $25,000 from Mr. Doheny. The events of the last half dozen years will be reviewed by Robert Minor in "The Teapot Edition" tomorrow. Read this interesting chronology of oil.

By ROBERT MINOR

1858—The first oil well was drilled in the United States.

1865—Standard Oil works were built.

1878—"Buck" McCandless, member of the state legislature of Pennsylvania, was accused of taking $20,000 from Rockefeller's Standard Oil Co.

1880—The use of kerosene oil for lighting purposes was spreading thruout the world, and the world's production had been raised to 30,000,000 barrels a year, nearly nine-tenths of which was produced in the United States where Rockefeller was busy monopolizing the field at home and the world market.

1883—Standard Oil Co. placed in the United States senate H. B. Payne of Ohio, the father of Oliver H. Payne, treasurer of Standard Oil Co.

1884 — Grover Cleveland was launched into the field to run for the presidency on a campaign fund of $1,400,000.

Standard Oil Candidate.

1885—President Cleveland was inaugurated, and appointed as Secretary of the Navy, W. C. Whitney. Senator Hoar declared that the general public believed that Standard Oil Co. was represented in both the president's cabinet and the United States senate. Secretary of the Navy Whitney denied any connection with Standard Oil.

About this time Edward L. Doheny and Albert B. Fall began prospecting for oil together in Mexico and the Southwestern states.

1889— Warren G. Harding, a young protege of Senator Joseph B. Foraker, is elected to the state senate of Ohio with the assistance of Foraker.

1892—Grover Cleveland was favored by the great corporations on a promise to demonetize silver; he was given this time a campaign fund of $2,350,000, as against his rival's $1,850,000, and was restored to the presidency.

1896—Senator Joseph B. Foraker in the republican national convention presented the name of William McKinley for the presidency. McKinley was nominated. William McKinley was selected for the presidency by a coalition of oil companies, industrial magnates and bankers, who gave $16,500,000 for his election; while William J. Bryan could only get one twenty-fifth as much. Marcus A. Hanna raised the campaign fund for McKinley.

July 31—Pennsylvania state treasurer writes to James McManes, President, People's Bank, Philadelphia:

Dear Sir: On Monday we will mail you check for $10,000 for credit of Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, General Fund, which will make a credit to our account of $600,000. The understanding is that I am not to draw against any part of this $600,000 deposit until the Hon. R. R. Quay has paid or arranged satisfactorily to you the loan of $100,000 which you are to make him next week. Very truly yours,

B. J. Haywood, State Treasurer.

"If you buy and carry a thousand Met. for me I will shake the plum tree.—M. S. QUAY."

Penrose Rockefeller Stool.

May 31—John D. Archbold, treasurer of Standard Oil Co., writes to Senator Marcus A. Hanna:

My dear Senator: Responding to your favor of the 28th, it gives me pleasure to enclose you herewith certificate of deposit to your favor for $2,000 to aid in the Oregon matter. Trusting the desired end will be accomplished, I am, with kind regards, very truly yours, Jno. D. Archbold.

July 18—John D. Archbold writes to Senator Hanna:

(Personal)

My dear Senator: I have your favor of the 15th and will do as you request, provided that you finally say that you need so much. Please ask for it in installments, as needed, from time to time, not all at once. I have your kind note about Walter and will do as you suggest.

Very truly yours, Jno. D. Archbold.

1898, Sept 22—John D. Archbold, treasurer of the Standard Oil Co., writes to Senator Mathew S. Quay:

My dear Senator: Answer to your favor of September 11th has been delayed because of my absence on vacation. It now gives me great pleasure to enclose you certificate of deposit to your favor for $12,500, in fulfillment of promise. Very truly yours, John D. Archbold.

Hanna Elected By Standard.

1899, March 4—Marcus A. Hanna is sent by the Standard Oil Co. to the U. S. Senate

Sept. 25—John D. Archbold, treasurer of Standard Oil Co., writes to Senator Mathew S. Quay:

My dear Senator: In accordance with request in your favor to me of the 23rd, I now beg to enclose you cashier's check, National City Bank of New York to your favor for $10,000. Very truly yours, Jno. D. Archbold.

March 26—John D. Archbold to Senator Joseph B. Foraker:

Dear Senator: In accordance with our understanding, I now beg to enclose you certificate of deposit to your favor for $15,000. Kindly acknowledge receipt and oblige. Yours very truly, Jno. D. Archbold.

April 17—Again to Foraker:

My dear Senator: I enclose you certificate of deposit to your favor for $14,500. We are greatly at a loss in the matter, but I send this, and will be glad to have a frank talk with you when opportunity offers, and if you so desire. I need scarcely again express our great gratification over the favorable outcome of affairs. Very truly yours, John D. Archbold.

Joseph B. Foraker presents to republican national convention of 1900 the name of William McKinley for renomination for the presidency. McKinley and Roosevelt are nominated and elected on a campaign fund of $9,500,000, raised by Mark Hanna among big corporations and banks. Bryan, the other candidate, had but $425,000.

Sept. 22—Senator Marcus A. Hanna to John D. Archbold:

My dear John: I am in receipt of yours of the 18th inst., with enclosures as stated, for which I am obliged. I am "holding the bag," and this is going to be an expensive campaign. I can see where I will land before the thing is over, so I have no doubt I will have to call again. I feel a delicacy about this, as it is my funeral. I can beg for others better when I have a personal interest. There are many important interests in this fight. Should Johnson carry the legislature, corporations will catch it, as I am their representative so-called. Sincerely yours, M. A. Hanna.

More Oily Politics.

1900, Oct. 12—John D. Archbold to Hon. C. H. Grosvenor:

My dear General: I have your favor of the 10th, and it gives me pleasure to enclose you herewith certificate of deposit to your favor for $1,000 to aid in the good work, and with very best wishes, I am very truly yours, Jno. D. Archbold.

Nov. 26—Archbold to Foraker:

My dear Senator: In pursuance of our understanding in our talk over the telephone today, I now beg to enclose you certificate of deposit to your favor for $10,000.

Truly yours, Jno. D. Archbold.

Dec. 11—Archbold to Foraker:

My dear Senator: Referring to our telephonic conversation today, I now beg to enclose you certificate of deposit to your favor for $5,000.

Very truly yours, Jno. D. Archbold.

1900—The Standard Oil Co. which in Texas was concealed behind the name of "Waters-Pierce Oil Co." was ordered out of the state for violation of the anti-trust law and employed a brilliant young lawyer, Joseph W. Bailey, to arrange matters so that it might continue to do business in Texas.

In May, 1900, the young lawyer, Bailey, "got the Standard back into Texas."

In June, Bailey bought a six-thousand-acre ranch, the Grapevine ranch near Dallas, Texas; the value being $250,000.

1901—In September, Bailey came into possession of some fine blooded racehorses.

In 1901, Joseph W. Bailey was elected to the United States senate. A scandal about the Grapevine ranch purchase arose; and Bailey claimed that Governor David R. Francis of Missouri, had given him the financial backing.

"The Texas Matter."

March 1—A promissory note: $8,000. Washington, D. C., Mar. 1st, 1901.

Four months after date I promise to pay to the order of H. C. Pierce $8,000 at his office in St. Louis, Mo.

J. W. Bailey.

March 6—An entry upon the books of the Waters-Pierce Oil Co.:

St. Louis, Mo., March 6th, 1901.

For amount of loan to J. W. B., per note in hands of treasurer, $8,000.

March 28—Senator Bailey wrote to H. C. Pierce of the Waters-Pierce Oil Co.:

My dear Pierce: Send me New York exchange for $1,750. Have it made payable to my order, so that it will not be necessary for you to indorse it. Send it at once, as I ought to have had it several days ago. Your friend, J. W. Bailey.

An entry upon the books of the Waters-Pierce Oil Co.:

To J. W. Bailey, Gainesville, Tex. For legal expense account, Texas matter, $1,750, as per letter J. W. Bailey, herewith attached, dated May 25.

Sept. 14—Theodore Roosevelt becomes President of the United States, on the death of President McKinley.

1902, Jan. 27—John D. Archbold, treasurer of Standard Oil Co., writes to Senator Joseph B. Foraker:

My Dear Senator: Responding to your favor of the 25th, it gives me pleasure to hand you herewith certificate of deposit $50,000, in accordance with our understanding. Your letter states the conditions correctly and I trust the transaction will be successfully consummated.

Very truly yours, John D. Archbold.

1903—Republic of Panama is broken up, President Roosevelt giving his assistance to a revolt, which resulted in the Canal Zone being incorporated a new "republic of Columbia."

Begging For Oily Dough.

1903, Sept. 16—Senator Marcus A. Hanna to John D. Archbold:

My dear John: I know you will do the fair thing and I want the State Rep. Committee to get a liberal subscription from you this time. . . .

Sincerely yours, M. A. Hanna.

1904, June 10—Philander C. Knox, servant of Standard Oil, in Pennsylvania, was placed in the United States Senate.

Oct. 13—John D. Archbold to Senator Boise Penrose:

(Personal)

My dear Senator: In fulfillment of our understanding, it gives me great pleasure to hand you herewith certificate of deposit to your favor for $25,000, and with good wishes, I am, Yours truly, Jno. D. Archbold.

Roosevelt "Anti-Trust" Candidate.

1914—J. P. Morgan & Co. gave Theodore Roosevelt $150,000 in the form of a campaign fund; the Standard Oil Co. gave $125,000; Henry C. Frick gave $100,000 of Steel Trust earnings; George J. Gould gave $100,000; the Vanderbilts gave (thru Senator Chauncey M. Depew) $100,000; E. H. Harriman gave $400,000, and George W. Perkins gave $480,000. Mr. Roosevelt was the "anti-Trust" candidate. The futrher list of giant corporations, ranging from the Harvester Trust to numerous subsidiaries of the Steel Trust and the Morgan banking house, to hundreds of nondescript millionaires, is too long to print; but the total is well up to $11,000,000, according to the New York Times. (The Wall Street Journal claimed in 1920, that Roosevelt's fund in 1904 was only three and a half million dollars). Parker, the democratic candidate, was given only $1,250,000 to spend in the campaign.

June 1, 1907—State of Texas won anti-trust case against Waters-Pierce Oil Co., a fine of $1,623,900 being imposed.

1907—Joseph W. Bailey was reelected to the United States senate.

1908—William R. Hearst published the first of a series of letters and checks from the files of the Standard Oil Co., which showed that Senator Bailey of Texas, Senator Foraker of Ohio, and Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania, were acting as the hired employes of Standard Oil Co. in the United States senate. Some of the letters were held back until 1912.

Taft's Election Came Cheap.

The use of the political machine of President Roosevelt made Taft's election a cheap affair in 1908. J. P. Morgan and his associates only had to spend $1,700,000 to make Taft president; Bryan having only $750,000 to run with.

Warren G. Harding, active in reelection of Foraker to U. S. senate.

1909, December—Waters-Pierce Oil Co. properties in Texas pass title to S. W. Fordyce (a close political associate of Senator James Reed of Missouri), and later the name of the company appears as the Pierce-Fordyce Oil Association.

1910—Began a great revolution in the oil industry thru the perfecting of the internal combustion engine. The development of automobiles, and later aeroplanes, brought the wide use of gasoline and thus made petroleum a commodity of highest importance.

1910—Revolutionary disurbances in Mexico cause a decline in value of mining properties owned by Albert B. Fall, W. C. Greene and Edward L. Doheny, as well as the holdings of other capitalists.

1911—Porfirio Diaz, dictator of Mexico, overthrown in revolution led by Francisco Madero, which is the beginning of a long series of revolutionary disturbances in which American oil companies take a bigger and bigger part.

How Wilson Got "The Job"

1912—The group that had financed the election of Roosevelt in 1904 and that of Taft in 1908, had a violent quarrel among themselves in 1912. J. P. Morgan supported Taft, with his money; while George W. Perkins broke with his partner Morgan and poured hundreds of thousands of dollars into an effort to elect Roosevelt. This division in the Morgan bank, accompanied by a split in the Republican party, gave other financiers a chance to throw Woodrow Wilson into the white house with a fund of $850,000. "So far as public records show," the heads of tht Phelps-Dodge (copper mining) Company, the Harvester Trust and the Zinc Trust, together with several "progressive" millionaires, gave the funds that made Wilson president in 1912.

March 27—Albert B. Fall becomes United States senator from New Mexico.

1913—In January Senator Bailey resigned; moved to Washington and began a lucrative practice as attorney for corporations.

Feb. 22—President Francisco I. Madero of Mexico, murdered in a revolt in which oil companies played a big part, in gambling for the natural resources.

1914—Joseph B. Foraker, old, broken, discredited and useless to Standard Oil, tried again to get back his place in the senate, but could not find sufficient support. Former backers of Foraker threw the republican nomination to Warren G. Harding; since Foraker was discredited by oil exposures. Foraker, furious over the exposure and the desertion of his friends, insists on running against Harding, but is defeated; he and Harding remain friends.

Treaty was drawn up between U. S. and Republic of Columbia, but not ratified. $25,000,000 to be paid to Republic of Columbia.

Burns Agent For Germany.

March 29—A check of this date on the Riggs National Bank of Washington, D. C., for $509, issued by Captain Franz von Papen, chief of the Imperial German government military spies in the United States, payable to Paul Koenig, revealed that the Burns detective agency was engaged by the German government in spy service against the U. S. government in the United States during the world war. Gaston B. Means, general superintendent of the William J. Burns detective agency received money from Paul Koenig for secret service work in this country.

April (unless earlier)—The William J. Burns International Detective Agency is employed by the Imperial German government to conduct a spy service within the United States. Gaston B. Means, general superintendent of Burns' agency in charge.

August 20—Carranza becomes president of Mexico.

Oct. 19—U. S. government recognizes Carranza government of Mexico.

Doheny Buys Out Wilson.

1916—Wilson was elected again on a fund of $1,400,229 contributed by EDWARD L. DOHENY, John D. Ryan of the Copper Trust, Cleveland H. Dodge of the $375,000,000 Phelps-Dodge (copper mining) Company, who gave $79,000, and many others of the same school.

Charles Evans Hughes, republican candidate against Wilson, was given a campaign fund of $2,012,535 by Mr. HARRY SINCLAIR, contributed by HARRY SINCLAIR, ANDREW W. MELLON, (present Secretary of the Treasury) and many other industrial magnates and bankers. This was the only time in the history of the United States when the candidate with the biggest campaign fund did not win, for Hughes was favored with $600,000 more than Wilson got, and Wilson was elected.

1917, Feb. 15—New constitution of Mexico promulgated, Article 27 of which makes petroleum and other mineral resources under the soil of Mexico the property of the Mexican people.

American oil companies make organized protest against the taxes levied upon them by the Mexican government. Mr. George Creel supports their protest.

Sept. 17—"Complete reports of 38 manufacturing plants turning out munitions were found yesterday," according to the N. Y. Tribune (Sept. 8), among the papers of Gaston B. means, who was general superintendent of the Burns detective agency while that agency was doing secret service work in the United States for the Imperial German government.

Oil Demands War.

1918, Feb. 10—President Carranza of Mexico, issues decree imposing heavy tax on oil companies doing business in Mexico. Other decrees and laws have aimed to put entire petroleum industry of Mexico under government control.

American oil companies, Sinclair, Doheny and Rockefeller interests demand that U. S. government take action to prevent application of these laws to American companies.

First meeting on behalf of Wood's candidacy for presidency held at 16 East 72nd street, New York, the home of Ambrose Monell of the Midvale Steel Co., the American Banknote Co. and the International Nickel Co. Robert K. Cassatt, son of the late president of the Pennsylvania R. R., C. H. Duell, corporation attorney, Arbrose Monell and General Leonard Wood were present. Monell was "the quiet collector for Wood in New York," as described by Duell to a senate committee on June 3, 1920, and "Mr. Monell was the man who suggested that the campaign should be under-written for from $500,000 to $1,000,000."

At another private meeting of capitalist at the Plaza hotel, New York, at which General Wood, Ambrose Monell, William Cooper, Proctor and others were present, $400,000 was pledged by New York financial men, and "General Wood knew all about the half million with which it was planned to start the campaign," testified Mr. Duell.

Wood Jr. Hamon's Hireling.

Jake Hamon, Oklahoma oil magnate, negotiated with General Leonard Wood, proposing that Wood's son could make more money with Hamon's oil company than he was then making as a reporter. Leonard Wood, Jr., came home from France and was employed by Jake Hamon.

Is McAdoo Worth $10,000,000?

September 25, 1919—Democratic national committee meets in Atlantic City for a secret session. Bernard M. Baruch, New York banker, and Thomas L. Chadbourne "just dropped in to suggest how to raise $75,000 or $80,000 for typewriters" and other office equipment. Offer to raise $10,000,000 on condition McAdoo shall be the candidate.

PLOT TO CHOKE OFF OIL QUIZ

Coolidge Treasurer, Mellon, Graft Witness; Show British Government Financed Doheny

HAD JOB TO SUPPLY JOHN BULL'S NAVY

Made Head of Association For Irish Republic

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Mar. 18.—Edward Doheny, who always had his checkbook ready for the politicians, was put on his feet in 1919 by a large sum of money paid him by the British government, when the American magnate signed an agreement to give all the oil he obtained as royalty from United States reserves to British consumers. This was managed thru a British subsidiary company.

The testimony was given before the Public Oil Lands committee investigating the granting of oil leases by Henry Woodhouse, of New York, a sixth owner of the Chester concession in Turkey.

Witness Sure of It.

"I know it was money furnished by the British government at the time the contract was signed that put Doheny back on his feet," Woodhouse stated.

Doheny was elected president of the American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic in 1921 at a convention held in Chicago on the instructions of Eamon DeValera and thru the efforts of Mary MacSwiney, another Irish republican representative. The delegates to the convention opposed Doheny on the ground that he was an imperialist whose hands were stained with the blood of the Mexican people but his election was allowed to go over on DeValera's insistence.

The oil magnate is said to have given $50,000 to the Irish Republican fund, while at the same time carrying on negotiations with the British government thru Lord Pirrie, British shipping baron, to supply the British navy with oil.

President Coolidge's secretary, C. Bascom Slemp, the attorney-general, two senators and four congressmen speculated in Sinclair and Doheny oil stocks before and after the government signed over its naval reserves to these two big interests.

This was the revelation made before the Teapot Dome committee today by Lewis Bond, accounting expert, who completed a month's examination of brokers' books and submitted his report today when the investigation was resumed.

Slemp had his turned over in the name of "P. W. Slemp," unidentified in the records.

Daugherty turned his over in the name of "W. W. Sapidy" partner of

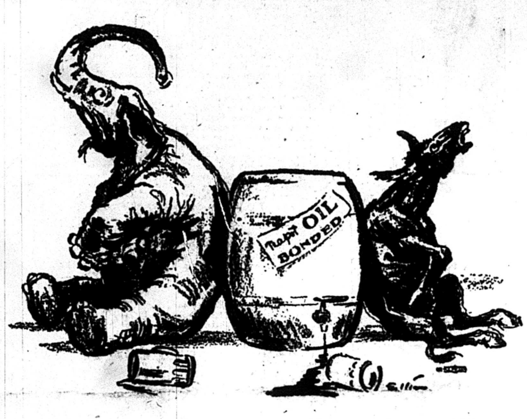
TWO SICK ANIMALS



They Partook Not Wisely, But Too Well.

Use Teapot Dome and Daugherty to Organize

By WILLIAM Z. FOSTER.

TEAPOT DOME, the Daugherty investigation and the scandal in the Veterans Bureau, have given positive proof to theories the militant workers have held relative to the unscrupulous methods by which mammoth fortunes are amassed and the wage earners in all industries deprived of all voice in government.

The oil industry pays its workers a starvation wage; it works them ten and twelve hours per day and it fights organization with every weapon from bribery to the blackjack. In Texas, Oklahoma, California and Wyoming, the oil interests during the war were protected by the department of justice and recent evidence in the Daugherty investigation shows that this spying upon and persecution of labor organizers, the penetration of labor organizations with spies, the framing of criminal charges against active workers, has been carried over into peace time and is now a recognized function of the Burns-Daugherty department of justice.

The cost of production in the oil industry is low and from the Teapot Dome scandal we learn that the natural resources from which fabulous profits are made cost the exploiters nothing but a few cheap bribes. To protect this stolen ownership the whole machinery of capitalist government was used and only because of the conflict between rival groups of capitalists and the general economic breakdown did the flagrant nature of the thefts become known.

There is the greatest indignation among the workers, farmers and the lover middle classes as a result of the exposures; an indignation that is being expressed in political revolt. Undoubtedly there will arise not only a third party movement directed against corruption in government, but a class farmer-labor party directed against capitalist government as such. Something more is needed. The disillusionment of the workers in the oil industry—the key industry for capitalism in the event of war—must be utilized to build permanent and powerful economic organization; in the oil fields and in the oil refineries a great organization campaign should be launched.

In the agricultural districts the awakened farmers must turn their efforts not only to the political organization for election campaigns but they must begin to build class-conscious economic organizations of exploited farmers.

Thru the entire labor movement the Teapot Dome scandal and the actual and indisputable proof of the connection of governmental agencies with the terroristic activities of the oil and other employers must be used to arouse the workers to the need for 100 per cent organization of American industry.

If the officialdom of the American Federation of Labor was alive to the opportunity and not living in the past, 1924 would see a powerful political movement of the workers and farmers based solidly on the economic organizations of the two groups.

As it is, the militants will have to redouble their efforts and by added industry, with the Teapot Dome and the Daugherty investigation as their text, strive to make up for the incompetency, cowardice and ignorance of the officialdom of the American labor movement.

It is entirely possible that in the new farmer-labor movement that will crystallize June 17 will be found the weapon that combining economic and political organization will sweep from power not only certain agents of capitalist governments and bring a new alignment of political forces but that will also dethrone the official misleaders of organized labor and open the door for a period of militant endeavor and worthwhile victories.

PROBERS TO QUIZ WEEKS AND MELLON

All Suspected Crooks Will Be Grilled

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Mar. 18.—Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon and Secretary of War John W. Weeks were included in a batch of subpoenas issued today by the senate committee investigating the criminal acts of Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty, his associates and subordinates.

Gaston B. Means, who William J. Burns declared, was the most reliable investigator in America, declared in his sensational testimony that he was sent to New York in 1921, by President Harding to "get the goods on Mellon" who was then alleged to be doing a land office business selling liquor permits.

The enforcement of the national prohibition act is under the jurisdiction of the treasury department.

Mellon Is Slippery Guy.

Means testified on the witness stand that the first time he was sent after Mellon the latter slipped thru his fingers, but that he caught him the second time.

The world is anxious to know what graft the steel and coal magnate was engaged in when his foot slipped.

Secretary of War Weeks will be called on to tell what he knows of the $100,000 bribe given to Daugherty and company by the agents of the Standard Air Craft company, in return for withdrawal of prosecution for mulcting the government out of $3,000,000. Secretary Weeks withdrew the case from the department of justice after the $100,000 bribe was turned over.

Call Fight Film Bad.

Jap Muma, master mind of the Dempsey-Carpentier fight films, and general manager of the Ed. McLean newspapers will be given a chance to slap himself — the back in front of the Daugherty committee and tell of his close friendship with William J. Burns before very long, it was announced here today.

Muma was on such close terms with President Harding that the latter called him "Jap." Mr. Muma was at one time in great dread lest he should be sent to Atlanta for violating a federal statute, but after McLean got in touch with Daugherty and the latter got in touch with Burns, he went back to New York with an easy conscience.

Stop Scuttling of Oil Investigation

AS the DAILY WORKER "Teapot Dome Special" was going to press, news from Washington was to the effect that the Public Lands Committee, with Senator Thomas Walsh, of Montana, as its prosecutor, is about to call off the investigation, at the very moment when important revelations seemed about to be disclosed.

The Teapot Dome investigation unearthed the most appalling evidence of government corruption that ever startled this country. Every capitalist politician in America realizes its implications. The workers of the United States are watching the Teapot Dome investigation and they are losing confidence in the capitalist government. Therefore the scandal must be buried.

Already the capitalist press is starting a counter-offensive against the results of the investigation. The yellow journals of that arch prostitute William Randolph Hearst are already on the way with the preliminary campaign. His cartoonists are picturing the whole affair as a storm in a teacup, not a Teapot. Soon the Hearst press from coast to coast will be in full cry for a stop to the investigation.

The Chicago Tribune, exponent of American imperialism and fomenter of revolution in the oil soaked Mexican Republic, in a two column editorial blast in its issue of March 17 raves against the investigators, branding Senator Wheeler a friend of war objectors. It calls for an easing up of the investigation and a withholding of judgement. It declares Gaston B. Means is a crook and insinuates that Roxie Stinson is an immoral woman.

But Means was as much of a crook when he was hired by Daugherty and Burns, as he is today and if the moral character of Roxie Stinson is not up to Tribune standard, the blame for her alleged direliction should be laid on those with whom she intimately associated, the late President Harding, Harry M. Daugherty and the Ohio ring of the republican machine in Washington.

It is no accident that such widely differing interests as those behind the Hearst press and the Chicago Tribune should simultaneously open fire on the Teapot Dome expose. These scandal sheets of capitalism know that the various probes now going on are rocking the capitalist government itself and exposing both republican and democratic parties as two thieving gangs who rob this country and its resources under the protection of the American flag.

As this counter-barrage is laid down against the Teapot investigation, Senator Thomas Walsh, intimate friend of the Doheny family, announces that the investigation is nearing an end. A few days ago it was stated it had barely scratched the top. The Teapot Dome investigation is quitting without letting the world know that the "principal" mentioned in the McLean Palm Beach telegram was no other than Calvin Coolidge, president of the United States. For the sake of capitalism the presidency must be covered with a cloak of sanctity, therefore, the accommodating committee halts its probe at the moment it was about to lay a finger on the ringleader.

The DAILY WORKER urges the workers and farmers of this country to take immediate action and flood the senate with telegrams calling for a new committee to continue the Teapot Dome investigation.

The DAILY WORKER urges Senator Robert M. La Follette, who introduced the Teapot Dome resolution, to step in now and make a real investigation.

The DAILY WORKER believes that evidence of official corruption yet unrevealed to the public would warrant the ignominious expulsion from office of prominent members of the Coolidge Cabinet, yet untouched by the investigation, and that it would lead up to the impeachment of the president himself—CALVIN COOLIDGE, THE SILENT TOOL OF WALL STREET.

PICKETS DEFY POLICE THUGS AND WEATHER

Girl Beaten and DAILY WORKER Reporter Arrested

In spite of falling snow and the flying fists of half-drunken policemen the picket lines of the girl garment strikers were stronger yesterday than they have been for a week.

Thirty-five pickets were arrested, almost a record number for the strike, but the girls were back on the picket line as soon as they were bailed out.

Proof that the heroic determination of the pickets is being rewarded is shown by the announcement of the special citizens' committee that more than 70 shops have already settled with the Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and that other bosses are ready for arbitration.

Picketing Spells Success.

The success of the strike now depends on the picket lines being kept at the highest possible strength while the bosses weaken and surrender one by one. Strikers are welcoming the volunteers who are joining them from other unions and are eagerly looking forward to more support from the Chicago Federation's "Committee of 15" which meets tomorrow to consider the question of mass picketing.

The committee will also take up the question of the police violence which is running rampant on the picket lines and which is inspired by the liquor which employers are pouring down the throats of the bluecoats who are guarding their premises.

Ethel Spink Beaten.

The worst act of brutality yesterday morning was the beating of Miss Ethel Spink by Officers 5189 and 3609 in front of the C. H. Lowenthal factory on S. Market street, near Jackson, yesterday morning.

Miss Spink is not a striker. Her shop settled with the union recently and she was on her way to work and stopped to talk with one of her friends on the picket line when the police rushed at them. With a kick from his heavy shoe Officer 5189 sent the other girl reeling, then he clutched Miss Spink with both hands about the breast and began to shake her violently.

Two Brutes At One Girl.

The plucky little girl, who is hardly more than five feet high, was slipping out of his grasp when Officer 3609 grabbed her also, the two of them tearing at her from opposite sides as they dragged her along the pavement, Officer 5189 beating at her with his fists.

The girl's cries reached the ears of Arthur Shields, a reporter for the DAILY WORKER, further down the street and he ran up in time to see Miss Spink struggling in the arms of the two brutes with four other policemen making a blue-coated ring. The smell of liquor was heavy in the air.

At this moment Lena Morvitz, a picket who was protesting against the brutality was seized and a plainclothesman pointed out the reporter.

"Take our numbers, will you!" snarled Officer 2389.

"I'll smash your G—— d—— head," chipped in Officer 3587.

The reporter was asked for his credentials and showed them amidst a spout of profanity from the drove of bulls.

"THAT Paper."

"That's THAT paper that comes down here!", growled another policeman, and the plainclothes advisor suggested that they arrest him on another charge.

Up stepped 3587 who afterwards gave his name as M. Cronyn and arrested the reporter on the charge of "Resiting an officer in the performance of his duty" and "disorderly conduct." The former charge was afterwards dropped.

In the C. H. Lowenthal doorway which is used as a detention place awaiting patrol wagons the police urged Lowenthal himself to produce "some girl" to prefer a charge of assault against one of the pickets. But the boss said he could not do so.

"More Room."

As the patrol wagon was going away, with five prisoners—three more being picked up down the street, a detective jumped on the rear and laughingly suggested that there was still more room—"better get some more."

Injunction Hearings Begin.

Injunction Judge Dennie Sullivan will start hearing the cases of 15 strikers tomorrow in the county building on charges of ignoring his sacred writ. He refused to dismiss the cases yesterday and the strikers will begin their formal defense today. They are Louis Sakaloff, Minnie Sugarman, Marion Brosk, Sarah Horwitz, Yetta Russman, Celia Faclor, Valentino Pieseck, Marcella Harom, Samuel Kauffman, Alice H. Carzie, Pearl Czernick, Barney Wentworth, Camille Skrzat, Mrs. Louise Peurns and C. F. Miller.

Get After Mayor.

Anton Johannsen announced to a strike meeting yesterday that the sub committee appointed by Father Frederick Seidenberg of the Citizens' committee to work towards strike settlement has sent a summons to Mayor Dever demanding that none but uniformed officers be used in the strike zone. (This would eliminate the plain clothes men). Also that a special force of patrolman be selected for strike duty and instructed to arrest guards and private detectives, as well as pickets, when these thugs violate the law.

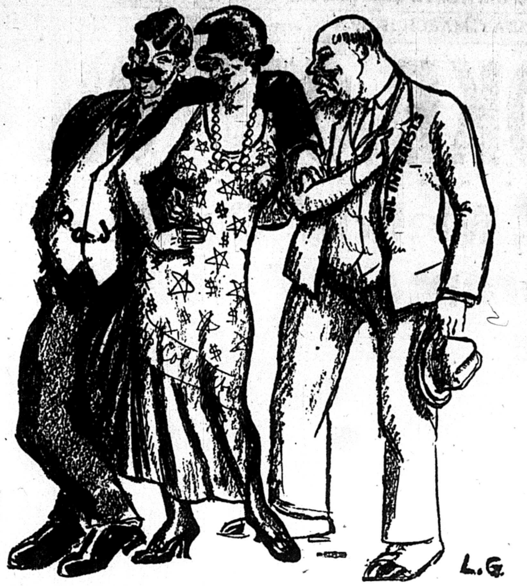
UPHOLDING MIS(S) GOVERNMENT!

She Is a Peach from the Fall Orchard.



Lady Columbia: "Now we're so intimate, you boys mustn't call me Mis(s) Government! Call me Peaches!"

Out With Daugherty! Out With Burns!

WORKERS AND FARMERS! The disclosures of the Teapot Dome investigation have shown sinister capitalist control of every agency in the government.

The revelations to date in the Wheeler investigation of the Department of Justice and Attorney-General Daugherty have proved again that the United States government is a tool in the hands of the employing class, used against the working and farming masses.

Now is the time for the workers and farmers to get together and demand a hearing before the Wheeler committee in order to expose the criminal conduct of Attorney-General Daugherty and William J. Burns in the last strike of railway shopmen and in other recent labor struggles.

Workers and farmers! Go to your unions, labor organizations, farm organizations, and secure the adoption of resolutions demanding that the Wheeler committee investigate and make public the strikebreaking activities of Attorney-General Daugherty and William J. Burns.

Go to your local unions, central labor body, farm coperative association, and have them pass resolutions calling upon the executive council of the American Federation of Labor to demand that it be called by the Wheeler committee to state all the facts in its possession regarding the high-handed acts of Daugherty and Burns in disputes between the workers and the bosses.

Have your labor and farm organizations pass resolutions demanding that the Wheeler committee call upon the railway employes department of the American Federation of Labor to make public its experiences with the hired gunmen and the detectives of Burns private agency in the last railway strike.

Workers and farmers! Now is the time to get rid of Burns and Daugherty. Our slogans must be, "Get Burns!" "Get Daugherty!" "Out with Burns!" "Out with Daugherty!"

There must be no more of Burns or Daugherty in the government.

Down with the use of government force in labor struggles and disputes! Down with government by injunction! Down with the interference of the government in the right to strike and organize. Away with all employers' private armies of gunmen and detectives!

Let us organize ourselves for control of the government by the workers and poor farmers—a workers' and farmers' republic.

Doheny Had Job of Supplying John Bull's Sea Forces

Hibbs and Company, brokers, but receipts of the accounts were signed by Jesse Smith, intimate friend of the attorney-general.

Senator Charles Curtis, republican whip from Kansas, and Davis Elkins of West Virginia, were the two members of the Upper House of Congress whose stock gamblers were bared.

Congressman Arthur B. Rouse, Kentucky democrat, and former representatives Wells E. Goodykoontz, West Virginia; Thomas Jefferson Ryan, New York, with J. T. Himes, Ohio, were also found on the books. Ryan cleaned up $8,645 profit on one deal.

Price McKinney, of Cleveland, the second witness on the stand, said during the time the oil committee was investigating the source of former Secretary of the Interior Fall's sudden wealth, Fall wrote him, asking him to say he was the source of the $100,000 loan, which E. L. Doheny later said he gave Fall.

"But you did not say you loaned it" Walsh asked.

"No, sir."

McKinney was then excused.

J. G. Darden, former president of the Mammoth Oil Company, will be called as the first witness tomorrow, Senator Walsh announced. He was discovered hiding in a Washington hotel.

Darden is the oil man with whom Roxie Stinson testified Jesse Smith and Attorney General Daugherty entered into negotiations. She said that each sent him $2,400. Darden has proved an elusive witness. He was subpoenaed a month ago, but it was not until this week that U. S. marshals succeeded in serving him.

Darden will be followed by witnesses called in connection with the story of Leonard Wood, Jr., regarding an alleged proposal to his father in 1920 by Jame Hamon.

A new sheaf of code telegrams that shed light upon the intentions of former Secretary of Interior A. B. Fall, was deciphered for the Senate oil committee today.

The messages were in a new code and W. F. Friedman, the signal corps expert who unraveled the German cipher during the war, required nearly a week to translate them.

Fall and other criminals in the oil scandal sent or received the messages thru the Three Rivers, N. M., telegraph offices.

Breaking off a four day recess and entering the final phases of its investigation, the committee today first took up stock speculations of government officials.

Quiz Weeks and Mellon

Burns and Daugherty got rid of all sleuths who could not be bribed, or compromised with prostitutes, and had them transferred to distant countries where they could not interfere with the illegal transportation of the fight films which were owned by Jap Muma working under Ed. McLean, Jess Smith, Harry Daugherty and William J. Burns.

William A. Orr, former secretary of ex-governor Whitman of New York, Muma's partner in the conspiracy, took the witness stand today. He testified that he had 20 per cent interest in the pictures but he denied he was a crook.

Muma's friends are advising him to spill the beans and hold nothing back. He is stated to have informed G. O. Holdridge that Harry M. Daugherty, attorney-general, was head of the fight film conspiracy.

Believe Coolidge Saw Films.

The investigators are said to be running down a report that Calvin Coolidge, then vice-president, was present in McLean's house on July 5, when the Dempsey-Carpentier fight films were shown in violation of law. The present incumbent of the White House, won whatever little reputation he has for his devotion to law and order, in helping to break a strike of policemen in the city of Boston in the year 1919. It was already stated on the witness stand that the late Harding, Daughty of Boston in the year 1919. It were there. It was said they enjoyed the picture immensely and thought it was a shame that the people of the United States could not see a splendid picture of American manhood pummeling a Frenchman into unconsciousness. The law passed prohibiting the interstate transportation of films, Daugherty declared at the "show" was direced against the Jeffries-Johnson fight films which showed a black man beating a white pug. This was bad for the white race, the attorney-general is alleged to have said.

Bunch of Subpoenaes Issued.

Among those for whom subpoenaes were issued besides Secretary of the Treasury, Andrew Mellon and Secretary of War John Weeks are: Prohibition Commissioner Haynes; John W. H. Crim, special assistant attorney-general; Arthur Sixsmith, secretary to Secretary Mellon; David H. Blair, Commissioner of Internal Revenue; Elmer Dover, former assistant secretary of the treasury; Alfred R. Urion and Henry K. Urion, Washington attorneys; Adner R. Johnson, jr., assistant attorney-general; H. H. Votaw, superintendent of prisons and head of the parole board of the department of justice, whose wife is a sister of the late President Harding; James A. Finch, pardon clerk, department of justice; Arthur Robb, chief file clerk, department of justice; Henry W. Anderson, special assistant attorney-general and trustee pending dissolution of the packers' association; Alan J. Pickering, army air service, and Ernest C. Steward, Washington.

William Orr told a story of large payments, totalling sometimes $25,000 at a time, to Howard Mannington, close friend of Daugherty. These payments Orr said, were in connection with "liquor deals".

Orr, the witness who told of the alleged liquor deals, said that "various people" gave him money in connection with liquor withdrawals, and that he always turned it over to Mannington. Senator Wheeler asked him if the total did not reach $200,000, but Orr said he could not tell the exact figure.

Previously Orr was asked about his connection with the plan to distribute the Dempsey-Carpentier fight films and disclosed that he acted as campaign fund collector for the Republican party in 1920, gathering in $10,000 before the 1920 convention which he gave Will H. Hays and Colonel William Boyce Thompson, then chairman and treasurer, respectively, of the Republican national commitee.

"You raised about $35,000 in New York for the front porch campaign at Marion, didn't you?"

"I raised something like that."

"You raised some money before the convention for the Republican national committee, didn't you?"

"About $10,000."

"Who for?"

"Will Hays and Col. Wm. Boyce Thompson."

"And after the convention you raised a considerable sum for the campaign fund and paid it over to Daugherty, didn't you?"

"I raised quite a sum of money."

"After the inauguration you saw Daugherty often here, didn't you?" Wheeler resumed.

"Yes."

"You met Howard Mannington?"

"Yes."

TWO NEW YORK PAPERS UNITE; ONE TO DIE

Munsey's Herald Joins Reid's Tribune

NEW YORK, March 18.—The shades of Charles Dana, Horace Greeley and the eccentric James Gordon Bennett have been blended together in another sensational Munsey newspaper attraction, formally announced today. Three great American newspapers of former days wove their historic texture into one dirty sheet when Ogden M. Reid, of the New York Tribune, bought the New York Herald from Frank A. Munsey yesterday.

Munsey merged the New York Press and the Sun of Charles Dana fame a few years ago, then bought the Herald from the James Gordon Bennett estate, combining them all in one of the biggest morning newspaper transactions in history.

The Herald will pass out of existence with this morning's issue, and beginning tomorrow the two newspapers will be published as one newspaper from the Tribune's new plant. Eventually it will appear as the New York Herald-Tribune.

The purchase price is reported to be about $4,000,000, the sum Munsey paid for the Herald and Telegram when the bought them the Bennett estate in 1920. With the New York Herald, Reid acquires also the Paris edition of the Herald.

All will be arraigned in S. Clark street court this morning and will demand jury trials. Ethel Spink, arrested and beaten, was not a picket. She was on her way to work in a shop which has settled. Twenty-two more were arrested later in the day.

The girls were arrested in the course of peaceful picketing, the kind which has been declared legal by the United States Supreme Court. They went back on picket line on release.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DANVILLE, Ill., March 18.—Government prohibition agents, working under the direction of Charles Scruggs, prohibition group chief, with headquarters in East St. Louis, aided by paid investigators furnished by the Ku Klux Klan, have been working several weeks in East St. Louis and St. Clair county, gathering evidence for an alleged wholesale clean-up of that city and county. This is a duplication of what took place at Herrin and will no doubt bring similar results.

Chicago Negro Tenants Organize Against Greedy Negro Landlords Who Are Robbing Their Own Race

Not only are unscrupulous Negro real estate sharks fleecing their Race by raising rents to points 25 per cent higher than those charged whites in the same neighborhoods, but they are going further even than the white real estate dealers dare to go, by selling wild-cat stocks at high interest on the "Own your own home" plan, and in many cases are stealing the initial deposits of the Negro workers.

One such concern on 38th street, between South State street and Wabash Avenue, is changed with taking advantage of the lack of education of some Negro workers by drawing up contracts which are impossible for the workers to fulfill, and then pocketing the deposits of the workers after they have seemingly "broken" these impossible and often illegal contracts.

Make Illegal Contracts.

This practice is being carried on by many real estate concerns on the South Side, who Negro workers charge, are able to keep out of jail by paying graft to the politicians higher up. The usual process is to place signs in the real estate office windows—many such signs can be seen—saying "Own your own home", and explaining how to pay an initial deposit, and pay the rest on monthly payments. After the Negro worker has moved into his new home, feeling he has beaten the high rent problem, some un-noticed clause in the contract is enforced, the worker is forced to move, and he loses all the money he has put into his new home. Then the real estate company puts another "sucker" into the same house.

It is a well-known fact that one real estate concern has 14 indictments against it for such practices, but is allowed to continue them thru political pull. Many workers told the DAILY WORKER that the firm of Joe and Willie Green on 3719 South State street, even tho their operations be legal, are bitterly disliked by the South Side tenants because of their gouging tactics.

DePriest Cheats Workers.

Another example of unethical leasing was called to the attention of the DAILY WORKER by the lady who rents the house at 3241 South Wabash Ave. She called attention to a lease drawn up by the Oscar DePriest Real Estate Company, leasing a small apartment to a young friend of hers who thought he had signed a lease with the firm for a year's time. At the end of the first month this lad's rent was jumped five dollars a month. Rather than make trouble, the lad, who could not read well, paid the increase. But every month after that his rent was jumbed another five dollars.

At the end of six months the tenant was paying $80 per month for a flat rented, as he thought, on a year lease is subject to five days' notice." lawyer pointed out to him a clause, written at the top of the lease—"This lease is subject to five days notice." Thus do wealthy Negroes profit on the lack of education of their own Race. This firm is heartily hated among the South Side colored folk. This flat was located on 36th Street, near Wabash.

Porter to Rich Skinflint.

Every old resident of the South Side can tell you the story of the rise of Jesse Binga, now reputed to be a millionaire, who owns the large bank at 36th Place and South State Street, one of the finest buildings on the South Side. Binga, so the story runs, was at one time a Pullman porter.

Years ago Binga conceived the idea of inducing white landlords to allow him to take over buildings on the edge of the restricted areas which were inhabited by whites, turn out the white tenants, and replace them with Negroes at a much higher rent. For this, we are told, Jesse Binga received a fat commission and started his bank and real estate concern. Jesse Binga was the first Judas in the field—the first Negro to make a million dollars at the profitable art of turning the discrimination against his Race into profit for himself.

Hotel Sharks Jump Rents.

A few of the deals manipulated by the real estate firms are a raise of rents as follows: the Donohue block on the corner of 44th and Wabash has recently been raised in one jump from $60 to $81; a three room apartment on Grand Boulevard near 35th street is renting for $81 per month, while on the same block a similar three room flat is being rented to whites at $45 per month; another apartment on this block has been raised from $25 to $58 within a short space of time; a six room house on South Michigan Blvd. in the 46th block is renting to Negroes for $120 per month, while on the same block another six room house is renting to whites at $72 per month; in the Mecca building, flats were at first renting at from $9 to $25 per month, while now the cheapest two room flat rents at $42 per month.

It must be born in mind that the profits reaped by these real estate people are especially easy picking because the landlords are almost never known to make repairs for a Negro tenant. The writer walked along Dearborn, State, Wabash, Federal and the other principal streets of the South Side, as far South as 46th street. He counted seven large dead rats lying soaked into the mud as he walked along. The streets are seldom cleaned of snow or rubbish we are told by residents. Large sections of these streets are nothing but mud roads, miles of them having no paving of any kind. What has Alderman Jackson to say about the condition of the streets in his ward?

Rats and Roaches Around.

"When I moved into my house I could not even draw any water," we were told at 3241 South Wabash. "If my son had not been a plumber I would have had to pay several hundred dollars repairing the plumbing in my house. I had to do all the decorating, cleaning and repairing myself. The landlord never thinks of doing this work."

Chicago has in the colored quarters, over 10,000 habitations fronting on alleys that are a distinct menace, being hovels, not homes. Chicago has an alley population of 65,000 people.

Rats and cockroaches are the rule in houses in the Negro quarter. Take for example a case reported to the DAILY WORKER by the United Charities. A Negro family including seven children, was found "huddled into four small, dark rooms overrun by rats and cockroaches. The rent was raised eight dollars per month. The husband is ill in a sanatarium with tuberculosis. His wife, forced to move because of the raise, found the cheapest place $40 per month, and the real estate men laughed at her when she mentioned her seven children. She has gone up one street and down another, wheeling a buggy with two babies in it, looking for 'For Rent' signs.

"When the landlord hears that there are seven children, he will not rent her at any price and she comes home thoroly discouraged."

This is what the Negro real estate companies are doing to Chicago's Negro working men and women. This is the price that is being paid in order to enable members of the real estate fraternity to live in mansions and send their favored children—not seven by the way—to select colleges. This is why the Negroes of Chicago organized the Negro Ttenants League, and why every Negro in Chicago should turn out to the mass meeting in Oddfellows Hall on the evening of March 31st.

Former Porter Grabs Million Dollars From Suffering Workers

TODAY the DAILY WORKER tells how the forty real estate sharks, who have organized to plunder the Chicago Negro workers, manipulate with cheating and sometimes illegal leases to further rob their Race. On the one hand we find Jesse Binga, former Pullman porter, who rose to millionaire banker by betraying his Race. On the other we have a Negro workingman ill in a sanitarium from tuberculosis contracted as the results of evil housing conditions, while his wife vainly hunts for a home for herself and seven children. Tomorrow we will tell the events leading up to the organization of the Negro Tenants' League, which holds a mass meeting in Odd Fellows' Hall on March 31st. We will explain the significance of the last Sanhedrin Conference as related to the present fight of the Negro workers to secure decent housing accommodations.

EGGS BY MAIL, "BOLSHEVISM," YELP SENATORS

Oppose R. F. D. Aid for Needy Farmers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, March 18.—Just when the senate committee on public lands has lost, by resignation under fire, the doubtful services of Senator Lenroot, its chairman, and when the beneficial results of giving away public oil lands to private interests are about to be demonstrated by a new series of code telegrams and perjuries, Senator King, of Utah, and Senator "B. and O." Bruce, of Maryland, arise. They object to more government in business. They object to an extension of rural mail service for the purpose of delivery of butter and eggs from the farms to small customers in the town. They fear that this will lead to Bolshevism.

Truck by R. F. D.

Senator Harris, of Georgia, is sponsor of a bill providing that the postoffice department shall experiment on 50 rural routes scattered thruout the country on the handling of small packets of farm produce to customers located in these same rural routes.

King protested that the purpose of this measure was to have the government go into the business of transporting the products of the farm, and that this would lead inevitably to the government becoming a common carrier for all the industries. It would mean the nationalizing of transportation. He admitted that there was little chance that such a service to the farmers would be a failure since the government policy had favored taking no profit from the postal service.

Senator Brookhart wanted to know whether an excess profit tax on the takings of the steel trust and other monopolies would not be a logical method of making up any deficit created by the giving of cheap government transportation to farm products. He suggested that the railroads could have no complaint against a subsidy to the bankrupt farmers in view of their own financial gains from the public treasury and their own extravagance.

Would Tax Saturday Post.

Brookhart said he would favor higher rates on second class mail matter, if that would result in a "tax on the Saturday Evening Post and the other reactionary journals that are getting the benefit of the present rate and making their millions out of it." He observed that private business, speaking thru the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, was "being organized as a sort of super-government of the United States to supervise and direct everything that we do down here."

You Need It Every Day!

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

THIS isn't so much about oil. It is about the DAILY WORKER. But we are grateful to oil for allowing us to talk to tens of thousands of workers and farmers, in the cities and over the land, who have never before heard the voice of the DAILY WORKER.

But this is only saying that the DAILY WORKER enters into, and wages with all the energy it can muster, the battles of the workers and farmers against their oppressors. This has been the story of the DAILY WORKER, since the day it was born, January 13, 1924, now little more than two months gone. The story of the DAILY WORKER is the story of the growing class struggle in the United States.

This is being written to interest the tens of thousands of workers and farmers who will read this Special Edition of the DAILY WORKER; who have never read the DAILY WORKER before. We want all of these to become regular readers of the DAILY WORKER, to read it from day to day, to give their support to all the struggles into which it enters.

We need that support to make the DAILY WORKER a more powerful weapon. We need YOU back of the DAILY WORKER, in order that the DAILY WORKER, with new strength, may fight for YOU.

The DAILY WORKER fights for stronger organizations of the city workers, all those who sweat in industry to pile higher the bosses' profits. It works for militancy and effectiveness in the labor movement. That is why the DAILY WORKER raised its voice in no uncertain tones at the historical international convention of the United Mine Workers of America, held at Indianapolis, Ind., during the latter days of January. It carried its emancipating message not only to the 1,600 delegates attending the miners' convention, but thru them to the thousands of mining towns over the country, to the hundreds of thousands of coal diggers.

Today YOUR "DAILY" is engaged in a terrific struggle in the city of Chicago, in support of the heroic fight of the women and girls of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union. Members of its editorial staff, in carrying out their duties, have been arrested on the picket lines along with the strikers, and thrown into the foul police dungeons of the master class. In this fight, as in all others, the DAILY WORKER will be found always, in the forefront of the battle.

It has been the DAILY WORKER, these past two months, that has helped, more than any other agency, to bring unity between the workers, in the cities and on the land, in the political struggle. The magnificent solidarity just displayed in the gatherings held in Minnesota, out of which will eventually grow the great American class political party, could not have been achieved had it not been for the DAILY WORKER, delivering its broadsides, day by day, against those who would halt and disrupt this drive towards unity. Every issue of the DAILY WORKER carries its message of emancipation for the farmers, as well as for the city workers.

The DAILY WORKER is also in the fight for the ten millions of exploited Negro toilers in the United States. This was conclusively and effectively shown at the recent national gathering of Negro spokesmen held in Chicago.

Thus, wherever a human being, in this great land, carries the burden of toil upon his shoulders, there the DAILY WORKER is ever present, showing him how to cast it off.

The DAILY WORKER is the only daily newspaper in the United States that has told the workers and farmers the real meaning of the Teapot Dome revelations at the nation's capitol. "Oil" is but one phase of capitalist development. Today it is a most important phase as the American oil octopus stretches its tentacles out over all the nations of the world, where natural resources spout oil.

The evils of oil are the inevitable evils of the oppressive capitalist system that must pass and be followed by the new social order—COMMUNISM. The DAILY WORKER, because it is a Communist Daily, fights with all the robbed and downtrodden workers and farmers against this oil and blood-dripping capitalist system. As the official mouthpiece of the Workers of America, it helps not only to educate the workers and farmers, but to organize them into a great political power. Today, as it scores a new triumph, in reaching new masses of aspiring humanity, the DAILY WORKER invites, it urges you, who are reading this:

Government and Farmers

The Senate has for the past few days been engaged in a debate on sundry farm relief measures. In the course of the discussion several senators, who have for many years been serving the big anti-union textile and coal interests of the South and the big manufacturing interests of the North, declared that they would fight to the bitter end any attempt to render the farmers economic help. Of course, these spokesmen for the employers posed as friends of the farmers and insisted that they were motivated solely by a desire to save the individual initiative of the farmer. They declared themselves flatly opposed to all governmental "interference" with the farmers.

It is rather strange that none of these senators shed a tear about paternalism when big bonuses are granted to corporations. More than that. Not a one of this phalanx that has arrogated to itself the guardianship of the farmers' individuality protested against the government interfering with the farmer during the war. All one has to do to find out why these senators did not care a straw about the farmers' initiative during the war and why they are shrieking now about the sanctity of this supposed great American virtue is to examine the policies of the government towards the farmers in war and peace.

When war was declared against Germany the government immediately issued a ukase fixing the price of wheat. The government ordered that a bushel of wheat must be sold at fifty or sixty cents below the prevailing market price. While it was regulating downward the price of wheat to be received by the farmer, the government gave a free hand to the manufacturers and financiers to set prices to suit their own fancies on industrial commodities. The fabulous profits coined by the capitalists during the war are known to all.

When it suited our ruling class to call for increased production of wheat it did not hesitate to demand that the farmers drop all plans for diversification and for rotation of crops. The interests of the capitalist class then demanded the maximum production of wheat. Now, the same government speaking for the same capitalist class is calling on the farmers to practice diversification in order to stave off their own ruin.

During the war when our capitalist interests were endangered and when the armies of the allied imperialists were to be fed, the government waged a vigorous campaign to reduce the domestic consumption of wheat. Now, that the interests of the capitalist class demand a different policy the government is appealing for a greater consumption of wheat at home.

Thus has the government toyed with the fate and security of the farmers. When the market conditions were favorable to a higher price for wheat our capitalists forgot about paternalism, interference with private initiative and the sacred American characteristic of individual incentive. The government did not then hesitate to fix agricultural prices and fix them downward. Today, when the world market is unfavorable for our farmers, the government is zealously concerned with the individuality of our bankrupt rural masses and refuses to help them because that would mean the unholy, un-American price fixing, government interference.

As long as the government of the United States is owned and controlled by the industrial and financial magnates, by the capitalist class, the farmers will be accorded no other treatment.

General Leonard Wood of the American Army of Occupation in the Philippines is shown holding his grandchild in his arms. This is to prove that he is a human being, of course. He looks as humane as a hungry crocodile. His son was getting ready to come to the U. S. to answer charges of making free with his official position to play Wall Street.

Depraved Washington

Representative G. H. Tinkham, of Massachusetts, republican, charges in a public statement that Washington, the nation's Capitol, is a cesspool of vice and corruption having as counterparts in human history, pagan Rome during the hectic days of Nero and Paris before the great Revolution.

Drunkenness, debauchery, sex license, graft, political and moral corruption, reign supreme in the shadow of the White House. "The police reports," declared Mr. Tinkham, "disclose a civic depravity and social disintegration under present conditions and laws which are both appalling and unbelievable." This is a capitalist talking, not a radical or even a liberal.

The congressman declares that there is 300 per cent more drunkenness in Washington than in Paris and 2,000 per cent more murders than in London. The people have lost confidence in the government, he declares, and respect for the churches who have lost their own self respect.

The condition prevailing in Washington is symptomatic of the cancer that is eating the heart of capitalist society. A ruling class gone mad with unearned wealth, riding roughshod over the liberties of its slaves, forgetting all that is noble in life in its mad quest for riches has turned to debauchery for recreation. Its filth poisons the social atmosphere and like a boil on the human body it has burst, throwing off Teapot Dome scandals, Veterans' Bureau scandals, suicides, murders, treason, and immoralities.

The old saying that "Nero fiddled while Rome burned" holds good in Washington today. While the pillars are swaying underneath the structure of capitalism; while the workers everywhere are preparing to give the rotten edifice the final kick into oblivion, the rulers who sit on the top have given themselves away to Bacchanalian festivals reminding one of the days preceding the fall of Babylon, ancient Rome and of the Paris of feudal days. Our rulers are so drunk with power and bootleg liquor that they cannot even see the writing on the wall.

The Science of Swindle

One of the stock arguments of the apologist and defender of capitalism is that the employer, the banker, the big business man has a larger income than the worker or farmer because his contribution to industry is of higher quality, namely, brain work.

The $100,000,000 loan to France has enabled the international bankers to clean up millions on the rise of the franc subsequent to the closing of the big Morgan deal. This is a typical case of the intense capitalist brain contribution to industry.

First, the big bankers dump millions of francs on the market. The smaller owners and the poor workers and farmers are the heaviest losers by it. Then, they arrange a loan for the government to help prop up the tottering franc. They are the ones who have the advance knowledge of the coming loan and know of its buoyant effect on the exchange status of the franc. These bankers soon buy up large quantities of depreciated currency at the lowest rates. The loan is announced. The position of the franc improves. These Shylocks of international capitalist finance clean up millions of dollars, perhaps at least as much at times as the whole loan in question.

Even to the purblind it is plain that it is not the capitalists being overburdened with an excess of gray matter developing industry that has created these millions added to their bank accounts. It is clear that it is only their control of the means of production and exchange, of international credit facilities, that enables the capitalist class to clean up in this fashion. These millions of profits are not new wealth created by the brain work of the capitalist bankers, but simply represent more money robbed from the workers and farmers, in the last resort, the producers, and added to the fortunes of the exploiters. It is only the intricacies of the capitalist system that complicate the procedure and tend to hide the real nature of such operations which are only a highly complex form of swindling the masses out of more of their produce.

"Masses gird for war against Soviet tyrants" wires a Tribune correspondent from Berlin. "Hundreds of thousands flock to join Communist Party of Russia" reads another dispatch from the Soviet Capital. Then comes "China recognizes Soviet Republic." It looks bad for—the "Trib."

Join the Workers Party.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

Some time ago we commented in this column on the misfortune that befell a Chicago Tribune correspondent in being expelled from Moscow on his conviction as an incurable and inveterate liar. A little later the Mexican Republic, the nearest to Russia in its working class character, was obliged to apply the tip of the boot to the posterior of another Tribune liar. Thus two important countries were not covered by the correspondents of what claims to be the "World's Greatest Newspaper." Ever since, the Tribune has lied eloquently about Russia and Mexico and even went to the extent of opening a campaign calling for armed intervention in the latter country.

• • • •

Now, it happens that capitalist papers even tho they stand with each other in times of crisis and against the working class, are nevertheless competitors and lose no opportunity to proclaim their superiority over each other and laugh at the discomfiture of their contemporaries, when the latter get into such a mess as the Tribune correspondents got into, in Russia and Mexico. The Tribune boasts of its foreign service. The fact is, it is very poor and very unreliable. The absence of its representatives in Russia and Mexico placed it at a serious disadvantage with its competitors, therefore it was obliged to give many excuses for the expulsion of its men from the two republics.

• • • •

One excuse was that the Tribune correspondents were refused permission to stay in Russia, because they would not allow their dispatches to be censored. But this hokum was nailed at once by the Chicago Daily News which has a very reliable correspondent in Russia in the person of Mr. Mackenzie. He writes freely and critically about the Soviet government and he is not interfered with. He openly admits that he is pro-capitalist, yet he can write just as he sees fit.

• • • •

Now, the columns of the Chicago Tribune are filled daily with lies about revolutions in Soviet Russia. Even the Tribune editors fear to put them on the front pages, so they are generally hidden away in the most remote part of the paper. It is the same old stuff that has been furnished by the stool pigeons and Czarist emigres for the past seven years to anybody who will give them the price of a meal. The Tribune in an editorial of March 18, makes the claim that more truth about Russia can be learned in Berlin than in Moscow. And you can get still nearer to the truth by hanging out around the office of William J. Burns in Washington, the world's champion liar. That gentleman will tell you any truth? you want to know, about anything from the Wall Street explosion to the film peddling graft.

• • • •

While the liberal weeklies are hollering for volunteers to come to the assistance of poor Ramsay MacDonald who is trying to save democracy in Europe, the Chicago Tribune on March 18, comes out with an editorial sneer at European democracy and suggests that these benighted people are even less fitted for self government than the Filipinos. It does not say so in as many words of course. The editorial is entitled "The Downfall of European Democracy." It is worth reading. It says that the French government has abdicated in favor of Poincare, while Poincare has abdicated in favor of J. P. Morgan who will not take up his residence in Paris, having too many other subject nations to look after, the most important of which is America. He is living on his yacht now and communicates with all his subject peoples by wireless.

• • • •

Poincare is the nominal ruler of France. Morgan is the real ruler. For one hundred million dollars the American banker got a stranglehold on the French republic and that country must now dance to his tune. Italy, Spain, Hungary, Russia, are ruled by dictators. Nobody rules in Germany says the Tribune. Oh yes, Von Seeckt, rules by the grace of the German Socialists who are now kicked out. The Tribune has interesting comment to make on the Dawes commission. You may remember Robt. Minor's cartoon in the first issue of the DAILY WORKER, representing the Dawes commission as three brutal American bankers with a satchelful of dollars and a whip to impose a Simon Legree dictatorship over Germany.

McAdoo--Political Influence Pawnbroker

MR. WILLIAM GIBBS McADOO, who has been posing as a progressive and as a friend of labor, has for years been a high-priced servant in the employ of the biggest capitalist interests.

The Norris resolutions carried by the Senate may shed some light on Mr. McAdoo's connections and deals with the men of Wall Street whom he is supposed to despise. We cite here only a few of the transactions between Mr. McAdoo and the capitalists which show plainly the great confidence the financiers and manufacturers have in him in our out of office.

1. When he was secretary of the treasury he awarded the picture film industry Liberty bond advertisements totalling fabulous sums. Upon his resignation from office the same picture interests retained him to the extent of $100,000.

Employed By Morse

2. After Mr. McAdoo resigned as secretary of the treasury he organized the firm of McAdoo, Cotton and Franklin. Mr. Cotton had previously been chief counsel for the United States Shipping Board. One of the clients of this law firm was the Virginia Shipbuilding Corporation. This is a company dominated by the same Chas. W. Morse whose pardon was secured by Mr. Daugherty. For the services rendered to this Morse concern Mr. McAdoo received $50,000, according to his own admission as a witness for Mr. Morse while the United States government was trying him in the summer of 1923. While on the witness stand Mr. McAdoo also admitted that the Groton Iron Company, another Morse concern, had also hired him at the stipulated fee of $50,000.

3. Mr. McAdoo not only sold his influence to shipping interests but to coal interests as ~~well.~~—Mr. Morse organized the United States Transport Co. and became its president. When he resigned his son took his place. This coal corporation had a number of coal carrying ships. It sought contracts for the sale and delivery of coal to France and Italy. Mr. McAdoo while secretary of the treasury negotiated vast loans from the government to Italy and France. No sooner had Mr. McAdoo resigned from the cabinet than he became the lawyer for this Morse Coal Company and acted in the transactions securing favorable contracts for this corporation with the French and Italian governments. The McAdoo firm received in commisions on coal sold to France close to $450,000. On the Italian shipments McAdoo, Cotton & Franklin received about $350,000 in commissions. The only reason for Mr. McAdoo's being hired in these transactions is to be found in the fact that the Morse corporation valued his influence with the French and Italian governments, influence which he won as secretary of the treasury at the time when these governments borrowed heavily from the United States.

4. As secretary of the treasury, Mr. McAdoo organized the Bureau of Internal Revenue and filled all its positions of prominence. After he resigned from the cabinet Mr. McAdoo became the counsel for the Republic Iron and Steel Company in litigation to reduce the tax bill of this corporation. Mr. McAdoo then appeared in behalf of this steel company before the same internal revenue board that he had appointed. There can be no more flagrant case of serving as a pawn broker in political influence for the big manufacturing interests than this instance. Mr. McAdoo received $200,000 for the services he rendered to the Republic Steel & Iron Corporation in reducing its tax bill.

5. While the Wilson administration in whose cabinet he had served was still in office Mr. McAdoo represented the Doheny oil interests in Washington. He represented Doheny before the Shipping Board. The California oil magnate had many calms before this board. After the Wilson administration ended Mr. McAdoo represented the Doheny oil interests in Mexico. For the last named service Mr. McAdoo received a paltry sum ranging from $125 to $250,000. Had Mr. McAdoo succeeded in carrying out what he undertook to put over for Doheny in Mexico, he would have received a fee of more than $1,000,000.

To date Mr. McAdoo is the greatest and most expensive pawnbroker in political influence that this country has seen.

The Poor Fish Says: Capitalism is a very fine system. Of course, I don't always have enough to eat but if the communists got control I'd have to give up what I haven't got which would be very un-American.

What's In the Teapot?

NO ONE KNOWS UNTIL IT BUBBLES OVER AND ITS FUMES STINK IN THE NOSTRILS OF THE WHOLE WORLD.

What Happens Every Day in the Year, Year in and Year Out, in the cesspools of the American capitalist capitol?

Who Owns the Government and What Do They Use It For? Who are the hundreds of Daughertys, Burns and Falls; tools of the money trust, the oil trust, the steel trust and the other masters of America?

Why Is It the Police, the Department of Justice, the Courts and the Army are used to kill and jail working people who organize to better their position while these same instruments of government are used to protect the super-crooks in their huge thefts?

WHO HAS THE ANSWER TO THESE QUESTIONS?

DO THEY TEACH IT IN THE SCHOOLS?
IS IT PRINTED IN THE CAPITALIST DAILIES?
CAN YOU FIND OUT AT THE MOVIES?

Schools, the Plute Press, the Movies, Exist Only to Lie About these questions and all others vital to the interests of the workers.

Minor's Startling Story of Oil

Jan. 7—General John F. Ryan charges that Charles R. Forbes, head of the Veterans' Bureau and friend of Harding, is the leading actor of the $250,000,000 steal from disabled war veterans.

Jan. 7—Bernard Baruch arrives in Washington.

U. S. Sends Mexico Protest.

Jan. 8—Embargo on arms to Mexico becomes effective.

About this time United States government sends protest to Mexico again against the blockade by rebel forces of Tampico where Doheny, Sinclair and Rockefeller have oil refineries.

That E. B. McLean, about to be called from Florida to testify as to source of Fall's $100,000, intends to perjure himself by testifying that he lent Fall the money, is proven by the following telegram to his lawyer, Francis Homer:

"Wire me your opinions as to whether investigating committee can force me to tell from what source I accumulated sums of $100,000. Think over certain prominent people at that time and you will realize why large cash fund was kept on hand. Mrs. McLean joins me in best wishes for your health. E. B. McLEAN."

Enter Lenroot.

Jan. 9—Fall wires his friend Senator Lenroot, chairman of the senate committee:

"Am I to understand from recent telegrams you sent McLean that you have given to Walsh authority to subpoena me as a witness? Wire answer. ALBERT B. FALL."

And friend Lenroot excuses himself with the reply:

"There was no such intention. Walsh stated he might wish to examine McLean's secretary or other employees which might be there, and that was only purpose of his authority to subpoena. I. L. LENROOT, U. S. S."

Jan. 11—Fall sends the following wire:

"Gus T. Jones, Department of Justice Agent, San Antonio, Tex.

"Get in touch with Buckley immediately. Ask him if he can come here at once as my attorney and adviser. This is very important. Must see him before he sails. Answer. A. B. FALL."

This Gus T. Jones is the man especially recommended by William J. Burns as the ideal detective to investigate Fall.

Jan. 11—Fall wires E. L. Doheny, Jr., at Los Angeles:

"Walsh authorized to take testimony on sub-committee. Will examine McLean and probably myself. Facts will be developed possibly names not disclosed. A. B. FALL."

Jan. 12—Bernard Baruch, the New York magnate, has evidently done something for somebody since his visit to Washington on January 7 and 8, for he receives the following:

"Palm Beach, Fla., Jan. 12, 1924, 11:20 A. M.

"Mr. Bernard Baruch, Bankers Trust Company Bldg., 57th and Madison Ave., New York City.

"Many thanks. Hope to see you soon. E. B. McLEAN."

Coolidge Steps Into Arena.

Jan. 12—President Calvin Coolidge wires from the White House:

"Washington, D. C., Jan. 12, 1924, 9 P. M.

"Edward B. McLean, Palm Beach, Fla.

"Prescott is away. Advise Slemp with whom I shall confer. Acknowledge. CALVIN COOLIDGE."

Jan. 16, 1924—Report reaches Washington that rebels are in control of the Doheny oil wells at Cuerro Azul.

Jan. 16, 1924—The American cruiser Tacoma, en route to Tampico, is wrecked on the rocks of Blanquila reef, two miles outside of the breakwater at Vera Cruz.

Secretary Denby orders the U. S. cruiser Richmond detached from the American naval forces at Panama and rushed toward Tampico, where rebel army approaches oil region, where Doheny's, Sinclair's and Rockefeller's refineries are located. The Richmond carries a powerful radio for communication with Washington.

The Persian Deal.

Jan. 17—Announcement that Sinclair Oil Corporation is looking over the oil lands of Persia, recent reports having been made that Sinclair had gotten concessions from the Persian government. Also a big financial deal in Persia being put over by the American International Corporation, in which are Standard Oil men.

Edward L. Doheny arrives in New Orleans on his way East. Asked whether he came to New Orleans to confer about the Teapot Dome bribery scandal, Doheny replied:

"I came to New Orleans to see that the Destrahan refinery was operated at full blast. Our Tampico refinery has been closed, but it must be opened. Our holdings in the Mexican fields are permanent, and the Mexican revolution is temporary like a fire or flood, and the damage, if any, cannot be estimated until it has passed. I consider the situation grave. If further reports from Mexico justify it, the Mexican Petroleum Company will ask the State Department to take steps for the protection of its interests."

"We've Just Begun to Fight!"

Jan. 18—Secretary Hughes held a conference during the day with representatives of Edward L. Doheny, Harry F. Sinclair, and the Standard Oil company on the subject of sending war ships to Tampico. Secretary Hughes expressed the wish that there should be no public discussion of his conference with the oil men.

Jan. 18—President Coolidge, Secretary of State Hughes and officials of the navy department have a long discussion on the subject of the De LaHuerta advance into the Tampico oil region.

Jan. 19 — Secretary of State Hughes and Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt (Former employe of Harry Sinclair) conferred with representatives of the Association of Petroleum Producers in Mexico, headed by Guy Stevens about the safety of Doheny's, Sinclair's and Standard Oil properties in Mexico.

Jan. 19—Seven more warships sent to Mexico. Flagship Omaha Admiral Kittelle in command, with destroyers Corry, Hull, Macdomough, Farenholt, Sumner and Shirk, steamed at full speed from the canal zone, headed for Mexican seaports to protect oil properties and employes of American oil operators at Tampico and Vera Cruz. The vessels carry 1,100 bluejackets and some marines. Admiral Koontz, commander-in-chief of the American fleet, will be in charge. A total of 211 naval craft are mobilized at the canal zone for "naval maneuvers."

Doheny Endorses McAdoo.

Jan. 19—Democratic State Central committee of California, of which Edward L. Doheny is a member, endorses William G. McAdoo for president.

Jan. 21—Prices of gasoline and crude oil go up.

Jan. 21—Archie Roosevelt, until a few days ago vice-president of the Union Petroleum company, subsidiary of Sinclair Oil corporation, swears Sinclair's confidential secretary told him that Sinclair had paid $68,000 to the foreman of Fall's ranch.

Sinclair's confidential secretary swears he didn't say "sixty-eight thousand dollars," but "six or eight cows."

Jan. 21—Albert B. Fall denies that he received any money from Harry F. Sinclair, "that Harry F. Sinclair has never loaned or given me a penny in any way."

Jan. 22—President Coolidge orders Harry M. Daugherty to have an observer at the hearings "to watch for any evidence of wrong-doing."

Where Was Daugherty?

Memorandum of instructions to the son-in-law of Fall, outlining how he should testify, is found; being a rambling story about his father having told him that he would soon have some money for a payment on his ranches, and that later Fall went to Chicago and got the money there.

Jan. 22—McLean receives a telegram:

"Washington, D. C., Jan. 22, 1924.

"Subpoena for Fall today, returnable Friday. JOHN."

Jan. 23 — Secretary of State Hughes issues public statement declaring that the sale of munitions and guns to Mexico has become a duty of the United States, and gives as his reason the fact that the Obregon government has arranged (with Thomas W. Lamont, of J. P. Morgan and company) for the payment of its foreign debt (which is owed largely to American bankers); with the further reason that the De La-Huerta army has taken possession of certain portions of Mexican territory (the region where the oil works of Harry F Sinclair, Edward L. Doheny and the Standard Oil Co. are located).

Jan. 23—Senator Caraway asks Senate to hurry up and pass his resolution cancelling the Teapot Dome lease. Senator Lenroot asks for delay.

Doheny Gives Lie to Fall.

Jan. 24—Doheny swears he sent the $100,000 to Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall in November, 1921, but that it was not a bribe, tho it might have influenced Mr. Fall. Doheny swears that Fall gave him a note for the money. Swears that the oil lease was approved by Secretary of the Navy Denby.

Jan. 25—McLean receives a telegram from Washington:

"Zev testified that he had loaned Fall $25,000 for European trip. Willis has attended to matter. JOHN."

Jan. 28—Washington rumors are that William G. McAdoo and Franklin K. Lane of the Wilson administration are about to be dragged into the oil scandal, both having accepted money from Doheny immediately after leaving Wilson cabinet. Lane, as Wilson's secretary of the interior, granted oil-land leases to Doheny; then retired from cabinet to enter Doheny's employ at $50,000 a year.

Jan. 29—Ex-President Woodrow Wilson is stricken with a mortal illness.

Feb. 2—A. B. Fall refuses to testify on the ground that he might incriminate himself.

Feb. 3—Ex-President Woodrow Wilson dies.

Corporation Lawyers Selected.

Jan. 29—Thomas W. Gregory, oil company attorney, and Silas H. Strawn, attorney and director of big corporations, chosen by President Coolidge to prosecute the oil steal cases. Both of them promptly accept.

Jan. 29—Senator Lenroot tries to persuade other members of investigating committee that Admiral Robison is a sincere man and that the transfer of the oil reserves to Fall's jurisdiction was proper.

The "Principal."

Jan. 29—McLean receives a telegram. (Editor's interpretation in parenthesis):

Washington, Jan. 29, 1924.

"E. B. McLean, Palm Beach:

Saw Principal (Calvin Coolidge). Delivered message (to President Coolidge). He (Coolidge) says greatly appreciates and sends regards to you and Mrs. McLean. There will be no rocking of boat and no resignations. He (Coolidge) expects reaction from unwarranted political attacks.

Bennett." (McLean's employe).

Feb. 3—Mary, employe of Burns' office in the department of justice, wires her husband W. O. Duckstein, who is McLean's secretary, at Palm Beach:

"Burns states lawyer friendly to department that an inquiry was on foot to ascertain whether McLean was a regularly appointed dollar-a-year man, and asked me to find out. Department lawyer came to Burns and inquired . . . Burns states impossible to say when he can get away. Being kept here on Dome hearing. Department liable to be called upon at any time for investigations and to prepare injunctions . . . Mary."

Feb. 5, 1924—Sidney Thompson sends Gaston B. Means to Palm Beach, where Means meets McLean and his private secretary, Duckstein. (Sidney Thompson is Daugherty's go-between and "money carrier" after Jess Smith's death, according to Means.)

McAdoo Notifies Lenroot.

February 7—McAdoo sends letter to Lenroot saying he has left the employ of Doheny and given up the salary.

Feb 8—Congressman Longworth, taunted on republican oil graft, shows that democratic party has long been taking heavy subsidies from Doheny, Bernard Baruch and Cleveland H. Dodge.

Feb. 11—Coolidge refuses senate's request for resignation of Denby, declaring senate has no such right.

Feb. 11—McLean receives a telegram from Washington:

"X (Attorney General Daugherty) telephoned me last night, said tell you not to worry. Count." (Ira E. Bennett).

Feb. 12—Revealed that Strawn, appointed by Coolidge as oil prosecutor, is an oil attorney.

Feb. 12—President Calvin Coolidge sends the following telegram:

"118 Jn X23 Govt fm The White House, Washington, DC., 101&AM Feb 12, 1924

To Edward B B McLean,
Palm Beach, Fla.

Thank you for your message. You have always been most considerate. Mrs. Coolidge joins me in kindest regards to you and Mrs. McLean.

Calvin Coolidge.
1029am."

Feb. 14—Bennett wires McLean.

"Will have conference with H. D. (Harry Daugherty) before 1 o'clock. B."

After conference Bennett, signing himself as "Count," wires McLean the same day:

Saw X (Attorney General Daugherty) for an hour. His direct message to you is, "I am at 'Y's' (Coolidge's) elbow and standing at the guns. All that is possible to do will be done by us, so you should worry. Delay selection prosecutor. Give Z my love. I don't want Z. to be disturbed so long as I am on the job. You know what to depend upon. The fight is on me and I am ready for them and feeling fine."

Harding Paper Scandal.

Feb. 15—Frank H. Vanderlip, former president of National City (Standard Oil) bank in public speech declares there is rumor afloat that Harding sold his newspaper, the Marion Star, for $550,000 and that the price was padded to double the real value of the property.

Coolidge appoints Atlee Pomerene as one oil prosecutor. Senate confirms Pomerene. Owen J. Roberts, other new appointee, denies that he is Standard Oil attorney.

Feb. 18—McAdoo declares he had a right to take Doheny's money and is determined to run for presidency on platform of "Back to Honesty."

Feb. 18—Denby resigns as secretary of navy.

Feb. 23—Coolidge approves Harry M. Daugherty as delegate-at-large to republican convention.

Feb. 24—McAdoo admits he was to get $1,000,000 from Doheny if successful in using his influence to get Mexican government to surrender to Doheny's oil company.

March 9—Charges are made that department of justice agents were active as provocators of violent outbreaks on the Mexican fronteer in 1920.

March 12, 1924—Roxie Stinson appears before senate committee and tells story of long career of graft led by Jess Smith and Daugherty.

March 13—Gaston Means reveals the most amazing story of government corruption ever heard. Tells of receiving $100,000 of bribe money from the Mitsui Co., representatives of the Japanese government, in the Standard Aircraft case.

Fomenting Mexican Revolution.

March 15—Revealed that in 1921 William Hanson, friend of Albert B. Fall, after making arrangements with officials "higher up" in the U. S. government, went to Mexican border and became active in fomenting armed insurrection activities in Mexico. Hansen is now chief of the U. S. immigration inspection service at Mexican border, and takes a hand in Mexican disturbances.

March 15—It is learned that Senator Burton K. Wheeler, "radical" democratic member taking the lead in senate oil investigation committee and apparently pushing the case against the oil grafters, is attorney for the Gordon Campbell Kevin Oil syndicate, the largest oil development syndicate in Montana. It is believed that Senator Wheeler's law firm receives $10,000 per year from the oil company.

It is recalled that Ed Shields, secretary of the employers' association at Billings, Mont., replying to questions as to whether Senator Wheeler had any "red" associations, replied:

"No. He is like the granite of our hills."

"The idea becomes power when it penetrates the masses."

"The Teapot Special" Supplement
THE DAILY WORKER

SECOND SECTION
March 19th, 1924. This magazine supplement will appear every Saturday in The Daily Worker.

Senator Walsh and the Teapot Dome

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

SENATOR THOMAS WALSH, of Montana, is leading the fight against the Teapot Dome steal. In Washington during the last few months Senator Walsh has appeared as the champion of the people against the looters of the natural resources and has made many caustic utterances relative to the domination of the government by oil interests.

It is notable, however, that Senator Walsh, in his crusade against government by oil, has not said anything about the Standard Oil Company or its subsidiary—the Anaconda Mining Company—the gigantic metal, lumber and water power monopoly that owns the state he is supposed to represent and owns him along with its other goods and chattels.

Walsh, Copper Trust Man.

There are a number of contradictions in the Teapot scandal, apparent contradictions rather, that require explanation and none is more puzzling to the uninitiated that the activity of Senator Walsh—the man whom the copper trust elected in 1918 and who has before and since his re-election been the foremost but not the best known champion of reaction under two administrations—Wilson's and Harding's.

Walsh was the legal expert of the Wilson administration. He was the champion of the armed ships' bill—the pet measure of the British Admiralty—the first step taken towards our participation in the European holocaust. He passed upon the constitutionality of the conscription law; he was largely instrumental in overcoming the anti-constitutional difficulties in the earlier drafts of the espionage act and was always able to throw the mantle of legality over the most subversive acts of the Wilson administration.

Sitting with Walsh as the junior senator from Montana is Burton K. Wheeler—an entirely different type. A supporter of Walsh during the early part of Walsh's political career Wheeler obtained Walsh's first senatorial nomination for him. He was appointed United States District Attorney thru the influence of Walsh and was serving in that capacity when this country entered the war.

Recalls Wheeler.

Wheeler refused to prosecute the men and women whom the Anaconda Mining Company picked out for persecution; he interfered in no way with free speech, free press and assemblage during his term of office and, if my recollection is correct, not one single individual was convicted under the espionage law in a federal court in Montana.

More than that Wheeler served notice upon the corporations of Montana that his office could not be used to railroad to jail labor men who had displeased them by their activity on behalf of their class. Montana with Wheeler as U. S. district attorney was a splendid proof of the Communist contention that convictions of radicals result under war conditions only by the servants of the capitalist class abrogating all guarantees of individual freedom on which capitalist democracy is based.

So zealous was Wheeler in upholding the constitution that he was marked for slaughter by the Anaconda Mining Company and in his hour of trial, when every capitalist paper in Montana was demanding his blood—actually, not figuratively—Senator Walsh deserted him. He was called into Washington and forced to resign.

Walsh later came up for re-election and received the undivided support of the Anaconda Mining Company; in Butte (Silver Bow County) he was so bitterly hated by the masses that he came out of the county (a stronghold of the democrats) but 72 votes ahead of Jeannette Rankin who was running on the national party ticket; the machine democrats afterwards admitted that they stole 2,700 votes from Miss Rankin in order to put Walsh over.

Votes for Esch-Cummins Law.

Is there any need of further argument to decide who owns Senator Walsh of Montana?

That the Teapot Dome scandal is merely the outward manifestation of a conflict that is taking place within the ranks of the capitalists—between oil capitalists particularly—that men like Walsh are playing the game for the big capitalists and care nothing for the interests of the masses despite appearances to the contrary, is further proven by Walsh's endorsement of McAdoo for the presidency after he himself was responsible for linking up McAdoo with oil. McAdoo, the attorney for the Republic Iron and Steel Company, the fixer for big business, the spokesman of the Anaconda Mining Company in the Wilson administration, is the choice of Walsh for president.

Walsh voted for the Esch-Cummins bill—the heart's desire of the open shop railway interests, but poses as a friend of the railway workers. He has helped to hand the Anaconda Mining Company the fabulously valuable phosphate deposits of Montana; he has aided the same company to grab practically all the available water power sites in the state and is now trying to present them with the water power in Yellowstone Park.

Denounces Strikers.

In 1917, after 164 miners had been smothered to death in the Speculator disaster in Butte because the company had violated the state laws relative to ventilation and exits, 12,000 miners and metal tradesmen went on strike. Walsh gave out interview after interview to the copper press denouncing the strikers as Pro-Germans and enemies of the nation; he condoned the murder of Frank Little by copper trust thugs and he defended the "rustling card" system of the Anaconda Mining Company—the system whereby a man is required to tell the history of his life simply to get permission to "rustle" for a job—when I attempted to get an expression of sympathy for the miners from him while the strike was on.

Just a few days ago, in a letter to one Fred Marvin, a professional red baiter, Ed. Shields, business agent for the employers association of Billings, defended Walsh against a charge of radicalism. Marvin had asked Shields if Walsh had ever been friendly with William F. Dunne and Shields replied indignatly that "Walsh is like the granite of our hills" and had never had anything to do with the radicals.

Shields, as a defender of Walsh, speaks for the anti-labor forces in Montana. He was formerly business agent of the Clerks' Union in Butte, and during the 1917 strike had a brother who was a gunman for the Anaconda Mining Company. Shields became too rotten for even the conservative Clerks' Union, was forced out and immediately went to work openly for the bosses he had worked for secretly as a union official.

Walsh is trying to capitalize the respect that the workers and farmers of Montana have for Wheeler because of his stand during the war; when I say respect, I mean exactly that, because Wheeler was supported by thousands of workers and farmers who hated the democratic party and all it stands for but who felt that to desert Wheeler in the face of the Anaconda Mining Company attack was to play into the company's hands. Walsh comes up for re-election this year and Wheeler is going to be placed in an embarrassing position. If he supports Walsh he will lose his working class following and if he does not he must sever his connection with the democratic party. The Daugherty investigation is Wheeler's own work but Walsh will try to take credit for it altho he hates and fears it. The Anaconda Mining Company will suffer as a result of the Daugherty investigation that has grown out of the Teapot Dome scandal—the scandal that was supposed to kill off several strong competitors of the Standard Oil Company—the parent of the Anaconda.

Exposing His Own Bed-Mates.

It is the irony of fate that a black reactionary like Walsh should be one of the instruments used to expose the detailed nature of the control of government by capital and capitalists and to bring into the fierce light of day the corrupt practices by which his Anaconda Company backers oppress and intimidate the workers and farmers of the state he lives in and whose rulers he serves.

Such a paradox could only occur in a period like this when the bankruptcy of the farmers and over-production in industry has undermined the foundations of American capitalism.

Capitalism dies because it cannot reconcile its antagonisms and correct its contradictions. No more striking evidence of this fact can be had than that a copper trust senator, seeking to conciliate popular sentiment in order to secure re-elecion and further aid his owners, overturns the boiling pot of oil and must now watch its reeking streams flow on and besmirch before the eyes of the people the very interests he was seeking to protect.

In Montana such things as I have cited builds a farmer-labor party; in other states the same thing occurs with the exposure of their local exploiting interests. The streams of discontent and disillusionment unite and American capitalism now faces a revolt of farmers and workers; a revolt that they would like to blame the Communists for but which they know is the result of inability to loot with the old secrecy and efficiency. The former red baiters now are dodging the penitentiary amid the laughter and jeers of the workers and farmers whom they fooled for a little while but whom they fool no longer.

Give us more Walshes and capitalism will be an easy conquest.

Democrats Had Big Ideas About Doheny Before He Was Caught

"CALIFORNIA agrees with the Senator from Montana (Thomas J. Walsh), and California agrees with the Senator from Nevada (Key Pitman) that you must not overlook nor forget that the great West is populated by free-minded and independent American citizens. (Applause)... And CALIFORNIA, THEREFORE, PRESENTS HER GREAT AND DISTINGUISHED SON, BORN IN THE STATE OF WISCONSIN. In poverty he started, a surveyor over the Southwest, a cowboy in Kansas, a prospector over practically every state of the West, a discoverer of the oil fields in southern California, and FROM THENCE HE BUILDS HIMSELF TO THE PINNACLE OF SUCCESS SUCH AS EVERY AMERICAN CITIZEN LOVES AND ADMIRES, AND CALIFORNIA'S SON. THE LIFE OF THIS MAN IS A TYPICAL ROMANCE OF AMERICAN IMPROVED OPPORTUNITY, AND WE TAKE PRIDE, THEREFORE, IN PRESENTING TO THIS CONVENTION AS THE MAN OUT OF THE WEST WHO CAN REACH THE HEARTS AND THE SOULS, NOT ONLY OF THE DEMOCRATS OF THE WEST, BUT OF THE GREAT FREE-THINKING PEOPLE OF THE WEST. CALIFORNIA, THE GREAT GOLDEN STATE, PRESENTS EDWARD L. DOHENY FOR VICE-PRESIDENT." (Applause.)

. . . "And on this day when the sun sets upon this great state, the state of successful and able men, Massachusetts hopes that you will have nominated Edward L. Doheny, a self-made man who is needed in this hour of reconstruction, and the ticket that you nominate will be successful in November." (Applause.)

(From speech delivered by Delegate Michael L. Sullivan of Massachusetts seconding the nomination of Edward L. Doheny.)

These speeches were delivered on the eighth day, July 6, 1920, of the last national convention of the democratic party at the Civic Auditorium, San Francisco, California.—Official Proceedings of the Democratic National Convention, pp. 437-438.

IMPEACH COOLIDGE!

Palm Beach is the favorite rendezvous of the oil crooks. Rather dangerous place for a politician before election. We note that Edward N. Hurley and Representative Fred A. Britten of Chicago had their pictures taken there last week. Britten is the lad who is defending the oil crooks in the house of representatives. What's that?

OUT WITH DAUGHERTY!

Miss Eugenie Dennis of Atchison, Kansas, is shown telling officials of the Burns detective agency how to solve crime mysteries. We suggest she get her charmed system working on the chief criminal, the honorable William J. Burns.

BURNS MUST GO!

If Diogenes ever came to Washington with his old fashioned oil lamp looking for an honest man he would very soon lose his illumination.

IMPEACH COOLIDGE!

Surely the Department of Justice is a place that an honest man should keep away from. Even honest sleuths are not wanted there.

Robbing the Oil Slaves - -

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

THE whole country is an uproar because a group of oil barons aided and abetted by the present administration in Washington were caught red-handed in the act of looting the government oil reserves. Senators, congressmen, publicists and all kinds of capitalist public men not involved in the oil graft are rushing frantically for the limelight to let the dear old "people" know how horrified they are that an administration under our blessed capitalist system could be so corrupt as to sell or barter that precious mineral substance upon which our naval bill collectors will depend in the near future for their motive power.

The Capitalist State.

And the "people" are actually shocked except that small but conscious minority of this country's working class population known as radicals or to be more definite, Communists. The Communists are neither surprised nor shocked. They are rather pleased that a capitalist administration should be so stupid as to give such striking testimony of what the Communists always have claimed, i. e., that this country with its untold wealth is the property of the capitalists who use the workers to turn its raw resources into finished products ready for consumption, which commodities are sold by the capitalists for profit.

Every four years the capitalist groups fight with each other for the possession of the government. Control of the machinery of government enables the controlling capitalist group to have first rights on the pickings and the loot, but when they become over confident and overstep the bounds of discretion, the "outs" jump in, wave the danger signal and help to kick them out and make room for a new set of looters. That is the significance of the present hullabaloo about the oil scandal.

It is true that the republican administration has been guilty of turning over the naval oil reserve lands to oil barons. They have aided in defrauding the country they were supposed to defend. For this they are denounced by their capitalist politicians of other parties. But none of these defenders of the United States ever said a single word during this entire expose about those who are really robbed; the workers who make the profits that enabled Doheny, Sinclair and the rest of the oil barons to purchase the Coolidge administration and thru it grab the Teapot Dome and the California oil fields.

The Robbery of the Workers.

None of those who were and are so outraged about the Teapot Dome steal are concerned about the robbery of the workers who produce the oil, because they believe in the robber capitalist system. They are only concerned with the code of ethics generally followed by capitalist thieves, in their relations to each other. Only when one group of thieves steals a march on the others do they throw their usual secrecy to the winds and tell the world what is going on. That is the feature of the situation that the Communists relish, and the publicity they give the present oil scandal is distinctly for the purpose of throwing light on the real character of capitalist government and calling the attention of the workers to the necessity for doing away with the system that breeds such corruption.

The Communists are concerned entirely with the robbery of the workers in the oil industry by the Dohenys, Sinclairs, Standard Oil Company and all the other companies that exploit the oil resources of the United States for their own profit. How do the workers who produce the oil barons' millions fare? What are their conditions of employment? What kind of houses do they live in? What is their social life? These are questions that will not receive any consideration in Washington; we take them up here in the columns of the DAILY WORKER.

$2.65 Per 84 Hours.

We will take the Elk Basin field in northern Wyoming—the Teapot Dome state—as a typical example. Elk Basin is described as "a hole in the ground, gouged out of the naked clay and sandstone. No water, no trees, no grass—not a living growing thing in sight save the straggling sage brush." The Elk Basin oil production is controlled by the Standard Oil Company, masquerading under the aliases of the Ohio Oil and Midwest Oil companies.

When social workers take up the conditions of the oil workers with the saintly John D. Rockefeller, Jr., that gentleman refers them to the above named oil companies. They in turn pass the buck back to John D.

The hours of labor are 84 a week and the pay of an unskilled worker for the 84-hour week is $2.65 which, we hasten to add, includes board.

The bunk houses in Elk Basin are rather-lively. Listen to what an investigator has to say of the sleeping accommodations:

"'How are the bugs?' I asked a man lounging outside, who I learned later was a mule skinner freighting thru the basin."

"'Try 'em and see,' was the disgusted reply. 'Last time I was here I killed an army corps of them in half an hour and took to the barn with my mules the rest of the night. Me for the hay life.'"

Married men and their families live in one-room shacks without plumbing or running water. Some of these families number from six to eight grown up boys and girls. They are compelled to live together in a single 10x14 tent.

Alkali Drinking Water.

The oil slaves are awakened at six in the morning by the "crum boss." The twelve-hour grind starts at seven and as one old slave put it, "When you finish the week's work, you are good for nothing but John D." He might add that the one week's work merely marks the beginning of another. There is no interval for rest.

The drinking water in the Elk Basin is atrocious. It is alkali water pumped from wells two miles away and condensed for drinking. The condensing is so poor that the water is enough to turn any man's stomach. The lumping of oatmeal and potato combinations into the condensing boiler to stop leaking flues, hardly improves the quality of the water.

Sanctimonious John D.

There is one shower bath in operation in the Ohio company's wash-house. The employes of the Midwest company are, however, not allowed to use it. The shower at the Midwest has been out of order for some years.

"While John D. is sittin' on a soft cushion in church on Easter mornin' praisin' God in his goodness to him, I was out here pulling a well in the worst blizzard seen around here for many years. God is good to the oil barons. They can pay preachers to praise Him—paid from the profits made by their oil slaves."

The slaves of the Ohio Oil Company WORK TWELVE HOURS A DAY 365 DAYS IN THE YEAR. THEY NEVER GET A HOLIDAY.

The oil companies cannot afford to give their employes a six-day week and an eight-hour day. The oil companies admit it! But the following except from the Federal Trade Commission's tentative revision of the net earnings on net investment of the Midwest company for the last three years for which figures are given shows 43.2, 50.6, 44.4, respectfully, while the Ohio Oil Company due to dividends of 2,900 and 150 per cent, is paying 4,500 per cent on its original investment. Every nickel of this colossal profit was wrung out of the 84-hour week, 365-day year oil slaves. The looting of the oil reserve, the grafting of ex-Secretary of the Interior Fall, the corruption of the entire republican administration, pales into insignificance beside this colossal robbery of the poor workers who are defrauded of the fruits of their labor right on the job.

"Why don't you organize?" was a question put to an oil worker by a newspaper reporter.

"Organize hell—try it and see," was his reply.

The Slimy Octopus.

Two men tried it in the Elk Basin and lasted two weeks on the job. When the companies post a wage reduction, the insinuation goes with it that anybody who does not like the job can leave.

These are the conditions under which those who produce the swollen fortunes of the oil barons live. According to a United States government report 80 per cent of the oil workers in this country work a seven-day week of 84 hours. With the profits from their labors the oil companies instigate counter-revolutions in Mexico, reach out into distant Mesopotamia, Persia, China and all over the world leaving a trail of civil wars and corruption in their wake. With these profits the oil companies buy up the agencies that manufacture opinion, the press, the pulpit and the colleges. They buy senators, congressmen, state legislatures and the cabinet. That is the essence of the present oil scandal.

It is a matter of great importance to the workers that a set of capitalist burglars were caught in the act of looting the country. It helps to arouse the masses to the necessity for getting rid of all the burglars that run this country and rule it by force in their own interests. The republicans were caught hawking the oil fields. The democrats are mad because they did not have the privilege of doing the looting. The workers who are the real victims, are not considered by the capitalist parties.

Remember June 17th!

It is our duty to stress this feature of the present crisis and call on the workers to rally to the standard of the Farmer-Labor Party which will hold its convention in Minneapolis on June 17th and organize the exploited workers of this country, in all industries as well as the oil industry, on the political field, to eject the capitalist robbers from the government, and prepare for the establishment of a Workers' Republic in the United States, run by the producers for the benefit of those who render useful service to society.

The Investigation Mania In Washington

THE extent to which the capitalists control the United States government is unknown to most of the workers and farmers. There is not a single department of the federal, state, municipal and county governments that is not today completely subject to the orders and manipulations of the bankers and manufacturers.

Graft and corruption are in language in which the politics of the employing class is played. Teapot scandals are not new to American government. We have had Teapot politics played in this country ever since the government was organized. But at no time before has this corruption broken out in such putrid scabs on the body-politic of the country. To get an idea of how Washington is serving the big business interests of the country one need but look at the investigation mania that has seized the Capitol. The number of investigations, larger than ever in our history, gives only an inkling into what is what in the federal government. We cite some of the leading investigations that have been proposed or are in process now:

Teapot Dome Steal.

1. The Teapot Dome and the Elk Hills Naval Oil Reserve deals.
2. The Veterans' Bureau under the direction of Forbes.
3. General Wood's conduct in the Philippines in handing over concessions to the oil, tobacco, railway and coal capitalists who financed his 1920 presidential primary campaign.
4. The Wheeler investigation of the Department of Justice and Daugherty.
5. The transfer of the Matanuska coal fields in Alaska to Fall as Secretary of the Interior to the Navy Department.
6. The financial orgy indulged in by the Emergency Fleet Corporation and the Shipping Board.
7. The Ku Klux Klan and its role in the election of Senator Mayfield in Texas.
8. The propaganda campaign organized in behalf of the Mellon tax scheme.
9. The lease of the naval oil reserve to Buena Vista Hills, California.
10. The land frauds in Texas participated in by the Republican National Committeeman Creager.
11. The Bok Peace Plan as an attempt to influence the government's foreign policy.
12. The negotiation and ratification of the treaty by which the United States government gave Colombia $25,000,000.
13. The activities of capitalists and corporations in attempting to secure oil concessions in foreign countries.
14. The conspiracy fixing the present price of bread.
15. The investigation of the propaganda against the bonus.
16. The practices of the stock exchange.
17. The administration of Porto Rico.
18. The conduct of the Prohibition Enforcement Bureau.

Russian Propaganda.

19. Soviet "propaganda" and Russian-American relations.
20. The administration of Federal Highway Aid system.
21. The immigration problem.
22. The fraud and corruption in the Bureau of Printing and Engraving.
23. Sundry phases of the railway problem, such as the payment of money to various railway corporations by the United States government for the period of federal control.
24. The medical diploma mills.
25. The propaganda of the big fertilizer interests regarding Muscle Shoals.
26. The administration of the Bureau of Internal Revenue and the charges of waste, favoritism, extravagance and inefficiency.
27. The operation of the Army Air Service, the United States Air Mail Service and the Naval Bureau of Aeronautics.
28. The practice of the banks for lending money for speculative activities, particularly insofar as it involves the Federal Reserve System, insurance companies and several finance institutions in New York.
29. The sale of seal furs by the government, involving United States Senator Spencer of Missouri.
30. The agricultural situation.
31. Conditions among the Indians.

Denby-Doheny-Hawaiian Grab.

32. The Denby-Doheny-Hawaiian construction contract involving the naval base at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii.
33. Connection of congressmen with the Veterans' Bureau.

34 to 39. The resolutions of Senator Norris calling upon six government departments to supply the Senate with information regarding the appearance of ex-cabinet officers, ex-senators, and ex-department heads before various subdivisions of the government within two years after they have left office in behalf of private interests. These resolutions include the Department of the Treasury, the Shipping Board, the State Department, the Department of Justice, the Navy Department, and Department of Interior.

40. The charges made by Brewer, an ex-employe of the Internal Revenue Bureau, involving a $1,000,000 bond fraud.

OUT WITH DAUGHERTY!

Before Warren G. Harding was elected he had his picture taken with Harry M. Daugherty, Jake L. Hamon and Jess W. Smith. Daugherty is the only survivor. The rest are no more. They never were very much. One was killed by his concubine, one committed suicide directly and the third, it is said, indirectly. Daugherty?

BURNS MUST GO!

Coolidge Does His Bit - -

By JAY LOVESTONE

PRESIDENT Coolidge's whole procedure in the oil scandal betrays a definite plan on his part to do everything he possibly can do to save the Falls, Sinclairs, and Dohenys, without breaking his own political neck.

His choice of oil prosecutors shows this very clearly. Practically every man selected by the President to prosecute the oil thieves in behalf of the government has had his record dipped in oil, directly or indirectly, in some form or other.

First of all, Mr. Gregory was chosen. A few days after this choice was made by the White House, the Senate Committee on Public Lands learned officially that Mr. Gregory was smeared with oil from head to foot. No one, of course, took Coolidge's claims of ignorance about Mr. Gregory's connections with oil corporations seriously.

Corporation Lawyer Strawn.

Then the lie was again given to our Puritanic President's confessions of innocence and purity. Another one of his chosen defenders of the country's wealth against the capitalist looters was a certain Mr. Silas H. Strawn, a corporation lawyer of Chicago. No sooner had his name been announced to the press than Mr. Melvin A. Traylor, President of the First Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago, gave the Public Lands Committee information which immediately disqualified Mr. Strawn. Mr. Traylor acted in this fashion in order to save the President and his reactionary outfit the serious embarrassments and great difficulties which would confront them when the truth about Mr. Strawn would become known after he had begun work in the legal proceedings against the Teapot leases.

Mr. Traylor said in part: "That his bank was trustee under a debenture agreement securing an issue of securities of the Sinclair Crude Oil Purchasing Company, which is owned one-half each, by the Standard Oil and Sinclair Companies." He went on to show that this bank was connected with the Sinclair Pipe Lines Co., owned jointly by the Standard and Sinclair Companies and builders of the pipe line to the Teapot Dome; and that the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, "had for many years deposited funds in the First National Bank of Chicago."

Mr. Strawn, the Coolidge appointtee, was found to be a director and stockholder of the First National Bank and the First Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago. This was the last nail driven into the coffin bearing Mr. Coolidge's pretense at any attempt to punish the Teapot magnates.

Having lost out in his choice of these two prosecutors, Mr. Coolidge proceeded to secure lawyers who might stand a better chance of getting the Senate's approval. Our chief Executive then chose the Lame Duck Ex. Senator Pomerene and the relatively unknown Mr. Owen J. Roberts of Philadelphia. These corporation tools have been accepted by the Senate, despite the opposition of the progressive group and a few stray Senators.

The Case of Mr. Pomerene

An examination of the services rendered by Mr. Pomerene to the big business interests, while he was a Senator and after he was kicked out of the Senate in 1922, reveals the irrefutable fact that it is Mr. Coolidge's intent to make a hollow mockery out of the oil prosecution.

As a member of the Senate, he was opposed to striking out from the Esch-Cummins Law the provision making strikes unlawful. Mr. Pomerene voted against extending the Federal control of railroads for two years. He accepted the conference report of the Esch-Cummins Act containing objectionable anti-labor clauses and other obnoxious provisions.

When Mr. Pomerene was defeated in the election for Senator from Ohio, he was immediately rewarded by the railroad corporations he so loyally served in the capital. Today Mr. Pomerene is one of the biggest railroad attorneys in the country. His firm is one of the strongest corporations in Ohio. According to his own statements before the Interstate Commerce Commission, his firm is the representative of fifteen of the biggest railroads in the country. One of these is the Pennsylvania Railroad which is an uncompromising enemy of organized labor.

Mr. Pomerene is also on the pay roll of the National Transportation Institute, which is a propaganda organization in favor of the united railway capitalists. Mr. Pomerene has admitted that he has been, for some time, on the platform of this organization and has been paid as high as $1,000 for a few speeches delivered by him in behalf of the railroad interests. Mr. Pomerene's connections with the railroads go back to the years before he was in the Senate. He tried several cases for the Pennsylvania system before he was sent to Washington.

Mr. Pomerene is an enemy of the farmers, as well as of the workers. At one time he appeared before the Interstate Commerce Commission and denounced the farmers of the Northwest for protesting against their hardships. Mr. Pomerene, in a fit of rage against the complaints of the farmers, yelled at several of their spokesman, who appeared before the Commission: "You sinners up in the Northwest".

At this moment Mr. Pomerene in addition to being the government "prosecutor" in the oil steal, is also attorney for a railway company in Cleveland that is trying to secure money from the municipal government to the extent of about half a million dollars.

Roberts Just As Bad

In his appointment of the other so-called prosecutor, Mr. Coolidge pursued precisely the same policy—the policy of putting the case against despoilers of the country's resources in the hands of individuals who could be counted on doing everything in the behalf of the guilty and nothing for the country.

One of the advantages attached to Mr. Robert's nomination by Coolidge is his being a comparative nonentity. Mr. Roberts record of service to the corporate interests is not well-known amongst the masses and therefore the Senate safely approved him as a prosecutor without raising a storm of protest.

But Mr. Roberts has very positively shown himself to be an agent of the big railway and oil interests. On February 16th, 1923, this Philadelphia lawyer addressed the Trust Company Division of the American Bankers' Association and denounced the LaFollette investigation of the oil industry. We reproduce in part Mr. Robert's speech before this body of financial wizards, as reported by the New York Times of February 16th, 1923, to establish the character of this newly anointed savior of our oil reserves:

"Defends High Pay Oil Officials—Lawyer Says Senate Inquiry Is Propaganda For Nationalization of Industry—Cites Value of Service—Consumers The Beneficiaries Thru Increased Production, Speaker Asserts at Trust Company's Dinner."

The investigation of the Senate sub-committee into the oil industry which disclosed that A. C. Bedford, chairman, and Walter C. Teagle, president of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, received salaries of $125,000 a year each and that six other officials received $100,000 was attacked as "propaganda" for the nationalization of industry by Owen J. Roberts, Philadelphia lawyer, last night at the twelfth annual dinner of the trust companies of the United States at the Waldorf-Astoria. The dinner was given by the trust company division of the American Bankers' Association."

Robert's Interests.

"The members of the trust company organization cheered when the lawyer said that the Standard Oil officials earned every dollar of the big salaries paid them because it was their business to increase production, which meant price reduction to the consumer."

"He attacked the government for the condition in which the railroads were left at the end of government operation, and assailed government generally for absorbing too much control over everything."

"Everywhere you turn judicial and semi-judicial administrative commissioners investigating bodies, inspectors of every known variety are found. The result is that the business man in America today feels that he is doing business with a minion of government looking over his shoulder with an upraised arm and a threatening scowl."

Obviously Mr. Roberts will concern himself much more with the safety of the salaries and the interests of the oil presidents than with the restoration of the stolen Teapot Dome area. As an opponent of government "interference" in business, as a disciple of the doctrine that the government ought to aid and abet the capitalist leaders in their exploitation of the natural resources of the country for their own private profits, Mr. Roberts can be counted on doing his level best to save Fall, Daugherty, Doheny and Sinclair from the penitentiary. Of course, as a lawyer for huge Pennsylvania corporations, Mr. Roberts will hide behind the most abstruse technicalities of the law and thus attempt to give an appearance of acting within the provisions of the constitution.

Coolidge Guards Oil Thieves

Every step that Mr. Coolidge has taken in the present oil investigation has been a step in the direction of securing maximum protection to every individual that is in any way at all connected with the Teapot leases. Mr. Coolidge presided over the Senate when LaFollette introduced his first resolution for an investigation of the Sinclair deals. Mr. Coolidge participated in Cabinet sessions while Fall, Denby and Daugherty were perpetrating this great steal. Mr. Coolidge was in communication with McLean during the investigation.

After the Teapot explosion, Mr. Coolidge picked arch reactionaries, experienced corporation lawyers who had been serving the biggest capitalist interests for years as the champions of the government in what we are asked to believe is to be a genuine effort to restore the stolen wealth to the country.

Mr. Coolidge is acting in his true role as the chief executive of a government whose dominant objective is the perpetuation of the conditions making for Teapot leases, making for the loss of all our natural resources. Mr. Coolidge, the friend of McLean, Mr. Coolidge, the president whose private detectives, ushers and telegraphers have been at the disposal of those most guilty in the entire affair, is today the man in whom the capitalist class has put its faith and hope of leading them out of the troublesome mess in which they find themselves at this moment.

The Revolutionary Significance of Teapot Dome

Daugherty investigation committee are becoming ever more, as the capitalist dress dubs them, the "Cheka" and the "Revolutionary Tribunal" of the Third Party movement.

Importance of Teapot Dome.

Of course, it would be a great exaggeration of the political significance of the Teapot Dome scandal to claim that all this was caused by the Teapot Dome scandal. The Teapot Dome scandal plays a big role in sharpening all conflicts of the various political groups and classes. But we should not forget that only the unheard of sharpening of the class struggle in the last years has made the Teapot Dome scandal so significant. Teapot Dome has not produced the dissatisfaction of the worker and farmer masses, but on the contrary, it is the deep dissatisfaction of the masses which makes them so receptive to the lessons of the Teapot Dome.

In the 1920 November elections the Republican Party, the party of Wall Street and the steel trust was victorious by a seven million majority. The non-capitalist classes who at that time were dissatisfied with the Democratic Party on account of the war, still had complete confidence in the Republican Party at that time. In the 1922 November elections this Republican majority disappears. The Republicans were woefully beaten, but it was not the Democrats who were the victors. A new force appears and constitutes the "balance of power"—the "progressive-radical" bloc in Congress, composed of insurgent Republicans, Democrats and Farmer-Laborites. It is not Teapot Dome but much deeper factors of economic and political life which have caused the sharpening of the class struggle. The growing power of the monopoly of the trusts, the world war, the unheard of centralization of federal government, the deep-going economic crisis of 1921-22, the intervention of the government in the mass struggle of the million workers in the summer of 1922, the bankruptcy of millions of farmers, the victory of the British Labor Party, the hopeless European economic situation—all these factors have brought about the disintegration of the two-party system, splitting away of the non-capitalist masses from the political leadership of big capital and the beginning of class-consciousness in the industrial workers and exploited farmers.

Class Conflicts Sharpened.

Teapot Dome has not called forth the class struggle, but has simply sharpened it because it made it more conscious because it has elevated it from confinement to local and regional issues, because it helped to make it nation-wide, because it focused it against the government.

We should not exaggerate the significance of Teapot Dome; but we must see clearly its tremendous revolutionary significance.

Teapot Dome has strengthened to a hitherto unheard of degree the disillusionment of our masses with our governmental system.

Teapot Dome has enlightened millions on the capitalist essence of our democracy.

Teapot Dome has drawn into political life millions of workers and farmers who until now have kept at a distance.

Teapot Dome gave a tremendous impetus to the Farmer-Labor Party movement as well as to the Third Party movement.

Communist Mass Party.

Teapot Dome has for the first time made it possible for the slogan of the Workers Party of a workers' and farmers' government to become a real demand not only of the vanguard of the revolution, but of the great laboring masses of factories and farms.

And finally, in view of the big structural changes of our society, and the present economic depression and approaching economic crisis, Teapot Dome justifies Zinoviev's well-founded revolutionary optimism about the prospects for a Communist mass party in the United States in the near future.

Senator Reed--an Oil Attorney

UNITED STATES Senator James A. Reed of Missouri who has been delivering speeches from coast to coast against the connections several of his colleagues have had with oil interests, has himself served in the capacity of attorney for an oil corporation.

Mr. Reed has been especially vehement in his denunciation of McAdoo as an opponent in the Democratic presidential contest because of the latter's relations to Doheny.

This fierce castigator of the "oil crowd" served as counsel for the Universal Oil Co. in the summer of 1923. The case involved a law suit brought against the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana. The suit was in the Federal Court at Kansas City and later transferred to Santa Maria, California.

We wonder whether Senator Reed would like to have the workers choose between putting Doheny's counsel or the Universal Oil Co. counsel in the White House.

The workers know that the spokesman for Doheny, Sinclair, Universal and Standard Oil interests are their enemies. Mr. Reed can't bluff them any longer.

Teapot Dome and Democracy - By MAX BEDACHT

CALVIN COOLIDGE, president of the United States by virtue of a broken strike and by the grace of fate which benevolently removed a little obstacle between Coolidge and the presidency, declared the other day that the confidence of the American people in their government is too well established to be seriously shaken by Teapot Dome and similar political earthquakes.

"Sacred Principles of Democracy."

Our institutions, silent Cal and his accomplices say, are built upon the sacred principle of democracy. Some persons within that democracy may be bad. But "democracy" itself is irreproachable. And when Jumbo, the G. O. P. elephant, together with Longear, the democratic jackass, fall into an oil pool with a great plunge the splash soaked all the human element in "democracy"; but it did not reach the lofty height upon which thrones the pure goddess itself.

That is the theory of democracy.

But what has been its practice? Corruption has been the legitimate child of the union of democracy and capitalism. Corruption in the interest of one capitalist group against the other; corruption in the interest of one man; corruption in the interest of the whole capitalist class against the mass of the electorate; corruption high up; petty corruption. And if some one with a reputation of honesty was ever caught corrupted with a comparatively small sum the only thing the public ever questioned was whether "honest" so-and-so was for sale at such a low figure. Honesty, at best, indicated a higher price, which the interests were not willing to pay as long as they could get what they wanted at a lower figure.

The "Forty Thieves."

The "forty thieves" on the board of aldermen in New York, the "black horse brigade" in the assembly in Albany, or Collins P. Huntington, "convincing" congressmen in Washington, were outstanding manifestations of that corruption. But this form of corruption was a vulgar one. The "goddess of democracy" knew darn well that it could not forever uphold her reputation of virgin purity before the eyes of the people in the face of the birth of one child after the other, begotten in the secret wedlock between her and capitalism. So vulgar forms of corruption were, finally, but, to a degree even effectually, replaced by more subtle and refined methods This change was affected not so much by conscious and purposeful effort, but it was a result of the perfection of capitalist machinery itself.

In the vulgar period politics was a business by itself. The politician sold his ware, and as much of it as was desired, to those who paid. And capitalists or capitalist groups bought of the ware of the politician as much as was required by the immediate plans. The "people" by their votes would install the politician in business, and the latter would charge his customers what the traffic would bear. But in the age of concentration of capitalism politics has become part of the business of the capitalist groups or corporations. Oil, steel, coal, banking or railroading does no longer buy its legislators, it makes them. That is concentration. That is efficiency.

Oil On Top.

In the light of this development the surprising thing about the Teapot Dome scandal is not that it reveals the domination of oil in national politics. What surprises is that oil, in this case reverted to the crude and vulgar method of black satchels filled with bribe money, or a dairy farm filled with cows. This side of the whole scandal, therefore, is not the most interesting one. As a rule "democracy" does not indulge in its illicit pleasures in that crude and antiquated form. She has acquired some sort of virtuosity in posing as a chaste nun reveling in voluptuous orgies in a more refined and "respectable" form. And it is that form of corruption which must and will finally discredit democracy in the eyes of the masses, all self-assuring assertions of silent Cal and his accomplices notwithstanding. It is that form which proves corruption not merely to be an undesirable possibility under democracy but an integral and inseparable part of it.

Influential and all powerful committeemen on the capitalist parties represent oil, steel or banking. Their candidates for public office, from president of the United States to town constable, are christened in oil, steel or banking. The best the "people" can do is to select between oil, steel or banking. After the election the people will be "done" by oil, steel or banking. Before election the candidate represented oil, steel or banking as counsel in court. After election he will represent oil, steel or banking as a legislator or judge; and after an eventual appointment to a cabinet post he represents oil or steel or banking in the national government as a minister of state. Should he fall in his career over an irresistible offer of the vulgar variety of bribe and should he be caught at it then he will be prosecuted by some attorney general or special prosecutor who happens to represent oil, steel or banking at this particular time as some sort of public prosecutor. Oil, steel or banking makes the president. And if oil, steel or banking is caught at a steal, the president made by oil, steel or banking causes and supervises the prosecution of oil, steel or banking by counsel who, in turn, is also directly or indirectly connected with oil, steel or banking. The house of democracy that Jack built. Jack is always capitalism, sometimes steeped in oil, sometimes clad in steel, and sometimes animated by bank capital.

Daugherty—The Adjective.

That is democracy.

Here we have Harry M. Daugherty. His name will, in time, become a commonly used adjective in the English language denoting a combination of corruptness, lying and vileness. For the time being he is Attorney General of the United States, the highest officer of law in the country. He is accused of corruption. And his answer is Don't dare to touch me or I will reveal all the corruption I know of in the other departments of the government.

That is democracy.

The department of government, instructed to detect and prosecute crime in the name of the people, ferrets out corruption in government not to prosecute the criminals, but to buy with its silence immunity for its own crimes.

Yes, that is democracy. And if Teapot Dome and the like scandals would not kill the confidence of the masses in democracy then the cause of the masses would be hopeless.

But it is not hopeless. Teapot Dome tears from the "Goddess of democracy" the veil of sacredness with which public confidence has clothed her. It reveals her in her ugly nakedness as a dictatorship of capitalism, for capitalism, and by capitalism. Teapot Dome also supplies the frame of corruption for that picture of the "Goddess." Disgust will replace respect and confidence. And Silent Cal will prove as unreliable as a prophet as he has proven reliable as a strike-breaker.

Trotzky's Letter to Russian Communist Party Central

Note.—Today the DAILY WORKER begins publication of a letter writen by Leon Trotsky, Minister of War in the Soviet government and member of the Central Executive Committee of the Russian Communist Party. Our readers will see from reading the article on what a flimsy structure the capitalist press liars hang a revolt in the Communist ranks. We will publish Trotsky's letter in three installments. Next will come speeches by Stalin, Rykov and other leaders of the Russian revolution. Members of the Workers Party in particular should read this debate very carefully. Trotsky wrote to the enlarged session of the Central Committee of the Russian Communist Party as follows:

* * * *

TROTSKY'S LETTER.

Moscow, December 8, 1923.

DEAR COMRADES!

I had firmly hoped that I should be able to take part in the discussion on the inner situation and the new tasks of the Party, if not today, at least tomorrow. But my illness occurred, this time, at a most inconvenient moment and it has proved to be of a longer duration than the physicians had at first anticipated. I am, therefore, compelled to express my views by the present letter.

The resolution of the Political Bureau on the question of the Party structure is of exceptional significance. It shows that the Party has arrived at an important turning point in his historical development. Such turning points, as has been pointed out quite justly in many meetings, require prudence; but in addition to prudence, firmness and resoluteness are also required. A waiting attitude, an irresolution at such a juncture, would be the worst form of imprudence.

Over-Estimate Role of Apparatus.

Some comrades of a conservative disposition who show themselves inclined to over-estimate the role of the apparatus and to under-estimate the initiative of the Party, criticize the resolution of the Political Bureau. According to their statements, the Communist Central takes upon itself obligations which cannot be carried out, the resolution would only create illusions and negative results.

It is clear, that this kind of view is inspired by a thoroly bureaucratic mistrust of the Party. The new policy proclaimed by the resolution of the Central, denotes precisely, that the center of gravity, which during the old policy had been erroneously inclined towards the apparatus, is now, during the new policy, to be inclined towards the activity, the critical initiative and the self-government of the Party, the organized vanguard of the proletariat. The new policy does not all mean that the apparatus of the Party is instructed to decree, to create or to establish the regime of democracy within a certain term. Nay, this regime can be created by the Party itself. The task is briefly the following: The Party must subordinate to itself its own apparatus, without ceasing even for a moment, to be a centralized organization.

Two Phases of Party Structure.

In recent discussion and articles it was pointed out very frequently that the "pure," the "entire," the "ideal" democracy is unattainable, and that for us democracy in general is not an end in itself. This cannot be in any way disputed. But with the same right and with as much reason one can say, that pure or absolute centralism is unattainable and incompatible with the character of a mass party, and the centralism as well as the party apparatus are in no way ends in themselves. Democracy and Centralism are two faces of the Party structure. The task is to equilibrate them in a proper manner, i. e., in that manner which best corresponds with the situation. In the past period, this equilibrium did not exist. The center of gravity had been erroneously inclined towards the apparatus. The initiative of the Party had been reduced to a minimum. This involved methods and habits in the leadership which are diametrically opposed to the spirit of the revolutionary Party of the proletariat. The excessive centralization of the apparatus, at the expense of the initiative of the Party, has created within the Party the feeling of its insufficiency. On the extreme wings it has assumed an extraordinary morbid form, right up to the formation of illegal groupments under the leadership of elements undoubtedly hostile to Communism. At the same time, within the Party, the critical attitude towards the mechanical methods adopted for the solution of questions, has increased. The perception, or at least the sentiment, that the Party bureaucratism threatens to lead the Party into an impasse, has become almost general. The resolution on the new policy is the first official and extremely important form of expression of this turn within the Party. It will be carried out to the extent to which the Party, i. e., its four hundred thousand members, will be ready and able to do.

Our Rights.

In a number of articles, it is obstinately sought to prove, that the fundamental means for reviving the Party, consists in raising the cultural level of its rank and file, whereupon the rest, i. e., the workers' democracy, would grow of itself. It cannot be denied that we must raise the intellectual and cultural level of the Party with a view to the tasks which are confronting it; but precisely for this reason, this purely pedagogical method is insufficient and, consequently, false; and if we insist upon it, we cannot but provoke an aggravation of the crisis. The Party cannot otherwise raise its level as a Party than by completely carrying out its fundamental tasks by means of the collective leadership of the working class—and with the initiative of all Party members—and of the proletarian state. We must deal with this question not with a pedagogic, but with a political method. The application of Party democracy must not be rendered dependent upon the degree of "schooling" of the Party members for Party democracy. Our Party is a Party. We have the right to be very strict towards everybody who wants to enter our Party and to remain in it, but once anybody has become a member, it is by this fact alone that he takes an active part in the entire Party work.

It is precisely by killing initiative that bureaucratism hampers the raising of the general level of the Party. ~~And in this~~ consists its main fault. Since the Party apparatus is unavoidably constituted out of the most experienced and proved comrades, the worst consequences of the bureaucratism of the apparatus will be its influence on the ideological-political formation of the young generation of the Party. It is precisely owing to this circumstance that the youth—the surest barometer of the Party—reacts against the Party bureaucratism in the most energetic manner.

Old Guard.

It would be a mistake, however, to believe that the excess of mechanical solutions of Party questions should remain without influence on the old generation which embodies the political experience and the revolutionary traditions of the Party. Nay, the danger is also very great in this sphere. It is not necessary to speak of the immense authority of the older generation of our Party, not only within Russia, but also in the International: It is known and recognized everywhere. But it would be a crude error to estimate this authority as sufficient in itself. It is only by continual mutual influence of the younger and the older generation within the frame of Party democracy, that the old guard can be maintained as a revolutionary factor. Otherwise, the the old ones would be easily become ossified and, without realizing it, become the most perfect expression of the bureaucratism of the apparatus.

OUT WITH DAUGHERTY!

Saint Patrick's day was celebrated in Britain as well as in the United States. Ramsay MacDonald proposed a toast to the Irish Free State. Field Marshall French, the Shiek of Ypres, superintended the distribution of shamrock to the Irish guards. Irish soldiers are given the privilege of wearing shamrock with their uniforms on the 17th of March only. When it falls on Friday, the Italian pope allows all Irish Catholics to eat meat in honor of the saint. Eating meat on Friday is a mortal sin—to the pope. They get the same privilege when an English protestant king dies. Great government; magnanimous religion.

BURNS MUST GO!

Revolutionary Significance of Teapot Dome By JOHN PEPPER

THE Teapot Dome affair is not an ordinary scandal—it is a political factor of the first magnitude

The Teapot Dome scandal is not a case of ordinary corruption—it is a revolutionary factor of paramount importance.

Since the world war we have not witnessed anything so big taking place as the Teapot Dome scandal. Since the world war not a single political event has so intensively occupied and so deeply shaken up the American nation as the Teapot Dome scandal. William Randolph Hearst, who is unquestionably one of the greatest experts in judging the psychology of the American masses, wrote with justification: "I am acquainted in a way with the public sentiment in all parts of the country in which I have papers, and I have never known the public to be as much aroused over anything except a war as it is at present aroused over these oil scandals. There never has been such intense feeling and unanimity of feeling."

America's Democratic Illusions.

Not a single people in the world had so great a faith in its government and was so proud of its governmental system as the American people. Democratic illusions of the masses are everywhere the greatest obstacle in the way of the proletarian revolution. But they prove to be insurmountable obstacles to the revolutionizing of the minds of the workers in the United States, the "classical" country of democracy, which went forth in the crusade of the world war, to "make the world safe for democracy".

The cruel searchlight of Teapot Dome has now suddenly lit up the real essance of our democracy. The masses see now that the sacred shrine of American democracy is in reality the safety-vault of big capital.

It was the pride of the mass of American citizens that our country is a republic and its head the president elected by the people. Teapot Dome drilled into the minds of the dismayed and disillusioned masses that we do indeed have an elected president, but that at the same time he has as his masters the various monarchs of finance capital, the kings of oil, the sovereigns of Wall street, the potentates of the steel trust, the whole dynasty of the Invisible Empire of finance capital. The average American citizen sees today with panic and dismay that the whole of American democracy consists of this, that we have, not only one Kaiser like imperialist Germany had, but a whole gallery of kings, czars, kaisers and emperors. The two-party system of our political life was always the most important guarantee of the undisturbed rule of the capitalist class. If the masses became dissatisfied with the Republican Party they turned to the Democratic Party. When the masses were aroused against the Democrats, they flocked to the Republicans. Teapot Dome has now put a sudden end to this nice see-saw game of American political life. Teapot Dome has compromised pitilessly the Republican and Democratic Parties at once. It has shown the great masses the essence of both parties. It has exposed both old capitalist parties as being in equal measure the parties of capitalism.

The Power of the Ballot.

The American masses had the greatest confidence in the magic power of the ballot. Teapot Dome showed that regardless of whether the masses vote Republican or Democrat, politics remain the same politics, dominated by the capitalist trust magnates and banking powers.

Teapot Dome has shown the average citizens that all administrations are equally in the service of big capital. Almost the whole cabinet of Wilson was and is hired as employes of the powerful oil magnate Doheny; and if one member of Wilson's cabinet was not employed by Doheny it was because he was in the service of a competitor, the Standard Oil. The entire Harding administration has showed itself to have been bought by the oil interests. And it is simply an accident that only oil corruption has been uncovered. Another investigation would prove that it was no less connected with the steel interests and with Wall Street. And the Teapot Dome has shown that the Coolidge administration is even worse than the Wilson or Harding administration. Against Wilson and Harding no personal proofs have been found so far; but President Coolidge is personally involved in the oil stench. The country does not know today what will be the next step of our president tomorrow, a message or a confession. Even the most narrow minded average American citizen sees with astonishment that all professional persecutors of the working class, all Red baiters are at the same time in the pay of finance capital. Palmer, the attorney general of the Wilson administration, the infamous initiator of wholesale deportation of Communists in 1920, is working today on the payroll of McLean, the friend of Harding and Coolidge and the proven liar of the oil investigation. And Attorney General Daugherty, the notorious instigator of the criminal injunction against the railroad strike and the criminal director of the Bridgeman, Michigan, raid against the Communist stands today before the country as a friend of criminals, as accomplice in every corruption, as a criminal himself.

The Governmental "Brass Check."

History works with surprising justice and with considerable irony. It compromised the Democratic Wilson administration and the Republican Harding-Coolidge administration. But that is not enough. It unmasked not only the past and present administrations, but the future administration too. The two most likely candidates for the presidency, McAdoo, the Democrat and Coolidge, the Republican are today the targets of suspicion and mistrust. Teapot Dome proved that McAdoo, to the "progressive" Democrat, asked and obtained money not only from Doheny the oil man, but from big steel interests and from other big capitalist forces. McAdoo sold his "political influence" as a streetwalker sells her virtue to every comer indiscriminately, with the only difference that he charged enormously high prices.

The country thought at first that the bribing of Secretary of the Interior Fall, was only a case of individual corruption. But then the individual cases multiplied more and more, and with ever greater rapidity. With bitter indignation the masses see that every administration of the country in the last decade is involved in the corruption, that every outstanding figure of the United States government is part of the financial and political prostitution. The country begins to see that what Teapot Dome exposes is no longer a case of individual corruption of certain kept men, but it is a system, it is a case of a kept government. The country is beginning to see, and it is our most important task to drill that into the minds of the masses, that the Teapot Dome of the oil industry is but a sample of a hundred other Teapot Domes in other industries. The country begins to see that the individual bribing of corrupt individuals in administrations and Congress is only a dramatized symptom of the much more important and deeper system: that the whole administration, the whole congress, whether it is individually bribed or not is the kept servant of big capital. The country is beginning to realize that individual corruption is only the by-product of the system which is the rule of big capital in government.

Capitalists Rule Both Parties.

Teapot Dome has shown that capital rules both capitalist parties and their administrations, not only in domestic politics, but also in foreign politics. Teapot Dome has shown that American oil capital wants to conquer Mexico at all cost. It has proved that oil capital appointed Secretary of the Interior Fall because he was so "strong" for changing the Mexican constitution which was an obstacle in the way of the greed of American capitalists. Teapot Dome proved that oil capital was behind American intervention of 1916 in Mexico, behind the fight against the recognition of the Obregon government as well as behind the recent De la Huerta counter-revolution. Teapot Dome hammered into the minds of the masses that "American interests" are always capitalist interests.

The cruel Teapot Dome scandal dealt a big blow to our official American patriotism too. The same presidents and cabinet members and admirals of the navy who fill the land with their agitation for militarism and navalism, who always demand more hundreds of millions of dollars for their military purposes have at the same time unscrupulously betrayed the interests of national defense and handed over the oil reserves of the navy to private capitalists. Teapot Dome has revealed the close, delicate connections existing between war, patriotism and corruption. The war grafts, the plundering of the Veterans' Bureau and Teapot Dome together have shown that the capitalists make war and organize big armies and navies when the patriotic interests of profit demand it. But they are willing to cripple the army and navy if that will bring them profit.

The Masses Are Awaking.

Teapot Dome has raised the question of public ownership all along the front. The giving away of the oil fields of the nation has alarmed the masses who had tolerated without protest the great process of expropriation which made the whole country the possession of a handful of trust magnates.

Of course we Communists knew all that, before the Teapot Dome scandal happened. We have always said over and over again to the masses that that's the way it all is; but the masses themselves did not see all that and did believe it. The revolutionary significance of Teapot Dome is just this: that it has beaten into the minds of the masses this elementary Marxist-Leninist truth on the nature of capitalist government, on the personal identity of cabinet members and bankers, on the aggressive character of imperialism and the peculiarly mixed nature of capitalist profit-patriotism and profit-high treason. The Communist talk against government was "un-American". Today the American government itself is the best propagandist and agitator against itself. Teapot Dome conferred citizenship upon distrust in our holy democratic government. Teapot Dome has given an enormous impetus to the ideological process of unification of the masses of workers with the Communist vanguard.

The True Role of the States.

The masses are beginning to recognize the true nature of our government, and that has called forth an elementary force of the masses as against the government. Millions of workers and farmers who, until now have had a naive, almost inborn confidence in American democracy, have lost and are losing their faith. This newly born mistrust is not strong enough as yet and will not be strong enough in the near future to call forth a general disillusionment with democracy and turn the masses to the Soviet system. But it is strong enough to tear away the non-capitalist masses from the capitalist parties and to bring them into new parties. Teapot Dome has given a tremendous impetus to the crystallization of a Farmer-Labor Party as well as a Third Party. On June 17, a class Farmer-Labor Party will be organized and it is unquestionable that after the Republican and Democratic conventions a Third Party in some form or other will be organized. Under the pressure of the masses vacillating "leaders" like LaFollette are forced to act. LaFollette withdrew his candidacy from the Republican primaries. The oil investigation committee and the

The Four Years--1920 to 1924--Saw Oil Octopus Tightening Its Grip On American Nation

EDITOR'S NOTE:—In yesterday's DAILY WORKER we published Robert Minor's chronology for the sixty years of oil in the United States. This revealing history is concluded in the installment that appears today. The 60 years' drama of oil, from the time the first oil well was drilled in the United States. This revealing plans were made for raising a $10,000,000 campaign fund to put William Gibbs McAdoo over as the oil presidential candidate in 1920, is full of high lights. But this is surpassed by the "Four Years of Oil" that have followed since 1920. These four years are covered by Minor's concluding installment today, starting off with a review of American meddling in Mexico. The oily fingers of American oil capitalists were not content to strangle government at home, but they turned their attention abroad, as well, seeking Mexico as one of their victims. This chronology is not only worth reading, but worth preserving as a chapter in the decay of American capitalism. Here it is:

* * * *

By ROBERT MINOR.

(Concluded from Yesterday)

1920, April 10—The Mexican state of Sonora seceded from the United States of Mexico, and a revolt against Carranza began.

May—Adolfo de la Huerta drives Carranza from power.

President Carranza of Mexico, murdered by followers of Adolfo de la Huerta, who is backed by American oil men.

May 14—Wilson sends official request to the Senate for authority to send U. S. warships and marines to Batum to protect American lives and property at "Batum and along the line of the railroad leading to Baku" (the oil pipe-line and railway used by the British oil companies), and reciting "Christian sympathies" for Armenians.

Russian red armies are making headway toward regaining Russian oil territory in region of Batum and Baku.

Armenian Mandate.

May 24—Wilson requests Congress to give him as President, the power to take a mandate over Armenia, which will require keeping troops in Asia on the frontier between Soviet Russia and the British oil concessions.

May 25—British Ambassador Geddes in speech in New York, denies that the British have oil monopoly.

May 31—Subcommittee of Committee on Foreign Affairs of the U. S. Senate, under chairmanship of Senator Fall, recommends that a treaty be made with Mexico provided that:

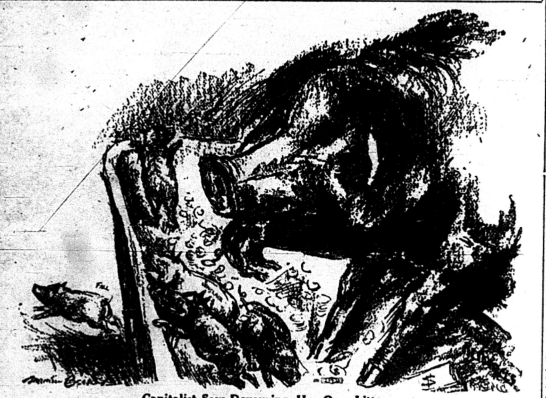
". . . We send a police force consisting of the naval and military forces of our government into the republic of Mexico to open and maintain open every line of communication between the City of Mexico and every seaport and border port in Mexico," unless the Mexican government will abandon Article 27 of the Mexican constitution as far as it applies to concessions of American citizens of oil lands, mining properties, etc., and unless the Mexican government pays to American capitalists $505,002,434 as damages for interference with oil properties, mining, railroad, factory, bank and other properties. Fall's committee recommends further that, if Mexico does this, the army and navy shall not be sent, but a treaty and "generous loans" be made to Mexico for the payment of the Mexican public debt (to American bankers, largely) and to rehabilitate the railroads.

The Fall Wail.

The Fall committee further complains that it has received information of Japanese colonies on land where "traces of oil are apparent," and that "Mexico has granted a concession to a Japanese concern known as the Matsumato Trading Co. of Japan, for the exploitation of all oil land on either side of the Tamesi river," and that "two representatives of this company have been in the region for some time inspecting the territory between Tampico and Tuxpam" (near Doheny's and Sinclair's and the Standard Oil Co.'s works).

The other members of the subcommittee, Senators Brandegee of Connecticut and Smith of Arizona, concurred with Fall.

THE HOG PEN



Capitalist Sow Devouring Her Own Litter.

June 1, 1920—Federal Trade Commission reports that increase in prices of oil, gasoline and petroleum are due more to "varying conditions of supply and demand" than to "any combination in restraint of trade," and that it seems "the part of prudence to encourage those engaged in the oil industry in this country to develop production in such foreign countries, which have oil resources, as are most available for furnishing supplies of oil and that such enterprises should be given all proper diplomatic support in obtaining and operating oil producing property."

Republican Platform Oiled.

June 2, 1920—Tentative draft of republican national platform completed by addition of plank on Mexico, written by Senator Fall, revised in minor respects by Senators Watson, Lodge and several others.

Columbian Supreme Court declares the law nationalizing Columbian petroleum industry unconstitutional.

The senate foreign relations committee's subcommittee under chairmanship of Senator Fall, makes a report which paves the way for ratification of the Columbian treaty and the payment of $25,000,000 out of the U. S. Treasury to Columbia, the measure having been amended by Senator Fall with an amendment regarding oil rights written by Senator Fall. Rumors that $5,000,000 of the Columbian money goes into graft for an American ring.

June 1, 1920—Tremendous flood of propaganda about "terrible conditions in Mexico" begins in American newspapers, as time for national conventions approaches.

June 5, 1920—Sir Phillip Gibbs, English propagandist, cables the New York Times that the Christian Armenians (along the petroleum pipelines in Armenia) are crying for help from England and America.

June 8—Republican national convention opens. Very prominent and popular is Jake Hamon, new oil millionaire from Oklahoma, recently elected national committeeman.

Senator Lodge in keynote speech demands "a firm hand for Mexico." "We must watch and wait no longer."

E. L. Doheny is present, tho a democrat. Gives an interview, saying: "This country is the oil nation."

Wood leads in balloting, Lowden is second, Johnson, third. Most of delegates thinking Harding candidacy is joke. Johnson offered vice-presidential nomination by bosses; refuses.

Jake Hamon tries to arrange with any one of several candidates that he shall name the secretary of the interior in consideration for a block of votes.

Wall Streets O. K.

Night of June 11—All-night conferences between leading financial backers, senators and candidates. Jake Hamon very much in evidence. In the early morning the Old Guard leaders settle that it shall be Harding and Coolidge.

June 12—Machine causes adjournment at 2 p. m.

June 12—(About 3 P. M. during recess)—John T. King, former campaign manager for Wood, let it be known that Boise Penrose had telephoned from Philadelphia giving the word for the nomination of Harding. A conference of leaders is held; Harry Daugherty and Jake Hamon are present. Senator Borah emerged from the conference giving the first definite word that "Harding will be put over."

4 p. m. Lowden and Wood leaders and Jake Hamon throw their delegations to Harding.

June 12 (Evening)—Harding nominated.

—Coolidge nominated.

Atlee Pomerene estimates expenditures in republican primaries:

Wood (approximately)	$1,500.000
Lowden	414,159
Johnson	197,230
Hoover	168,057
Harding	113,109
Colidge	68,375

June 14, 1920—Josephus Daniels, secretary of the navy, publishes a letter in which he recommends that the U. S. government shall lease the Osage oil lands of Oklahoma to private oil companies.

Doheny at Democratic Convention.

At the democratic convention, Edward L. Doheny is named on resolutions committee and writes into platform "the oil plank."

Sept.—Obregon elected president of Mexico. (Inauguarated Dec. 1, 1920.)

Isn't It A Bargain?

November 1920—Harding and Coolidge elected.

It is said that the republicans acknowledged receiving $4,000,000 in campaign contributions and spending $5,300,000, the deficit of $1,300,000 being mysteriously made up after the election of Harding and Coolidge—during the time that Sinclair was in process of getting the $400,000,000 steal of Teapot Dome and Doheny and Standard Oil, the California Oil Reserves. It is certain that Harry Sinclair put up a lot of money to elect Harding and Coolidge. It was long ago published that he gave $25,000.

Nov. 6—President-elect Harding goes on "vacation" to Point Isabel, Texas, a town of 400 inhabitants, five miles from the Mexican border; with him goes a party including Jake Hamon, E. B. McLean and Harry Daugherty.

At Point Isabel the Harding party is met by Elias L. Torres, who represents the Mexican secretary for foreign affairs.

Nov. 20—President-elect Obregon denies having instructed Torres to invite Harding to visit Mexico.

Harding Administration Begins.

1921, Mar. 4—President Harding supplanting Wilson administration, with which McAdoo has influence, Doheny relieves McAdoo of Washington duties but keeps him on a $25,000 salary in Southern California.

Secretary of the Interior Franklin K. Lane on leaving President Wilson's cabinet, goes into the employ of Doheny.

Theodore Roosevelt (Jr.), having resigned as a director of Sinclair Oil & Refining Co. and of White Motor Co., becomes assistant secretary of the navy.

Jess Smith begins a brisk business as Daugherty's "bumper," receiving bribe-money, selling federal appointments, arranging pardons for cash and handling secret stock speculations in partnership with Daugherty. Shortly after March 4, Roxie Stinson, Jess Smith's ex-wife, received from Jess the first batch of twenty-five shares of White Motors stock, and twenty-two shares of Pure Oil stock "to put on the market quickly and quietly," and from then on repeatedly she acted as agent for quick and secret disposal of stock which he and Daugherty "didn't pay anything for."

He Knows A Cushy Job!

Jess is offered appointment as comptroller of the treasury by President Harding, but declines and remains with Daugherty. With Daugherty he occupies, rent free, a house owned by E. B. McLean. Later Daugherty and Jess rent an apartment together.

April—Edward B. McLean is appointed secret agent of the department of justice, receiving a secret-service code book.

Daugherty's old friend Felder, acts as his "fixer" of cases and of pardons.

Shortly after March 4, Mr. Sutro, attorney for the Standard Oil Co., called on Daugherty, and Daugherty dropped the case against Standard Oil on the California oil leases.

Teddy—"The Office Boy."

President Harding issues executive order transferring the naval oil reserves from the navy department to the department of the interior, to the control of Albert B. Fall.

Theodore Roosevelt (who resigned a few weeks before as vice-president of the Sinclair Oil Co.) carries the executive order to President Harding to get it signed.

Secretary Fall is about to give Teapot Dome oil reserve lease to Harry Sinclair; John C. Shaffer, owner of Chicago, Indianapolis and Denver newspapers, gets information of impending deal and threatens exposure. Fall persuades Sinclair to promise Shaffer a share of the profits; Shaffer silences his newspapers.

$80,000 worth of Sinclair Oil stock sold and the money given by Sinclair's confidential man to William Zevely, who was then negotiating with Fall for the lease of Teapot Dome. Then $25,000 more, in Liberty bonds given to Zevely. $68,000 additional, in checks given to Secretary Fall. Fall paid his long overdue taxes; bought a ranch for $91,500; paid $33,000 for some other land; bought $3,000 worth of German live stock and paid $40,000 for a pumping plant, power plant and electric plant.

The Shoe Pinches.

Rear Admiral Griffin protested against the leasing of the navy oil lands.

Commander H. A. Stuart, in charge of the Naval Reserves of the Navy department, and Commander Shafroth of the U. S. navy, protested to Secretary Denby against the granting of certain leases to a large oil company.

April 5—Commander Stuart and Commander Shafroth are sent away from Washington by Secretary Denby at the request of Mr. Fall.

All officers of the navy who protest against the oil land leases ordered by Secretary of the Navy Denby to service at sea or for duty in foreign countries.

Harry Sinclair bought fastest race-horse, named him "Zev" (after Sinclair's lawyer, Zevely), and took Harry Daugherty and other cabinet members to races; bet money for them and gave them the winnings.

Darden "Didn't Measure Up."

Daugherty and Smith made a "deal" with Colonel James G. Darden concerning government oil leases, each of them giving Darden $2,400.

Daugherty and Smith dropped Col. Darden, Smith telling Roxie Stinson that "Darden did not measure up."

June 24—President Harding wrote to Fall saying that unless Colonel James G. Darden of the Mutual Oil Co., got off of Teapot Dome, steps would be taken to drive his company off the property.

July 26—Sec. Fall wrote Pres. Harding that it had become necessary "to take immediate steps to eject the Mutual Oil Co." and suggested that the Navy Department send Marines to do it.

"Devil Dogs" Eject Darden.

July 29—Theodore Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, issued the order to Major General Lejeune to send the Marines to Teapot Dome to drive Colonel Darden's oil company off the reserve.

The United States Marines—The First To Fight—drove Col. Darden and Mutual Oil Co. off the Teapot Dome reserve.

August—The British oil interests (Cowdray) in Mexico quit the American Association of oil companies' boycott against the Mexican government and declared their intention to abide by the laws of Mexico and to pay their taxes. Doheny, Sinclair, Vandyke, Beatty, and Teagle rush to Mexico to try to arrange so that the British oil companies' obedience to the Mexican law will not leave them in a disadvantageous position.

Oct. 28—Gaston B. Means, former general superintendent of William J. Burns detective agency, enters the employment of the U. S. department of justice under William J. Burns, Harry M. Daugherty and, unofficially, Jess Smith, to whom he made his reports.

Nov.—Doheny "lent" $100,000 to A. B. Fall, then secretary of the interior in President Harding's cabinet, "to ease his mind." A few weeks later, negotiations for lease of Naval Oil Reserve No. 1 to Doheny were under way.

Nov.—Persian government negotiates with Standard Oil Co. for $10,000,000 loan, offering concession on 90,000,000 acres of oil land to exploit. Anglo-Persian Oil Co., backed by British government, interfered, claiming prior rights. Standard Oil surrenders to Anglo-Persian Oil Co. and agrees to 50-50 basis; whereupon Persian government rejected offer.

Robison's "Oily" Promotion.

1922, About February 1—Admiral Robison visits the home of Doheny's son in New York, where he confers with E. L. Doheny.

February, 1922—Gaston B. Means carries a hundred one-thousand dollar bills to Jesse Smith, which was paid by the Japanese firm of Mitsui & Co. (Ltd.) which represents the Japanese government as financial agent. Mitsui & Co. were gathering military secrets, especially on aeroplane construction, for the Japanese government.

Immediately thereafter the department dropped a case against the Mitsui Co. for about $2,500,000, owed to the U. S. government.

Feb. 9—Gaston B. Means is suspended from the department of justice, for the reason, as Daugherty later told him, that he was "too active in connection with investigations concerning oil in Mexico," Daugherty adding that a cabinet member had requested his discharge.

March 1—Treaty with Columbia ratified, granting Panama $25,000,000; rumors of $5,000,000 of the money going to an American graft ring.

April 7—Teapot Dome lease executed, giving naval oil reserves to Harry F. Sinclair.

April 12 (Approx.)—Secretary of the Navy Denby signed Teapot Dome lease.

It Took Two Years!

April 14—Wall Street Journal carries notice that Teapot Dome lease has been made.

April 25—Secretary of the Navy Denby, and Secretary Fall of the interior department, make preliminary lease with Doheny for California naval oil reserves.

May—H. Foster Bain, official of department of interior, writes Fall his advice that Daugherty should give a legal opinion covering the Teapot concession even tho he realized the objections to asking such an opinion. "None of us," he wrote, "want Mr. Doheny to get into trouble and I take it we will want to do anything we can to make it easy for him."

May 28—Gaston B. Means is reinstated in the detective service of the department of justice, with back pay for time suspended.

April—Senator La Follette having introduced a resolution for the investigation of the Teapot Dome oil lease, Gaston B. Means says he was instructed by Jess Smith and Underwood to investigate La Follette and "get something on him (LaFollette)" and that he caused La Follette's office to be ransacked.

June 16—Mexican secretary of finance, Adolfo de la Huerta, signs a settlement of Mexican debt in New York with International Committee of Bankers, for an amount totaling $700,000,000 in gold.

July—Standard Oil Co. makes new offer to Persian government for concession on 90,000,000 acres of oil land, declaring it is now in a position to keep the British out and take all to itself. Meanwhile a representative of Sinclair Consolidated Oil Co. arrives in Persia, declares Standard Oil is pro-British and that Sinclair alone can handle their concessions independently. Sinclair offers Persian government 16 per cent net profits; Standard offers 10 per cent gross profits. Persian government holds out for minimum of 20 per cent.

The Bridgman Raid.

August 22—Daugherty has department of justice secret service operatives lead a raid on the annual political convention of the Communist Party.

About the same time Daugherty has same set of secret service operatives swear out "17,000 affidavits of crime" alleged to have been committed by railroad shop strikers. Famous anti-strike railroad injunction issued.

In the summer of 1922, Gaston B. Means claims, he was employed by President Harding to spy upon Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon, receiving his pay thru Jess Smith and Underwood.

Sept., 1922—Obregon declares Article 27 of Mexican constitution not to be applied retroactively as against American oil operators (this paves the way to recognition).

Dec. 11—Supplementary contract with Doheny signed by Secretary of the Navy Denby and by E. F. Finney acting for Secretary Fall. This supplementary contract made possible Doheny's profit estimated by him at $100,000,000.

Edward L. Doheny lends the Obregon government of Mexico $5,000,000.

May 11—Jess Smith makes his will leaving his estate of $250,000 to Harry Daugherty, Mal Daugherty, Roxie Stinson, E. B. McLean, Mrs. F. B. McLean and several others.

Why Suicide?

Jess Smith's will shows he has $250,000 estate, an increase of $100,000 above what he had before Harding's election. Leaves $250,000 (approximately) to Harry Daugherty, Mal Daugherty, Roxie Stinson and two others. Mal Daugherty persuades Roxie that the will is not legal because it is not witnessed. Mal Daugherty refuses to give up to Roxie Stinson $11,400 which had been given to her by Jess Smith. Roxie Stinson threatens that "this will probably lead to many things which I don't want it to lead to."

The Teapot Dome investigation begins. The committee of the senate which does the investigating, has among its members, Senator Smoot, a professional protector of such interests, and the chairman is Senator Lenroot, a most devoted server of Doheny. Senator Walsh, who takes the role of prosecutor, is a close friend of Doheny's family.

Dec. 3—A. B. Fall wires from Three Rivers, New Mex., to Senator Smoot at Washington:

"Having copies court record made. Also making other preparation and expect to leave here tomorrow afternoon for Washington, arriving Friday. If reach there Friday morning will be prepared to meet committee Friday afternoon."—A. B. Fall.

Dec. 16—Albert B. Fall writes private letter to Senator Lenroot, chairman of Senate committee, which discloses the fact that Senator Smoot had been sneaking information to Fall, which information had been privately obtained from a witness in New Mexico.

Dec. 18—"Hanson" wires from San Antonio, Tex., to Albert B. Fall, at Washington:

"Our friend here sent important code message Department today. See it if possible. Writing.—Hanson."

Dec. 20—Harry Sinclair's representative in Persia closes agreement with Persian government for concession of 90,000,000 acres of oil land.

Is It the Principal's Dictum?

Dec. 22—McLean gets this from Coolidge's quarters:

"The White House, Dec. 22, 1923, 1:35 P. M., Washington, D. C.

E. B. McLean, Palm Beach, Fla.

The Secretary leaves here tonight 9:40. H. E. McKenna."

Dec. 22—Major (McLeans's employee) telegraphs to McLean at Palm Beach . . . "Mr. Homer (the lawyer) said he believed that you should have leased wire installed. . . And also give easy and quick access to the White House . . . Mr. Slemp and Mr. Whaley leave tonight, 9:40 o'clock, for Palm Beach. Saw party at Wardman Park Hotel (Albert B. Fall) . . . Major."

Dec. 22—C. Bascom Slemp, secretary to President Coolidge takes flying visit to Palm Beach, spends much time in E. B. McLean's house with McLean and Fall; declares he went only for his health, carried no message and asked no question about oil.

Dec. 23—Harry Sinclair wires from New York to lawyer Zevely:

"Reserve in your name Wardman Park Hotel ten rooms with two parlors. Arriving 6:20 P. M.—H. F. Sinclair."

Dec. 24—Major wires McLean: "Talked with Smithers (chief telegrapher at White House) at White House, and gave Fraser your message. Major."

Dec. 25—Albert B. Fall wires to McLean at Palm Beach: "Expect to be here, but in event of departure will wire in time to seet secretary at convenient point. I am much better and Mrs. Fall joins me in Christmas greetings. With love for Evelyn and yourself and all yours."

Dec. 25—Major again wires to McLean referring to Zevely as "Palmer's law partner" (Zevely is Sinclair's attorney for whom he named the famous race-horse, "Zev"). Wire says "I have an appointment with the man at Wardman Park Hotel (Fall) immediately following his testimony Thursday . . ."

Palmer Steps In.

A. Mitchell Palmer tried to persuade investigators not to call McLean to witness stand.

Senator Lenroot, chairman of the committee and Senator Smoot, member of Senate committee pay a secret visit to Albert B. Fall at his residence to help Fall concoct a defense against the committee.

When afterward exposed, each tells a different story of what was said by Fall.

Dec. 26—George B. Fraser wires McLean: "Continental Trust about $13,900."

Dec. 26—Major to McLean (Marked "rush"): "Palmer and his associate, named Zevely, told me tonight that under no circumstances for you to send a message to the chairman of the committee. They both said to assure you that your interests would be fully taken care of, and at this time the chances of you being called were very slight. Both declared that after man at Wardman Park Hotel testified that if the committee showed any indication that you were to be summoned that they could take care of it. . . . He (Fall) is sick, and so is Palmer."

Dec. 26—Major to McLean: ". . . . Palmer's law partner says that he, meaning Palmer, would be pleased to look after what you requested."

Dec. 27—Major to McLean (marked "rush"): "Was at the Capitol this morning. Party at Wardman Park Hotel at this time is not going to testify. . . . Up to the time I left the hearing there appeared no hostility on the part of the committee regarding the reading of his report. . . . Palmer is ill in bed at his home. I am going to his residence at 4 o'clock this afternoon. Will advise you of what transpires. Sinclair, in a prepared statement, etc. . . ."

Palmer Represents Oil.

Dec. 27—E. B. McLean wires McAdoo: ". . . . I did not know at that time that Mitchell Palmer was going to represent Fall and Sinclair. Now that Fall has testified as to the loan I wish you would immediately get in touch over long distance telephone with Mitchell Palmer and find out if, in your opinion, I will be properly represented in case they should subpoena me to substantiate Fall's testimony. . . . EDWARD McLEAN."

Major to McLean: "Will deliver messages to McAdoo and Palmer in the morning, according to your instructions. Tell Mrs. McLean her message to Wheatley has been delivered."

Dec. 28—McLean's secretary Duckstein telegraphs to McLean:

"Wire here ready Saturday night, 29th, regarding operator. Smithers would like the job. John Brown thinks him satisfactory and advises against a stranger. Brown himself rather not handle it. He is trying to get away from telegraphy, but will if you say so. Please wire me on receipt definitely regarding operator. Will notify Homer when installed."

E. W. Smithers, chief telegrapher of the White House, comes to take charge of Washington end of private leased wire to McLean's house at Palm Beach. E. W. Starling of the White House secret service cooperates in getting messages to and from McLean.

Dec. 28—Major to McLean:

"Palmer has appointment with Walsh tomorrow morning. I will wire you as soon as their conference is ended."

Major to McLean (undated):

"Palmer told me that he had talked with Walsh this morning, and that while Walsh would not definitely commit himself, he indicated that as far as you are concerned you would not be called. He suggested to Walsh that a letter be filed with the committee explaining your position, which you have made clear in your telegram to me, which Palmer took up with Walsh. Palmer is preparing a letter to the committee. Palmer talked over long distance with McAdoo and the letter will be sent to New York for McAdoo's approval before it is filed with the committee.

Some Inside Dope!

Dec. 29—Major to McLean:

"Just left the Secretary at Wardman Park. He and his wife expect to stay with you. He told me that he was not leaving any forwarding address, and in my presence told his confidential representative that he could be reached thru you at Palm Beach. He said that he would probably stay at Palm Beach for a few days and then go to Havana.

"The Secretary said that the entire matter would be dropped after Sinclair was again questioned in a perfunctory manner. He declared that you would not be called. The filing of a letter with the committee he said would make your end perfectly clear, and bring to an end any disposition that the committee might have had of calling you."

Dec. 28—Major to McLean:

"Just finished talking with Palmer. . . . Palmer talked over long distance with McAdoo. Palmer is going to the Capitol this afternoon; will wire you result of his findings."

Cautious McLean.

Dec. 28—McLean wires to Francis McAdoo, son of Wm. G. McAdoo, candidate for democratic presidential nomination:

"Mitchell Palmer is going to give out a statement for me today. I will have it read to you from Washington. If you approve of it tell them to make it public. Be very careful, as Palmer is representing Fall and Sinclair, and I do not want myself used for their benefit. Wire me results. E. B. McLEAN."

Jan. 5, 1924—Bernard Baruch enters the correspondence:

"Georgetown, S. C., Jan. 5, 1924, 10:57 a. m.

"Edward B. McLean, Palm Beach, Fla.

"Will be in Washington Monday and Tuesday. Affectionate regards.—BERNIE."

McLean wires asking time of arrival and receives Baruch's answer.

While the Workers Die

ACCORDING to government reports there were in 1921 and 1922, 4,108 accidents amongst the oil workers employed by ten California oil corporations. These workers lost 274,829 working days thru their being injured.

The Profits Roll In

IN the last decade the Standard Oil Trust paid out in dividends $1,032,596,524. Last year the Standard Oil corporations paid out a total of $138,423,295 in dividends. The Standard Oil Company of New Jersey holds the records for cash dividends.

The Sinclair Consolidated reported gross earnings of $131,016,745 for the last fiscal year.

The Pan-American Petroleum and Transport Co., controlled by Mr. Doheny, reported net profits from operations totaling $32,684,559 for the last year.

The Four Years--1920 to 1924--Saw Oil Octopus Tightening Its Grip On American Nation

EDITOR'S NOTE:—In yesterday's DAILY WORKER we published Robert Minor's chronology for the sixty years of oil in the United States. This revealing history is concluded in the installment that appears today. The 60 years' drama of oil, from the time the first oil well was drilled in the United States. This revealing plans were made for raising a $10,000,000 campaign fund to put William Gibbs McAdoo over as the oil presidential candidate in 1920, is full of high lights. But this is surpassed by the "Four Years of Oil" that have followed since 1920. These four years are covered by Minor's concluding installment today, starting off with a review of American meddling in Mexico. The oily fingers of American oil capitalists were not content to strangle government at home, but they turned their attention abroad, as well, seeking Mexico as one of their victims. This chronology is not only worth reading, but worth preserving as a chapter in the decay of American capitalism. Here it is:

• • • •

By ROBERT MINOR.

(Concluded from Yesterday)

1920, April 10—The Mexican state of Sonora seceded from the United States of Mexico, and a revolt against Carranza began.

May—Adolfo de la Huerta drives Carranza from power.

President Carranza of Mexico, murdered by followers of Adolfo de la Huerta, who is backed by American oil men.

May 14—Wilson sends official request to the Senate for authority to send U. S. warships and marines to Batum to protect American lives and property at "Batum and along the line of the railroad leading to Baku" (the oil pipe-line and railway used by the British oil companies), and reciting "Christian sympathies" for Armenians.

Russian red armies are making headway toward regaining Russian oil territory in region of Batum and Baku.

Armenian Mandate.

May 24—Wilson requests Congress to give him as President, the power to take a mandate over Armenia, which will require keeping troops in Asia on the frontier between Soviet Russia and the British oil concessions.

May 25—British Ambassador Geddes in speech in New York, denies that the British have oil monopoly.

May 31—Subcommittee of Committee on Foreign Affairs of the U. S. Senate, under chairmanship of Senator Fall, recommends that a treaty be made with Mexico provided that:

". . . We send a police force consisting of the naval and military forces of our government into the republic of Mexico to open and maintain open every line of communication between the City of Mexico and every seaport and border port in Mexico," unless the Mexican government will abandon Article 27 of the Mexican constitution as far as it applies to concessions of American citizens of oil lands, mining properties, etc., and unless the Mexican government pays to American capitalists $505,002,434 as damages for interference with oil properties, mining, railroad, factory, bank and other properties. Fall's committee recommends further that, if Mexico does this, the army and navy shall not be sent, but a treaty and "generous loans" be made to Mexico for the payment of the Mexican public debt (to American bankers, largely) and to rehabilitate the railroads.

The Fall Wail.

The Fall committee further complains that it has received information of Japanese colonies on land where "traces of oil are apparent," and that "Mexico has granted a concession to a Japanese concern known as the Matsumato Trading Co. of Japan, for the exploitation of all oil land on either side of the Tamesi river," and that "two representatives of this company have been in the region for some time inspecting the territory between Tampico and Tuxpam" (near Doheny's and Sinclair's and the Standard Oil Co.'s works).

June 1, 1920—Federal Trade Commission reports that increase in prices of oil, gasoline and petroleum are due more to "varying conditions of supply and demand" than to "any combination in restraint of trade," and that it seems "the part of prudence to encourage those engaged in the oil industry in this country to develop production in such foreign countries, which have oil resources, as are most available for furnishing supplies of oil and that such enterprises should be given all proper diplomatic support in obtaining and operating oil producing property."

Republican Platform Oiled.

June 2, 1920—Tentative draft of republican national platform completed by addition of plank on Mexico, written by Senator Fall, revised in minor respects by Senators Watson, Lodge and several others.

Columbian Supreme Court declares the law nationalizing Columbian petroleum industry unconstitutional.

The senate foreign relations committee's subcommittee under chairmanship of Senator Fall, makes a report which paves the way for ratification of the Columbian treaty and the payment of $25,000,000 out of the U. S. Treasury to Columbia, the measure having been amended by Senator Fall with an amendment regarding oil rights written by Senator Fall. Rumors that $5,000,000 of the Columbian money goes into graft for an American ring.

June 1, 1920—Tremendous flood of propaganda about "terrible conditions in Mexico" begins in American newspapers, as time for national conventions approaches.

June 5, 1920—Sir Phillip Gibbs, English propagandist, cables the New York Times that the Christian Armenians (along the petroleum pipelines in Armenia) are crying for help from England and America.

June 8—Republican national convention opens. Very prominent and popular is Jake Hamon, new oil millionaire from Oklahoma, recently elected national committeeman.

Senator Lodge in keynote speech demands "a firm hand for Mexico." "We must watch and wait no longer."

E. L. Doheny is present, tho a democrat. Gives an interview, saying: "This country is the oil nation."

Wood leads in balloting, Lowden is second, Johnson, third. Most of delegates thinking Harding candidacy is joke. Johnson offered vice-presidential nomination by bosses; refuses.

Jake Hamon tries to arrange with any one of several candidates that he shall name the secretary of the interior in consideration for a block of votes.

Wall Streets O. K.

Night of June 11—All-night conferences between leading financial backers, senators and candidates. Jake Hamon very much in evidence. In the early morning the Old Guard leaders settle that it shall be Harding and Coolidge.

June 12—Machine causes adjournment at 2 p. m.

June 12—(About 3 P. M. during recess)—John T. King, former campaign manager for Wood, let it be known that Boise Penrose had telephoned from Philadelphia giving the word for the nomination of Harding. A conference of leaders is held; Harry Daugherty and Jake Hamon are present. Senator Borah emerged from the conference giving the first definite word that "Harding will be put over."

4 p. m. Lowden and Wood leaders and Jake Hamon throw their delegations to Harding.

June 12 (Evening)—Harding nominated.

—Coolidge nominated.

Atlee Pomerene estimates expenditures in republican primaries:

Wood (approximately)	$1,500.000
Lowden	414,159
Johnson	197,230
Hoover	168,057
Harding	113,109
Colidge	68,375

June 14, 1920—Josephus Daniels, secretary of the navy, publishes a letter in which he recommends that the U. S. government shall lease the Osage oil lands of Oklahoma to private oil companies.

Doheny at Democratic Convention.

Sept.—Obregon elected president of Mexico. (Inauguarated Dec. 1, 1920.)

Isn't It A Bargain?

November 1920—Harding and Coolidge elected.

It is said that the republicans acknowledged receiving $4,000,000 in campaign contributions and spending $5,300,000, the deficit of $1,300,000 being mysteriously made up after the election of Harding and Coolidge—during the time that Sinclair was in process of getting the $400,000,000 steal of Teapot Dome and Doheny and Standard Oil, the California Oil Reserves. It is certain that Harry Sinclair put up a lot of money to elect Harding and Coolidge. It was long ago published that he gave $25,000.

Nov. 6—President-elect Harding goes on "vacation" to Point Isabel, Texas, a town of 400 inhabitants, five miles from the Mexican border; with him goes a party including Jake Hamon, E. B. McLean and Harry Daugherty.

At Point Isabel the Harding party is met by Elias L. Torres, who represents the Mexican secretary for foreign affairs.

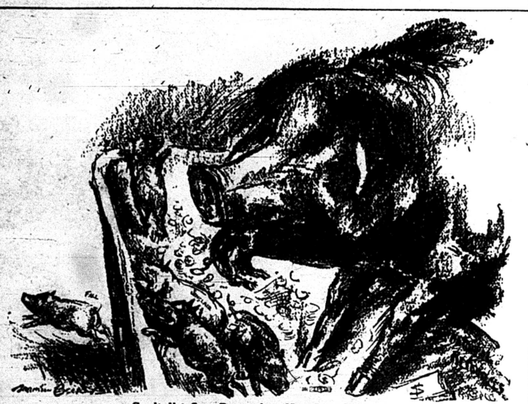
Nov. 20—President-elect Obregon denies having instructed Torres to invite Harding to visit Mexico.

Harding Administration Begins.

1921, Mar. 4—President Harding supplanting Wilson administration, with which McAdoo has influence, Doheny relieves McAdoo of Washington duties but keeps him on a $25,000 salary in Southern California.

Secretary of the Interior Franklin K. Lane on leaving President Wilson's cabinet, goes into the employ of Doheny.

THE HOG PEN



Capitalist Sow Devouring Her Own Litter.

Theodore Roosevelt (Jr.), having resigned as a director of Sinclair Oil & Refining Co. and of White Motor Co., becomes assistant secretary of the navy.

Jess Smith begins a brisk business as Daugherty's "bumper," receiving bribe-money, selling federal appointments, arranging pardons for cash and handling secret stock speculations in partnership with Daugherty. Shortly after March 4, Roxie Stinson, Jess Smith's ex-wife, received from Jess the first batch of twenty-five shares of White Motors stock, and twenty-two shares of Pure Oil stock "to put on the market quickly and quietly," and from then on repeatedly she acted as agent for quick and secret disposal of stock which he and Daugherty "didn't pay anything for."

He Knows A Cushy Job!

Jess is offered appointment as comptroller of the treasury by President Harding, but declines and remains with Daugherty. With Daugherty he occupies, rent free, a house owned by E. B. McLean. Later Daugherty and Jess rent an apartment together.

April—Edward B. McLean is appointed secret agent of the department of justice, receiving a secret-service code book.

Daugherty's old friend Felder, acts as his "fixer" of cases and of pardons.

Shortly after March 4, Mr. Sutro, attorney for the Standard Oil Co., called on Daugherty, and Daugherty dropped the case against Standard Oil on the California oil leases.

Teddy—"The Office Boy."

President Harding issues executive order transferring the naval oil reserves from the navy department to the department of the interior, to the control of Albert B. Fall.

Theodore Roosevelt (who resigned a few weeks before as vice-president of the Sinclair Oil Co.) carries the executive order to President Harding to get it signed.

Secretary Fall is about to give Teapot Dome oil reserve lease to Harry Sinclair; John C. Shaffer, owner of Chicago, Indianapolis and Denver newspapers, gets information of impending deal and threatens exposure. Fall persuades Sinclair to promise Shaffer a share of the profits; Shaffer silences his newspapers.

$80,000 worth of Sinclair Oil stock sold and the money given by Sinclair's confidential man to William Zevely, who was then negotiating with Fall for the lease of Teapot Dome. Then $25,000 more, in Liberty bonds given to Zevely. $68,000 additional, in checks given to Secretary Fall. Fall paid his long overdue taxes; bought a ranch for $91,500; paid $33,000 for some other land; bought $3,000 worth of German live stock and paid $40,000 for a pumping plant, power plant and electric plant.

The Shoe Pinches.

Rear Admiral Griffin protested against the leasing of the navy oil lands.

Commander H. A. Stuart, in charge of the Naval Reserves of the Navy department, and Commander Shafroth of the U. S. navy, protested to Secretary Denby against the granting of certain leases to a large oil company.

April 5—Commander Stuart and Commander Shafroth are sent away from Washington by Secretary Denby at the request of Mr. Fall.

All officers of the navy who protest against the oil land leases ordered by Secretary of the Navy Denby to service at sea or for duty in foreign countries.

Harry Sinclair bought fastest race-horse, named him "Zev" (after Sinclair's lawyer, Zevely), and took Harry Daugherty and other cabinet members to races; bet money for them and gave them the winnings.

Darden "Didn't Measure Up."

Daugherty and Smith made a "deal" with Colonel James G. Darden concerning government oil leases, each of them giving Darden $2,400.

Daugherty and Smith dropped Col. Darden, Smith telling Roxie Stinson that "Darden did not measure up."

June 24—President Harding wrote to Fall saying that unless Colonel James G. Darden of the Mutual Oil Co., got off of Teapot Dome, steps would be taken to drive his company off the property.

July 26—Sec. Fall wrote Pres. Harding that it had become necessary "to take immediate steps to eject the Mutual Oil Co." and suggested that the Navy Department send Marines to do it.

"Devil Dogs" Eject Darden.

July 29—Theodore Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, issued the order to Major General Lejeune to send the Marines to Teapot Dome to drive Colonel Darden's oil company off the reserve.

The United States Marines—The First To Fight—drove Col. Darden and Mutual Oil Co. off the Teapot Dome reserve.

August—The British oil interests (Cowdray) in Mexico quit the American Association of oil companies' boycott against the Mexican government and declared their intention to abide by the laws of Mexico and to pay their taxes. Doheny, Sinclair, Vandyke, Beatty, and Teagle rush to Mexico to try to arrange so that the British oil companies' obedience to the Mexican law will not leave them in a disadvantageous position.

Oct. 28—Gaston B. Means, former general superintendent of William J. Burns detective agency, enters the employment of the U. S. department of justice under William J. Burns, Harry M. Daugherty and, unofficially, Jess Smith, to whom he made his reports.

Nov.—Doheny "lent" $100,000 to A. B. Fall, then secretary of the interior in President Harding's cabinet, "to ease his mind." A few weeks later, negotiations for lease of Naval Oil Reserve No. 1 to Doheny were under way.

Nov.—Persian government negotiates with Standard Oil Co. for $10,000,000 loan, offering concession on 90,000,000 acres of oil land to exploit. Anglo-Persian Oil Co., backed by British government, interfered, claiming prior rights. Standard Oil surrenders to Anglo-Persian Oil Co. and agrees to 50-50 basis; whereupon Persian government rejected offer.

Robison's "Oily" Promotion.

1922, About February 1—Admiral Robison visits the home of Doheny's son in New York, where he confers with E. L. Doheny.

February, 1922—Gaston B. Means carries a hundred one-thousand dollar bills to Jesse Smith, which was paid by the Japanese firm of Mitsui & Co. (Ltd.) which represents the Japanese government as financial agent. Mitsui & Co. were gathering military secrets, especially on aeroplane construction, for the Japanese government.

Immediately thereafter the department dropped a case against the Mitsui Co. for about $2,500,000, owed to the U. S. government.

Feb. 9—Gaston B. Means is suspended from the department of justice, for the reason, as Daugherty later told him, that he was "too active in connection with investigations concerning oil in Mexico," Daugherty adding that a cabinet member had requested his discharge.

March 1—Treaty with Columbia ratified, granting Panama $25,000,000; rumors of $5,000,000 of the money going to an American graft ring.

April 7—Teapot Dome lease executed, giving naval oil reserves to Harry F. Sinclair.

April 12 (Approx.)—Secretary of the Navy Denby signed Teapot Dome lease.

It Took Two Years!

April 14—Wall Street Journal carries notice that Teapot Dome lease has been made.

April 25—Secretary of the Navy Denby, and Secretary Fall of the interior department, make preliminary lease with Doheny for California naval oil reserves.

May—H. Foster Bain, official of department of interior, writes Fall his advice that Daugherty should give a legal opinion covering the Teapot concession even tho he realized the objections to asking such an opinion. "None of us," he wrote, "want Mr. Doheny to get into trouble and I take it we will want to do anything we can to make it easy for him."

May 28—Gaston B. Means is reinstated in the detective service of the department of justice, with back pay for time suspended.

April—Senator La Follette having introduced a resolution for the investigation of the Teapot Dome oil lease, Gaston B. Means says he was instructed by Jess Smith and Underwood to investigate La Follette and "get something on him (LaFollette)" and that he caused La Follette's office to be ransacked.

June 16—Mexican secretary of finance, Adolfo de la Huerta, signs a settlement of Mexican debt in New York with International Committee of Bankers, for an amount totaling $700,000,000 in gold.

July—Standard Oil Co. makes new offer to Persian government for concession on 90,000,000 acres of oil land, declaring it is now in a position to keep the British out and take all to itself. Meanwhile a representative of Sinclair Consolidated Oil Co. arrives in Persia, declares Standard Oil is pro-British and that Sinclair alone can handle their concessions independently. Sinclair offers Persian government 16 per cent net profits; Standard offers 10 per cent gross profits. Persian government holds out for minimum of 20 per cent.

The Bridgman Raid.

August 22—Daugherty has department of justice secret service operatives lead a raid on the annual political convention of the Communist Party.

About the same time Daugherty has same set of secret service operatives swear out "17,000 affidavits of crime" alleged to have been committed by railroad shop strikers. Famous anti-strike railroad injunction issued.

In the summer of 1922, Gaston B. Means claims, he was employed by President Harding to spy upon Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon, receiving his pay thru Jess Smith and Underwood.

Sept., 1922—Obregon declares Article 27 of Mexican constitution not to be applied retroactively as against American oil operators (this paves the way to recognition).

Dec. 11—Supplementary contract with Doheny signed by Secretary of the Navy Denby and by E. F. Finney acting for Secretary Fall. This supplementary contract made possible Doheny's profit estimated by him at $100,000,000.

March 1923—United States Government accepts as a gift from Edward L. Doheny a plot of ground in Mexico City as a site for the American Embassy.

Edward L. Doheny lends the Obregon government of Mexico $5,000,000.

May 11—Jess Smith makes his will leaving his estate of $250,000 to Harry Daugherty, Mal Daugherty, Roxie Stinson, E. B. McLean, Mrs. F. B. McLean and several others.

May 29—(Night before Jess Smith committed suicide)—Edward L. Doheny, Harry Sinclair, Harry Daugherty and ——————? held a long conference at the white house.

Why Suicide?

Jess Smith's will shows he has $250,000 estate, an increase of $100,000 above what he had before Harding's election. Leaves $250,000 (approximately) to Harry Daugherty, Mal Daugherty, Roxie Stinson and two others. Mal Daugherty persuades Roxie that the will is not legal because it is not witnessed. Mal Daugherty refuses to give up to Roxie Stinson $11,400 which had been given to her by Jess Smith. Roxie Stinson threatens that "this will probably lead to many things which I don't want it to lead to."

While the Workers Die

ACCORDING to government reports there were in 1921 and 1922, 4,108 accidents amongst the oil workers employed by ten California oil corporations. These workers lost 274,829 working days thru their being injured.

The Profits Roll In

IN the last decade the Standard Oil Trust paid out in dividends $1,032,596,524. Last year the Standard Oil corporations paid out a total of $138,423,295 in dividends. The Standard Oil Company of New Jersey holds the records for cash dividends.

The Sinclair Consolidated reported gross earnings of $131,016,745 for the last fiscal year.

The Pan-American Petroleum and Transport Co., controlled by Mr. Doheny, reported net profits from operations totaling $32,684,559 for the last year.

The Teapot Dome investigation begins. The committee of the senate which does the investigating, has among its members, Senator Smoot, a professional protector of such interests, and the chairman is Senator Lenroot, a most devoted server of Doheny. Senator Walsh, who takes the role of prosecutor, is a close friend of Doheny's family.

Dec. 3—A. B. Fall wires from Three Rivers, New Mex., to Senator Smoot at Washington:

"Having copies court record made. Also making other preparation and expect to leave here tomorrow afternoon for Washington, arriving Friday. If reach there Friday morning will be prepared to meet committee Friday afternoon."—A. B. Fall.

Dec. 16—Albert B. Fall writes private letter to Senator Lenroot, chairman of Senate committee, which discloses the fact that Senator Smoot had been sneaking information to Fall, which information had been privately obtained from a witness in New Mexico.

Dec. 18—"Hanson" wires from San Antonio, Tex., to Albert B. Fall, at Washington:

"Our friend here sent important code message Department today. See it if possible. Writing.—Hanson."

Dec. 20—Harry Sinclair's representative in Persia closes agreement with Persian government for concession of 90,000,000 acres of oil land.

Is It the Principal's Dictum?

Dec. 22—McLean gets this from Coolidge's quarters:

"The White House, Dec. 22, 1923, 1:35 P. M., Washington, D. C.
E. B. McLean, Palm Beach, Fla.
The Secretary leaves here tonight 9:40. H. E. McKenna."

Dec. 22—Major (McLeans's employee) telegraphs to McLean at Palm Beach . . . "Mr. Homer (the lawyer) said he believed that you should have leased wire installed. . . And also give easy and quick access to the White House . . . Mr. Slemp and Mr. Whaley leave tonight, 9:40 o'clock, for Palm Beach. Saw party at Wardman Park Hotel (Albert B. Fall) . . . Major."

Dec. 22—C. Bascom Slemp, secretary to President Coolidge takes flying visit to Palm Beach, spends much time in E. B. McLean's house with McLean and Fall; declares he went only for his health, carried no message and asked no question about oil.

Dec. 23—Harry Sinclair wires from New York to lawyer Zevely:

"Reserve in your name Wardman Park Hotel ten rooms with two parlors. Arriving 6:20 P. M.—H. F. Sinclair."

Dec. 24—Major wires McLean: "Talked with Smithers (chief telegrapher at White House) at White House, and gave Fraser your message. Major."

Dec. 25—Albert B. Fall wires to McLean at Palm Beach: "Expect to be here, but in event of departure will wire in time to seet secretary at convenient point. I am much better and Mrs. Fall joins me in Christmas greetings. With love for Evelyn and yourself and all yours."

Dec. 25—Major again wires to McLean referring to Zevely as "Palmer's law partner" (Zevely is Sinclair's attorney for whom he named the famous race-horse, "Zev"). Wire says "I have an appointment with the man at Wardman Park Hotel (Fall) immediately following his testimony Thursday . . ."

Palmer Steps In.

A. Mitchell Palmer tried to persuade investigators not to call McLean to witness stand.

Senator Lenroot, chairman of the committee and Senator Smoot, member of Senate committee pay a secret visit to Albert B. Fall at his residence to help Fall concoct a defense against the committee.

When afterward exposed, each tells a different story of what was said by Fall.

Dec. 26—George B. Fraser wires McLean: "Continental Trust about $13,900."

Dec. 26—Major to McLean (Marked "rush"): "Palmer and his associate, named Zevely, told me tonight that under no circumstances for you to send a message to the chairman of the committee. They both said to assure you that your interests would be fully taken care of, and at this time the chances of you being called were very slight. Both declared that after man at Wardman Park Hotel testified that if the committee showed any indication that you were to be summoned that they could take care of it. . . . He (Fall) is sick, and so is Palmer."

Dec. 26—Major to McLean: ". . . Palmer's law partner says that he, meaning Palmer, would be pleased to look after what you requested."

Dec. 27—Major to McLean (marked "rush"): "Was at the Capitol this morning. Party at Wardman Park Hotel at this time is not going to testify. . . . Up to the time I left the hearing there appeared no hostility on the part of the committee regarding the reading of his report. . . Palmer is ill in bed at his home. I am going to his residence at 4 o'clock this afternoon. Will advise you of what transpires. Sinclair, in a prepared statement, etc. . . ."

Palmer Represents Oil.

Dec. 27—E. B. McLean wires McAdoo: ". . . . I did not know at that time that Mitchell Palmer was going to represent Fall and Sinclair. Now that Fall has testified as to the loan I wish you would immediately get in touch over long distance telephone with Mitchell Palmer and find out if, in your opinion, I will be properly represented in case they should subpoena me to substantiate Fall's testimony. . . . EDWARD McLEAN."

Major to McLean: "Will deliver messages to McAdoo and Palmer in the morning, according to your instructions. Tell Mrs. McLean her message to Wheatley has been delivered."

Dec. 28—McLean's secretary Duckstein telegraphs to McLean:

"Wire here ready Saturday night, 29th, regarding operator. Smithers would like the job. John Brown thinks him satisfactory and advises against a stranger. Brown himself rather not handle it. He is trying to get away from telegraphy, but will if you say so. Please wire me on receipt definitely regarding operator. Will notify Homer when installed."

E. W. Smithers, chief telegrapher of the White House, comes to take charge of Washington end of private leased wire to McLean's house at Palm Beach. E. W. Starling of the White House secret service cooperates in getting messages to and from McLean.

Dec. 28—Major to McLean:

"Palmer has appointment with Walsh tomorrow morning. I will wire you as soon as their conference is ended."

Major to McLean (undated):

"Palmer told me that he had talked with Walsh this morning, and that while Walsh would not definitely commit himself, he indicated that as far as you are concerned you would not be called. He suggested to Walsh that a letter be filed with the committee explaining your position, which you have made clear in your telegram to me, which Palmer took up with Walsh. Palmer is preparing a letter to the committee. Palmer talked over long distance with McAdoo and the letter will be sent to New York for McAdoo's approval before it is filed with the committee.

Some Inside Dope!

Dec. 29—Major to McLean:

"Just left the Secretary at Wardman Park. He and his wife expect to stay with you. He told me that he was not leaving any forwarding address, and in my presence told his confidential representative that he could be reached thru you at Palm Beach. He said that he would probably stay at Palm Beach for a few days and then go to Havana.

"The Secretary said that the entire matter would be dropped after Sinclair was again questioned in a perfunctory manner. He declared that you would not be called. The filing of a letter with the committee he said would make your end perfectly clear, and bring to an end any disposition that the committee might have had of calling you."

Dec. 28—Major to McLean:

"Just finished talking with Palmer. . . . Palmer talked over long distance with McAdoo. Palmer is going to the Capitol this afternoon; will wire you result of his findings."

Cautious McLean.

Dec. 28—McLean wires to Francis McAdoo, son of Wm. G. McAdoo, candidate for democratic presidential nomination:

"Mitchell Palmer is going to give out a statement for me today. I will have it read to you from Washington. If you approve of it tell them to make it public. Be very careful, as Palmer is representing Fall and Sinclair, and I do not want myself used for their benefit. Wire me results. E. B. McLEAN."

Jan. 5, 1924—Bernard Baruch enters the correspondence:

"Georgetown, S. C., Jan. 5, 1924, 10:57 a. m.

"Edward B. McLean, Palm Beach, Fla.

"Will be in Washington Monday and Tuesday. Affectionate regards.—BERNIE."

McLean wires asking time of arrival and receives Baruch's answer.

Sullivan's Brutal Sentence Challenge to Labor

GIRL STRIKER CONVICTED BY BOSS' JUDGE

Florence Corn Smiles At Injunction Sentence

Florence Corn, the heroic picket whose example has inspired scores of girls in their fight against the sweatshop conditions of the non-union dressmaking shops, was sentenced to 30 days in the county jail by that notoriously labor-hating judge, Dennie Sullivan, on a charge of violating his injunction.

Attorney Peter Sissman hopes to halt the sentence by a writ while appeal is being taken.

We Need More Florences.

As Miss Corn was being led away from the presence of the boss' lackey, misnamed a judge, she smiled and urged her fellow workers to continue the fight which has already whipped more than 70 bosses into line.

Sullivan's viciousness showed all thru the trial—at which he was judge and jury. It showed especially at the end when he referred to the brave worker in the labor movement as one "who deserved no consideration from society."

Miss Corn was the first of the girl strikers to come before Sullivan for "contempt of court" on a charge of picketing and in other ways ignoring the sacred writ which "Dennie" presented to his friends and patrons, the dressmaking bosses. All thru the trial he proved the radical's contention that capitalist judges are tools of the employers.

While Leo LeBosky was presenting the case against Florence, "Dennie" was all attention. When Sissman, her lawyer, put Florence on the stand to testify in her own behalf, "Dennie" was very impatient.

Trial a Farce.

The written answer that Florence presented in answer to the charges made against her "Dennie" did not look at once from the time it was handed to him till he had passed sentence.

The entire hearing was a farce from beginning to end.

In the first place Florence was charged with proving herself innocent while every criminal who is brought into court is surrounded by the presumption of his innocence and the prosecution must prove his guilt.

In the second place, "Dennie" did not pay any attention to the defense Florence did make. While she was on the stand and when he sentenced her, "Dennie" acted like a whipped snarling cur.

The first witness called to testify for the prosecution was William Nagle, a deputy sheriff who said that on March 6th, he served a copy of the injunction on her. He also said, that on March 8th, Florence Corn was arrested for assault on the sister of Leonard Wolman, who is working in her brother's dress shop.

Let Florence Be Assaulted.

The next witness was a police thug William Sullivan, who admitted on

BIRDS' EYE VIEW OF BIG CHICAGO GARMENT STRIKE ENCOURAGING

The big Chicago dressmakers' strike began Feb. 27, with the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union in control. Demands were for the 40-hour week, with pay for 44; the union shop and sanitary conditions.

Thirty-five hundred workers were originally involved of whom 1,000 have returned to work in more than 70 shops which have settled with the union, conceding all demands.

More than 350 pickets have been arrested, mostly on "disorderly conduct" charges and a few on "assault" charges. All demand jury trials.

Nine have just been convicted under the Sullivan injunction, one to 30 days in jail. Ten more injunction cases pending.

Police bruitality has been extreme. Sophie Altschuler was beaten into insensibility and others badly hurt by police and private thugs.

The Chicago Federation, which promised full support, appointed a "Committee of 15" to act for the strikers. It is meeting today. A special "Citizens' Committee" has protested against police violence and is urging employers to consent to collective bargaining. Strike prospects are good.

COMMITTEE OF 15 FACES INJUNCTION CHALLENGE TODAY

Support on Picket Line Is Strikers' Need

The challenge which Judge Denis Sullivan has flung in the face of organized labor by sentencing Florence Corn to 30 days in the county prison under his infamous injunction in behalf of the scab dressmaking shops is the most pressing issue before the "Committee of 15" of the Chicago Federation of Labor which meets this afternoon in the Federation Building. 166 W. Washington St.

Florence Corn's place on the picket line must be taken. The place of other girls who may be jailed for maintaining their constitutional rights and obeying the instructions of the American Federation of Labor must be filled. Strikers are looking to the "Committee of 15" to give support on the picket line. The Chicago Federation of Labor has pledged full assistance to the strike and now is the time it is most needed.

Right To Walk the Streets.

In line with previous declarations of the American Federation of Labor the committee is expected to issue a ringing declaration against the injunction against the right to walk the public streets. The question which strikers are puzzled about is what methods the committee will use to arouse the workers and general citizenry of Chicago to the denial of ordinary civil rights in the garment zone.

Mass meetings and publicity will be discussed by those members of the committee who are determined that action shall be taken by organized

SPLIT IN FREE STATE FORCES GROWS SERIOUS

Cabinet Member At Mutineers' Meeting.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DUBLIN, March 19.—Troops today surrounded a public house in Parneel Street where mutinous army officers were hiding, forced an entrance and arrested nine of the officers who had fled to the roof.

The arrests came after a siege of nine hours in which machine gun units, armed cars and scores of troops and police participated.

At 2:30 a. m. troops and police surrounded the house following a report that the mutineers, headed by General Tobin and Colonel Dalton were holding a meeting.

Surrounded by Troops.

A messenger was sent to the door to demand that the mutineers surrender. His answer was a volley of pistol shots.

Additional troops with machine guns and armored cars were called at once and a cordon thrown about the entire block.

Finally at 11:40 a. m., a detachment rushed the door of the building and surrounded nine men who were firing from the roof.

Twenty or thirty other officers apparently had escaped and search of adjoining houses were started at once.

As the police were taking the prisoners away one man leaped from the motor van, but was recaptured after being fired on by the military cordon.

Cabinet Member Present.

The identity of the prisoners was not disclosed, but one report was that a member of the cabinet had attended the mutineers meeting.

The mutiny of Free State troops has been under way for more than a week, many officers and men having abandoned their posts as a protest against the government's army re-organization plan.

Six more of the mutinous officers were arrested at 3 p. m. It is believed the remainder escaped by climbing across surrounding house tops.

* * * *

Note.—Joseph MacGrath, minister of industry and commerce in the Cosgrave cabinet, offered his resignation when the first report of the mutiny in the army was made public, but withdrew it later. His opposition to the manner in which the army situation was handled was responsible for his resignation. The Dublin report states that a cabinet minister was present with the mutineers.

Investigation of Graft In Internal Revenue Department Started

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, March 19.—The senate committee investigating the Bureau of Internal Revenue held its first open hearing today with Col. James F. Drake, president of the Standard Pressed Car Company of Pittsburgh, as the first witness.

Drake, who said he formerly was vice-president of the Gulf Oil Company and a confidential adviser of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, told the committee he had learned the "ins and outs" of the bureau in his various positions.

Nearly 800 employes of the Bureau of Internal Revenue have been discharged for graft and corruption during the last three years, Commissioner of Internal Revenue David H. Blair testified.

Those discharged include revenue agents, inspectors and deputy collectors of the field and auditors in the bureau offices here, Blair said.

The government has been able to regain some of the money lost thru forfeiture of bonds, Blair said.

STANDPAT SENATORS QUIT OIL PROBE AS TESTIMONY SHOWS DEAL FOR HARDING

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, March 19.—Faced with the probe into the story told by Leonard Wood, Jr., that the presidency of the United States was sold in the year 1920 for a promise of the secretaryship of the interior, the republican members of the Public Lands Committee, which is investigating the oil scandal, practically quit today, Senator Smoot, Utah, pleading his engagement with the tax bill legislation as an excuse, and Senator Spencer, who took Senator Lenroot's place, absenting himself because of an investigation into the Mayfield election.

That Warren G. Harding was given the presidency in 1920 at the Chicago republican convention because of a deal is the firm conviction here in Washington.

It is true that politicians are not yet willing to talk for publication, but if this investigation continues—and there are frantic efforts made to scuttle it—disclosures will be made that will tear the capitalist parties wide open and expose them to the workers and farmers of this country as two combinations bent on glutting themselves with the wealth of the nation.

Lid Ripped Off

Leonard Wood, in an effort to save himself from another scandal, and $800,000 Wall Street deal, made the statement that has caused more excitement in the Capitol than any disclosure since Gaston B. Means tore the lid off the Department of Justice.

Tiffin Gilmore, state statistican of Ohio, was called to the witness stand when the committee resumed hearings today.

Gilmore said he went to the last republican national convention with the Columbus contingent that was with General Loanard Wood. He was associated with the Wood forces during the primaries.

"What story did the publicity man tell you?"

"The story about the offer to General Wood was that big oil operators had offered their delegates to Wood if he would allow them to name the secretary of the interior," Gilmore said.

"What oil companies were at that convention?" Senator Bursum asked. "Did you gather the impression that Jake Hamon had something to do with his deal?"

Raising The Dough

"I don't know what oil companies were there. I was told, however, that Hamon was mixed up in it.

"What did you suppose the deal was about?" Senator Dill, Washington, Democrat, asked.

"I supposed it was about oil lands. I knew it was reported that lands were to be opened."

Tiffin Gilmore, an Ohio state official, who was in the Wood campaign at the Republican National Convention in Chicago in 1920, opened this phase of the investigation by testifying that General Leonard Wood had been offered support for the nomination if he would let oil interests name the Secretary of the Interior in his cabinet, if elected.

After Gilmore completed his brief recital, Colonel James G. Darden, head of the Mutual Oil Company, began a story of collecting campaign funds for Harding's primary contest.

"Did you aid in any way to help Mr. Harding's nomination?" Darden was asked.

"Yes. I raised some money from my friends for the primary campaign—some of them democrats."

"It appears from some of the documents that you at one time acquired an interest to certain claims in Teapot Dome?"

"I Still Want It"

"We got 150 acres in Teapot Dome but tried with the Interior Department to get it changed because we thought at that time it would never be thrown open.

"President Wilson's brother was hired as our attorney. We went before Secretary Payne and he gave us

EVIDENCE NOOSE TIGHTENS ROUND DAUGHERTY NECK

Attorney General Nearing End of Rope

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, March 19.—Harry M. Daugherty, criminal attorney-general of the United States, has a corps of publicity experts engaged in slandering every witness who testifies to any of the malodorous activities in which the defender of the sanctity of the law was engaged. He has dug deep into the personal history of Roxie Stinson, ex-wife of Jess Smith, who long after her divorce from Daugherty's born companion and associate in crime, was a welcome visitor to the Daugherty home and a frequent guest at his dining table.

Put Him Where He Belongs.

Gaston B. Means, once his confidential friend and favorite investigator, is now merely a criminal, because the easy virtued Mr. Means does not hesitate to spill the beans whenever he can save his own hide or feather his nest by so doing.

Daugherty's position is now hopeless, but he stays on because he cannot quit; he is in much the same fix as the man holding on to the bear's tail. The committee has enough evidence on him already to send him to jail for the rest of his life.

Owing to a severe cold from which Senator Burton K. Wheeler is suffering, the committee took no further testimony today after hearing Maco Stewart, a Galveston, Texas, lawyer, who charges the Department of Justice with failure to prosecute and suppress lotteries.

Rickard Spills Beans.

Tex Rickard, noted fight promoter, is in Washington ready to tell all he knows about the fight films. Tex denied that he made a statement to the effect that "he would bet a million dollars on Daugherty." Rickard is a wise owl and knows that Daugherty is not now worth ten cents politically, and the fight promoter does not care to hitch up with a political corpse.

The committee was quite exasperated with the manner in which William A. Orr, former secretary to Ex-Governor Whitman of New York, republican committeeman, well known in quarters where graft is treated with courtesy. Wheeler believes that Orr knows much more about the fight pictures than he admitted and the intention is to make him cough up. Tex Rickard is expected to aid materially in jimmying the truth out of the reluctant Mr. Orr.

D. of J. Blocks Investigation

The Department of Justice is blocking every effort of the Wheeler committee in this investigation. The mysterious Howard Mannington, "Little Green House" habitue and personal friend of the attorney-general is said to be in Paris. The committee is hot on his trail. Witnesses against Daugherty are now offering their services in such numbers that it may be over a week before the heads of the navy and treasury departments are called to tell of their connection with the $100,000 bribe paid by the Japanese airplane company to Jess Smith and Daugherty.

Michigan Miners Demand Special Convention For Alexander Howat

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BAY CITY, Mich., March 19.—Michigan miners have fallen in line with the Kansas men in demanding a special convention of the international organization for the purpose of giving Alex Howat and the other deposed officials of District 14 a fair and impartial trial.

The action was taken at the convention of the Michigan district which has just adjourned here. The convention is re-convening at Saginaw, Mich., where preparations will be made for a conference with the operators.

"Judges Must Be Disobeyed!" What About Dennie Sullivan?

"WE, THEREFORE, recommend that any injunction dealing with the relationship of employer and employe . . . be wholly and absolutely treated as usurpation and disregarded, let the consequences be what they may. . . . Kings could be and were disobeyed, and sometimes deposed. In cases of this kind judges must be disobeyed, and should be impeached."—Declaration of the 1916 Convention of the American Federation of Labor, Nov. 13-25, at Baltimore, Md.

DAILY WORKER WINS PLACE IN PICKET LINE

Police Say It Hurts to Arrest Our Reporters

The DAILY WORKER has won its fight, temporarily, at least, for the right to report the events of the garment workers' strike. On successive days Victor Zokaitis and Arthur Shields, DAILY WORKER reporters, had been roughly handled, abused and arrested while peacefully going about their business of gathering strike news.

To arrest an accredited reporter is an almost unheard-of act, that even the most hardened "Dick" would not contemplate. It is left for the Chicago policeman on strike duty to violate all tradition of his caste and commit the asinine act of arresting a reporter while he is gathering news.

Our Publicity Doesn't Pay.

When a man in plain clothes yesterday, grabbed a picketer and slammed her violently against the wall, on South Market street, Carl Reeve, reporter for the DAILY WORKER, who had just distributed a bundle of his papers to the strikers, stepped up to the man-handler and asked him his name.

"I'm the deputy sheriff. Who are you" came the gruff answer.

The DAILY WORKER reporter was immediately surrounded by uniformed policemen, including officers 3609 and 2838, and three brutal looking plain clothes men. The air was impregnated with the odor of bad whisky.

"Like hell I'll give you my name," said the deputy sheriff. Not to the DAILY WORKER. It doesn't pay."

The deputy sheriff marched the striker, Emma Deering, down the street, looking for more victims.

We Win Our Rights.

"We're not going to arrest you, or any other DAILY WORKER reporter any more," said Officer 3609. "You haven't got a police card, but we'll take your word for it that you're a reporter. The DAILY WORKER is getting too much publicity." The DAILY WORKER reporter did have a police card.

"The fact is," said Officer 2838, "that the strikers are on one side of the fence and we policemen are on the other. That's all there is to it. If we didn't make these arrests the lawyers wouldn't have anything to do, the DAILY WORKER wouldn't have anything to holler about and the cops wouldn't have any work."

"I don't think there will be many arrests this morning," Officer 2838 continued, growing confidential. "You see the strikers get more courage in the evening, when there's more of a crowd, and we have to pinch more of them. I think we'll arrest a lot tonight."

Policemen Read DAILY WORKER.

"Say, Officer 3181 is getting a lot of publicity, isn't he? Yes, he's the one who beat up Sophie Altschuler. That was too bad, wasn't it? But I guess she must've got kind of gay."

The DAILY WORKER had seen Officer 3181 absorbed in the DAILY WORKER a little further down the street. As he passed Officer 3181 was heard to ejaculate, "Jesus Christ, these fellows are a bunch of AGITATORS."

"By the way," said Officer 2838, "can't you let me have a copy of the DAILY WORKER?" He took the DAILY WORKER, and as he sauntered gravely down the street, tucked the folded paper ceremoniously into his coat tail.

Reeve distributed a large bundle of DAILY WORKERS to the picketers. He says he is going to take an extra bundle this morning for the policemen—to supply the popular demand.

Nova Scotia Coal Miners Spurn Lewis Pact With Besco

(By The Federated Press)

GLACE BAY, Nova Scotia, March 19.—The coal miners of District 26, United Mine Workers, Nova Scotia, are working without a contract.

The Montreal agreement which was the result of prolonged negotiations between the British Empire Steel Corp. and provisional district, officials and representatives of the international, was handed down a few weeks ago. This contract secured a slight increase in wages, but was offset by the increase in the price of coal for household use, and various binding clauses.

The miners by a referendum Mar. 6, rejected the contract by a majority of 2506.

The repudiation of a contract, carrying with it a so-called increase in wages, negotiated by officials of the union, has created a unique situation. William Dalrymple considered it a direct slap at John L. Lewis and all his subordinates in this district.

The corporation agrees to pay the new rate of wages as long as the collieries continue in operation.

Courts Have No Right to Interfere in Strike

"WE INSIST that the workers have the right to quit their employment, either singly or, in unison, whenever the conditions of employment become irksome, or a change or improvement is desired; that when any representative of the workers engaged is directed by them to perform any duty for the futherance of the purpose for which the cessation of work (strike) was inaugurated, that he shall have the right to perform that duty without judicial interference by injunction."—Declaration of the American Federation of Labor Convention at Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 12-20, 1898.

Daugherty Backs Up Stick-Up Work and Still Selling by U. S. Agents, Says His Ex-Operative

By LAURENCE TODD

(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, March 19.—When a special agent of the Department of Justice comes to a federal district attorney in Texas, under the Daugherty administration, with a complaint that an unoffending citizen has been routed out of a sickbed at midnight, robbed of $1,000, and assured that the thief is a deputy United States Marshal, and when the special agent begs the district attorney to issue a warrant for the robber, he is told that no complaint is to be filed.

The district attorney says that the affair amounts to nothing. The special agent reports all the facts to Attorney General Daugherty and to William J. Burns, head of the bureau of investigations.

The crime goes unpunished and this special agent receives orders that he shall not investigate the misdeeds of district attorneys henceforth.

Ex-Operative Squeals

This is a cross section of the testimony of Captain Baldwin of the Texas Rangers, formerly a special agent of Daugherty and Burns in Texas. Baldwin appeared March 15, before Senator Wheeler's Committee and astounded his audience by the direct simplicity and evident sincerity of his account of lawlessness on the part of the law-enforcing division of the Federal Government.

This lawlessness was not confined to Daugherty's regime. Attorney General Palmer in February, 1921, sent out an order forbidding special agents to give any attention to violations of the Federal prohibition statute.

This in itself was a violation of Palmer's sworn duty as a public official. Daugherty has never revoked this order. The gag order issued by Daugherty to the special agents, forbidding them to report upon violations of law by district attorneys and United States marshals, was calculated to create an ideal atmosphere in which whiskey rings might operate.

Dry Agent Sells Stills.

Captain Baldwin testified to having captured a prohibition agent in the act of selling stills captured from one set of criminals to another set. After a long discussion with Attorney General Daugherty's brother-in-law, who is a United States marshal, and with the Federal district attorney immediately concerned, these administration officials reluctantly agreed that there was no way to avoid the filing of a complaint against the faithless prohibition agent.

They reached this decision after consulting the postmaster, the collector of customs, and other Republican job-holders. However, the criminal was never indicted, the grand jury which met later on, declined to hear the testimony of Baldwin's witnesses. The district attorney still holds office.

Whacked Up With Daugherty

Rivaling the Baldwin testimony in its direct bearing upon corruption in the Department of Justice was the testimony of Tex Rickard's partner in the promotion of the Dempsey-Carpentier fight films. This man swore that 50 per cent of the net proceeds of showing the prize film outside of the State of New Jersey were handed over, as a result of a written contract, to friends of Daugherty and of E. B. McLean, and that this deal was made because interstate shipment of the film was illegal. The promoters gave up half their profits in return for protection.

How President Coolidge can retain Daugherty for another week, in view of the damning evidence of misuse by Daugherty and his friends of the powers of the Department of Justice is a mystery to every other hard-boiled politician in Washington. Party managers who are veterans in the game of defying public opinion throw up their hands when they hear the testimony against Daugherty. They do not understand why President Coolidge imagines that he can gain anything, even convention delegates, thru permitting Daugherty to stay in office.

One of the surprises of the investigation thus far is the lack of a defensive attitude shown by Senators Moses of New Hampshire and Jones of Washington. They appeared to have given up any thought of making out a case for the administration.

Chicago School of Social Philosophy

Men and women interested in forming the Chicago School of Social Philosophy will meet in the City Club, Friday, March 21, 8 p. m., to organize the courses already promised in contemporary philosophy and in social economics. This meeting is open to everyone whether or not they care to enroll. Carl Haessler and Leland Olds, who will give the two courses, will speak informally at this meeting.

rights to another 160 acres in Teapot Dome."

"I went to see Fall and he told me he didn't see we had any title. Fall told me 'Yes, we are going to lease the land.'

"I then went west and sometime later Mr. Harding wrote me a letter to come to see him. Harding said, 'Jim, how about this property you think you own in Teapot?' I said, 'Well, I don't know, but I think we own it.' Harding then said, 'Well, Fall don't think much of your claims, and he's T. N. T.' "

"Your testimony is so vague," Walsh said, "Can you tell us what you wanted from Fall?"

"I wanted that 160 acres—and I still want it."

Darden first said that his visit to Fall was in March, 1922—showing that Fall was then intending to lease the lands to Sinclair.

Fall, Fast Worker

"But Bursum's election was in 1921," Walsh said, "and your conversation with Fall and Mr. Harding was about Bursum, so you must have talked with Fall in 1921."

"Yes, I guess it must have been 1921."

This left the implication that Fall was intending to lease the reserves soon after he took office, March 4, 1921.

Darden was then excused and the committee went into executive session to hear Senator Adams of Colorado, regarding the nomination of Samuel Knight as special government counsel to prosecute claims for sections 16 and 36 of California Naval Reserve Number One.

Hearings will be resumed tomorrow at 10 A. M.

Forbes Pleads Not Guilty to Bribery, Conspiracy Charges

Pleas of not guilty to indictments charging conspiracy and bribery were entered in federal court today by Colonel Charles R. Forbes, former head of the veterans' bureau, and John W. Thompson, of the Thompson and Black Construction Company.

The indictments charge Forbes with accepting money from an agent of the Thompson and Black company for using his influence, while head of the bureau, to turn over contracts to the firm.

A motion to squash the indictment charging Thompson with bribing Forbes was made by attorneys for Thompson, on the grounds that papers on which the action was taken were "illegally seized."

Another motion to squash all the indictments also will be made within a few days. Judge Carpenter ordered hearings on these motions for April 2.

Hoan and Rose Race In Milwaukee Next April for Mayoralty

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MILWAUKEE, Wis., March 19.—David S. Rose, non-partisan, and Daniel W. Hoan, socialist, by virtue of their victory in the primaries here, will fight it out for mayor of Milwaukee at the April 1st election.

Rose, who is supported by the large employing open shop interests sprung a great surprise in local political circles by polling 482 more votes than Mayor Hoan, who is running on a platform of typical Milwaukee socialism.

cross examination that on the morning he arrested Florence for assaulting the sister of Leonard Wolman, that Florence had charged Wolman with striking her. He was not sure if he had or had not seen Wolman strike Florence.

Frank Grable was the third witness. He said that Florence and several other girls had beaten him up on the morning of the 10th of March. Grable said, that he thought his arm had been broken until he had it X-rayed. He said that in addition to hurting his arm, Florence had scratched his head.

Mollie Krusig, a designer for Katz and Dolinsky, testified that she had seen Florence and other girls on the street in front of her shop. (Where she would have a perfect right to be).

Stool-Pigeon Nagle.

Deputy Sheriff Nagle said, that he saw Florence in the vicinity of the strike district, Monday morning, after she had been in court and promised that she would not picket till her case was decided.

After filing a written answer to the charges made against Florence, Peter Sissman put Florence on the stand to defend herself.

Miss Corn Refutes Lies.

Florence denied that she had picketed any shop except the one she had worked in before the strike. That shop she had previously said did not have an injunction and since the strike has settled with the union. She returned to work after the settlement and was arrested last Thursday on a rule to show cause why she should not be punished for contempt of court.

Since then Florence said, she has had the union get a leave of absence for her. She did this, she said, because she was worried about her case and did not feel well.

Receipts Prove Her Story.

She denied striking the sister of Leonard Wolman and denied scratching Grable. She explained that last Monday she was on Jackson St., to send money to her parents in Europe and produced receipts from the Amalgamated Bank at 371 W. Jackson Boulevard, to prove her statement.

The receipts were put in evidence. Sissman handed them to the judge. The judge did not look at them once. He let them lay where Sissman put them.

After Florence had testified, Sissman pointed out that the evidence against Florence was weak. The judge started to gas.

Sullivan Liar and Coward.

"There is not a single extenuating circumstance in favor of the defendant. She is a female tigress. She has deliberately violated the injunction of this court. She parades up and down and assaults persons. Such a person as this should receive no consideration at the hands of society. I sentence her to thirty days in the county jail," Dennie said.

The hearing had lasted all morning and in an effort to rush the other cases, Dennie continued court thru the noon hour, not adjourning for lunch. The fact that Dennie was denying himself a good meal to send strikes to jail had it effect on his temper. Toward the close he was sore as a boil.

Seven Others Fined

Seven other strikers came up before Sullivan in rapid succession, but Dennie did not attempt to give them jail sentences. Martha Giefote, John Cohn, Louis Rosenthal, Bessie Eisenberg and Anna Beidelbaum were each fined $50 and Clara Friedman and Rose Levin were fined $25 each.

In fining Martha Gieforte, Sullivan volunteered the insulting remark that she had a "malignant heart."

All the girls were released on their own recognizance, pending appeal.

Think Coolidge Leads in N. D.

FARGO, N. D., March 19.—With Senator Hiram Johnson of California and Senator Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin, splitting the country vote, victory for President Coolidge in the North Dakota presidential primary appeared assured on the basis of tabulations today.

What Will "Committee of 15" Do Today?

THE "COMMITTEE OF FIFTEEN" appointed by John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, to co-operate with the striking dressmakers in their struggle for union conditions in the shops and to investigate the illegal activities of State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe in connection with the strike is scheduled to hold its second meeting today.

The resolution authorizing President Fitzpatrick to appoint the "Committee of Fifteen" was passed by the Chicago Federation of Labor on Sunday, March 2. The Committee was appointed on March 5.

The names of the members of the committee are as follows:

☞ ANTON JOHANNSEN, Carpenters', Chairman;
☞ JOHN CLAY, Laundry Drivers' Union, Secretary;
☞ OSCAR NELSON, Post Office Clerks' Union;
☞ JOHN O'NEILL, City Firemen's Union;
☞ VICTOR OLANDER, Seamen's Union;
☞ ANNA FITZGERALD, Women's Label League;
☞ CHESTER SEMPLE, Molders' Union;
☞ JOHN A. ENGLISH, Typographical Union;
☞ HARRY VAN ARTSEN, Pressmen's Union;
☞ CHARLES GLOVER, Blacksmith's Union;
☞ HARRY SHECK, Union Label League;
☞ DAVID McVEY, Lathers' Union;
☞ ROBERT FITCHIE, Milk Wagon Drivers' Union;
☞ AGNES NESTOR, Women's Trade Union League;
☞ FRANK BUCHANAN, Iron Workers' Union.

The "Committee of Fifteen" held its first meeting in the offices of the Chicago Federation of Labor on Thursday, March 6. It had its picture taken, and appointed a sub-committee of three consisting of John Fitzpatrick, Victor Olander, and Anton Johannsen to interview the mayor and protest against the brutality of the police against the strike pickets. The mayor informed the sub-committee that he was not aware of any improper action on the part of his police, but that he would take the matter under consideration. John A. English, a member of the "Committee of Fifteen," also organizer of Typographical Union No. 16, stated to a DAILY WORKER reporter that the understanding among the members of the "Committee of Fifteen" was, that in the event of further improper interference on the part of the police with the strikers another general meeting of the committee would be called.

Since then no meeting has been called until today.

What has happened in the meantime? Scores of strikers have been arrested by liquor-soaked thugs, uniformed and ununiformed, from the state's attorney's office and in the uniform of Mayor Dever's police force. Citizens who had no connection with the strike were arrested for appearing in the vicinity of the scab clothing chops. Two reporters of the DAILY WORKER were arrested and taken to court because they took down the numbers of policemen engaged in brutally assaulting girl pickets. AND SOPHIE ALTSCHULER, PICKET, WAS TAKEN INTO A HALLWAY BY POLICEMAN 3181 AND SEVERELY BEATEN, NECESSITATING MEDICAL TREATMENT AND CONFINEMENT TO BED FOR SEVERAL DAYS. Yet, the "Committee of Fifteen" did not act.

A committee of citizens, composed of clergymen, professors and well meaning liberals, called on the mayor, bringing these facts to his attention. Of course, the mayor, being a capitalist lackey, did not act, but there was at least some publicity and the plute press was obliged to open its columns to the workers' side of the case. The "Committee of Fifteen," representing hundreds of thousands of Chicago trade unionists, did not even utter a peep. This is a crying scandal.

The injunctions of Judge Denis Sullivan are rendering it extremely difficult for those in charge of the strike to function, unaided. Yesterday Florence Corn, a strike picket, was given a thirty-day jail sentence by Judge Sullivan. Officer 3181 who beat up Sophie Altschuler is still on strike duty, usually in a state bordering on intoxication. While this is taking place; while little girls are courageously battling against the bosses' courts, the bosses' state's attorney, the bosses' mayor, the bosses' police and the bosses' gunmen, the leaders of the powerful organized labor movement of Chicago comfortably sit in their offices and smoke the pipe of peace.

The strikers on the picket line look to the "Committee of Fifteen" for aid in this bitter struggle. The committee has it in its power to win the strike. Will they do it? The DAILY WORKER has urged the calling of a great mass meeting, mass picketing, collection of a strike fund and other means to bring the power of organized labor to bear against the open shop exploiters. These are practical suggestions.

The DAILY WORKER urges the "Committee of Fifteen" to take action before it is too late. It will not do to lay the blame for inaction on the shoulders of the reactionary leaders. The rank and file of the workers will hold every member of the "Committee of Fifteen" responsible for failure to do their obvious duty in this strike.

WHAT WILL THE "COMMITTEE OF FIFTEEN" DO TODAY?

FIGHTING JIM MACLACHLAN IS OUT OF PRISON

Thousands of Workers Cheer Red Leader

By JOHN A. McRURY

(Staff Correspondent of Federated Press)

GLACE BAY, Nova Scotia, March 19.—After serving five months of his two-year jail sentence, Jim McLachlan, deposed leader of the Nova Scotia miners (District 26, U. M. W. A.), has returned to his former stamping ground.

McLachlan was convicted of "sedition" last October and sentenced to two years in Dorchester penitentiary. But to the protests of nearly every worker in Canada pressure was brought to bear on the government and the federal parliament at Ottawa deemed it advisable to release McLachlan on parole (Jim would not accept a pardon, claiming there was nothing to be pardoned for).

The miners were informed of the return of McLachlan in time to stage welcome meetings at every point thru which the train would pass. Particularly striking was the reception at New Glasgow where 900 miners with a band turned out at midnight to meet the train. A Sydney the steel workers staged the largest meeting in its history. Glace Bay surpassed all previous demonstrations. When McLachlan arrived he was borne shoulders high to the building now occupied by the John L. Lewis appointees in the district. The affair was a formal civic welcome, the town council having autorized a demonstration.

Alex S. McIntyre, deposed district vice president, acted as chairman. To the singing of the Red Flag and the International the building fairly rocked.

In stating his views on the new wage agreement just repudiated by district vote, McLachlan said: "The men can stand it; but when I see women and children being starved, sedition or no sedition I am going to oppose it. Talk about sacred contracts! When you take a woman to the altar and promise and swear to love and support her, that is a sacred contract. I will break any contract to keep that one."

The deposed secretary is in his usual good form, his incarceration in no way diminishing his fighting spirit. One of the noticeable things about McLachlan is the absence of his large flowing red mustache, for years one of his distinguishing features. "Altho they decreased my weight," he said, "they did not kill my ambition to fight for the working class!"

Government Backs American Legion in Quest for Bergdoll

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, March 19.—The United States Government has instructed diplomatic and consulat representatives in Germany to aid whenever possible, American legion representatives who have gone to Germany to get Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, draft dodger, to return home and take his medicine, it was learned at the state department today.

The government itself has not made any proposal to Bergdoll, it was said officially.

COOLIDGE SEEN AS LIABILITY TO WALL STREET

Morgans Would Choose Another Henchman

By FREDERICK KUH.
(Staff Correspondent of Federated Press)

NEW YORK, March 19.—An emissary of Wall Street has gone to Washington and in a two-hour conference urged Coolidge to make the desperate dramatic gesture of throwing his cabinet overboard, bag, baggage and oil cans. Since the rejection of this proposal by Coolidge, Wall Street has been considering the possibility of some other presidential candidate.

Morgan's Ditching Call.

While one powerful financial group is still clinging to Cal's one-hoss shay, another—no less potent and said to embrace the Morgan element—is reported to have declined categorically to contribute to the Coolidge campaign coffers. There is an intermediate group that retains its hope that the white house will admit some stage-thunder which may throw the fear of G. O. P. into the voters' hearts.

Regardless of the pool of oily intrigue, in which the administration is steeped, the preponderence of Wall Street sentiment remained loyal to Coolidge. Undaunted by the cabinet's implication, thru a thousand and one threads, in the mesh of waste, bribery, falsehood and similar sports, the financial overlords continued to put their stakes upon Coolidge's presidential candidacy.

Worried Third Party

But Federated Press inquiries among the big bankers show that the imminent emergence of the third party, now believed to be certain, is causing anxiety among Cal's financial cohorts. Wall Street opinion is a ponderous affair, slow to gather momentum, but all the harder to check once it begins to shift. That is why the defection of a section of Coolidge's adherents on "the Street" may still devolve into an avalanche, sweeping the president's electoral campaign into the rubbish heap.

An international banker of first magnitude admitted to The Federated Press that even Wall Street is beginning to realize that the frayed false whiskers and blue spectacles of the old party must be replaced by a more effective disguise. The shrewder members of this set are aware that the president, his cabinet and the Republican and Democratic vehicles are now dilapidated objects, beyond redemption, except in the eyes of the most credulous electorate. The hunt is now in full swing for some expedient that will whitewash the blackest spots on the battered parties' hulk.

Hurry May Spill Beans

Replying to questions, the banker described information, said to be in the hands of the senate investigators, which Attorney General Daugherty is employing "to exert pressure" (as the libel-proof phrase goes) upon his bosom enemies in the cabinet and senate. This information, of the most compromising nature to influential leaders, may be made public, if the attorney general feels that his own position is no longer tenable. It is the danger of these further exposures, as well as the morning-after taste of preceding revelations, that is obliging Wall Street to reconsider its support for Coolidge.

Knocked Her Eye Out, Then Soaks Victim for Operation

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ST. LOUIS, March 19.—"Dr." Earnest Behagen, who admits practicing as an eye specialist for nearly two years here without a license, has been placed under arrest at the request of the city health department following an unsuccessful operation on Mrs. Viola Monko who lost the sight of her eye in consequence.

Mrs. Monko says Behagen performed the operation on his representations that he could cure her "crossed eyes." The operation she says, was performed with an ordinary sewing needle which was not sterilized. In sewing up the wound an infection resulted which destroyed the sight of the eye. He repeatedly lost needles and her mother was kept busy keeping him supplied with "instruments", Mrs. Monko says.

Having completed the operation, the "surgeon" bandaged the eye with an ordinary hankerchief, and told the young woman that his bill was $140 but would be cut to $125 if paid within 24 hours.

Authorities have been conducting a drive to weed out medical quacks with which this state has been badly infested. Concurrent with the arrest of Behagen, two druggists were arrested by the state drug commissioner, who charges them with filling prescriptions without licenses.

DAILY WORKER IS WINNING SOUTH SIDE IN HOUSING FIGHT

THE BIGGEST news of the week for Chicago's Negroes, the best news for a long time in fact, is the organization by a number of prominent South Side Negroes of the Negroes' Tenant League of Chicago, which is advertising a mass meeting in Oddfellows Hall, March 31st.

In order to give every possible aid to the Race in fighting the real estate profiteers who have been riding roughshod over the workers, the DAILY WORKER has been distributing one thousand free copies of its paper every day in the Negro section of the city.

Prominent Athlete Speaks.

The DAILY WORKER has created much favorable comment in all walks of life. Sol Butler, the world's famous broad and high jumper, who twice won events at the Olympic games as a member of the United States Olympic team, said to the DAILY WORKER, "Our people certainly need to pay some attention to their poor housing conditions. I was pleased to see at least one DAILY newspaper pay some attention to my Race."

William Moore, the well-known Negro poet and author, who addressed the Sanhedrin conference, says, "Everything the DAILY WORKER says about the real estate sharks fleecing my Race is true. We should fight all grafting whether done by colored or white people. I am going to attend the mass meeting of the Negro Tenants League on March 31st."

Broaden the Campaign.

In all over 15 thousand copies of the DAILY WORKER will have been distributed to Chicago's Negroes before the campaign for better housing conditions comes to a close.

Eugene O'Neill's Play Rouses Controversy in Puritanic New York

By FREDERICK KUH
(Staff Correspondent of Federated Press)

NEW YORK, March 19—The new Eugene O'Neill play, "All God's Chillun Got Wings," which will open in April, is arousing a storm of controversy. The drama tells the story of a Negro's marriage with a white woman; how they are hounded by the subtle persecutions of friends, neighbors and townsfolk, finally seek refuge in Paris, but realize at the end that their sense of isolation and inferiority has taken root within themselves. Cast out by American society, battered in the maelstrom of race antagonism, each discovers ultimately that he, and she, are even outcast from one another.

The New York press is besieged with the usual letters of protest. Rotarians and pseudo-reformers are framing resolutions against the presentation of the play. Their attitude, of course, is that the subject of intermarriage between white and black must be hush-hushed. Critics of O'Neill's drama, few of whom have troubled to read the play, are aghast that miscegenation should find its way to the American stage. They are undaunted by the fact that intermarriage of Negroes and whites is a common occurrence in this country and a social issue of growing importance. None of these critics appear interested in the artistic merits of the play. They believe that the solution of a disquieting issue is to evade it.

As yet, they have unearthed no legal pretext for suppressing the production.

Puritan Professor Buys Wicked Burg: Will Bar Out Devil

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SULPHUR SPRINGS, Ark., Mar. 19.—Sulphur Springs today became the "Zion City" of the south with a ban on dancing, card playing, Jazz Music, "Tipping" and profanity.

Prof. John Edward Brown, President of the Brown college, has purchased the entire town, lock, stock and barrel, and plans to erect a new "Brown University" with all wickedness and evil influences shut out from the collegiate lives.

"Having purchased the town, I'll be able to keep watch over its morality," the professor explained.

Try Forcing Confession.

DENVER, Colo., March 19.—Fred Janssen, whose wife's body was taken from a trunk at Ogden, Utah, today held to his story that he hired a Mexican to murder the woman. Police officials, believing the man killed Mrs. Janssen himself, continued questioning the prisoner with the hope of forcing a further confession.

GRAFTER CHORUS HAILS MARINE DENBY'S RETURN

"Welcome Home, Ned," Cries Detroit Mayor

By SHERMAN BOWMAN
(Staff Correspondent of Federated Press)

DETROIT, March 19. — Cannon boomed in salute, airplanes from the Selfridge (army) field soared in honor overhead, the police band played patriotic music, shop windows were hung with flags, whistles blew on steamboats, locomotives and factories. A delegation was at the station with committee badges on coat lapels; flag-decked automobiles, led by a police motorcycle division escort, sirens shrilling, streamed thru downtown streets, to the board of commerce, thence to the city hall and thence to the Detroit Athletic club.

It was the farce and fraud of welcoming Edwin Denby, home in disgrace after signing away public oil reserves.

A little group in the board of commerce conspired to fasten Denby as a hero in his home town. Newspapers reported the jubilee on page one. The mayor and others made speeches at the dinner at the board of commerce. The American legion and the army and navy club, thru officials, lent their names to the official invitations and advance publicity tho it was navy oil Denby had signed away.

"Welcome home, Ned," exclaimed Mayor Martin as the former secretary of the navy entered the city hall. "Detroit has given you a greater welcome than it has any other man. Altho there have been a few stones cast in your path, no true marine will find these insurmountable."

Denby was formerly a member of the United States marine corps. His enlistment as a private at this country's entry in the war was one of the sophomorific political tricks that have constituted his only means to power. And he has learned no new ones, it appeared, for he rushed from the mayor while that dignitary's mouth was open to shake conspicuously the hand of Si Weingarden, a newsboy who had followed the crowd. Si was one of his fellow-seamen on the U. S. S. Yosemite in the Spanish-American war.

The welcome home was the kind of party Denby himself might have organized for someone else under similar circumstances. He learned it at college.

Altogether, the whole jamboree was a little sinister.

But it was delightfully farcical too. As the automobile parade moved between aisles of pedestrians and downtown workers gathered at the curbs, there were grins on at least half the faces, of amusement or derision. True, no one broke up the party by talking out of turn. But at least no one was fooled, unless it was Denby.

Workers Party Is Organizing in Clay County, S. D.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DALESBURG, S. D., March 19.—The first meeting in Clay county for the organization of a branch of the Workers Party was held at Dalesburg, a little inland village in the central part of the county, about 12 miles south of Centerville, South Dakota.

Alfred Knutson, of Mitchell, S. D., the district organizer, was present and explained the salient reasons for such organization.

It is safe to say that a movement of this kind would have been greatly ridiculed if attempted a decade ago. These farmers who listened to Mr. Knutson's explanations are seriously concerned as to the future and could readily understand why an initial move must be made.

The old political parties in South Dakota are in a death struggle as to leadership for the next office holding term. In this county the spellbinders, the war-horses are in a draw and the average man is confused and disillusioned, with the result that not over one-fourth of the people will go to the polls March 25, primary election day. They are disgusted. Everybody can smell oil.

The Second International.

While the Moscow workers were still standing full of sorrow at the bier of Nikolai Lenin there arrived also the telegram of "condolence" of the Second International. The mass of workers before the Trade Union House waiting to go in, remembered how this "Workers'" International had "stood by" Soviet Russia. One worker exclaimed:

"And if the whole Second International dies we won't send any telegram of condolence."

With this he expressed the opinion of millions of workers.

British Airmen to Compete with U. S. Fliers in Big Flight

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, March 19—Stirred by the start of American airplanes on a world flight, Great Britain is rushing plans to enter the race and beat the Americans around the world, the Evening News declared today.

The Britishers will fly eastward, whereas the course of the United States army fliers is taking them westward. Three royal air force airmen, one at least using a Napiers-Vicker amphibian plane similar to that which Sir Ross Smith flew to Australia, are hurrying secret preparations for a start, the News states.

It had been planned to start the British flight April 15, but the date has been put ahead. The British aviators have a schedule calling for completing of the Globe Girdling fight in three months, which would bring them home ahead of the Americans.

Finish First Lap.

MATHERFIELD, SACRAMENTO, Calif., March 19.—With the first lap of their 30,000 mile flight around the world completed, three United States army airplanes were here today ready to take off on the second leg of their long journey.

Today's flight, if weather conditions are favorable, will be from Matherfield to Vancouver Barracks, Washington, where the big Douglas Air Cruisers will be fitted with pontoons to prepare for their flight over land and water to Asia.

Takes Issue With Our Recent Article On Spine Jugglers

To The DAILY WORKER:—A little child lay in the hospital for five months. Body paralyzed. Eyes sightless. Voice impaired. The baby cry a horrible shrisk.

Today the child is normal. Five months under care of medical physicians had only aggravated the original ailments and the frantic parents had been warned that the case was hopeless.

Six months under a chiropractor restored the child to health. Her sight was restored in three treatments.

The last medical physician who had attended her, when informed of this complete recovery, stood amazed; then, recovering, said, "It was a miracle. Only God could have done that."

I fancy the litle neck was sore and painful after the daily adjustments.

I fancy there was considerable discomfort before nerves and muscles and vertebrae were wholly restored.

I fancy none of these things shook the faith of the farmer neighbors and town friends who swarmed to the state capitol and testified freely and gladly before the legislative committee of the healing of this little child.

The "miracle" was performed at a time when it was illegal to practice chiropractic in that middle western state. The legislative committee was not deaf, nor yet dumb. From then dates the legal practice of chiropractic there—Sincerely yours, A Witness.

Daily Worker Readers Urged to Remember Political Prisoners

Birthdays in April of political prisoners confined in American "State" prisons are announced by the Workers' National Prison Comfort Club, 2923 Chestnut street, Milwaukee, Wis., as follows:

At San Quentin Prison, San Quentin, Cal.: April 5, Jim Martin, No. 37636; April 8, Fred Bamman, No. 38531; April 25, Chas. Crowley, No. 38534.

At Walla Walla, Washington, Box 520: April 27, B. Bland, No. 9411.

At North Side Station, Pittsburgh, Pa., B-29, Box A-11387: April 25, Jos. Martinovich.

At Norfolk County Jail, Dedham, Mass., care of Norfolk County Sheriff: April 23, Niccola Sacco.

Cora Meyer, national secretary, invites friends and sympathizers to send birthday cards and letters (money is advisable for gifts) to these political prisoners. Books and publications must be sent directly from the publishers.

Francis E. McClennegen, from San Quentin, writes: "Thanks to everybody whose cards and letters went to make my birthday a day to be remembered. Here's hoping that the workers who are continually fighting each other over their ideas, put as much vigor into UNITED ACTION against their common enemy—capitalism."

Maybe "The Lady" Knows.

LONDON, March 19—"The young woman of today is doing everything possible to imitate a courtesan," Lady Frances Balfour said in a speech here.

No Scuttling of Oil Probe!

It Starts Tomorrow!

THE DAILY WORKER has secured the right to the serial publication of Michael Gold's famous book, "The Life of John Brown," from the Haldeman-Julius Company, of Girard, Kansas.

The serial publication of this tremendous piece of American literature begins in tomorrow's issue of the DAILY WORKER. Altho it is a piece of biographical writing, it is just as interesting as fiction. It is a picture of the dramatic events leading up to America's Civil War.

When John Brown declared war on chattel slavery in the United States, and when he was hung as an outlaw, he took his place with the martyrs in civilization's upward struggle. Altho he remained, as Gold points out, "a plain and rather obscure farmer until his death," nevertheless, he has found a place in the history of the American nation that will grow in importance as the oppressed workers and farmers come into their own.

CHICAGO WAGES BIG FIGHT FOR FOREIGN-BORN

Council Plans Monster Mass Meeting

The dangers contained in the bills directed against foreign-born workers which have been introduced into the United States Congress have been brought vividly to the attention of the Chicago workers in general. Native born as well as foreign-born workers realize the seriousness of this danger and consequently the response to the campaign of protest, initiated by the Workers Party, has been tremendous. At the present time there are affiliated to the local Chicago Council for Protection of Foreign-born Workers, organizations representing a total of more than 67,000 workers. The Council, as well as its aims and objects, has been endorsed by the Chicago Federation of Labor, and the whole labor movement, including local unions and language fraternal organizations, have become strongly animated by this campaign.

Organizations Represented.

There are, at present, the following unions and organizations represented thru delegates to this Council: Machinists' Union No. 84; Machinists' Union No. 134; Machinists' Union No. 113; Machinists' Union No. 478; Painters' Union No. 194; Painters' Union No. 237; Cap Makers' Union No. 5; Brewery Workers' Union No. 18; Carpenters' Union No. 341; Carpenters' Union No. 1786; Carpenters' Union No. 1367; Hodcarriers' Union No. 27; Barbers' Union No. 548; Carpenters' Union No. 181; Carpenters' Union No. 1784; Amalgamated Clothing Workers locals 39, 269 and 270 are affiliated thru established language councils; Local Chicago, Workers Party; Local Chicago, Young Workers League; German Workers Protective Association; Hungarian Sick and Death Benefit Fund; South Slavic Organizations for the Protection of Foreign-born Workers; Ukranian Organizations for the Protection of Foreign-born Workers; Lithuanian Workers' Alliance; Italian Organizations for the Protection of Foreign-born Workers; Jewish Organizations for the Protection of Foreign-born Workers.

The unions either directly represented, or represented thru the various protective organizations, comprise a total of more than 27,000 workers, while the combined strength of the language fraternal organizations amounts to about 35,000, and the council is still growing. Resolutions being carried by the council put it on record to do everything in its power by means of publicity, public mass protest meetings, etc. to oppose the proposed laws to oppress the foreign-born workers have been sent to all Congressmen and Senators of the State of Illinois, with a request that they vote against these bills. Similar resolutions are being endorsed by local unions and have, in several cases, brought about a lively debate which always tends to emphasize the solution pointed out by the Workers' Party, that is, complete unity of all workers organized in a great labor party, as the best means of effectively fighting these oppressive laws.

Capitalist Politician Appears.

The extent to which this has been recognized was shown most clearly in the Conference held of the Chicago Council Sunday, March 16th, when even one of the candidates for Republican Nomination for Clerk of the Municipal Court, Titus Haffa, altho a big employer himself, appearing before the conference, stated that he recognized the necessity of the workers getting together and acting together, politically. This has been the keynote in the campaign: that the workers thru their own party must place their own representatives in the law-making bodies and thru this instrument, control the actions of their representatives.

The various language fraternal societies, under the leadership of the language branches of the Workers Party, have organized strong councils and all of them are active in organizing mass meetings and creating mass sentiment so as to bring pressure to bear upon the capitalist politicians. All of these councils are sending their representatives to the central council so as to unify the whole campaign, and particularly to make it a united movement of both native and foreign-born workers.

Socialists In Opposition.

The Lithuanian Workers' Alliance is particularly active, and now is composed of 43 organizations, including even nationalistic and Catholic organizations, who nevertheless see the dangers threatening the working class. These 43 organizations represent between fourteen to sixteen thousand members. The Socialist Party groups of this language completely refused to join in a United Front with the other Lithuanian Workers, in order thus to strengthen the campaign, but went ahead with their own mass meeting March 16th at which some 200 were in attendance.

The pleas of the leaders of these Socialist Party groups was that it had become necessary to send delegates to Washington, D. C., to interview Messrs. Hoover and Davis. Incidentally somebody seems to want a joy-ride across the country. For this purpose a collection was taken up and the lawyers and doctors present contributed quite liberally. These Socialist groups while supporting the Johnson Bill, yet want to have certain changes made so as to provide that none of the Polish population, now under Lithuanian dominion, shall be admitted to this country. Meanwhile the bulk of the Lithuanian workers have shown by the 12,000 represented in the Lithuanian Council, formed upon the initiative of the Workers Party branches, will have nothing to do with that kind of internationalism, but are taking active part in the campaign to oppose all these capitalist laws.

Big Meeting Planned.

The Council for Protection of Foreign-born Workers in the Jewish nationality, now includes 23 organizations, one of which is the Amalgamated Clothing Workers local 39, alone having a membership of 11,000.

The Italian Workers Party branches have succeeded in the campaign to bring this matter before their nationality to the extent of having twenty organizations, comprising approximately 4,000 members, affiliated to their language council.

The Local Chicago Council is planning a monster mass meeting at which Congressman Laguardia of New York, Senator Wheeler of Montana, who is now on the committee exposing the prevailing government corruption, and representatives from the Chicago Federation of Labor, the Socialist Party and the Workers Party will be invited as speakers. The Council is also planning to get out publicity material to familiarize, as far as possible, every worker in Chicago, with the various onslaughts planned by the servile tools of capitalism against the American labor movement as a whole.

Lithuanians Hold Conference.

The Lithuanian conference for the protection of foreign-born workers was held last Sunday in Meldazis Hall. 73 delegates representing 10,000 members of various political, educational and benefit organizations were present. The conference was called by The Alliance of Lithuanian Workers Organizations in Chicago district.

Notwithstanding the fact that our real enemies—the mensheviks, the reactionary nationalists, and the clericals united in one block—sabotaged by all means they possessed, our conference was very successful and enthusiastic. The delegates expressed their opinions for a real united front of all Lithuanian forces in the common fight against the reactionary bills introduced into the Congress to enslave the foreign-born workers.

The conference elected a committee of nine members with full power to arrange a mass meeting in the near future. A motion was made and carried unanimously to send delegates to the meetings of the Chicago Council for the Protection of Foreign-born workers.

Urge Asiatic Exclusion

WASHINGTON, March 19.—Asiatic exclusion, aimed specifically at the Japanese by federal immigration statute rather than by "gentlemen's agreement," was urged upon the senate immigration committee by a California delegation including ex-Senator James D. Phelan and V. S. McClatchy of Sacramento. McClatchy is one of the men chiefly responsible for the persecution of the I. W. W. in California.

An Omission

In our issue of March 13th, the call for the national Farmer-Labor convention on June 17th appeared without the name of the Farmer-Labor Party of Montana, which was signatory to the call, signed by P. Budden, secretary, and Charles E. Taylor. The DAILY WORKER gladly makes the correction.

BOSSES FORCING TEXTILE STRIKE IN RHODE ISLAND

Amalgamated Union to Lead Struggle

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, March 19.—A big strike is looming as a possibility at Crompton, in the Pawtuxet Valley of Rhode Island, according to a statement made here today by Russell Palmer, general secretary of the Amalgamated Textile Workers of America. The 1,100 employes of the Crompton Company, manufacturers of velvets and corduroys, have been members of the Amalgamated since the general strike of cotton mill workers in 1922, when the A. T. W. A. conducted a nine months' strike in the Pawtuxet Valley and elsewhere.

"If industrial warfare breaks out at Crompton," said Palmer, "the responsibility for it will rest entirely with the officials of the Crompton Company, and specifically with the head of the company, Mr. Frank Richmond, former president of the Rhode Island Textile Manufacturers' Association. The union has made an honest effort to have the officials of the company confer for the purpose of establishing an agreement that would permit of the settlement of grievances and disputes.

Many Grievances.

There are many specific grievances to be adjusted at Crompton, involving wages, hours and other matters, Palmer declared. He also said that the general grievance against the attitude of the company was a profound one that might not be easily overcome by the company officials. It has grown up out of the year-long effort of the company to institute a company union in its plant, under the "industrial democracy" plan, promoted, the union charges, by professional union-smashers. This company union plan failed, as the union opposed it strenuously and the workers voted it down three times, the vote being taken by the company itself.

Palmer said that the company is now using the threat to close down if the workers do not obey the mandate from the company officials. "This threat on the part of people who have been talking a lot about 'industrial democracy' will do much to bring the anger of the workers to the breaking point," Palmer said.

Organizing in Allentown.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ALLENTOWN, Pa., March 19.—Local No. 44 of the Amalgamated Textile Workers is conducting an organization campaign among the silk workers of Allentown with meetings at Tiger Hall, 29 N. 7th street.

Allentown silk workers toil 50 hours a week at nerve-straining speed. The union's circulars show that broadsilk workers, for instance, must now run three and four looms at a much higher rate of speed than was formerly required when they operated only two looms.

Crippled Miner Is Suicide When Denied Any Compensation

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HOUSTON, March 19.—Another miner has been killed by the inhuman greed of the coal mine owners. Charles Emph, whose back was broken in 1921, was starving. Altho suffering great agony from his injuries and, of course, unable to earn a livelihood, the mine owners had refused to pay him compensation. Unable to longer continue the struggle, Emph took a 38-calibre revolver and shot himself twice in the head, dying instantly. Emph's wife is a cripple.

RUSSIA BURNING PAPER RUBLES; MINTS ARE BUSY

Currency Stabilizing on Metal Basis

(By The Federated Press)

MOSCOW, March 19.— Today marks another great milestone in the phenomenal economic re-establishment of Russia. Metal money is being issued, and silver coins are appearing for the first time since 1915. The paper money is falling for the last time—and this time into the flames. Day and night the fires are going, and billions and trillions and quadrillions of paper rubles are going up in smoke. All the unbacked paper money not yet in circulation is being burned, as well as all of the used money, which is gradually being withdrawn from circulation.

The stable chervonetz, equal to ten gold rubles, has been in circulation for some time. During the last year the railroads have issued 5-ruble notes which have been used to some extent thruout the republic, and for the last few weeks, 5, 3, and 1-ruble treasury notes, exchangable at their face value in gold, have been in circulation. A further stage of the money reform is reached today with the issue of small metal coins—1-ruble pieces, and 50, 20, 15, and 10-kopeks in silver money. The reform will be completed by May 1, when 5, 3, 2, and 1 kopeks in copper will be issued.

The state mint is working top speed coining the money, so that there may be enough to meet the needs of the people. By Oct. 1, 1924, 50,000,000 gold rubles will be issued in metal money and treasury notes, and by Jan. 1, 1925, 100,000,000. By that time there will be in circulation in Russia altogether 400,000,000 gold rubles, including the 300,000,000 now in circulation in the form of chervonetz. This amount has been reckoned by financial experts as the amount necessary to satisfy the circulation needs of the country, without threatening the stability of the currency. The money is being coined from metal belonging to the state treasury.

Amazing Rejuvenation

The money reform will have immediate and far-reaching results in the economic life of Russia. This step has been in preparation for a long time, but could not have been taken without the re-stablishment of industry and transport and the development of home and foreign trade that have taken place in the last two years.

A stable currency means still further development in all branches of industry and agriculture and trade.

The workers will greatly benefit by getting the full value of their wages, and are greeting the reform with great joy. Finally, the reform will do a great deal to stabilize and quicken trade relations between town and village. There will be an immediate effect on retail prices, and the peasant will at least find it possible to buy the articles of city manufacture which he needs.

Local Oil Men Make Big Plans For Anti-Teapot Investigation March: Standard Frowns and Project Flops

Chicagoans will be able to sing, "Yes, we have no petroleum today," next Tuesday, thanks to the powers that fix gasoline prices down at 910 South Michigan Boulevard, and thus make four cents per gallon profit for the filling station men grow where only one cent grew before.

The edict has gone forth. The Chicago oil men will simply have to play the game according to the well tested methods of Col. Robert V. Stewart.

The Standard Oil Company of Indiana doesn't believe in publicity deuces wild, whatever may be the misguided preferences of John M. Carson, president of the Taxman Refining Company, John Reynolds of the American Oil Men's Association, and the editors of the Chicago Tribune and the Associated Press.

The Royal Kibosh.

In other words, the Standard of Indiana has put the royal kibosh on the well-laid plans of the so-called Chicago Oil Trades' Committee, headed by Carson, to stage a monster demonstration of protest against the exposure at Washington of the Teapot Dome scandal, the Harry Sinclair-Ed. Doheny, Albert Fall-John Shaffer-Ed. McLean-Harry Daugherty burglar-bund.

Not that the Standard and Col. Stewart were not just as indignant over the affair in the national capital as Carson and Joe Patterson of the Trib and Shaffer of the Post. Their henchmen had bungled the job, to be sure. McAdoo had been perfectly silly in admitting that Doheny had handed him a cool hundred grand for the purpose of making Mexico safe for the American Petrolocracy. How in the world could they ever get anything else over on the Southern Republic with the suspicion abroad that million dollar fees were being paid for influence? And, of course, the exposure of newspaper venality in connection with the Teapot and the other angles of their private affair was very rotten to say the least. Yes, the Standard was angry. But the Standard is also careful—and subtle.

The Chicago oil fraternity, in company with the fraternity everywhere else, is very much disturbed over the revelations in Washington. Thus it happens that about a month ago, Carson, who figures publicly as an independent marketer of petroleum products, but who knows the way down to 910 South Michigan avenue, well conceived the brilliant idea of the public demonstration of protest. So he organized himself into the Chicago Oil Trades Committee, had some stationery printed, and started to function. As an afterthought, he got some of the oil men together, and added Joe Mudd of the Marland Refining Company; Harry Bayard of the Acme Petroleum Company, and about a score of other Chicago oil marketers and jobbers to his committee, and they had a dinner just off the Gold Room in the Congress Hotel.

Ball's A-Rolling.

Carson had already started the ball rolling. The others gave it a few shoves, and soon the Associated Press and other news associations were spreading the glad news that Chicago oil men didn't propose to stand for the slander of Congressmen and senators, and that during the week of March 24th, there would not only be the annual meeting of the American Oil Men's Association, but a monster protest demonstration would be staged.

The call was sent out for the oil clan of the nation, to gather in Chicago for a big conference on publicity on the 25th. It was planned to establish a fund to be used to make the public familiar with petroleum, and to conduct a defensive against the onslaughts of Washington. Several meetings were held and the affair began to take shape. The oil trade journals were pounding the tom toms.

A high priced publicity and parade expert, whose name was T. J. Dockarty, was taken off his job of promoting motor bus transportation systems somewhere in the east, and brought to Chicago. Dockarty addressed the oil committee. He was an expert on publicity and admitted it. He was going to line up the Chicago newspaper editors by giving them free positions for their circulation trucks in the monster parade—a parade that was to be at least four miles long and to tell Chicagoans and visitors the story of petroleum. He got a contract which carried with it the right to supply builders of floats, the bunting to be used for decorating filling stations, and all the rest. He was an ex-A. P. man, and he knew how to handle the editors. The committee in the French room at the Congress applauded, and proceeded to produce the shekels to pay for the protest demonstration.

Some Stunt!

Then Dockarty started to work. He built up a parade program that Secretary Reynolds of the American Oil Men's Association described to the committee as "perfectly wonderful." The police motorcycle squad was going to lead the cohorts of oildom down Michigan boulevard to the music of seven bands, with flying bags and huge cartoons and banners with witty cracks at the senate committee on them for the millions on the pavements to read. Walter Birmingham, one of Shaffer's right hand men on the Chicago Evening Post, was going to help get nice things in the paper. Even Benziger, of Hearst's Chicago American, who put over a choice lot of fakes about a debate between Senator LaFollette and some champion of oil last year on the occasion of the Oil Men's convention when the editors of the papers knew that LaFollette was in Europe and could not possibly get back in time, was ready to throw himself into the breach to save the reputation of the petroleum industry.

Everything was set. The newspaper editors were in a receptive mood, and the grand publicity splash was scheduled for the present week. Carson had announced with glee that Mayor Dever was to issue a proclamation on designating next week as "Petroleum Week."

Then something happened. In fact something began to happen about a week ago.

Two Department of Justice agents, operating under Director Burns and Attorney General Daugherty, have for several months been investigating the price of gasoline situation in Chicago territory. For the most part they have been comfortably working in the offices of the Standard Oil Company. They are Frank V. Martinek and W. O. Cable. It was suspected that Standard might be fixing gasoline and crude prices in Indiana territory, and these men were told to find out how badly the so-called independents were being abused by the giant concern.

The Brakes Are Set.

So when this something began to happen, announcement of it was made largely thru their efforts. They had some time before they discovered that the Independents were not so angelic in the matter of price fixing as had been claimed, and also that the Standard was a pretty decent sort of an outfit after all. That was the sort of information they were circulating in the oil trades.

But they took time off to tell the oil men interested in John Carson's scheme for a campaign of education thru the newspapers on the petroleum industry, that the publicity conference had better be called off. Thereupon Carson did stop publicity about the proposed conference. But Dockarty and the petroleum parade waxed louder. Then came Mattinek and Cable whispering to the Marketers and Jobbers on the Oil Trades Committee, that it was very unwise to stage the parade.

But the oil committee was determined to go ahead, and it did go ahead, thru Dockarty until recently. Then it stopped going ahead. The city council was to have passed upon the question of granting a permit for the parade on Monday night. Like a bolt from the sky it was announced that no permit could be issued, because the oil parade would conflict with some other public demonstration—just what was not stated.

Therefore the parade is dead. Nothing is left but the American Oil Men's convention, and according to word going around in oil trade circles that organization is scheduled for slaughter next week. Standard destroys anything that gets in its road say the wise ones of the industry. It does not want this publicity. It has its own tested method of secrecy.

The VOICE Is Heard.

Down at 910 South Michigan, they are saying, "Let 'em rave at Washington. They'll quit after awhile—and people have just got to have gasoline."

All of which is significant in view of the fact that the Standard controls fifty-three per cent of the business in Indiana territory, while in other territories it controls even more.

Last night (Tuesday) there was another meeting of the Chicago Oil Trades Committee at the Congress hotel. But the members had lost their pep. The VOICE had had been heard.

Italian Pope Likes U. S. Dough He Will Get For Red Hats

ROME, March 19.—The Vatican is highly pleased at the satisfaction of American Catholics in the coming elevation of Archbishops Hayes, of New York, and Mundelein, of Chicago, to cardinals, a semi-official statement said today. The Vatican feels the action of the pope in elevating the two American church men should be interpreted as fresh proof of the esteem in which the holy father holds all American Catholics.

ATLANTA, Ga., Mar. 19—Georgia went to the polls today to express its preference for Democratic Presidential Candidate. With only Wm. G. McAdoo, a "native son" and Senator Oscar W. Underwood of Alabama entered in the primary, an exceptionally close race was expected.

"POLIKUSHKA," MASTER FILM, SEEN IN CHICAGO

Tragedy of Serf Life Is Marvelously Done

By TOM TIPPETT

Polikushka—a wonder photo-play based on the story of serfdom by Leo Tolstoy produced in Russia by the world-famous Moscow Art Theatre, released thru Russian Artfilms, and distributed in America by the Friends of Soviet Russia and Workers' Germany for the relief of starving German children, was exhibited in Chicago last night at Orchestra hall.

Polikushka is a Russian serf, a stableman on a manor, the owner of which in this case is a woman. She is more kindly than the usual historical feudal lord. Polikushka has a wife and ennumerable small children, and an unconquerable weakness for vodka. From the first he evokes sympathy as an unkept good natured fellow constantly getting into trouble because of his unquenchable thirst. He steals for vodka, passes as a horse doctor to get money for it, gets flogged for theft and is constantly assailed by his wife for drunkenness, but he keeps merrily on reeling and laughing thru the first part of the photo play—the wife always forgives and the children adore him.

Rejoices At Trust.

Dutloff, a fellow serf, a house servant in fine clothes, is jealous of Polikushka because the mistress is fond of him. Soldiers are needed for the army and Dutloff wants to send Polikushka. Boyarimin, the noblewoman, refuses to give Polikushka up to the conscripts and to hide him away from them she sends him to the city to fetch a large sum of rubles from her gardener. A man in Dutloff's own family is sent off to fight for the Czar. The confidence of the mistress and the prospects of the trip make Polikushka very happy but fill his wife with dread. He promises faithfully and swears by the ikon not to touch vodka. With horse and cart and after many farewells to the children he leaves.

Polikushka's Discovery.

Withstanding temptation bravely, he passes up the inns and avoids drink, altho there was plenty of it at the place he slept where the soldiers were on their way to war. He steals out of the place at dawn with the rubles tucked away in his ragged cap. Sleep overtakes him and while he dreams of a triumphant return with the money and the applause of his family and neighbors the envelope containing the rubles is shaken from a rent in his cap as the cart jogs along the bleak Russian highway. He awakens within sight of home and proudly takes off his cap to secure the rubles. The money is lost. Polikushka becomes a terror-stricken soul rushing madly back over the roadway in frantic search of the precious package. The picture leaves him a pitiful figure exhausted on the ground. With hands and legs outstretched in tragic despair.

He returns home at twilight, feigns a smile to satisfy his wife and steals a rope from the cradle which he conceals under his jacket while food is being prepared. The mistress sends for him and he goes out—bidding a mute farewell. Hurrying into a garret he hangs himself where he is found by a woman who has come for clothes hung up to dry. She rushes out and a crowd gathers. The wife who is bathing the baby rushes frantically up the rickety ladder; looks up at Polikushka's dead body and crumbles to the ground below. A commotion near the cradle rallies her and she tears thru the neighbor woman to see her drowned baby lifted out of the bath.

Dutloff finds the rubles; the mistress refuses them—it is coin of musfortune. A substitute for young Dutloff is bought with the money. As the soldier and revelling friends are coming home they must turn aside for a funeral procession. On the cart of the ill-fated trip Polikushka's coffin is tied and the smaller box is carried under the arm of a man walking. The wife and all the ragged little children follow.

Rare Acting of Moskvin.

The performance is superb. The Russian players have an interpretive ability new in America and certainly not seen in our jazz photo-plays. Moskvin's magnificent gradations of dramatic meaning is carried thruout the entire play perfectly. Whether he is tapping the bottom of an empty bottle for a doubtful drop of vodka or in the high moments of his art when he discovers the loss of the rubles, he is perfection always. Looking back into the doorway of his home on the way to the garret his acting is great.

Perfect Acting of Grief.

And what is true of Moskvin can also be said for the others. The woman who discovers the suicide displays a remarkable piece of acting in getting out of the garret. The wife reaches heights rarely seen here in emotional acting. When she sees Polikushka's swinging body her face is one hardly to be forgotten—her fall to the floor below is perfection. Her interpretation of a grief-crazed woman is her high moment and she handles it perfectly.

The setting is in the year of 1830 and the life of the serf and manor of the times is accurately portrayed. The samovar, the vodka, the ikons, the dirt, the rags and the misery of the serfs—is all there in grim realism. From beginning to end the picture strikes at the very core of the emotions.

15 More Strikers Arrested; Officer 3159 Wants Credit

Fifteen garment strikers were arrested yesterday. All will demand jury trials. The 35 arrested the day before were arraigned yesterday before Magistrate Trude and demanded jury trials among them the reporter for the DAILY WORKER who was arrested when he took the numbers of the police who were beating Ethel Spink.

Officer 3159, not 3189; beat up Miss Spink on S. Market St, Tuesday morning. The DAILY WORKER had the number wrong, in Wednesday's issue, thru a typographical error. The error was called to our attention by 3159 himself who met the DAILY WORKER reporter in S. Clark street court and said he wanted the credit due him.

Drunken Plute Is At Loss To Know Who Fired Bullet

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 19.—"I don't know who shot me," Courtland S. Dines, Denver millionaire, today testified for the first time in the preliminary examination of Horace A. Grees, former chauffeur for Mabel Normand. Greer is charged with the attack.

Dines' startling testimony was taken as a big point for the defense, as both Miss Normand and Edna Purviance, present at the New Year's party in Dines' apartment, where the shooting occurred, have previously declared they did not see the attack.

Walker and Company Peddle Labor Vote To Both Parties

Governor Len Small has been endorsed by the Illinois State Federation of Labor for governor. The Federation also endorsed Kent E. Keller for the democratic nomination. The Small-Keller endorsement is signed by John H. Walker, president; Victor Olander, secretary-treasurer, and Vice-Presidents Al Towers, James B. Connors, Emil Reinhold, Joseph W. Morton, Thomas Kelly, M. J. Whalen, Mary McEnerney, R. G. Fitchies, Waldo Cross of the Illinois Federation of Labor.

Landis Award Dead, New Building Trades Council May Say

The Landis award will be officially declared dead by the new building trades' council to be organized in Chicago, it was said in Federation circles yesterday.

This new Chicago building trades' council is expected to come thru a reorganization of the present dual councils as the result of a three-day conference between executives of the A. F. of L. Building Trades' Department, the international unions involved and local labor officials, held in the Hotel Morrison.

Judge Benjamin B. Lindsey, of Denver, Is a Human Being

DENVER, Colo., March 19.—For the first time in the history of civilization, a court has moved to protect the rights of children to be born.

Juvenile court Judge Benjamin B. Lindsey of Denver, has ordered payment by the county of sums to guarantee proper care of two unborn children six months in advance of their birth and to continue for six months after birth. Names of the mothers were withheld.

Labor Candidates Win Nominations In St. Paul Primaries

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ST. PAUL, Minnesota, March 19.—George L. Siegal, organized labor's candidate for mayor of St. Paul, led the field in the primaries here today receiving 3,000 votes more than Arthur E. Nelson, the present mayor.

Several other labor candidates were nominated for city offices. The city election will take place on May 6.

Still After Honduras.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—A landing party of nine officers and 167 sailors has been sent to the relief of Americans at Teguoigaipa, Honduras, following an "urgent request" to the navy department from American Minister Franklin Morales.

Vote List Grows.

With more than 200,000 names added to the registration roles, a record number of Chicagoans will be entitled to vote in the November elections. The books now carry the names of approximately 1,100,000 potential voters.

Mabel's Chauffeur.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 19.—Horace A. Greer, former chauffeur for Mabel Normand, film actress, was today held to answer in superior court on the charge that he attempted to kill Courtland S. Dines, Denver millionaire on New Year's Day.

Washington Miners Renew Contract.

SEATTLE, Wash., March 19.—Coal barons and District No. 10, United Mine Workers, have signed a three-year contract covering 2000 miners maintaining the present scale.

Committee of 15 Faces Injunction Challenge Today

labor as a whole in behalf of the sweatshop workers.

Police Brutality Issue.

Evidence of the appalling brutality of police and private thugs in the strike zone will be presented to the committee. The numerous assaults which have been committed on girl workers SINCE the committee visited Mayor Dever two weeks ago will be brought to their attention.

Officer 3181, who beat Sophie Altschuler into an unconscious condition, is still flourishing his locust stick, smelling of liquor and swearing at girl strikers on S. Market Street. Strikers insist that the "Committee of 15" take some action to force this brute from the neighborhood of frail girl strikers.

Dever and Officer 3181.

Mayor Dever can have no defense for keeping Officer 3181 on S. Market St., or even on the force. He does not deny that he beat Sophie Altschuler and the fact that she was confined to bed for days under doctor's care at the Hotel Morrison is sufficient proof that she was seriously injured.

The beating of Ethel Spink on S. Market St. Tuesday afternoon was a typical act of police violence in this strike. Its brazenness was accentuated by the fact that it was done in the presence of a score of persons and that the newspaperman who took the numbers of the assaulting police was arrested. This is one of many cases which the committee will consider. Unless this police violence is stopped an irresponsible, drunken brute is likely to commit murder.

Citizens' Committee Meeting.

If the "Committee of 15" fails to give the strikers the aid they expect the leadership will fall to the special sub-committee of the Citizen's Committee, headed by Father Frederick Seidenberg of Loyola University, which meets again Saturday morning in the office of Miss Mary McDowell, commissioner of public welfare.

This special citizen's group meets Saturday and it has been learned in reliable sources that its members are greatly aroused at the injunction which attempts to deprive workers of their civil rights under the constitution. It is expected that this committee will take a stand against such abuse of the courts as Denis Sullivan is committing.

Mass meetings arranged by the committee are a likely outcome of Saturday's meeting and a declaration against labor injunctions which will be sent to all the churches and public spirited organizations in Chicago.

Getting After Bosses.

At the same time this committee is circularizing all the dressmaking employers of Chicago which have not yet settled with the union demanding their answer to the query whether they believe in collective bargaining or not.

The committee is urging employers strongly to make their peace with the union and its friends give it some credit for some of the settlements which have already been made.

On this committee besides Father Seidenberg are: Miss Agnes Nestor, President of the Women's Trade Union League, Alderman Oscar Nelson, Vice-President of the Chicago Federation of Labor, Mary McDowell, Dean Holgate of Northwestern University, and Prof. H. A. Mills, University of Chicago.

On Trial for Death of Five.

MASS MEETING OF THE NEGRO TENANTS LEAGUE OF CHICAGO

MONDAY, MARCH 31, AT 8 P. M.

ODD FELLOWS' HALL, 3335 South State Street

Speakers: Lovett Fort-Whiteman, Bob Minor, J. Louis Engdahl, Gordon Owens, Otto Huiswood, and Others.

The League has just been organized by prominent South Side Negroes and at the mass meeting will present the Negroes of Chicago with a housing program which is practical, capable of immediate effect, and which is intended to curb both white and colored profiteering real estate sharks who have been grafting on the miserable housing conditions under which they are forcing Negroes to live.

The DAILY WORKER reporter who investigated housing conditions among Chicago's Negroes will speak for 15 minutes summarizing the results of his investigation.

WHEN MACDONALD FAILS NEXT STEP IS COMMUNISM

Is Labor's Only Hope Then, Says Nearing

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, March 19.—"The attempt of British Labor to inaugurate a new social system by due process of law is the last chance of the social-democrats," declared Scott Nearing in the course of a talk before the Rand School.

"If British labor fails," he continued, "there is no hope for the workers of the world save in the methods of Communism,—that is in the seizure of political power, the dictatorship of the workers, and the expropriation of the capitalists.

Should Help Unionism.

"If MacDonald is to succeed in laying the foundations for a new social order he must soon make an issue, and go before the country in a general election that will strike at the root of the present social order. He must do this, either in domestic politics, or in foreign affairs, or in both.

"In domestic politics, for example, he might push the bill providing for the erection of 200,000 new houses for workers thru the employment of those now out of work; or he might push the bill providing that the workers who are unemployed should settle on the great estates and farm them; or he might push the capital levy; but it is doubtful whether he could obtain a basic issue in any of these fields. Certainly the most hopeful of these is the capital levy. If he were to turn the mines over to the miners, or if his government were to push the organization of labor with the same vigor that other governments have pushed the organization of capital, he would probably be able to go before the country on a real test question.

"In foreign affairs, Mr. MacDonald has taken the first step—the recognition of the Soviet Republic. His next step, however, is to protect the German workers in their right to revolution against the French and German capitalists, and his third step is to call a world conference (including the Soviet Government) the object of which is to liquidate imperialism and to take the necessary steps to prevent another world war.

With Bosses In Strike.

"What has happened thus far?

"No sooner had the MacDonald ministry assumed office than it ran head on into the class struggle in the form of a railroad strike. The results were interesting and extremely significant—the labor government treated the strikers as obstructionists, and altho the strike has been called by a 6 to 1 strike vote, as a protest against a cut in wages, the representatives of the Labor Government denounced the strike leader, spoke of "community interests," and sought to harmonize the viewpoint of the workers and the management.

"Community interests, in the case of a strike, are the interests of the established order—that is, of property. Labor interests, in a strike, are the interests, not of property, but of the producers. Faced with this dilemma, a government must choose to side with the property owners or with the producers. The MacDonald government in this first test, chose the side of the owners.

MacDonald's Dilemna.

"Why did the Labor Ministry act thus? Because they are proceeding on the assumption that the new social order can be brought about thru political means. A strike is an industrial act, and as they stand today, necessarily a "direct act," and thus opposed to law and order and to the interests of the State.

"The first effort of the British Labor Party was to get power. Now it is striving to keep power. But to do this it must work closely enough with the established order to command conservative and liberal support. What does this mean in a war, a strike, or some other crisis? It means lining up with the owners against the workers.

"There are only two fundamental economic groups in Britain at critical moments. Men must then line up with one group or with the other.

"Is this inevitably so? Probably. Meanwhile the world watches and waits while the British Labor Party seeks to demonstrate that a producer's society can replace a profiteer's society by due process of law."

Morgan Loans France Money To Starve Ruhr, Shipstead Charges

By LAURENCE TODD

(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, March 19.—Investigation as to how far the state department has involved the United States, thru J. P. Morgan & Company, in the military venture of Poincare as against the reconstruction plans of Ramsay MacDonald, may be demanded by progressives in Congress.

The state department has admitted that it knew beforehand of the $100,000,000 loan arranged by the Morgans to stabilize the political and financial position of Poincare in the face of anticipated defeat in the French elections.

$400,000,000 Graft.

Senator Shipstead has asked the senate to read Walter Hines Page's disclosure that, when the United States went into the world war, the British government had overdrawn its account with J. Pierpont Morgan & Co. to the amount of $400,000,000 and did not have the money to make good that overdraft. A few days after we went into the war that sum of money was taken from the federal treasury, loaned to Great Britian, and deposited in the Morgan bank.

Flag Follows Dollars.

"If the American flag follows the American dollar," the inquisitive Farmer-Labor senator suggested, "it would be interesting to know what that overdraft in the Morgan bank had to do with the desire that became so prevalent here to enter the war for liberty and democracy. It would also be interesting to know whether this new loan by Morgan to the French imperial government of Poincare will be used in dragging us into another war to save the world for democracy and Poincare. We are asking donations from the American people to help feed the starving women and children of Germany. At the same time Morgan & Co. lend money to Poincare's government so they can keep up the war and starve the women and children.

"I would like to know where the constitutional lawyers with their fine hairsplitting have been, while all these dollars that have been wrung out of the labor of the American people have been shoveled out in billions to support the imperial governments of Europe in their struggle to determine who shall control the destinies of the world and who shall collect the taxes in order that they may have interest on their war bonds."

COMMUNIST·CHILDREN'S·COLUMN

"DOMINICK'S SICKNESS"

By PAUL PAULOWICH

MY NAME is Paul, and I am 12 years old and I am in the seventh grade. My teacher says I write the best stories in the class, but my grammar ain't no good, and it's because my parents are foreigners and don't talk English. But my sister Mary, who graduated from the same school I am going to, and who works in a department store, talks English all right and she says I am going to be a writer some day, but I know I ain't because I don't know nothing to write about even if I am pretty good at putting my ideas down.

Anyhow, I am writing this story because I told my sister Mary about it and she said I should and she'd give a quarter. She belongs to a club called the Young Workers League and she said they might put it in their magazine. But I don't think they will because there's nothing exciting in it and besides they must be awfully hard up for writers if they put in anything by a kid. But gee, it would be peachy if they would and could show the kids my own words printed in a book. Anyway, what I wanted to write about was something that happened at school last week. We got a kid in our class named Dominick and he's a whiz at arithmetic and memorizing things. He is always the first one to learn a poem by heart. He's only 12 years old, but Jiminy, he's big! Every night he seems to grow a little. I guess that's what makes him so skinny and pale and jerky. Somehow or other he can't sit still very long or keep his hands still. He's always twitching and moving his hands and feet and winking his eyes and gee, but teacher gets sore, even if he is the smartest one in the room.

So, anyway, they put some signs up on the walls for us kids to read and they had some junk on them about how to be healthy. Each idea was put down in a little poem and teacher made us copy them and learn them by heart for home work. One of the poems went like this:

The proper foods for me to eat
Are simple ones and clean,
A pint of milk each day I need,
And vegetables green.
The time to eat is during meals
And never in between.

There were five more like this and they were all about washing your teeth and going to bed early and taking baths often. Next morning when teacher asked us who knew all the verses by heart, Dominick was the only one who did. That's pretty good, ain't it, but teacher never praises Dominick because his twiching gets her nerves.

That morning I went into the penny lunchroom in the basement and bought a nickel's worth of sandwiches and Dominick looked at me so hungry that I gave him one, but the bell rang before he could eat it all up, so he put the rest in his pocket. Afterwards when we were supposed to be studying our geography, he tried to eat it up, but he was out of luck 'cause the teacher caught him. Jiminy, but she was sore. She yelled: "You big idiot, do you think this is a lunch room? And what of the health poem you recited this morning? Didn't it say you mustn't eat between meals?" Poor old Dominick was so scared he began to twitch and wink and this got the teacher so sore she yanked him out of his seat and shouted, "You go home and bring your mother!"

In the afternoon Dominick brought his mother to school and she came into our room. She was dressed real poor and she had a baby on her arms and it kept on making funny faces and us kids could hardly keep from laughing. Anyway teacher asked her what was the matter with Dominick and why was he such a bad boy. But I guess Dominick's mother didn't understand English, cause she only kept on shaking her finger at him and saying:

"I give him the good lick. I give him the good lick."

Gee whiz, I was sorry for poor Dominick. He didn't do anything. And I guess that got the teacher's goat, because Dominick's mother didn't answer and she said loud and fast like when she's bawling us kids out and has that mean look on her face.

"I think there is something wrong with Dominick. He's got some sort of sickness or he wouldn't eat the way he does. I can't do anything with him. You go to the doctor with him, and find out if he can't be cured, or else we will have to send him to the parental school."

Then she said: "Dominick you explain to your mother what I said." But poor Dominick was too scared to talk, so he just shook his head and blinked and then teacher said he should go home with his mother.

Dominick didn't come back to school for two days and when he did, I asked him what the doctor had said about his sickness. And guess what? He told me the doctor said he wasn't sick at all, but he was growing real fast and wasn't getting enough to eat. So I asked him why he wasn't getting enough to eat and he said that his father was only making $20 a week and there were five kids younger than him in the family and they only got one quart of milk a day and they didn't have enough money to buy any more.

It's kind of funny, ain't it? Here's Dominick, the smartest one in the class and the first to memorize the health poems, but what good does it do him to memorize about drinking one pint of milk a day and eating green vegetables when his pa can't earn enough to give him as much bread and butter as he wants.

CAPITAL DOFFS HAT TO LEWIS, SAYS SCAB SHEET

Operator Lauds Him for Attack on Howat

By THOMAS MYERSCOUGH

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 19.—John L. Lewis is a labor leader after the heart of Al R. Hamilton, the most notorious anti-union coal operator in western Pennsylvania. In the "Coal Trade Bulletin," published in Pittsburgh and owned by Hamilton, Lewis is lauded as a labor leader to whom "Capital can doff its hat."

The editorial is reprinted from "Financial World" of New York and follows, in part, under the title, "Lewis a Fearless Leader."

"Lewis A Fearless Leader"

"At times Capital has had a good reason for feeling resentful towards certain leaders of organized labor for their unfair attitude towards it and their exploitation of their unions to further their personal ambitions. It has felt that, were it not for this self-pampering, numerous strikes and walk-outs could have been avoided and considerable financial loss to wage earners prevented.

"There is no ground for such a complaint against a labor leader like Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, the International union of soft coal miners. Capital can doff its hat to him in admiration and deep in its heart wish there were more like him, for it is the kind of leadership based upon the mutuality of understanding. Lewis is capable of appreciating there must be an amicable partnership between capital and labor to secure the maximum advantage for each of them.

"He is without fear as a labor leader. This he has shown in his handling of Howat at the union's recent convention at Indianapolis when the fire-eater, who served a jail term in Kansas for preaching anarchy, tried to force his reinstatement. Howat found out what a two-fisted fighter Lewis was and that he was no match for him. In such hands the interest of the soft coal miner can be trusted".

Has Army of Thugs

"The Coal Trade Bulletin" which carried the above as an editorial is owned by the notorious coal operator and financial wizard of Pittsburgh, and is edited by an arch enemy of union miners whose name is R. Z. Virgin. The latter is best known for his exploits in West Virginia, where he made a bitter fight to prevent the United Mine Workers from establishing itself in that terror ridden state. In 1914 when the U. M. W. of A. was making a fight to establish a local union at Colliers, West Virginia, in connection with its drive in that state, Jimmy Oates "Second" Caleffi, Frank Ledvinka and the late lamented Fannie Sellins, (afterwards clubbed to death) all organizers of the union, were attacked by an army of thugs and hoodlums under this man Virgin.

Get Rid of Lewis

This man who was so bitterly opposed to the union then, is now the editor of a coal trade paper, owned by a non-union operator and is loud in his praise of Lewis. It has come to a nice pass when publications owned and controlled by non-union operators serve as the mediums of publicity for union leaders. But the editor evidently knows what he is talking about when he says that "Capital can doff its hat" to a leader of that type. The miners must take advantage of every opportunity that presents itself now and in the future and remove from their midst that type of leader. They must know that a leader who can win the praise of a scab operator can not serve them and win for them the things that they so much need.

Denver Socialists For June 17 Meet; Get After Officials

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DENVER, March 19.—The socialist party of local Denver at its last meeting passed a resolution to cooperate with all forces in the state of Colorado who will go on record for independent political action. The socialists decided to invite all such forces to take part in a state convention to elect delegates to the convention at St. Paul June 17.

A resolution also requested explanation from the national officials of the socialist party as to why they did not participate in the St. Paul conference. The meeting requests them to take part officially in the June 17th convention at St. Paul.

Ku Klux Klan Hit In Resolution at Ohio Miners' Meet

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BELLAIRE, Ohio, March 19.—Opposition to the Ku Klux Klan and demands for enforcement of safety laws by the state department of mines were among resolutions passed by the annual convention of subdistrict 5, district 6, United Mine Workers, in session here.

Union officials state that there have been 67 fatal accidents in this sub-district alone during the past year, and that most of these accidents could have been prevented by proper safety laws.

A resolution that any miner who joins the K. K. K. will forfeit his membership in the miners' union, was carried.

William E. Green, Intl. secretary-treasurer, United Mine Workers, addressed the convention urging it to ratify the three-year contract recently negotiated with the mine operators at Jacksonville. Local officials of the union predict ratification by a large majority.

Kentucky Miners' Wages Cut, With Officials Ignoring

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CROMONA, Kentucky, March 19. A cut of 20 per cent in the wages of the miners in the Kentucky coal fields was permitted without protest by the officials of the United Mine Workers of America, the DAILY WORKER is advised today. District 23 of the U. M. W. of A., which has made no real effort to organize this field, shifted the responsibility of fighting the recent cut in wages to District 19, in Tennessee, after M. J. Shappin and other miners had repeatedly urged President Jackson of District 23 to effect some organization work.

Officials of District 19, the miners charge, have ignored communications of miners to them informing them that coal diggers are only receiving 40 cents a ton for their work.

BROPHY SOLD OUT TO LEWIS; REWARD COMING

Former Progressive Is Now Yellow Lackey

By EVELYN PRESTON

(Staff Correspondent of Federated Press)

ALTOONA, Pa., March 19.—When shall labor countenance the injunction and when shall it oppose this instrument of the law? This issue occupied the District 2 convention of the mine workers when the opponents of President John Brophy tried to put him in an unfavorable light because he had resorted to the injunction a number of times during his present term of office.

The miners voted for unionization thruout the open shop sections of their territory. Not only are there 15,000 unorganized miners in Somerset county, but in Jefferson, Indiana, Armstrong and Cambria counties there are about 5000 nonunion men. Now that peace has been made with the international union, District 2 hopes for co-operation in organizing. Brophy explained that they are attempting to maintain recruiting locals in the nonunion areas to keep alive the union sentiment.

To prevent mine accidents, monthly inspection instead of quarterly, as at present, is demanded.

A Real Test

The MacDonald government in Great Britain is soon to be faced with a real test of strength. The country is on the eve of a great strike of 700,000 miners.

The coal diggers are in no mood to compromise. They have suffered so long from the exorbitant cost of living that they are bent on fighting it out despite the insistence of many of their leaders to put the brakes on and be cautious.

For some time the miners looked for relief in the award of the Sankey commission. True to his colors, Lloyd George sabotaged these recommendations and made them a dead letter. The situation has grown more critical since the advent of the Labor government and the recent rise in the cost of living.

More than that. The miners are in an ugly mood at the do-nothing policy of the government. Three miners lose their lives daily in the mining industry of England. One miner is injured every three minutes. Only decisive action by the government can meet these wretched conditions even half-way.

It is this determination of the miners for a showdown that is forcing the MacDonald government to consider the critical state of affairs amongst the coal diggers. The government is soon to introduce a miners' minimum wage bill guaranteeing the workers 79 per cent more in wages than they received in 1914. This, it is hoped, will help the miners bear the heavy burdens of the increased cost of living.

For the English capitalists this is very dangerous legislation. Once this policy of the government fixing wages on the eve of a strike is adopted in the case of the miners, what is there then to stop its application in the case of the railway workers, the dockers, and other workingmen? Such a policy is diametrically opposed to a most fundamental prerogative of the ruling class—the right to dominate the distribution of the products of industry. On this point all shades of capitalist opinion will unite.

We may, therefore, look forward to a decisive test of strength. The Labor cabinet members cannot delay the issue as far as the miners are concerned. They dare not antagonize the miners' powerful organization, for they can as much get along at the helm without the support of the coal workers as they can without a majority vote in Parliament.

The issue is thus narrowing down to a fundamental issue of class power, with the miners as the spokesmen of the whole working class and the majority of the government as the open representatives of the whole capitalist class.

Fooling the Farmer

The four leading panaceas offered the farmers by the capitalists to relieve the acute economic distress of the rural regions are: tariff, co-operation, diversification, and government credit.

All of these "remedies" have been tried at some time or other jointly or separately, and they have failed disastrously. An examination of these measures shows that there is no way out for the mass of farmers under capitalism.

Wool, wheat, flour, corn, live poultry, eggs, cattle, swine, and fruits were taken off the free list of 1919 and given the high protection of the Fordney-McCumber Tariff Act by the government. Yet, it is these very products which show the heaviest decline in the last five years of "protective" tariff blessings, according to the last report of Secretary of Agriculture Wallace.

Co-operation as practiced today along capitalist lines stands no chance in competition with the highly developed, strongly organized capitalist combinations. So long as the grain elevators, the railroads, the shipping, marketing and distributing facilities are controlled by the employing class the financiers and manufacturers of Wall Street, farmers' co-operative attempts will meet with failure for the economic reason of being unable to compete with and overcome the insuperable obstacles of the capitalist clique and its stranglehold on agriculture.

Diversification translates itself into diversified hardships. What relief is it to the farmer to be at the mercy of the beef trust or the dairy magnates instead of the grain gamblers? Attempts at diversification simply spell increased difficulties in the process of diversifying which is not a matter of the moment but a process over years.

The farmers have had too much experience with government credit to take any stock in its efficacy. As long as we have capitalist control of the government, credit in practice means big interest for the bankers, more stringent control of the farmers' fate by these bankers, and lots of graft and corruption for the bosses' lackeys. The story of War Finance Corporation and its exploits presents the best proof of the uselessness of this quack remedy of capitalism.

The Daily Revolution

The self-styled "world's greatest newspaper," sometimes called the Chicago Tribune, seems to have been seized by a peculiar sort of revolutionary fits. Hardly a day passes when this sheet is not filled with the blessings of some revolution sweeping Soviet Russia somewhere in some way. How?, When? Where? By whom? These are only incidental questions which the revolutionary stories seldom deal with. When these questions are the order of business for the revolting scribe, imagination is the arbiter and the informant.

It might appear strange to some that a newspaper which has such high regards for itself and its reputation should peddle in such thrash at this late date. How is this practice of the Tribune to be accounted for in view of the almost daily increase in the number of countries giving Soviet Russia full recognition?

Many explanations have been offered to account for the overworked imagination and the ordinary, plain lying of this daily. It seems as if the Tribune is attempting to cajole the Soviet Government into allowing one of its correspondents to remain in Russia. The Soviet authorities have expelled the Chicago Tribune correspondent because of his deliberate lies and rather questionable activities.

Then again it is said in prominent business circles of Chicago that the manager of the Tribune's European main office, the Paris headquarters, is in the employ of the French government. The French capitalists are anxious to estrange everybody from Soviet Russia so that they have as little competition as possible in their dealings with the Soviet Republic. These French interests are particularly interested in keeping the United States away from a policy of normal, peaceful relations with the Soviet Government. The Tribune correspondents are thus reported to be getting paid on both ends of the news lines for their revolutionary activities in Soviet Russia.

Whether these are the precise reasons for the Tribune's vicious lies, we don't know, yet. But these explanations look mighty plausible and are well suited to the general policy of this daily mouthpiece of the owning class.

Ghandi, the Pacifist!

No more humiliating figure crouches on the world stage at the present moment than Mahatma Ghandi, once revered leader of millions of Hindoos and honored chieftain of the pacifist cult. Yesterday his name stood high on that list of champions of human freedom who throw themselves in front of the merciless juggernaut of oppression. Today he hides away in seclusion in mortal dread of the movement he helped to create.

Mahatma Ghandi is the foremost prophet of non-violent resistance. He was able to arouse the Hindoo millions against the British government, but the time arrived when that government feared that the great tide of opposition would burst the dykes built by Ghandi, so it threw the prophet of peace into prison. When Ramsay MacDonald went into office he released Ghandi and for very sound imperialist reasons.

Since Ghandi went to jail new leaders have arisen in India. They do not like a policy that allows the British government to kill their people while they look on and bow in homage before the altar of pacifism. Today the Hindoos view the crouching prophet of pacifism with pity and perhaps contempt.

But it appears that Ghandi is not an undiluted pacifist. He is surely 100 per cent pacifist in the struggle between the Hindoos and the British government, but listen to the Mahatma talking: "If Russia attacks us (meaning the British occupation—Ed.) we expect the militaristic nations of Europe to come to our aid to prevent Russia from becoming too strong, and we should welcome the aid." So it appears that Ghandi is willing to shed blood in defense of the capitalist system, even welcoming the aid of the militarists of Europe against the introduction of the Soviet system into India.

Ramsay MacDonald was serving British imperialism well when he freed the Hindoo fakir Ghandi.

The Negro Tenants League

The foresight of the Negro workers in presenting the resolution at the Sanhedrin All-Race Conference, demanding that all landlords be compelled to rent their houses to the first comer, at prices listed and unchangeable, has now borne fruit in the newly formed Negro Tenants League. True, the influence of the real estate sharks killed this resolution at the conference, which was controlled by conservative business men.

But the rejected resolutions declaring against discrimination against the Negroes, both as tenants and in industry, put squarely before the Race the fact that so-called welfare workers and property-owning business men do not represent the workers' interests. At the Sanhedrin a Workers Party delegate strongly championed this resolution for the abolition of the restriction of the Negroes' right of residence.

The DAILY WORKER, therefore, welcomes the news of the formation of the Chicago Negro Tenants' League, which demands in no uncertain terms that landlords cease their discrimination. If the recent Sanhedrin, controlled by conservative business interests, countenances profiteering on the Race, it seems the Chicago Negroes are determined to have a workers' organization of their own which will put an aggressive anti-profiteering and anti-discrimination program thru the 1925 Sanhedrin Conference.

Trotzky's Letter to Russian Communists

Note.—Today the DAILY WORKER continues publication of a letter written by Leon Trotzky, Minister of War in the Soviet government and member of the Central Executive Committee of the Russian Communist Party. Our readers will see from reading the letter on what a flimsy structure the capitalist press liars hang a revolt in the Communist ranks. We will publish Trotzky's letter in three installments. Next will come speeches by Stalin, Rykov and other leaders of the Russian revolution. Members of the Workers Party in particular should read this debate very carefully. Trotsky wrote to the enlarged session of the Central Committee of the Russian Communist Party as follows:

• • • •

A DEGENERATION of the "old guard" is to be observed several times in the development of history. Let us take the most recent and most striking historical example: The leaders and the parties of the Second International.

We know perfectly well that Wilhelm Liebknecht, Bebel, Singer, Victor Adler, Kautsky, Bernstein, Lafargue, Guesde and others have been direct and immediate disciples of Marx and Engels.

We know, however, that all these leaders—some partially, other totally—have in the atmosphere of parliamentary reform and of the strong growth of the Party and trade union apparatus, degenerated towards opportunism.

Eve of Imperialist War.

On the eve of the imperialist war, we saw with remarkable distinctness, how the formidable social democratic apparatus, protected by the authority of the old generation, became the most powerful hindrance to the revolutionary development. And we must say—we, "the old ones"—that our generation which, of course, plays the leading role in the Party, does not by itself conclude any guarantee sufficient in itself against a gradual and imperceptible weakening of the proletarian and revolutionary spirit, if the Party tolerates the further development of the bureaucratic methods of the apparatus, which transform the young generation into a passive object of education, and unavoidably confirm the alienation between the apparatus and the mass, between the old and the young Against this undoubted danger, there is no other means than a serious, profound and fundamental new orientation towards Party democracy with a continually increasing attraction of the proletarians from the workshops to the Party.

I shall not go into full details on the juridical interpretations of Party democracy and its limitations prescribed by the statute. No matter how important these questions are, they are but secondary questions.

We shall examine them in the light of the experience at our disposal and shall modify that which can be modified. But, before all, it is the spirit prevailing in our organizations which must be modified.

Acquire Collective Initiative.

The Party, thru its nuclei and unions, must again acquire collective initiative, the right for a free and comrade-like criticism without anxiety and fear, the right of organizatory self-government. The Party apparatus must be absolutely regenerated and renewed by means of compelling it to understand that it is the executive mechanism of the great collective body.

In the Party press, a great number of examples have recently been adduced characterizing the far-developed bureaucratic degeneration of Party practices and conditions. In response to critical voices, one met with the retort: "What is the date of your membership book?" Before the resolution of the Communist Central regarding the new policy had been published, the bureaucratized representatives of the apparatus had considered all mention of the necessity of the modifying the inner Party policy as heresy, as formation of fractions and undermining the discipline.

And now they are in the same way formally prepared to "take note" of the new policy, i. e., in practice to stow it away in a pigeon-hole. The renewal of the Party apparatus—of course, strictly within the frame of the statute—must have as its aim the substitution of the fossilized bureaucrats by fresh elements who are closely connected with the life of the whole Party or who are able to guarantee a suitable leadership.

And before all there must be eliminated from the leading Party posts those elements who, at the first sign of criticism, of protestation or of objection, seek to silence it by demanding production of the membership book. The new policy must have as its first result, that all members of the apparatus from the bottom right up to the top, realize that nobody is allowed to terrorize the Party.

Action Not Lip-Service.

It is by no means sufficient for our youth merely to repeat our formulas. It must make the revolutionary formulas their own by fight, fill them with life; it must form its proper opinion, its proper features and become capable of fighting for its views with the courage which is furnished by a profound conviction and an entire independence of character.

We must rid the Party of the passive obedience which leads to doing everything with eyes mechanically fixed on the superiors; we must rid the Party of all spineless, servile and career-hunting elements. The Bolshevik is not only a disciplined man: no, he is a man who goes deeply into the matter and who, in every case, forms a well-founded opinion and courageously defends it in the struggle, not only against the enemies, but also within his own Party.

Perhaps today he is in the minority in his organization. He subordinates himself, since it is his Party. But that does not, of course, always mean that he is wrong. It is perhaps only that he has perceived and understood earlier than others, the new task on the necessity of a change of policy. He will pertinaciously raise the question a second, a third and, if necessary, a tenth time. By so doing he will render a service to his Party, as he will help it to prepare itself for the new task, or to accomplish the necessary change without organic tremors and without fractionary convulsions.

Yes, our Party could not fulfill its historical mission if it became decomposed into fraction groupings. This must not and will not be done. The Party as a whole, as an autonomous collectivity, will prevent this.

No Fraction Formations

But the Party will successfully combat the dangers of the formation of fractions only when developing, confirming and strengthening the new policy towards workers' democracy. It is precisely the bureaucratism of the apparatus, which is one of the principal sources of fraction-formation.

It suppresses criticism and enables discontent to penetrate the organization. It is inclined to label any individual or collective, critical or warning, voice as fractionism. Mechanical centralism is unavoidably complemented by fractionism, a caricature of democracy and a formidable political danger.

With a clear understanding of the entire situation, the Party will accomplish the necessary change with all the firmness and resoluteness which the importance of the tasks confronting us require. It is precisely by this means, that the Party will raise its revolutionary unity to a higher level as a guarantee for the successful accomplishment of the immensely important tasks, both in the political and economic sphere and on a national as well as on an international scale.

(To Be Concluded Friday)

Mr. Morgan Takes a Hand

By JAY LOVESTONE.

AN ELEVENTH hour attempt is being made by the king of international finance, Mr. Morgan, to save the tottering franc. A loan of $100,000,000 has been granted to the French government in order to help it avert the financial and political crash that a continued depreciation of the franc would entail for it. The money will be used to stabilize the franc and "for such other purposes as the French government may determine."

Since the Armistice the European governments have floated loans close to a billion and a half dollars in the United States. During this period the Latin American governments have received about half a billion dollars of credit from our financiers. Thus the American capitalists are tightening their grip on the world's productive system.

Government Loans.

It is no accident that Morgan, who symbolizes more than any other banker the aggressiveness and the determination of our capitalist class to become the rulers of the capitalist world, should be called in at the last moment to pull the chestnuts out of the fire for the French imperialists. But at this time it is interesting to note that the arrangements of this loan call for repayment within a year. We had been led to believe that the reason for the French government's failure to pay the billions of dollars it owes to the American government, the billions of dollars gathered from the masses during the war in the various Liberty and Victory loans, was poverty. How does it come that the French government is able to pay the money it owes to private capitalists but is unable to pay to the government? Why is it that the same bankers who are insistent about the Federal government's calling off the French debt are taking care to get back whatever money they themselves lend to the same French ruling clique? Why is it that the United States government guarantees the Morgan firm all the strength at its disposal to collect private debts but keeps silent about the French debt long overdue the country as a whole?

Martial Law In Paris?

And what are "such other purposes" that the French government is planning to use the Morgan millions for? Already the French bankers and iron and steel kings are prepared to issue orders for a proclamation of martial law in Paris? The Comite des Forges is on the job. The first step towards the establishment of an open, brutal capitalist Fascist dictatorship has been taken. The cabinet has been empowered to legislate without the chamber of deputies. France, the cradle of capitalist democracy, is dropping its last pretenses.

Thus the United States government is aiding the French imperialists to stamp out revolution of the mass of workers and farmers in Europe, under the cloak of interfering politically. It is the leniency of the Federal government towards the French debtors that has enabled the Poincare clique to expend millions for the maintenance of armies with which the workers and farmers of Poland, Czecho-Slovakia and Roumania could be crushed. It is the support given by the Washington government to the Morgan interests that is now helping the French capitalists to save themselves from the wrath of the working masses of France.

Morgan's Fear.

Mr. Morgan as the agent plenipotentiary of the United States government sees only one enemy—the social revolution of the international proletariat against the capitalist imperialists. The Morgan loan is a cruel reminder to the American working class that our capitalists have become the hangmen of the workers of the world. How long shall we tolerate this condition for which we, the workers and farmers of this country, will, sooner rather than later, have to pay with our lives?

"In Which I Review the 'Goslings'"

By HARRY GANNES.

Upton Sinclair wields a wicked pen. Wrong gets no quarter from him. Especially has he paid great attention to the American youth. He has set himself the easy task of showing that the schools, from the kindergarten to the post-graduate courses, are controlled by grafters and teach propaganda.

The "Goose-step" was an exposè of the colleges. Now comes "The Goslings", younger brother to the "Goose-step", and Sinclair tears the thin sheeting from the public schools and reveals beneath the surface a gang of politicians all over the United States telling the children what they shall learn and what they shall not know.

But Sinclair makes a great mistake. He attributes all the evils of the school system to the incompetence and the graft of the school board officials on the one hand, and the grafters in the city and state governments on the other hand. The "Goslings" reeks with graft stories.

Are graft and arrogant "black-handed" capitalists the basic cause of our distorted system of education? The British school system is comparatively free from graft. There is even some liberty of discussion in the schools of that country. Yet we find that the "goose-step" is much in evidence there, and the "goslings" march to the same tune as our own future wage slaves.

If every one of the school board directors in the United States, so thoroly exposed by Sinclair, was to memorize the "Goose-step" and the "Goslings," and reform the entire school system over night, wipe out graft, let the teachers express themselves in true democratic style, give the children better schoolrooms, capitalism would not be undermined one whit. The fact of the matter is, the schools would become more efficient under those circumstances in turning out citizens with a vengeance.

To show up the class nature of capitalist education is not only necessary but imperative if the revolutionary workers are to gain the leadership of the masses of young workers, as well as adult workers. But to attribute the class nature of education to repression, to graft, and to lack of scholastic freedom is to indicate that these things can be reformed under capitalism and to show all that is necessary is completely to change the surface conditions complained of.

Bogdanoff, the great Russian economist in his book, "A Short Course in Economic Science," shows why the method used by Sinclair utterly fails. Bogdanoff says it is a comparatively easy matter where the data is available to show that a thing occurs in society so many times. Sinclair in the "Goose-step" and "Goslings" shows us conclusively that graft and repression occur many thousands of times. But, continues Bogdanoff, this is all meaningless if we do not explain the underlying basis for the phenomena that comes before us.

Every new system of production and distribution evolves its ideology which becomes the basis for its schools and institutions of learning. True, this ideology under capitalism in the United States is adulterated, cheapened—in the interest of capitalism; but it also can be purified, systematized and revivified—in the interest of capitalism.

The "Goslings" makes interesting reading but is hopeless as a contribution to an anaylsis of capitalist teaching in the United States.

Would a school system that had a passion for abstract truth and justice, that had no grafters (that even had Upton Sinclair as its chief superviser) have prevented the wholesale capitalist war psychology of 1917? Certainly not. Upon Sinclair himself, with all his freedom from "bias," with all his leaning toward the underdog, could not withstand the capitalist war slogan, and became a hearty upholder of the "war for democracy," and fight against the "huns." The workers' children could not have resisted, even with Sinclair's learning.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

President Obregon of Mexico, sent condolences to the Russian Soviet government on the death of its great leader Lenin. But Ramsay MacDonald did not, tho he cabled his regrets to Washington when the notorious mountebank Woodrow Wilson quit the world he had helped to make safe for the ruling class.

• • • •

When Ramsay MacDonald recognized the Soviet government, he followed that action up by a statement that "he would stand no monkey business from the Soviet government." Ex-premier Stanley Baldwin remarked that Mr. MacDonald would not dare use such language in addressing either the United States or French governments.

• • • •

American Socialist papers have placed all their eggs in the British Labor Party basket and are furiously defending every act of the Ramsay MacDonald government. A recent issue of the Oakland World, edited by a group of pacifists, tells us that even tho the British Labor Party can accomplish nothing in parliament, it is better that it should stay in, doing nothing than get out and allow somebody else in. For instance, a socialist has the job of cleaning out King George's garbage. Another sees that his sleeping quarters are free from unpleasant company which might cause his Majesty to consume much valuable energy scratching himself at night. Then, there is the Scotch socialist flunkey who is in charge of the Church of Scotland. All nice jobs.

• • • •

They can do lots of things in these positions the Oakland World argues. They can promote international peace (by laying the keels for seven new warships); liberate oppressed peoples, (by shooting fourteen Hindoo rebels and dropping bombs on Mesopotamia). The labor government of England, our socialist contemporary goes on, has already done a good deal for world peace. It has done so much that we have a new dictatorship in Europe, since Ramsay MacDonald assumed office. With the aid of Morgan's $100,000,000. Poincare has assumed the distatorship of that country.

• • • •

MacDonald released the Hindoo pacifist Ghandi, and assured the Hindoos of sympathy in their move for self government, says the Oakland World. Ghandi was released. He is now supporting England against the real Hindoo rebels. The latter part of the statement is a deliberate lie. MacDonald sternly warned the Hindoo that his government would stand no nonsense about independence from India. The Irish Republicans asked him what he was going to do about self-determination, which he bleated about before he came into power. He did not reply. He has repudiated the capital levy plank in his platform and the nationalization plank. Like the Socialist Party of America, the British Labor Party has thrown overboard everything it ever stood for, that means anything to the workers, but it will hold to the jobs to the very last.

• • • •

The Ramsay MacDonald government is just as imperialistic as either the Tories or Liberals. It is seeking to harmonize the contradictions within the capitalist system as its brother party in Germany did. The Social Democrats of Germany are today thrown on the dung heap of history while the exploited workers of that unhappy country spit on them as they pass. Ramsay MacDonald and his partners in the betrayal of the workers' interests will travel the same road. They will be tolerated by the capitalist parties so long as they serve them, but when the workers get thoroly disgusted with them they will be booted out into the cold world by the British ruling class.

• • • •

The Chicago Tribune comments as follows on the Dawes Commission. "The Dawes commission is a Morgan commission, and Poincare who has taken help from Morgan, must accept the findings of the Dawes commission or the help will be withdrawn and France will be in the ruin of its currency." Yet the Morgan-Dawes commission was unofficially blessed by the Coolidge government and in a recent comment on the $100,000 loan of Morgan to enable Poincare to become dictator, Coolidge declared that the United States government was behind the loan. Perhaps the esteemed Tribune thinks Morgan is not running this country as successfully as he is running France. Well, we'll say he is.

• • • •

If our readers have any doubts as to whether democracy exists in the United States we urge them to go over our "Teapot Special" very carefully and then do a little thinking. We put the question up to them whether they want the oily democracy of Morgan's millions in the interest of a few grafters to the democracy of a great majority of the people, the producers, under the title of a Workers and Working farmers Soviet Republic.

• • • •

The Chicago Tribune is running an insidious campaign for an open dictatorship in the United States. It fears a Third Party would throw the machinery of capitalist "democracy" out of gear. Therefore, it is selling a Mussolini rule in advance.

VANDERLIP TO KICK THE LID OFF WASHINGTON

CATCH BURNS CONSPIRING IN OKLAHOMA

Judicial Outrage Unparalleled In State, Charged

By ERNEST R. CHAMBERLAIN.
(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

OKLAHOMA CITY, Mar. 20.—An application to appear as a witness for impeachment of the supreme court of Oklahoma has been filed in the state house of representatives by Dr. G. F. Border of Mangum alleging a case of judicial outrage unparalleled in state history.

Border's case is of special interest to public ownership advocates as it shows the combination of the electric light combine and the Burns detective agency in a conspiracy to blackmail the mayor of Mangum, who was a physician, into calling off a bond election by seeking to induce him to perform a criminal operation.

Milked for Huge Profits.

Border had run for mayor on a public ownership platform following his discovery that the Mangum electric franchise, as a unit in a "parent company" in New Jersey, was milking Mangum citizens for about 50% profits on a valuation that was mostly water. Border was elected and called a bond issue for a municipal plant.

One night he was informed of a conspiracy by opponents of the election. A Burns' agent from Kansas City appeared with several confederates including three red-light women from Oklahoma City. A dictaphone was installed and Border summoned. He appeared, as chief of police, and took five six-shooters, a bowie knife and a pair of knucks from the crowd, had them arrested and convicted of conspiracy. After five years the case finally came before the criminal court of appeals where it was found that the county attorney had "misdrawn" the pleadings. The statute of limitations having run, the conspirators went free.

Border at the same time filed a suit for damages. The defendants got a change of venue to another county but nevertheless Border got judgment for $62,000.

After ten years the supreme court reviewed the case. They found that the court had refused one instruction to the jury. This instruction in substance, however, had been given in another charge, but nonetheless it was sufficient to influence the court to reverse the case for a new trial after Border had spent $20,000 of atorneys and costs. The court found the verdict not excessive and the essential facts to be true. It denied two applications for a rehearing showing the fallacy of the court position. The court, however, did not render a written opinion citing any authority for their action.

On the bench at the rehearing sat J. D. Lidick, former attorney for the Mangum Electric Co., who did not disqualify himself. One judge, Border says, explained that the court nearly always sustained other members. The judge said that there were two Democrats and two Republicans and "what you ought to have done was to have taken a shotgun and killed the whole damned push" (meaning the conspirators).

Prosecutor Is "Retained."

The attorney-general, Prince Frelinghysen prosecuted the criminal cases for Border, has since been retained by the conspirators.

The one bright spot in the sordid story is the successful operation of the Mangum municipal light plant. Judge N. E. McNeil, who wrote the decision is, however, expecting the indorsement of the Farmer-Labor League at El Reno.

As a sidelight on the court custom of usually sustaining one another is the decision on the validity of the state warehouse bill asked by the cooperative organizations of farmers. In this case the bill was held unconstitutional by a decision in which three members who were seeking reelection this fall found the bill constitutional while the balance who will either retire or seek other appointive jobs found the law invalid. One of these is to be made U. S. district judge for eastern Oklahoma. He is the Frank Kennemer whose name was temporarily held up while Senator Walsh directed the inspection of the Teapot Dome probe to the Oklahoma judgeship fight for a brief period.

"Committee of 15" In Strike Action

GIRL PICKETS PROMISED AID AT MEETING

Federation Injunction Committee Summoned

Four girl garment strikers, right from the picket line, attended the executive session of the "Committee of 15" of the Chicago Federation of Labor yesterday afternoon and made a blood-quickening appeal for action by the labor movement in support of the strike which they have been waging for more than three weeks

After listening to the recital of numerous brutalities by police and private thugs, which culminated last Friday in the beating unconscious of Sophie Altschuler, and which have continued without cessation ever since, the committee ordered John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, Victor Olander, secretary of the Illinois State Federation, and Anton Johannsen, chairman of the "Committee of 15" to call on Mayor Wiliam E. Dever this morning and demand that he curb his thugs.

Takes Up Injunction Issue.

The committee also promised to take up the injunction issue with the injunction committee of the Chicago Federation of Labor at a meeting Monday. This injunction committee also consists of 15 members, and will deal with the challenge presented by the sentencing of Florence Corn.

Plans for action to arouse the people of Chicago to the challenge of the liberties that the Judge Denis Sullivan injunction, and the police thuggery, present, are being made. Other action is contemplated which the committee for strategic reason does not wish to make public at this time.

"We Will Win!" Girls Cry.

"We are going to win this strike," declared Miss Freda Reicher, the spokesman for the girl strikers.

"We are going to win this strike in spite of injunctions and police."

If the strikers submit to the mandates of Judge Denis Sullivan, they told the "Committee of 15," the strike is lost. If they maintain their right to walk the streets in front of the scab shops the strike will be won.

"The strike will be won," they repeatedly declared.

Anton Johannsen, chairman of the committee, declared that Miss Reicher made a splendid presentation of the strikers' case.

Want Daily Strike Reports.

The tale which the militant girl strikers told the committeemen there on the sixth floor of the Federation building was so harrowing that even the most lethargic could not fail to have been aroused.

At the end the committee told the girls and Vice-President Meyer Perlstein, who was present that daily reports of police brutalities and the progress of the strike should be presented to them so that they might take prompt action.

Freda Reicher was followed by Margaret Welch, Mary Goorvitch and Eugenia Schlacter—all of them courageous and untiring pickets and all of them many-times prisoners of Mayor Dever's and State's Attorney Crowe's police.

The appeal for solidarity from the rest of the trade union movement here, for aid in this fight for union life and for human liberty, aroused a protracted discussion as to what measures should be adopted in the strikers' support.

A minority of the committee was for mass action by the Federation on the picket line in spite of Denis Sullivan and his outrageous injunction. This minority urged that the most effective support would be given by lining up on the picket line, side by side with the girls, who were threatened with the 30-day sentences that Sullivan had just handed out to Florence Corn. They felt that if the police were going to beat up on any more pickets that men from the trade union movement of Chicago should bear the brunt of it as well as the girls.

Nelson Stayed Away.

Alderman Oscar Nelson, vice-president of the Federation and member of the "Committee of 15" stayed away from the meeting but other conservative voices were raised against direct action of this kind. It was finally decided that the issue was

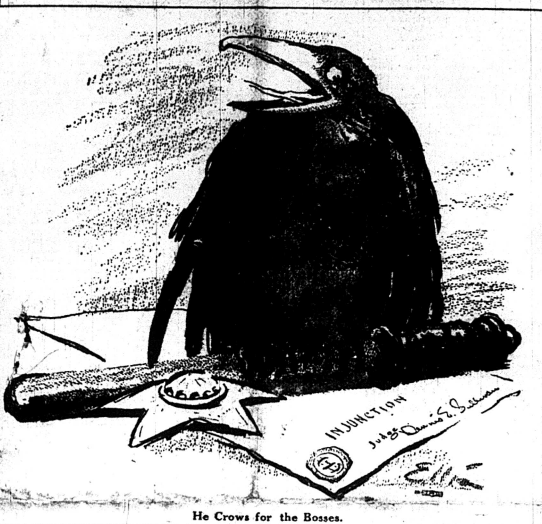
CROWE--STATE'S ATTORNEY



He Crows for the Bosses.

CHICAGO FIRES INJURE 3 WOMEN AND 4 FIREMEN

Wet Snow Saves Lives, Fire Laws Ignored

Three disastrous fires raged in Chicago yesterday, injuring four firemen and three women.

Scores of lives might have been lost in the conflagration that destroyed the huge Glaman Furniture warehouse at 1302 Newberry avenue and 832-36 Maxwell street in the heart of the Jewish tenement house district had the wind been different and wet snow not been falling.

Fire Laws Ignored.

The tenement houses, fire-traps where the city fire regulations are violated many times over, are clustered about the four-story warehouse that was blazing away. Flying sparks settled on buildings as far as three blocks away and Jewish people who were celebrating the Purim feast rushed out into the streets while firemen, aided by the wet snow finally put out the starting flames.

Another furious fire roared thru the State Bank building at Madison street and Ashland avenue. Capt John Coffin of Engine Company No. 78 was caught in the debris when the roof of the building collapsed. His skull may be fractured. Three other firemen were carried from the burning building, overcome by the smoke and cut by flying glass.

Aged Woman Injured.

Mrs. Catherine Cunningham, 75 years old; Mrs. May Lambert and her daughter Dorothy were overcome by smoke in a fire that broke out in the Woodlawn district at 63rd street and Stoney Island avenue.

One hundred and fifty flat dwellers were driven to the streets. Damage at each of the fires was estimated at approximately $250,000.

BURNS MUST GO!

Oklahoma Oil Auction Successful.

PAWHUSKA, Okla., March 20.—The 103,000 acres of Osage Indian land on which oil rights were auctioned here brought a total of $14,123,800. The record price for 160 acres paid by the Midland Oil Company, which bid $1,990,000 for a favored quarter section in the Burbank field.

"THIS STRIKE DETAIL—THE POTATOES," SAYS ONE BULL TO ANOTHER

"This strike detail is the potatoes: two bucks a day and a lot of drinks."

This fragment of conversation between two bulls in the S. Clark St. courtroom where 35 girl pickets and a DAILY WORKER reporter were awaiting arraignment explains a lot.

Two bucks a day and the drinks! The boss gets uniformed thugs cheaply. The regular "sluggers" cost the boss more for he has to pay their wages. When the city sends policemen to arrest his strikers they cost him nothing but the side money and the drinks.

Russia's Victories Abroad Put Home Issues to Front

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, March 20.—Commenting upon the recognition of the Union of Soviet Republics by Britain and Italy, the Pravda, in an article called "A Turning Point," writes:

"Our immense proletarian Power"—further says the organ of the Russian Communist Party—"has now been openly recognized as a legal power. However, the consolidation of our external position lays new obligations on us and—paramount among them—the obligation to carry on our internal construction with utmost energy. Thus, we must learn to be more efficient in commerce and industry; the very "tempo" of our life and work must be made stronger." This—the Moscow paper concludes—is an imperative demand of our days.

Jap Sub Goes Down.

LONDON, March 20.—Four officers and forty men have gone down in a Japanese submarine which collided with a warship off the port of Sasebo on the west coast of the Island of Kiushiu, 30 miles north of Nagasaki, according to a dispatch here recently.

McCray Jury Picking Slow.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., March 20.—Little progress toward selection of a jury to try Governor McCray on charges of larceny was apparent today as attorneys resumed their questioning of talesmen.

MOSCOW SEES TROUBLE WITH CHINA OVER PACT

Repudiation Is Due to Anti-Soviet Powers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, March 20.—China's repudiation of the signature of her foreign minister Wang, on the Chino-Russian recognition agreement signed recently at Pekin, is unjustifiable and liable to lead to the most serious consequences for which China will be responsible, it was declared in official Soviet circles today.

The Russian government was prepared to ratify the agreement which her emissary, Karakhan, signed with Wang and had demanded that China do likewise within three days. Up until today the Chinese cabinet had withheld ratification. The agreement provided for recognition of the Soviet government by China. Pressure from imperialistic nations, enemies of Soviet Russia, is believed responsible.

Poincare's Rule Hangs on Voters' Decision in May

PARIS, March 20.—The French cabinet today decided to hold the national elections May 11.

Snowstorm Aids Robbers.

EAST ST. LOUIS., March 20.—As Mrs. Joe Andruska stepped off a street car in a blinding snowstorm at noon today, three robbers held her up on the street and escaped with $1,100 in cash.

The woman, who runs a grocery store, had the money to cash checks of packing house employes.

Senate Asks War Department to Tell of Arms Sales to Mexico

WASHINGTON, March 20.—By unanimous vote the Senate today adopted a resolution introduced by Senator Walsh, Montana, chief prosecutor of the oil committee, directing Secretary of War Weeks to transmit to the Senate all information regarding the sale of arms and ammunition to Mexico.

N. Y. FINANCIER, STUNG BY CRITICISM, PLANS REAL PROBE OF BIG SCANDAL

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, March 20.—Frank A. Vanderlip, New York financier, has organized a big investigating agency to get evidence for senate scandal investigators.

Aroused at the criticisms directed at him for relating rumors, Vanderlip has opened his great financial resources for organization of what he calls a "Federal Research Bureau" to investigate the conduct of federal departments and bring the truth before the public.

Conscious of the extreme enmity against him, Vanderlip has taken out a personal accident insurance policy for $1,000,000 payable to his wife and two men associated with him in the Research Bureau, John Pearmain and Boyd Fisher.

His headquarters are at the Shoreham Hotel where agents come to him with documentary evidence which is stored in the largest safety deposit vault in Washington.

REGULAR BANDIT TO TESTIFY AT OILY HEARING

Jennings May Tell of The Presidency Bribe

WASHINGTON, March 20th.—Al Jennings, once a regular bandit, now reformed but evidently still moving in shady circles, will be called to the witness stand by the senate committee investigating the leasing of the Teapot Dome and other oil properties of the navy department, by the present republican administration. This is the first time that a real highwayman got mixed up in the oil scandal; to date those involved having control of the legal machinery while highwaymen and hold-up-men like Jennings who operated as outlaws were at a decided disadvantage.

Jennings was supposed to have reformed but it now appears that he attended the Republican National convention in Chicago in 1920 and associated with such characters as Jake Hamon, Harry Daugherty and other modern criminals. Jennings is supposed to know about the offer made to give anybody the presidency who would guarantee to give a friend of the Hamon gang the secretaryship of the Interior. Harding was their man. Unless the big crooks threaten Jennings with his past, he is expected to create something of a sensation.

Senator Thomas Walsh declared today that his committee was approaching the end of its labors and would begin to write his report unless some unforseen necessity for further investigation rose.

There is a general feeling in progressive circles here that the oil barons are "getting away with murder." It will be noted, as the DAILY WORKER correspondent has already pointed out that when the accusing finger was pointed at President Coolidge in the famous "principal" telegram and the nation was on tip toe waiting for the storm to break around the head of the huddled-up strikebreaking president in the White House. The Walsh committee, instead of following the culprit to his lair began to draw in its horns. Since then there has not been a word about the "principal."

A story that Sinclair oil money paid off part of a $1,00,000 deficit of the Republican party, resulting from the 1920 campaign, will be sifted by the committee.

Will H. Hays, former head of the Republican national committee, and now "czar" of the movies, will face the committee Saturday to tell whether he got 75,000 shares of oil stock, or any liberty bonds, from Harry Sinclair, to help wipe out the 1920 party deficit. Hays was subpoenaed after the story was told to the committee in private.

G. D. Wahlberg, a former Sinclair employe, one of those whose testimony first opened the secrets of the oil scandal, was to go on the stand today to tell what he knew about this newest sensation, but did not appear.

British Flyers Will Race Yanks Round-the-World

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, March 20.—Great Britain's effort to beat the United States in the first flight around the world will start next Tuesday from Calshott with three planes piloted by A. S. C. MacLaren, squadron commander, and pilots W. N. Plenderleith and Sergeant Andrews.

The flight will be from west to east along the same route followed by previous British efforts.

The British fliers, if successful, should cross the air trail of the American aviators at Delhi, India, from where the British airmen will continue along the coast to Alaska, thence to New Foundland and either direct to Ireland or via the Azores to Portugal.

VANCOUVER, Wash., Mar. 20.—Headed by Major Frederick L. Martin, the three round the world army planes hopped off from Vancouver Barracks here at 10:15 a. m. today bound for Seattle, Washington.

Graft Abounds in Washington; It Is Hard to Miss It

WASHINGTON, March 20.—Graft and dishonesty have been common in the prohibition unit during the past three years, Charles R. Nash, assistant commissioner of internal revenue, told the Senate Investigating Committee investigating the Internal Revenue Bureau today.

Approximately half of the employes discharged by the bureau for dishonesty during that time have been members of the prohibition division, he said.

Grand Jury Trying To Get Goods on Two Congressmen

WASHINGTON, March 20.—Cashiers of three banks in Pikesville, Ky., today were called before the federal grand jury, investigating charges against two congressmen.

Pikesville is the home town of Representative Langley who in a recent statement said he had heard reports conecting his name with a Chicago grand jury investigation.

The cashiers represented the Day and Night National Bank, the First National Bank and the Pikesville National Bank.

14 Men Entombed Alive in Sunken Jap Submarine

(Special to The Daily Worker)

TOKIO, March 20.—Fourteen men are believed still living in the engine room of the Japanese submarine No. 40, which was sunk yesterday in a collision near Nagasaki.

Crews sent to salvage reported that at 7:40 p. m. yesterday they were amazed to hear shouts coming from the interior of the sunken hulk.

Bergdoll Makes Promise.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, draft dodger, now in Germany, has definitely promised the American Legion, he will return to the United States within a month to serve his sentence, the American Legion legislative headquarters announced here today.

RICKARD TELLS COMMITTEE OF PICTURE PLOT

Daugherty's Pals Cash In on Law Violation

WASHINGTON, March 20.—Another chapter in the criminal investigation of Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty was written today by the senate committee investigating the chief of the Department of Justice when Tex Rickard, famous fight promoter, took the witness stand.

Rickard testified that Jap Muma, Daugherty's intimate friend and manager for the Edward McLean newspapers, promised to have laws passed making it legal to show the fight films.

Muma informed Rickard that Harry M. Daugherty stated at the private showing of the films to the Harding cabinet, that the anti-fight film law was "made for a nigger," meaning against the exhibition of the film showing Jack Johnson beating the white man, Jim Jeffries.

The senate office building was searched today for Jap Muma, but neither himself nor his lawyer could be found. Senator Wheeler, prosecutor of the Daugherty committee, issued a subpoena for his appearance tomorrow morning.

Rickard said he hired F. C. Quimby of New York to take moving pictures of the Dempsey-Carpentier fight. He knew, he said, that it was against the law to transport such films in interstate commerce.

Both before and after the fight, Rickard said he had conferences with Jap Muma.

Muma, the witness went on, discussed with him plans to show the pictures outside New Jersey, where the fight occurred and told him about bringing the films to Washington and showing it at E. B. McLean's house.

Rickard said that Muma "told me he could get a law passed that would permit pictures to be shown all over."

"What did Orr get out of the contract?"

"Twenty per cent. I made Muma and Martin give him part of their interest when he came in because they did not get a law passed and were not delivering the goods."

Rickard said he told Muma he would not take the responsibility for taking the pictures out of the state of New Jersey.

"Did he take it to Washington for the purpose of promoting legislation?" asked Wheeler.

Rickard produced a contract which included himself, Muma, Orr, Quimby and Martin.

Tex Rickard testified that after he showed the picture to the disabled war veterans in New York, Federal District Attorney Hayward of New York, appointed by Daugherty thru William Orr's influence, who was the fight promoter's partner, called him up and said he would have to sue him. Tex was fined $1,000. This was part of the arrangement between Rickard and Daugherty's pals. After the fine was paid the pictures were shown all over New York state, making a large profit.

Rickard said that he was flimflammed by Orr, Muma and the other associates and partners of the attorney general. The sporting promoter threatened to make an attempt to get his money back.

Thomas G Spellacy, former Deparment of Justice agent, testified that the testimony given by former Department of Justice Agent Holdridge regarding Jap Muma was correct. Holdridge was called to the stand and questioned about his discharge and reinstatement. Asked if there was any truth in the statement made by Burns that his former agent wept like a child when he was discharged, Holdridge emphatically declared: "Burns is a liar." There was an automatic nodding of heads of the committee.

The hearing will reconvene at 10 a. m. tomorrow.

No Scuttling of Oil Probe!

Girl Strikers Hold Picket Line Waiting for Help From All Labor

The picket line of the garment strikers was solid on all fronts yesterday. There was a new swing and verve in the picketing. All the pickets discussed was what they hoped the "Committee of 15," of the Chicago Federation of Labor, would do to help them win the strike.

"When those men from the Federation come out here on the picket line with us, that will mean the end of slugging," Sophie Young told a policeman who was arresting her. "You bums will not have courage enough to pick a fight with them. You will lose your pastime of beating girl strikers. Tomorrow is the end of beatings. Then we will have someone here to protect us."

Arrest Six During Morning.

Six warrants were made during the morning. Those arrested were: Morris Sher, Sophie Young, Willie Walker, Minnie Cantor, Edna Levin and Ida Giffin. They were all taken to the S. Clark St. police station and charged with disorderly conduct and then bailed out by the union. They will be arraigned in S. Clark St. police court this morning.

Eleven strikers who had been arrested Wednesday, were arraigned in S. Clark St. police court yesterday and all demanded jury trials. They were: Sarah Zelinsky, Goldie Tessel, Yetta Hornstein, Viola Goldstein, Bertha Sadler, Rose Yankcovitz, Catherine Ironisevich, Frances Lomain, Della Rabinovitz, Agnes Janeszimski and Ray Gusitz.

Eleven strikers who had demanded jury trials, when they were arraigned in police court, had their cases called before Judge Walker in jury court, yesterday morning. They all asked for postponements until March 27th. Their request was granted. They were: May Miller, May Wilson, Julius Wilson, Nathan Schwartz, Sam Barkin, Harry Rufer, Abe Jacobs, Ray Siegel, John Kokaliss, Isadore Kroon and Sam Shankman.

20 Cases Up March 27th.

This makes about twenty cases that have been set to be heard on March 27th.

Two more arrests were made on "rule to show cause" why they should not be punished for contempt of court for alleged violations of Sullivan's injunction. The two girls were: Esther Monarch and Mary Gorvitch.

The union has secured the services of Attorney William A. Cunnea, as associate counsel to assist Attorney Peter Sissman in handling the cases of those unionists being tried for contempt of court before Judge Sullivan.

It is planned to appeal all cases where jail sentences are imposed for violations of the injunction. The union will probably appeal only one of the cases where a fine is imposed in order to protect the principle that no punishment should be inflicted for violations of the injunction. Appeals involving all workers fined would cost much more than the fine would. By appealing one fine case the union effectively protests against the right of the court to issue any injunction which prohibits lawful picketing and impose any punishment for violating the injunction.

The appearance of an advertisement in the Chicago Tribune yesterday, signed by the Chicago Association of Dress Manufacturers, was hailed with delight by the strikers. The strikers pointed out that the association would not be spending a thousand dollars for an "ad" if the statement that they were not being effected by the strike was true. They all said that the poor down-trodden consumer to whom the "ad" was addressed would pay the cost of it thru increased prices on dresses.

"I hope the dress manufacturers will permit the Citizens' Committee to investigate their shops and the conditions of the industry," Meyer Perlstein said.

Lewis Must Explain His Desertion of Kentucky Miners

To the DAILY WORKER:—The coal masters have cut 20 percent in the Kentucky coal field. One could ask why the masters have cut without any trouble or revolt by the miners against the coal barons.

This question could be answered by every worker, every wage earner, just because the capitalists are organized, but the workers are not. It is up to the workers to wake up once and to get into the lines of organized labor and to struggle for better living conditions.

The officials of the United Mine Workers Association never tried to organize this field and protect the workers from an attack by the capitalists. Some time ago I wrote to the district No. 23 of the United Mine Workers' Association. President Jackson answered that he had turned the request over to district 19 in Tennessee, claiming that this territory belongs to district 19. Officials from the district 19 never paid attention up to date. It never will.

Winston Churchill Defeated by Tory In Election Fight

LONDON, England, March 20.—Winston Churchill, went down in defeat in a four cornered parliamentary contest for the Abbey division of Westminster.

Churchill is a bitter oponent of the British labor movement and promised to give the Labor Party no quarter if elected to the House of Commons. This is his third unsuccessful attempt since the last general election.

The final results were:

Otto Nicholson, conservative, 8,186; Winston Churchill, 8,153; A. F. Brockway, socialist, 6,155; Scott Duckers, Liberal, 290. A recount is called for.

DIXIE DEMOCRATS ENDORSE MC ADOO OIL AFFILIATION

Beat Underwood in Georgia Primary

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGON, March 20.—North Dakota and Georgia have set off the first political bombshells of the 1924 presidential campaign, and with mixed sensations the managers of various candidates today appraised the results.

North Dakota's presidential primary was little short of a political sensation because

1.—Of the showing made by LaFollette when no campaign had been made for him and without his name on the ballot.

2.—The destruction by LaFollette of Hiram Johnson's hopes.

In Georgia, McAdoo's substantial victory over Underwood seems to show:

1.—That the oil scandal has not hurt McAdoo in this state.

2.—That Senator Reed of Missouri isn't getting far in his attempt to eliminate McAdoo.

North Dakota returns today indicated Johnson running third by a few votes.

The final figures promise nothing but disappointment for Johnson's followers, because it shows that he can expect no help from the LaFollette forces anywhere. LaFollette was not on the ballot; his name was put there by means of "stickers." Johnson was on the ballot and made a spirited campaign. North Dakota has simply emphasized a fact already generally recognized—that LaFollette is the power Coolidge has to reckon with.

Reed is Thru.

McAdoo's victory, while it does not eliminate Underwood in any sense, does appear to dispose of Reed. Reed wasn't on the ballot, having decided, after a preliminary campaign in the state, that he stood no chance. McAdoo's forces proved too strong for him. In fact, it was believed here that Reed's efforts in the state insured McAdoo's victory there and that was borne out by the result.

Underwood's defeat was a heavy blow, coming so close to him, but he and his supporters have plenty of fight left in them. The Georgia result simply confirms McAdoo's recognized position as the leading democratic candidate at the moment.

Will He Get Spanked?

LONDON, March 20.—The Daily Herald, labor newspaper, "understands that King George is awaiting the arrival of his son and heir with the intention of taking the Prince of Wales severely to task for his risks on horseback, and off. The King is said to have the intention of urging upon Wales the necessity of ceasing his neck-risking activities, to relieve the minds of his countrymen. The Prince has been thrown 16 times, recently breaking his collar bone.

North Dakota Results.

FARGO, March 20.—With President Coolidge maintaining his lead, Senator Hiram Johnson again took the lead for second place today from Senator Robert M. La Follette in the count from 1,216 out of the total of approximately 2,000 precincts.

The count was: Coolidge 37,285; Johnson 22,271.

U. S. BISHOPS IN ROME GETTING INSTRUCTIONS

To Carry on Red Hat Propaganda on Return.

ROME, March 20.—Archbishop Mundelein, of Chicago, had an audience with the Pope this morning and thanked His Holiness for the honor about to be conferred upon him. Pope Pius replied thanking the Archbishop for the large sums poured into the Vatican treasury from the Chicago Diocese.

There was a little unpleasantness between Mundelein and Archbishop Hayes, of New York, over the question of which of the two should be first presented to the Pope. Mundelein is a German and Hayes is Irish Archbishop Hayes claims the Irish have done more for the Catholic religion than the Germans by His Holiness, who is a foxy Italian and who believes the Irish are easier to handle than the Teutons. Therefore, he gave Mundelein the first audience.

His Holiness inquired about the progress of the Ku Klux Klan and was very pleased to know that the Catholic church political machine was working well in America. His Holiness expressed regret that Edwin Doheny got mixed up in the oil scandal and wondered why a Catholic like Thomas Walsh, of Montana, should prosecute him. Pope Pius X, it should be remembered, recognized Doheny's benefactions to the Catholic Church in Mexico, in a personal letter sent by a special envoy.

Jewish Workers Holding Bazaar for Russia's Orphans

Ashland Auditorium is being turned over these days to the Jewish Workers Relief Committee for the Children's Homes in Soviet Russia. They are holding the "Purim Bazaar and Exhibition" for the benefit of the little Jewish orphans left over from earlier pogroms and later counter revolution in the land which the Bolsheviki have emancipated from the Czar and his Menshevik successors.

The bazaar began last night with a concert and good attendance and it continues until Monday night. The program for this evening at 8:00 p. m. is the "Trial Over Haman." The Children's Masque Ball takes place tomorrow afternoon at 1. Tomorrow evening at 7:00 there is a Masque Ball for everybody and another concert will be held Sunday afternoon at 1:00.

The Freiheit Singing Society evoked applause at last night's concert and Mr. Swetloff, tenor of the Russian Grand Opera company and Miss Ida Divinoff, violin soloist of the Detroit Symphony orchestra were well encored.

Coolidge Sends U. S. Marines To Fight For Bankers' Graft

WASHINGTON, March 20.—A relief party of nine officers and 167 sailors from the United States Cruiser Milwaukee arrived at Tagucigalpa, Honduras, at noon yesterday, according to a cablegram from American Minister Morales to the state department.

No new disturbances were reported to the state department today, but the interests of American capitalists are endangered by rebels.

Percy Ward Speaks On 'Psycho-Analysis' In Studebaker Hall

The Rationalities University Society which recently staged the debate between Oswald Garrison Villard and Mr. Rostall offers a lecture by Percy Ward on "The Hidden Motives Behind Human Conduct," for its next Sunday's attraction at Studebaker Theatre.

"Psycho-analysis" is the real subject. The lecturer will discuss the subconscious desires which mold personality. All seats are 50 cents.

Jay Lovestone and Max Hayes to Lift Teapot Dome Lid

CLEVELAND, O., March 20.—Jay Lovestone, author of the "Government Strike-breaker" and editorial writer on the staff of the DAILY WORKER, and Max Hayes, editor of the Cleveland Citizen, will tear the roof off the Teapot Dome scandal at a mass meeting in this city at the Labor Temple, 2536 Euclid Avenue, Friday evening, March 21.

London May Walk Today Unless Drivers Demands Are Granted

LONDON, March 20.—Forty-seven thousand transport workers, including tramway and omnibus men have called a strike for toworrow unless the demands of the union are immediately complied with.

Send us news of what your city is doing in this drive—send us suggestions and advice—let us discuss the DAILY WORKER and make it grow.

How many people are you going to pull out for the National May Day Parade?

Here are some of the responses:

Subscription Campaign Manager, Daily Worker.

Dear Comrades: In looking over the sub campaign quota alotted to various centers we found that our "noble" city is among the missing. The comrades here feel peeved over this oversight and they say that they will send in more subs than there would ever be alotted by the Manager. Good luck to the Campaign!

Yours for the cause,
CHAS. SCHWARTZ, Sec.,
Revere, Mass., W. P.

GET THE SUB-CHASING SPIRIT

DEAR COMRADE: I am enclosing $10.80 to pay for six subs to start off on the new drive.

I hope all the comrades will get in this drive so we can go far beyond our quota as I feel that this can be done if they will GET THAT SUB CHASING SPIRIT.

I will increase my bundle order as soon as I can possibly handle more. This is how I advertised the paper:

We have our book store window decorated with a large teapot on top of a dome, the teapot is dripping oil. The window is covered with little pools of oil around the teapot. Around the teapot in the pools of oil are arranged Coolidge, Daugherty and the rest of the government officials who are involved in the oil graft. The oil grafters are cut out of sponges so you see them soaking up the oil from the teapot. The display is attracting quite a lot of attention. (We don't doubt it.) Around this central display I have arranged about 20 copies of the DAILY WORKER with the best cartoons by Robert Minor and our other artists. A black board with an appropriate poem composed by myself and explaining the display completes the window attraction. When you watch the passersby as they look in the window you can tell that the lesson is going home.

It might be good for others to take a tip from this and try something on this line.—A. W. HARVITT, Toledo, Ohio.

From our News Agent in Minneapolis: I am in accord with your opinion that the circulation is too small in Minneapolis and expect to INCREASE this list very MATERIALLY.

What I want is about 36 Agents Sales Book AND I WANT THEM NOW so that I can get my forces to working.

The plan we are going to try out is as follows: The City Agent will send all subs and remittances and receive all returns from Chicago, will also appoint all agents subject to the approval of the Local C. C. C. The City Agent will receive all sub applications from Local Agents and keep an up-to-the-minute tab of renewals and about to be dropped and new subs. City Agent will appoint districts in the city either by wards or in some instances by language districts to agents and will keep each agent informed of the condition of the sub list in his district. The commissions will be spread out so as to equalize among all agents as far as possible. Thoro co-operation is asked from the Business Office of the DAILY WORKER in Chicago.

I already have a number of comrades ready to go on this plan. Now, Comrade Loeb, please send 36 of these books and WATCH US GO.

Yours for The Daily Worker, FRANK E. MINER, Minneapolis, Minn.

ROBERT ZELMS, of Boston, writes: Yesterday we had a Conference of the DAILY WORKER Agents jointly with branch secretaries. I consider this as one of the most interesting Conferences ever held, because the question of boosting the Daily was considered from all angles for more than three hours, every comrade expressing his opinion and giving suggestions for better circulation of our paper.

The following practical suggestions were recommended by me and addopted by the Conference:

1) To organize "Boost The Daily Worker Club" by inviting active supporters from Party branches and from outside organizations including Trade Unions. This Club shall meet from time to time, to popularize the Daily and to stimulate the drive. The Club shall serve also for establishing connections with other organizations and "live wires" generally.

2) In order to carry on the 10,000 drive, the DAILY WORKER Manager shall supply us with printed slips for special one dollar subs and those with premiums.

3) The City Agent will have his office hours each Monday evening 7-9 P. M. so that the Branch Agents and all others can see him without fail and take up matters concerning the drive.

4) If any agent desires to donate his commission money, this money shall be turned over to the City Agent and is to be used for distribution of the DAILY WORKER by ordering special bundles and paying news boys for distributing these bundles on the streets, etc.

5) The City Agent shall asign several branch agents for each public meeting to secure subs, and the agents thus assigned shall attend those meetings without fail.

It was further reported that the special committee for visiting Trade Unions will begin to function this week. Yours in Comradeship, ROBERT ZELMS, Boston, Mass.

Corporation Tries To Take News Stands From Crippled Vendors

An attorney for 150 news vendors who have charge of stands at 46 elevated stations is seeking an injunction to prevent the Chicago Rapid Transit Company, Samuel Insull's public utility and the Universal Vending Sales Company of New York from repriving his clients of their stands.

Many of the attendants are cripples and unable to perform any other kind of work. The vending corporation is about to cancel all individual leases and put in salaried employes. The corporation pays the city $10,000 a year for the privilege and receives $80,000 a year in rentals from individual leases.

Farmer-Labor Forces Open St. Paul Offices For June 17 Meeting

ST. PAUL, Minn., March 20.—Headquarters were opened here by the farmer-labor organizations responsible for calling the great national convention of farmers and working class organizations which will be held in the Twin Cities, June 17. The headquarters is in the Labor Temple and is called "National Farmer-Labor and Progressive convention headquarters."

William Mahoney, editor of the Minnesota Trades Union advocate, is chairman of the recently formed Farmer-Labor Federation which is the result of the amalgamation of several working class political organizations in that state, and is one of the chief backers of the June 17th convention.

BOSTON LADIES' GARMENT STRIKE WON BY WORKERS

Picketing Defeated the Police and Courts

The Boston ladies' garment workers have just won the bitter strike which they have been waging for several weeks, the DAILY WORKER in informed by officials of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union now in Chicago.

Details are lacking as yet but the victory is said to include the granting of the 40-hour week and increased wages and the closed union shop, the demands for which the workers left their factories several weeks ago.

Break Began Two Weeks Ago.

A hint that the bosses were breaking came two weeks ago when a vice-president on the field reported to the New York executives of the union that several employers were asking for settlements, pleading that they could not stand a long strike at this season of the year.

Since then additional bosses have been coming into the union's headquarters in Boston asking on what terms their shops could open again.

Other employers, however, thought they could win thru the police and courts. Policemen arrested pickets and injunctions were sought. Strikers insisted, however, on their right to patrol the streets. Private "sluggers" attempted to drive them away from their union duties but the pickets stayed on the job.

Concentrate on Chicago.

The demands which the Boston strikers made are similar to those the New York unionists won a year ago. The 40-hour week is necessary both for the health of the workers and in order to distribute the work more evently over the year.

The Boston victory will have an important effect on the Chicago strike: the union can now concentrate its forces on the Windy City.

Appeal to Friendly Organizations to Aid Defense Bazaar in N. Y.

An appeal is made to friendly organizations, trade unions, fraternal, etc., to reserve space for booths at the Bazaar, as one way of aiding in the defense work and of bringing themselves before the workers as in active solidarity with their class.

Individuals and members of trade unions are also asked to contribute finished goods, and materials and to offer their services, whenever possible, for the work of making goods for the booths. Committees of dressmakers and milliners are already functioning, but materials in those lines are urgently needed. The services of other dressmakers and milliners can be used, too, as well as the services of those in other trades.

The work of defense is vital and urgent and the Bazaar must be made a success. We owe it to our comrades in prison and those facing imprisonment to back up all defense activities. The National Defense Committee is defending seventy workers who are facing deportation because of their labor activities. Other cases are constantly coming up. Defense therefore becomes an always vital and urgent issue. Of its validity there can be no question. Of the loyalty of all comrades to those behind the bars there should never be the slightest reason for doubt. Comrades! Stand by our prisoners! Make the Third International Bazaar a success Help in every way you can and get others to help!

Trades Council May End Strife as Result Of Unity Conference

Action that may lead to unity of the two factions of the Chicago Building Trades Council, split by the ruling of the Citizens' Committee to enforce the Landis Award, two years ago was taken here, when President John Donlin of the Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor and fourteen heads of international unions met in the Morrison Hotel with representatives of both factions of the old Building Trades Council and reached an agreement to hold a new election.

According to the decision all affiliated locals are ordered to hold a new election of officers for the Chicago Building Trades Council on April 25.

When the Landis Award committee made its decision over two years ago some of the unions voted to accept the decision while others opposed. The radicals carried on a vigorous campaign against the Landis Award Committee, including a gigantic parade with thousands of workers taking part in it.

Those unions that did not accept its decree were placed on an "open shop" basis by the Landis Committee.

Myron T. Herrick, U. S. Ambassador to Paris, in Scandal

PARIS, March 20.—There are many ways of making an honest dollar without working for it, as Myron T. Herrick, J. P. Morgan's United States Ambassador to France, learned to his advantage a few days ago.

Mr. Herrick cleaned up 1,500,000 francs by purchasing Fernch currency when at its lowest. The ambassador invested $200,000 on which he made a profit of $75,000. He was on the inside of the $100,000,000 Morgan loan. The incident has created a sensation in France.

'CAL'S' CAMPAIGN PRINTING DONE BY SCAB LABOR

Strikebreaker Coolidge Has Consistent Record

By CARL HAESSLER
(Staff Correspondent of Federated Press)

President Coolidge is for union labor in the district where he can get most votes that way. He is for the open shop wherever he thinks that more votes will develop out of scab conditions.

This is made clear in an interview granted to Typographical Union No. 16 by the Coolidge campaign headquarters in its magnificent Wrigley building suite. The printers want to know why the union label does not appear on Coolidge campaign literature.

The official answer was that some times it does and some times it doesn't. But this is not thru carelessness or negligence. The purchasing agent of supplies for all the Coolidge headquarters thruout the country said that the use of the label is determined by political expediency in each state. "The New England states, particularly Connecticut and Rhode Island, insist that the label be omitted," the agent declared. "Texas is another state where the label can't appear. Illinois doesn't matter much because we aren't making a strong fight here."

Northampton, Mass., is evidently against organized labor. Coolidge's home town has published a folder boosting him for the Republican nomination. There is no label on this folder.

The anti-labor bias of Coolidge is no secret. His only appointment of a cabinet member is that of Judge Curtis D. Wilbur of California to succeed Secretary of the Navy Edwin Denby, who was run out of office by the senate. Wilbur is chief justice of the state supreme court that has persisted in keeping Tom Mooney and Warren Billings in jail under life sentence on confessedly perjured evidence. His court has repeatedly sustained the criminal syndicalism law of California under which Anita Whitney, the suffrage worker, and hundreds of labor men have been convicted.

Coolidge has kept in his cabinet Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty, whose assistant, William J. Burns, spends his time trying to put both American Federation of Labor and other unions out of business. Burns uses government resources to help his private detective agency from its jobs and get more business. Burns is the protege of Hiram Johnson, another presidential aspirant.

Coolidge has also kept James Davis as secretary of labor, whose plan to register alien workers and build up a huge political and industrial police machine was condemned by the A. F. of L. in its Portland convention in 1923.

Dutch Children Are Busy Collecting Funds For German Kiddies

(By The Federated Press)

AMSTERDAM, March 20.—The children of Holland are collecting money with which to erect feeding kitchens for the starving school children of Germany. Already enough money has been brought together to erect one such feeding kitchen in Berlin, where 30 of the neediest tots are fed daily. To keep down the overhead, it has been arranged that the pupils of the upper grades, who are receiving lessons in home cooking, shall prepare the meals every day for these 30 under the tutelage of the domestic science teacher.

It is expected that a large number of kitchens will soon be provided for.

BURNS MUST GO!

Urban League, Negro "Welfare" Agency, Ignores Housing Issue; Workers Party Is Leading Fight

Despite the fact that the Negro workers were clamoring for a clear-cut housing and labor program to be adopted by the Sanhedrin All-Race Conference, which was held in Chicago the week ending February 16, only a vague and brief resolution on labor and housing was allowed to seep thru the conservative watch dogs who controlled the Congress.

Due to the efforts of Dean Miller and Arnold T. Hill of the Urban League, a recruiter of labor for the Chamber of Commerce, and their non-labor and anti-union associates, the popular demand of the mass of Negroes, who had their eyes on the Conference as their hope for better living conditions, was thwarted.

That Labor Resolution.

The weak resolution thrown as a sop to the mass of Negro workers, was finally reluctantly passed in this form: "It is the sense of the Negro Sanhedrin that the exploitation of Negro labor in the conflict between capital and organized labor is unfair and detrimental and that the principal of equal pay, recognition of Negro workers in fields where labor is organized, and community assistance to Negro workers in industrial centers and organized financial relief in farming centers are all highly desirable."

The nearest the rich business men and real estate sharks controlling the conference came to mentioning the dreaded word "trade unions" was "in fields where labor is organized." And the nearest these real estate sharks came to mentioning the terrible housing conditions for which they are responsible and by which they made their money was "community assistance to Negro workers in industrial centers."

Compare this to the clear cut program on housing presented by the Workers Party delegates to the conference, which was turned down by the big business interests.

W. P. Housing Declaration.

The Workers Party and the labor delegates proposed the following as a housing program:

"The Sanhedrin conference declares itself unalterably opposed to the segregation of Negroes into "black belt" residence districts. We declare the discrimination against Negroes in regard to which part of a city they may live in and which part they may not live in, is a political question, and must be dealt with just as we deal with discrimination in voting. The time has come when the living accommodations of the public cannot be left to the private control of a few wealthy parasites who decide where the colored man may live and where he may not live.

"We demand legislation by which all tenements, apartment houses and homes to let shall be subject to the claim of the first comer, regardless of race or color or the will of the landlord.

"Whereas, it is common knowledge that Negroes are customarily charged rent at a rate of 20 per cent to 100 per cent higher than is charged for the same apartments rented to white people, we demand legislation for a fixed rental for all places to be let, with heavy penalties and damages whenever a landlord charges higher rents for one race than would be charged another race for similar accommodations.

Traitors to Race.

"We declare that any Negro real estate agent who connives in charging more rent to his own color than would be paid by the whites, is a renegade and a traitor to his own people.

"In advocating the foregoing measures of relief, we do not regard them as being permanently effective. This conference advocates taking the whole housing question out of the hands of private individuals, and advocates the taking over of all rented residences by the public, to be rented without discrimination of color to the people at a fixed low rental.

"Whereas, it is a custom of large employers of colored and white labor, such as mine operators and mill owners, to house their employes in "company houses" and thereby to control the lives of the workers, being able to throw them out of house and home whenever the bosses please and wherever there is a disagreement about wages or working conditions, we demand any legal measure that may be necessary to prevent any employer of industrial labor owning or controlling the homes rented to his employes.

"Pending legislative relief, and during the present period when the Negro's rights are ignored by governmental agencies, we call upon the residents of all Negro communities to organize colored tenants' unions so as to be able in an organized way to refuse to pay exorbitant rents, or to consent to live in inferior buildings or segregated districts."

Urban League Scab Agency.

As opposed to this espousal of the cause of the majority of the Negroes, in both housing and labor problems, the Urban League, in announcing their "Plans for 1924," in their official organ, "Opportunity," makes no mention of negro housing conditions. In officially announcing their program for this year the Urban League shows itself up as a go-between connecting the industrial oppressors of labor with a Negro cheap labor market.

"We will standardize and co-ordinate local employment agencies of the League so that exchange of information and more regular correspondence can assure applicants for work more efficient and helpful service and employers of labor a more efficient group of employes. We shall work directly with large industrial plants." That is the program the Urban League offers the Negro workers to help them secure higher wages, and fight discrimination in unions and in renting their homes.

A part of the Workers Party platform on the other hand, declares for "the abolition of all discrimination against Negroes in housing."

It was this very evident and at once apparent thwarting of the clear cut program offered by the Workers Party and labor delegates, voicing the hopes of the large majority of Negroes, by the few traitors to the Race like the Urban League officials, that led the South Side Negroes to form the Negro Tenants League.

Tenants Meet March 31.

The Negro Tenants League, which holds its first mass meeting on March 31 at Odd Fellows Hall, So. State street, was formed by representatives of the Negro workers who are tired of being held down by the so-called social workers. They have concluded that the controllers of the Last Sanhedrin program have been proven to be hand in glove with the real estate firms and the large white industrial concerns. It is to be expected that the mass meeting indorses a vigorous and definite program similar to that turned down by the Sanhedrin political manipulators. If the Sanhedrin did not take definite action to aggressively better the housing and labor conditions of the Negro, at least it showed the Race where the interests of the colored workers really lie, and prompted them to act for themselves.

Negro Workers Are Against Conservative Sanhedrin Leaders

TODAY we show up the Urban League, and how little it cares for the betterment of the housing and labor conditions of the Negro Race. It will be noted that so-called social workers and real estate sharks worked together in the last Sanhedrin Conference, to throw out aggressive and definite housing reforms demanded by labor delegates. The dissatisfaction of the mass of Negro workers with the conduct of the conservative members of their Race, who are in league with large white industrial firms, prompted the Negro workers to organize the NEGRO TENANTS LEAGUE. Tomorrow we analyze the last Sanhedrin Conference a little further, showing how the labor and housing problems of the Race cannot be separated. We will also present a program on Negro conditions in the United States, indorsed by the only political party which has a definite and practical program on the Race question—THE WORKERS PARTY.

Wilkes-Barre Free Speech Test Coming; Pinchot Won't Act

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, March 20.—Following court action to prevent Mayor Daniel L. Hart, of Wilkes-Barre, from interfering with the right of free spech, a test meeting will be held by the Workers Party in that Hart-ridden town.

Robert W. Dunn, who has been inquiring into the state of Lornorder in Wilkes-Barre on behalf of the Civil Liberties Union, was informed by Governor Pinchot that he has no legal power to curb "the lawless acts of mayors like Hart as long as they are confined to the first amendment and the Bill of Rights."

Attorney General Woodruff, of Pennsylvania, tells Dunn that Hart "violated the fundamental law of free speech when he broke up the Lenin memorial meeting on Jan. 27." But Woodruff adds that the removal of Hart from office would require a two-thirds majority on the reactionary state senate.

LEWIS BLOCKS THE PAYMENT OF HOWAT'S WAGES

Tells Kansas Not to Pay 5 Months' Refund

By TOM TIPPETT
(Staff Correspondent of Federated Press)

PITTSBURGH, Kan., March 20.—John L. Lewis, international president, United Mine Workers of America, is blocking payment of back salaries to Alexander Howat and other deposed officials of District 14, voted to them by the Kansas miners' convention which adjourned here March 13. The convention had voted to pay the deposed men five months' wage for their unexpired terms, while the ex-officials were serving their 16 months' jail sentence for violation of the industrial court law.

"Don't Pay" Lewis Wires.

After the convention's action Lewis wired the officials here not to pay. His message threw the convention into an uproar. A wire was sent to Lewis demanding that he cite the union law that prohibited this district from spending its money in accordance with its own convention decisions.

Lewis' reply said the constitution "contains ample authority," but did not mention the section. His telegram pointed out the "payment of moneys under such circumstances would be misappropriation of funds under our own law and lay officers guilty of such action open to criminal court action under the state law." One delegate defended Lewis and he was an international organizer.

Lewis Bunk Disproved

The $200,000 sent for the Kansas fight, by the Illinois miners against the instructions of President Lewis was cited as proof that his stand was wrong. Upon the advice of Howat, who spoke for the deposed men, the convention did not force payment of the salaries.

The men involved in the salary question, when interviewed, said that everybody in the district had suffered; all had lost salaries. The district officials said an appeal to the international board would be taken.

A motion carried unanimously inviting Lewis to Kansas to debate the Kansas case with Howat and explain his opposition on the salary question to the Kansas miners. Lewis is permitted to select the date and place of meeting in this district.

A scale committee was elected to negotiate a wage scale with the operators at Kansas City March 28.

What Howat Men Won

The convention adjourned with every proposition presented by the old Howat crowd won—excepting the actual payment of salary to the deposed officers—and they figure that the action was a victory for them as the record now stands. They killed the appointive power, demanded a special convention for Howat's reinstatement and the other ousted men. They undid the work of the provisional convention and rewrote their district constitution so as to permit Howat men to run for office in the coming election and laid other plans, to resume the control of the organization which they hope to bring out of chaos and up to the old Howat 100 percent organized standard.

A committee was elected to draw up a resolution to be presented to the Illinois miners' convention—thanking District 12 for its support in the Kansas trouble and asking cooperation until a final settlement is made.

Famous Irish Tenor Sings at Auditorium Here on April 7th

John McCormack, noted Irish tenor, will make his final appearance this season in Chicago on Monday evening, April 7, at the Auditorium theater. The concert was originally scheduled for Sunday afternoon, April 13, but within the past week, Mrs. McCormack, wife of the tenor, was severely injured in a train wreck in Europe and the concert scheduled for Chicago has been advanced a week to permit the singer to make a hurried visit to Europe.

Mr. McCormack, who is now in the west, has been forced to cancel a number of eastern concerts, but due to the fact that he must come thru Chicago on his way to Europe, his managers have deemed it advisable that he keep his Chicago engagement, for he is so well known in this city that the disappointment to the thousands of his friends would be great.

His program for the concert in Chicago will contain several new and interesting numbers as well as the countless favorite arias that have endeared him to the American public. Mr. McCormack, as usual, will be accompanied by Edwin Schneider, who is a noted pianist.

Grafting Officials Will Hold on to Prison Pen Contract

By ERNEST R. CHAMBERLAIN
(Staff Correspondent of Federated Press)

OKLAHOMA CITY, March 20—The Reliance Shirt factory is not in danger of losing its outrageous Oklahoma prison contract despite the fact that the state house of representatives has passed a resolution charging its agents, particularly Eli H. Brown Jr., of Louisville, Ky., with "débauching state officials." The resolution has been sent to the senate, reported out by one committee and again referred to the committee on prison affairs presided over by Senator Carl Monk of McAlester, where the shirt factory is located. Monk is a friend of the contract.

W. E. Disney, house leader of the investigating committee, charged that the contract was "reeking with graft."

R. R. Rader, treasurer of the company, came to Oklahoma City recently from Chicago where he has his office and was caught unawares by the probers. He said that tho he was treasurer he knew nothing of his company's financial affairs and nothing of the $10,000 alleged to have been paid by Brown in to the campaign funds of former Governor J. C. Walton and Attorney General George Short.

Virgin Islanders Badly Fed Under American Rule

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, March 20.—Hearings on the senate bill, providing for a permanent form of civil government in the Virgin Islands, have been preceded by the publication of a report by the federal commission to the islands.

The policy of the American government toward this West Indian possession stands indicted by its own investigators. The report says, in part: "Economic conditions in the Virgin Islands are far from satisfactory. The marked loss of trade is largely due to our general policy of treating the islands only as an outpost of defense for the Panama canal; federal prohibition which crippled the bay rum industry of the islands; serious droughts which almost eliminated the last three years' crops; and the fact that St. Thomas, altho one of the finest ports in the world, is no longer used as a port of call by Panama canal and South America-bound steamship traffic. These conditions create an appallingly large percent of unemployment and already evidences of under-nourishment are apparent."

Mazumdar Will Tell Y. W. League About The Youth of India

An exceedingly interesting oriental program has been arranged by the Irving Park Branch of the Young Workers League for Sunday afternoon, March 30, at 3 p. m. The program will consist of a talk by Haridas T. Mazumdar, author of "Ghandi, the Apostle," on the youth movement in India. A very lively discussion by the members of the leagues and their friends is expected. In addition there will be oriental songs and dancing to give this meeting an oriental character.

The meeting will take place at Irving Park Peoples House, 4021 N. Drake avenue.

All Comrades of the city are invited to attend this, the first open meeting of the Irving Park Branch of the Young Workers League and to help make it a huge success.

Lumber Trust Uses Direct Action When Their Courts Fail

(By The Federated Press)

UKIAH, Cal., March 20.—Following on the dismissal of the criminal syndicalism case against Oscar Erickson, when the second jury to try him failed to agree, tactics directed against the I. W. W. (commonly supposed here to be inspired by the lumber comanies) have taken a new turn. I. W. W. members are now being forcibly deported from this town.

On two different occasions members have been overcome by mobs of much greater number and forced out of the county. In one of these cases all their literature and supplies were burned, and the men were threatened with tarring and feathering.

Send Pilgrim Speeches Far.

NEW YORK, March 20.—The Pilgrims conquered new territory last night when the speeches of Sir Esme Howard, new British Ambassador and Ambassador Jusserand of France were heard in London after being broadcast from the Waldorf Astoria.

The speeches at the dinner tendered Sir Esme Howard by the society of Pilgrims was estimated by radio experts to have been heard by at least 500,000 in America and 50,000 in England.

Austria Ministering Relief to J. P. Morgan Under League Yoke

(By The Federated Press)

VIENNA, March 20.—Austria's suggestion that it is high time to consider the removal of the yoke, thrust upon the country by the League of Nations and foreign bankers, has elicited a "rebuke" from the league.

The clerical government at Vienna, acting under pressure from the socialists, recently suggested that the Austrian parliament is, after all, the competent authority to determine the nation's fate, to draw up the budget, execute reforms and express the sentiment of the inhabitants. The League Council reports that the "bondholders must be protected"—the foreign bondholders, of course.

If there is any doubt left as to the persons who are benefitting by the league's intervention in Austria, the league's own statement should dispel such uncertainty. The Austrian workers and middle class are not even favored with "honorable mention" in the league's dispensation of gratuities. If relief is bejng administered, it is to the Bank of England, J. P. Morgan and other investors in the Austrian loan.

League of Nations Rebukes Austria's Plea for Freedom

This episode should serve as ample warning to those who still hope for Germany's rescue thru the league.

U. S. IS ALLOWING SANTO DOMINGO FIRST ELECTION

Wolfe Tells of Cuba and Peru, Too

By BERTRAM D. WOLFE
(Staff Correspondent of Federated Press)

SANTO DOMINGO.

The March election in Santo Domingo will be the first since the American marines occupied the islands. Military control has been withdrawn in condition that the government of this little country accept fiscal and political control of its affairs by the United States, which means in this case (and in many others) the National City Bank of New York A constituent assembly is to be called to revise the constitution. But it will be told what "we" want, and if it doesn't do it, the troops go back again.

Meanwhile, Henriguez y Carbajal, the president of Santo Domingo whom the marines deposed, finds it safer to stay in Havana. And even his sons and near relatives find it wise to remain in Mexico or Cuba in spite of the "freedom" that the United States has granted to the Dominican republic.

CUBA.

The popular indignation at the frameup of Arias, Quiroz and Rivera on the charge of having poisoned beer of the scab Polar Company has grown into a series of monster demonstrations that bring all factions and all unions of Havana out on the streets to protest. The Communist Party of Mexico has sent a pledge of solidarity to the accused and promised to bring the case before all Latin-American countries.

A Communist Party is in process of formation in Cuba and the indignation at the exile of Haya de la Torre, a student-worker leader, from Peru has resulted in the formation of a Communist Party there.

PERU.

Claridad, revolutionary students' review of Peru of which the exiled president of the Student's Federation, Haya de la Torre, is director, has been suppressed by the American-battleship-supported and Standard Oil-controlled and State-Department manufactured President Leguia, autocrat of Peru. Jose Carlos Mariategui, Oscar Herrera, and Amerigo Accinelli, editors of the paper, were arrested and the issue seized. They were later released but the publisher, Lorenzo Rego, remains in jail.

Fascism has raised its ugly head in Peru as a last effort of the pro-American clerical party to retain control and stem the rising tide of protest against autocracy, clericalism and the selling of the country to the Standard Oil Company.

HIGH PRICES OF U. S. FLOUR DUE TO SELLING COST

43 Million Squandered In Bunk Advertising

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

When you eat bread you are paying your share of a tax of more than $40,000,000 levied each year by the giant milling interests to pay their exorbitant selling and advertising expenses. This unwarranted charge has been unearthed by the United States tariff commission in the course of its investigation to furnish President Coolidge with a basis for his futile efforts to please the farmers by increasing the import duty on wheat and wheat flour. It is a charge quite in addition to the profits of the milling interests.

Selling Alone Costs 39c.

The commission shows that every barrel of flour purchased in the United States carries a charge of 39 cents for selling and advertising expense. The extent to which this represents overdevelopment of the selling end of the business is apparent upon comparison with the selling and advertising expense of Canadian millers which amounts to only 16 1-2 cents a barrel. On the 111,840,000 barrels purchased in 1923 by American consumers millers in the United States actually collected $43,580,000 for the unproductive side of business. The Canadian charge on the same quantity would have cost the consumer only $19,616,000.

American mill workers, the investigation shows, produce the flour for about 2 cents less a barrel than the labor cost in Canadian mills. But this saving is swallowed up 11 times over by the excessive cost of the American selling and advertising system.

Itemized Cost of Barrel.

The following table shows the itemized cost of producing a barrel of wheat flour in the United States and in Canada as found by the tariff commission:

	U. S.	Canada
Cost of wheat.....	$4.702	$4.349
Labor cost (milling)	.120	.141
Factory expense ...	.148	.134
Containers	.315	.278
Advertising	.064	.011
Selling expense	.326	.164
Administrative cost	.136	.144
Interest charges ...	.029	.070
Total	$5.840	$5.291

The higher cost of wheat in the United States is due primarily to the greater exhaustion of the soil which results in a smaller yield of wheat in the United States ranges from 5.3 to 18.5 bushels while in Canada the yield is from 10.5 to 40.8 bushels per acre. As a result it cost American farmers from 85 cents to $2.19 to produce a bushel of wheat in 1923 while Canadian farmers were producing wheat for from 53 cents to $1.31 a bushel.

The exorbitant advertising and selling expense in the United States is justified in the brief presented by the Millers' National Federation on the basis of "the constant need of advertising well-known brands of flour in order to create and hold consumer demand." "Fortunately or unfortunately," they say, "advertising is an Americanism and seemed to be inescapable in this country for many lines of well known goods."

Advertising a Waste.

It is hardly necessary to spend $43,000,000 a year to persuade the people of the United States to purchase necessary quantities of the "staff of life." And as wheat flour has become pretty much a standard product produced by a standard process, the choice of one trade mark has little bearing upon the nourishment of the nation. The investigation of the tariff commission has thus uncovered one evidence of the extent to which the United States has entered the vicious circle of commercialism in which the cost of food rises without benefitting producers in the slightest.

District of Columbia Citizen Urges Fight For Suffrage There

To The DAILY WORKER:—The Workers Party should agitate for suffrage in the District of Columbia, especially at this hour when the Teapot Dome scandal is boiling over. Washingtonians in the main are incensed over the actions of government officials, and read the WORKER avidly whenever they come across a copy it, because it tells the truth about the oil robbers.

Trotzky's Letter to Russian Communists

Note.—Today the DAILY WORKER concludes publication of letters written by Leon Trotsky, Minister of War in the Soviet government and member of the Central Executive Committee of the Russian Communist Party. Our readers will see from reading these letters on what a flimsy structure the capitalist press liars hang a revolt in the Communist ranks. We have published Trotsky's letter in three installments. Next will come speeches by Stalin, Rykov and other leaders of the Russian revolution. Members of the Workers Party in particular should read this debate very carefully. Trotsky wrote to the enlarged session of the Central Committee of the Russian Communist Party as follows:

* * * *

I AM far from having exhausted the question. I have, intentionally, refrained from examining many of its essential aspects, in order not to occupy too much of your time. But I hope, that I shall soon succeed in getting rid of the malaria, which—in my opinion—is obviously in opposition to the new policy of the Party, and then I shall try to expound in free speech more precisely that which I have not expounded in this letter.

Fraternal greetings,
LEON TROTZKY.

* * *

Moscow, Dec. 10, 1923.

P. S.—I take advantage of the fact that my letter is published in the Pravda with a delay of two days, to make some supplementary remarks.

I understand that, when my letter was communicated to the ward meetings, certain comrades gave expression to the fear that my observations on the relations between the "old guard" and the young generation might be exploited for opposing the young to the old (!),

It is obvious that such apprehensions would only confront those comrades, who, only two or three months ago, repudiated with horror the mere idea of bringing the question regarding the necessity of a change of policy up for discussion. In any event, the expression of similar apprehensions, at the present moment and in the present situation, can only be the result of a false valuation of the dangers and of their importance.

Tendency of Apparatus.

The present state of mind of the Youth which, as is quite clear to every reflecting Party member, is largely symptomatic, has been precisely promoted by these methods employed for the sake of "absolute tranquility," which are condemned by the resolution unanimously adopted by the Political Bureau. In other words, the "absolute tranquility" has itself promoted the danger of an increasing alienation between the leading Party stratum and the younger members of the Party, i. e., of its overwhelming majority.

The tendency of the apparatus to think and to decide for the whole Party, is apt to lead to the authority of the leading circles becoming based solely upon tradition. The respect towards the tradition of the Party is undoubtedly a very necessary element of the Party education and cohesion; but it can be a vital and resistant factor only, if it is constantly nourished and strengthened by means of an independent and active control of the Party tradition, i. e., by the collective elaboration of the policy of the party at the given moment.

Without this activity and initiative, the respect towards the tradition might degenerate into a stage-managed of an independent and active control of the Party tradition, i. e., into a form without contents. It is quite obvious that such a kind of contact between the generations would be entirely insufficient and unreliable. It could retain a solid exterior, right up to the very moment at which the threatening rifts are revealed. Precisely in this lies the danger of a policy of the apparatus based on "absolute tranquility" within the Party. And, as far as those representatives of the older generation who have remained revolutionary and have not become bureaucratized (and this, as we are convinced, applies to the immense majority) will see quite clearly the perspectives characterized above, and, on the basis of the resolution of the Political Bureau, will do their utmost in order to aid the Party to carry out the resolution, just so far will the main possibility of opposing the various generations against one another, disappear.

"Absolute Tranquility."

It will then be relatively easy to overcome these or those "excesses" or exaggerations on the part of the Youth.

But before all, it is necessary to create the safeguard against the concentration of the Party traditions in the apparatus, and thereby ensure its remaining vital and renewing itself in the daily practice of the Party. It is only by this, that also another danger can be avoided: That of splitting of the old generations into apparatus men" charged to maintain the "absolute tranquility." and into those, who have nothing in common with that. It need not be said that the apparatus of the Party, i. e., its organizatory skeleton, will not be weakened, but strengthened by abandoning its aloofness. But there will be no doubt within our Party that we need a powerful centralized apparatus.

Perhaps it could still be objected, that the example of degeneration of social democracy thru its apparatus in the reformist epoch, which I cited in my letter, is not appropriate in view of the profound difference between the epochs; the former stagnating reformist one, and the present revolutionary one. It is, of course, understood that an example is but an example and in no way an identification.

However, the revolutionary character of our epoch is no guarantee in itself. It is not for nothing that we point out the dangers of the New Economic Policy, which are closely connected with the present moderate tempo of the international revolution.

Opportunist Degeneration.

Our daily practical work in the administration of the state, which becomes continually more detailed and specialized, involves, as emphasized in the resolution of the Political Bureau, the danger of a narrowing of the horizon, i. e., of opportunist degeneration. It is evident that these dangers become the more serious, the more of a monopoly of authority in the hands of secretaries tends to substitute the Party leadership.

We should be bad revolutionaries, if we were to rely upon the "revolutionary character of the epoch," to help us in overcoming all difficulties, in particular, all the inner difficulties. It is the "epoch" which must be helped in a proper manner, by a rational carrying out of the new Party policy proclaimed unanimously by the Political Bureau of the Communist Central.

A further remark in conclusion. Two or three months ago, when the questions forming the object of the present discussion, were only beginning to engage the attention of the Party, some responsible comrades of the provinces were inclined to treat the matter in an off-hand manner; it was, they declared, merely a brain wave on the part of Moscow, in the provinces, however, everything was at its best.

And now also we observe this attitude of mind in one or the other reports from the provinces; infected or excited Moscow is opposed to the "quiet and reasonable province." This means nothing else than a violent expression of the same bureaucratism, tho in a provincial edition As a matter of fact, the Moscow organization of our Party is the largest, most vital and the best equipped with forces.

Moscow For Revision.

Even in the moments of the greatest stagnation, the activity and the initiative of the Moscow organization were, in spite of everything, more intensive than anywhere else.

If Moscow at present differs from other localities over something, it is only due to the fact that it has taken the initiative for the revision of the policy of our Party. This is not a defect, but a merit. The whole Party will follow Moscow in passing thru the necessary period of the transvaluation of certain values of the past period.

The less the provincial Party apparatus opposes itself to this, the more systematically the provincial organizations will win thru the unavoidable period of criticism and self-criticism. The Party will garner the result in the form of an increased firmness and a raising of the level of the Party culture.—LEON TROTZKY.

Swivel Chair Hero Runs From Debate With Roger Baldwin

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, March 20.—The open forum at the University of Pennsylvania doesn't mind taking the bull by the horns, if that expression may be employed with reference to a debate. Joseph Kurnor, the forum's president, has been searching for some champion patrioteer, who will confront Roger Baldwin, Civil Liberties Union director, on the platform and take the affirmative of "Resolved, That Reds Should be Suppressed."

R. M. Whitney, Washington director of the American Defense Society and author of "Reds in America" (more popularly known as Unread in America), was given a chance to argue his theories before Baldwin. Whitney's reply to the university group's invitation suggests the peculiar delusions of grandeur of our indigenous fascists. It also sheds light upon their, so to speak, manners.

"I am amazed," writes the aggrieved Whitney, "that you have the temerity to insult me by asking me to appear on the same platform with Baldwin."

"I would no more appear on the same platform with Roger Baldwin," continues the garulous, if insulted, Whitney, "than I would have stood beside him during the war."

Where was Whitney during the war, you ask? Oh, valiantly trying to remove the creak from his swivel chair.

Chicago Machinists Begin Organization Drive: Fees Lowered

A special dispensation is being granted for a limited time by the International Association of Machinists, District No. 8, in an organization drive. This drive, according to Business Agent J. J. Uhlman, when the special dispensation is considered, should make the organization in Chicago one of the strongest unions in the metal trades.

The initiation fee and the re-instatement fee during this limited time is only $6.50, covering also $500 life insurance, which is a big reduction from the regular fees.

Legion Refuses Help to Negro Ex-Service Men

Charges that the American Legion has been discriminating against Negro ex-soldiers, refusing to help service men who have served in France in adjusting bonus claims because of their color, have reached the ears of the DAILY WORKER. An ex-soldier who served in France under the 8th Illinois regiment, who lives on 43rd street, charges that the American Legion offices at 21 N. La Salle street have not only declined to help him, but have been impolite and abusive when he called.

"Twice I asked the American Legion to write me a letter asking for an adjustment of $300 bonus money which is long past due me," the ex-soldier told the DAILY WORKER. "They have not written this letter, altho they advertise that they are always willing to do such services for ex-service men. When I complained over the phone that they were discriminating against me, they said if I showed up at the office again they would smash my face and run me back to 35th St."

This colored soldier was highly indignant and said that several colored ex-service men had made similar complaints to him of unfair treatment at the hands of the American Legion.

Frightened To Death.

A coroner's investigation was started today to determine the cause of the death of Miss Anna Rubner, 19, high school student, who died just as she was about to be put under an anesthetic for a minor operation. Dr. William K. Gray, who was to operate, said he believed the girl died from fright.

"Committee of 15" Gives Girl Strikers Promise of Support

such a big one that it should be taken up with the regular injunction committee of the Federation, also a committee of 15, on Monday, when the combined committee of 30 Federation as a whole to follow.

In the meantime the committee will put the ugly facts of police brutality up to Mayor Dever this morning. That politician assured the union visitors two weeks ago that he would call his underlings into his office at once and lay down the law to them if he found anything wrong. Since then the special citizens' committee has given a deadly list of police crimes against strikers to Dever—yet the crime continues and Officer 3181 continues to flourish his club in front of frail girls. (Officer 3181 is the brute who beat up Sophie Altschuler.)

The committee knows now from the girls themselves that Dever's men are guilty with Crowe and if the mayor passes the buck to Crowe in the morning they will know it is bunk.

Question of "Guts."

The question now is what the special injunction committee of 15 appointed by Gompers here will do against the Sullivan injunction. The A. F. of L. declaration on injunctions are plain. As Anton Johannsen told the Chicago Federation of Labor last Sunday the question is how many men there are "with guts."

Meanwhile the special citizens' committee is having a most important session tomorrow at which the issue of a stand against the injunction will be taken up.

Did Not Call Reporter.

Victor Zokaitis, the representative of the DAILY WORKER, who volunteered to testify before the committee as to the beating up of girls on the picket line which he had witnessed and the arrest of himself as a newspaper man when he asked a policeman for his number, was not admited.

Anton Johannsen, chairman of the committee, told the reporter the committee would call him if they needed him. They did not call him.

More Pickets Arrested.

More pickets were arrested yesterday while the "Committee of 15" was discussing whether they should or should not go on the picket line.

Among these courageous pickets were: Eva Boenseld, Andrew Trimm, Morris Tigerman and William Elaska.

New York Teachers Urging Legislature For Higher Wages

NEW YORK, March 20.—Representatives of 70 organizations representing 30,000 teachers of the City of New York met at the West Side Continuation School, 208 West 13th street, and succeeded in forming a joint committee to draw up a complete salary schedule for presentation at the present session of the legislature.

In a preliminary report, Mr. Silberstein, chairman of the salary committee of the H. S. T. A., showed that the per capita expenditure per child was 23 cents a week or less than 5 cents a day. Mr. Whiffen showed that teachers salaries would have to be increased 1.72 times to secure the purchasing power of 1914.

The Teachers' Union led the fight for action.

Two Words Come High.

NEW YORK, March 20.—It cost Harris Beckelman, landlord, $1,000 a letter for saying "hello, sweetheart" to Mrs. Bertha Goodman, a tenant. Mrs. Goodman was so surprised, she said before a supreme court jury, that she tripped over a broken stair rod and fell downstairs. She was in the hospital for six months. The jury gave Mrs. Goodman $15,000 and her husband $1,000 damages against Beckelman.

Labor Faker Still for McAdoo.

NEW ORLEANS, March 20.—E H. Modern Music Wins Over Old Time Stuff At Orchestra Hall

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN.

Musical antiquity and modernism were forcefully contrasted at the concert of the Chicago Symphony orchestra at Orchestra Hall last Friday and Saturday. The palm for artistic value must be awarded the moderns again, if this contrast is any criterion. The antiques merely tickle the ear, while the modern works go deep, each is a new emotional experience.

Wanda Landowska performed a concerto for harpsichord by Handel. The harpsichord is the instrument that preceded the modern piano, and it has not been in general use for nearly two centuries. It is doubtful if one has been heard in Chicago at a big public concert before. Mme. Landowska's instrument looked like a grand piano with over a third of its width chopped off, and whittled to a point at the end. It had two keyboards. The harpsichord sounded like a piano made completely of tin, or like a sort of glorified music box.

The concert brought to performance, for the first time in America, a symphony by Arnold Bax of London which is barely a year old. Bax generally writes in a distinctly Irish idiom, but this symphony contained little of that. There is nothing gentle and soothing about it, but passion there is and trouble and deep gloom.

Other comparatively modern works were Debussy's nocturnes, "Clouds" and "Festivals." All the peace and calm that Bax lacked Debussy had, and he put it into these tone pictures, one of the peaceful, dreamy passage of clouds, and the other of the ecstatic, inspirational effect of darkness.

Mme. Landowska played three unaccompanied harpsichord solos. They were quaint and novel, but coming right after the symphony as they did, they illustrated how far instrumental music has advanced from the tinkling tunes of Scarlatti and the other old timers.

To contrast the harpsichord and the piano, Landowska played a concerto for the modern instrument by Mozart. Even dear old Mozart sounded modern by comparison. But the concerto came at the end of a long and heavy concert, and, being long itself, it soon proved tiresome.

For next week we have been promised one of the most tremendous symphonic works of modern times, the symphony "Ilya Mourometz," by the contemporary Russian Richard Gliere. Ilya Mourometz was a Russian legendary hero, and the symphony depicts his life in four great tone poems. Two contemporary Chicago composers are on the program, too, John Alden Carpenter with his "Pilgrim Vision," and Adolf Brune, with two movements of a symphony.

Government Will Continue Support Of Negro University

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, March 20.—With 116 southern Democrats voting "nay," the house has agreed to the appropriations for Howard university, insisted upon by the senate after a series of temperamental outbursts by the Bourbon politicians against the race conscious tendencies in the seat of learning of the colored people in the District of Columbia.

The Southern Bourbons are really shying at a shadow, say radical Negroes. Under the tutelage of such weak liberals as Dean Kelly Miller, little aggressive race consciousness will be taught at the school, and the labor issue will be particularly ignored. This was shown by Miller's handling of the Sanhedrin. The Republican administration, knowing Miller's policy, has given its support to Howard university.

Nearing Addressing More Meetings in Connecticut Towns

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 20.—Scott Nearing's debate with Professor Petrunkevitch was such a success and the recent meetings thru the state addressed by Alexander Trachtenberg were so well attended that the Workers Party in District 15 is going ahead with its campaign with more enthusiasm than ever.

Nearing is now billed for three engagements in Connecticut: He speaks in the Casino hall, Stamford, March 20; Grand Theatre, Hartford, March 23 in the afternoon; Bridgeport, March 23, in the evening. Branch secretaries will please call these meetings to the attention of their members.

The Young Workers League of New Haven intends holding a mass meeting to double its membership. The Young Workers League of Stamford will hold a meeting to be addressed by Rebecca Grecht of New York. An English branch of the party has been organized in New Haven.

The Tolstoy drama, Polikushka, in motion pictures, will be shown in Bridgeport, Hartford, New Haven, Waterbury and Ansonia, if present plans do not miscarry.

MILITARY RULE STILL PREVAILS IN GERMANY

Yellow Socialists Play Usual Dirty Role

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER
(By The Federated Press)

BERLIN.—A decree has been issued by the government, to the effect that the military dictatorship of General von Seeckt and the reichswehr (national guard) is ended—but, a "civil" dictatorship has been set up instead. The sole difference is that that Minister of the Interior Jarres, closely identified with the big industrialists of the Ruhr valley, supplants General von Seeckt.

That is President Ebert's answer to General von Seeckt's letter to the effect that the country is now "safe" and "stable" enough not to need any state of emergency regulations. The parties of the Right immediately started a campaign of resolutions and petitions not to surrender the country to possible anarchy, but to provide some special means for maintaining Law and Order. The decree, signed by Ebert, the chancellor, the minister of the interior, and the minister of defense, is the answer.

There is not even hope that the military will now be taken out of politics. For the decree provides that the troops shall be at the disposal of the minister of the interior if and when necessary. While personal liberty is supposed to be reestablished the decree provides that there may be limitations of that liberty "to ward off movements for unlawfully changing the constitutional form of the state." Which means probably, that the Communists and extreme nationalists will soon be outlawed again.

The minister of the interior a few hours after the decree had been issued, issued an order specifically exempting Bavaria from the provisions of the decree, "in view of the fact that Bavaria has its own state-of-emergency law."

In Bavaria a state-of-emergency law prevails which is aimed solely at the workers and at the parties standing for republicanism, while monarchistic parties and organizations continue to flourish and prepare for "der Tag" when they can take the rest of Germany by surprise and re-establish monarchism.

Democracy has once again been defeated in Germany.

East St. Louis Trade Unionists Threaten Strike on April 1st

By R. KRAMER
(Special to The Daily Worker)

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill., March 20.—A strike is threatened here by 6,000 laborers and cement men in the building industry if the 10 cents per hour increase is not granted by the Master Builders Association.

They are now getting 70 cents per hour and asking for 80 cents. The Builders so far have refused this demand.

The mechanics, carpenters, steamfitters, and plumbers also asking for an increase of 25 cents per hour, so it looks that if the Builders Association will stand pat and refuse the increase as they did till present, then a general strike may be expected April 1st, that will tie up about 52 jobs under construction and involve aproximately 2000 men.

PITTSBURGH COAL DIGGERS PREPARE FOR CONVENTION

Ready to Clean Up on Lewis Gang

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 20.—"How to beat the machine" was the subject discussed at a delegate meeting in Charleroi, Pa., by Progressives from the Mon' River section of District 5, United Mine Workers of America.

Besides instructive speeches by Jimmy Oates and Thomas Myerscough, the delegates talked of the district convention which will convene in Pittsburgh on Monday, March 24.

Such matters as the impeachment of the officials for maladministration, the revising of the district constitution, the rotten conditions that prevail in the district and many other things too numerous to mention were thoroly discussed. Many of the delegates present also attended the Indianapolis convention in January and they are determined that the things "pulled off" there, are not going to be repeated in Pittsburgh.

Some brought reports of personal investigations of "Blue Sky" locals that were represented by organizers at the National convention, which were to the effect that many of the supposed locals are attached to mines that have been finished for years, while others have been closed down for long periods of time and did not hold meetings to elect delegates.

This will not be permitted at Pittsburgh if the Progressives can prevent it and they are confident they can. Of course, they expect that the attempt will be made and that Phil Murray and "Pinch-hitter" Green will be here to help Fagan get by with the stuff, but the miners are confident that the "Monarchs" from Indianapolis will be held in check, a la Kansas.

Besides this meeting, three others were held each with the same objective, i. e., the firing of the machine! Watch the smoke in Pittsburgh.

Hangman Governor Of California Denies Reprieve to Youth

By MIRIAM ALLEN DE FORD
(Staff Correspondent of Federated Press)

SAN QUENTIN, Calif., March 20.—Hardly has the body of Aurelio Pompa, the Mexican boy to whom Governor Richardson denied a reprieve to investigate his claim of perjury in his conviction, been cut down from the gallows, when California is faced with another scandal in a hanging case. A law was passed two years ago forbidding the hanging of any person under 18. Now a boy, William D. Hard of Yreka, has been placed in the death cell, to be hanged May 23, who says he is only 17. His mother says he is 17; he looks 17.

But, like many boys who are trying to be "hardboiled," he has at various times claimed ages from 18 to 20. There is no record of his birth and the family has not lived long in Siskiyou county, where the murder occurred. His mother, who came here with him and clung to him silently till the doors of the death cell closed on him, says she will go to Governor Richardson and beg for clemency. The governor is on record as a friend of hanging, and has almost never granted a reprieve to a man sentenced to death.

The admission of Hard and Ronald C. Erno, his accomplice in the crime, has made the population of the "death row" ten men, the largest in its history. There are besides three men in the Los Angeles county jail condemned to death, whose cases are before the state supreme court. Opponents of capital punishment point to this situation as a proof that hanging does not deter from murder.

Pardoned To Die

SAN FRANCISCO, March 20.—John E. Weller, who as cashier stole $170,000 from the First Bank of Savings of Fort Bragg, was released from San Quentin by a telegraphic vote of the prison board in order that he might die at home, his death occurring the same day.

One wonders if this "most remarkable pardon ever issued by the state" would ever have been granted if Weller had been guilty, instead of embezzlement, of membership in a radical labor union, and if his relatives had not been wealthy and influential.

Every new DAILY WORKER reader means a new recruit in the ranks of militant labor.

MAY ORGANIZE THIRD PARTY IN OKLAHOMA STATE

Political Lines Split Wide Open

By ERNEST R. CHAMBERLAIN
(Staff Correspondent of Federated Press)

OKLAHOMA CITY, March 20—Approximately 800 delegates are expected to attend the convention of the Farmer-Labor Reconstruction league to be held at El Reno this week.

Political lines are badly split in Oklahoma.

A stiff fight is expected on the floor of the convention over the policy of again making a nonpartisan fight or launching a third party.

George Wilson, deposed president of the A. & M. State College, has declared that he is thru with the Democratic party. He has been mentioned prominently as the radical choice for the indorsement. If the convention goes into the democratic primary he is expected to file as an independent unless the law now passed by the lower house of the legislature is also passed by the senate and signed by the governor which would permit a state third party.

Wilson will organize a Farmer-Labor party machine to support the national movement independent of the league fight in the Democratic primary. He will thus give the leaguers a card in the hole should they be defeated in the primary. This seems likely in view of the fact that Walton's betrayal and subsequent impeachment has put the entire party and election machinery in the hands of reactionaries.

The regulars who once sought to force radicals to stay in the party by denying them the right to organize a new party are now sick of their erstwhile bedfellows. Prominent Socialists are continually bobbing up in their "harmony meetings" and tearing the hide off Democratic saints. The recent election of a state chairman resembled a riot. Police were called to enforce rulings of the chair as delegates hurled accusations at the governor and proclaimed that "a bolshevik was a poor man trying to get by."

The regulars now see that it is better to let the "reds" bolt to a Farmer-Labor party than to the Republican party, and a third party will probably be in the field and have delegates at the national conventions.

Greek and Armenian Comrades Hosts to Detroit Sub Getters

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., March 20.—Detroit DAILY WORKER "go-getters" took the evening of Saturday, March 15, and enjoyed a banquet under the auspices of the Boost Our Press Club. Tables were set in the auditorium of the House of the Masses.

Bill Dunne, of the DAILY WORKER, who was to have cut up as toast master, telegraphed that he "has missed connections coming from Minnesota where we scored a tremendous victory for our Party in four different conventions. Could not leave sooner and am sure that this telegram with this news will be a good substitute for me. Best wishes to the Detroit comrades."

Maurice Sugar was hurriedly conscripted to serve in Dunne's stead and was given an ovation when District Organizer Owens announced the change. However, those most vociferous in their applause regretted it a moment later when Comrade Sugar, who is familiar with the private lives of most of those present, began telling what he knew.

The English branch of the Workers Party was given a beautiful banner for securing the most subscriptions during the drive. Joe Ferris received $10 in gold for getting the most subs, and Bud Reynolds drew down $5 in gold for coming in second best.

Full credit for the success of the banquet must be given to the Greek and Armenian comrades, who took full charge of preparing and serving a dinner that will long be remembered.

Arangements have already been made to continue the drive in response to the call for 10,000 subs by June 15. Detroit is determined to maintain its reputation as the premier DAILY WORKER sub-getter city in the country. Let Chicago take warning.

Bystander Killed by Scabs.

NEW ORLEANS, March 20.—In August of last year Felix Chetta, an innocent bystander, was shot and killed in a battle between armed scab carpenters and peaceful union men. Two scabs were arrested charged with murder. This week Assistant District Attorney Tom Craven announced that he would abandon the case as he was unable to prove who fired the fatal shot. It is said that all scabs were heavily armed during the carpenters' strike.

RIFLE SQUAD TO SHOOT WORKERS IN WATERBURY

Police Are Ready for "Labor Trouble"

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WATERBURY, Conn., March 20. The Waterbury Herald carries a news story about the visit of two clothing worker organizers from New York and their attempt to speak with the unorganized workers of Luria Bros. Cloak & Suit Mfg. Co. and the dispatching of detectives to the plant to warn the men against "doing any intimidating." Then follows this paragraph in bold type:

"Waterbury expects labor trouble this spring, however, and the police are already preparing for any emergency that may arise. By order of the board of public safety and Superintendent of Police George M. Beach a rifle squad has been chosen. The squad is drilled twice weekly so it will be efficient should the occasion arise."

On the same day the following editorial appeared in the Herald, same paper:

Waterbury Ready For Murder.

"A news item in the Herald today announces that there is likely to be some labor difficulties in Waterbury this spring and that the police are getting ready for it by organizing a rifle squad.

"Waterbury is the only place in Connecticut, and probably in New England, where war-like preparations are made every time there is a hint of a dispute between the employes and the bosses of the community.

"The artillery is for the purpose of murdering the employes, of course. It would never be turned against the employers. No rifle squad would ever be trained to shoot at a factory owner. That would be Bolshevism.

"A city government which deliberately sets about using rifles and machine guns to overawe its citizens who work for a living should be heartily ashamed of itself in the United States of America.

"Murdering people never settled an industrial problem.

"Yes, murder is the word."

“Made in America”

The injunction is a distinctly American weapon used by the bosses in their struggle with the workers.

The injunction enables the employer to rob the workingman of every advantage that the strike can net him as a means of self-defense.

The injunction makes every possible effect of every strike impossible. It is a declaration of martial law by the government in behalf of the bosses against the workers.

The injunction begins with the assumption that the workingman has committed a crime. It assumes that the workingman is guilty until he can prove to a hostile judge, who is district attorney, judge and jury all in one, that he is innocent. In the meantime the worker is stopped from defending himself against the bosses' attacks. The strike is crippled. That is just what the bosses want.

The injunction denies workingmen and women the right to trial by jury. Trial by jury is supposed to be an inalienable right guaranteed the masses by the very Constitution which the bosses are so anxious to praise—when it pays them to. Worse still, the injunction denies the workers the right to trial by jury when they are charged with committing an act against which there is no law on the statute books. In other words, the injunction is used to railroad workers to jail for doing things which are not unlawful or against the law, even as it is framed and interpreted by the capitalists who control the courts and own the judges.

Obviously the injunction is a made-to-order, “made-in-America” weapon used by the government on behalf of the exploiters of labor to break up the organizations of the working class and smash the strikes for better working conditions and the right to organize.

It is for this reason that the working class of America has disregarded injunctions issued by the bosses' judges and has gone ahead in violation and in defiance of injunctions. Even the most conservative labor leaders have defied injunctions and disregarded this form of law written in the blood of the striking workingmen by the agents of the employers, wearing the togas of hypocritical exploiting class justice.

During the shopmen's strike, when the workers went out on strike to defend their right to organize and against starvation wages, the railroad capitalists secured the infamous Daugherty injunction to smash the strike.

The railway workers did not pay any attention to this attempt of the employing class government to break their strike? Thousands of workers went right ahead and violated the injunction.

No less than 2,000 cases were investigated by the Department of Justice and William J. Burns for violation of the Daugherty strike-breaking injunction. At least 1,200 workingmen were charged by the Department of Justice with violating the injunction.

Within two months after the ukase was issued by “Czar” Daugherty against the railway workers, 107 were arrested for disregarding the injunction in the Chicago district alone. Forty workers were taken in Wisconsin and an equal number in Nebraska.

This did not frighten the workingen who were bent on beating back the attacks of their bosses on their homes and lives.

The terrorism of the employers failed to break the spirit of the workers who went on with the fight. Injunction or no injunction—the railway workers went ahead to strike as best they could, and held out in the face of starvation and the united front of the Wall Street government, the rail kings and bankers.

This heroic conduct is typical of the attitude of the American working class towards injunctions.

This is the only treatment that injunctions deserve to get at the hands of the striking workers in every industry, if the working class of this country is to save itself from abject capitalist slavery.

Ogden Reid, owner of the notoriously reactionary New York Tribune, has purchased the New York Herald from Frank Munsey. A well matched pair. More groans and new lectures from Oswald Garrison Villard.

Hindoo Socialists advise the British Labor Party that unless their Indian Viceroy, Lord Olivier, ceases lying about India, the Hindoo workers will lose confidence in British Royal Socialism. It's about time they should.

While striking cooks picketed the Hotel Adlon, in Berlin, against which they were on strike, socialist president Ebert calmly ate a dinner cooked and served by scabs, on the inside. It is not surprising that a member of a party that has betrayed the entire working-class of Germany should patronize a scab hotel.

Give Us a Mussolini

Among the powerful financial agencies and in the spheres of influence dominated by the manufacturing interests of the country, there is developing a strong feeling of revulsion to the manner in which their government agents and defenders have been handled in recent months. The upper crust of the capitalist class is getting tired of being on the defensive. There is talk in the air of a counter-offensive to line up all shades of employing class opinion in defense of the common capitalist interests.

The way in which congress has manhandled the president of late is particularly irritating to the big business groups. The centralization of executive power in the hands of the president is one of the most favorable features of the present government to the employing class. This position of the capitalist stronghold has of late been challenged a bit.

It has been a mighty long time in American history when congress dared give so little consideration to the recommendations and demands of the president. The more Coolidge has tried to appease congress, the less concern the House displayed for him. The way the Coolidge tax ukase was kicked into oblivion affords a case in illustration of this attitude.

Naturally, this state of affairs rises out of the conditions at hand, out of the balance of class powers and inter and intra economic and political class relationships. Is is precisely for this reason that the leaders of the big capitalists are showing signs of alarm and are calling upon their class watchdogs to get on their hind legs and fight back.

Thus the Wall Street Journal, in an article by Guy M. Walker, one of its reputed writers, throws out the slogan for battle. Discussing the tax bills before Congress, Mr. Walker talked in this plain language:

> “If they do not give us economic tax reduction at once, it is time for the Vigilantes to start for Washington. Surely there is somewhere in America a Mussolini to lead the American Blackshirts to Washington.”

We wonder whether the New York State Criminal Anarchy Law will be applied to Mr. Walker and the Wall Street Journal for calling upon their followers to overthrow the government by force and violence. If an organization of the working class were to make a far less bold appeal to the workers to organize a military march on Washington, the accused would surely be sent to the darkest state dungeons. We recall the conviction of several Communist leaders in New York for merely propagating the need of working class political and economic organization.

This appeal of the Wall Street Journal must be taken heed of by the workers and farmers. It gives the lie to all the hypocritical cant of the employing class about the sacredness of their democratic government. This Walker outburst is a challenge and a warning to the dispossessed farmers and workingmen of what they will, sooner rather than later, have to face from their capitalist enemy.

Bonus Buncombe

The House of Representatives has adopted a so-called soldier bonus measure by the tremendous vote of 355 to 54. This is enough to over-ride a Coolidge veto.

The bonus measure is a miserable compromise with the demands of the ex-soldiers. It is a fraud in the light of what those who have bled for the preservation of capitalist democracy have been asking for. It is a drop of at least 50 per cent from what even the American Legion has been asking.

Most of the little that will be paid will be in the form of insurance policies. No less than 3,038,283 ex-soldiers will be given insurance policies instead of a real bonus. Two years from the date of the enactment of the bill, if it ever will become law, the soldiers will be able to exercise the great privilege of borrowing money on these policies and paying, of course, handsome interest fees on the money thus borrowed.

Only 389,853 ex-soldiers will receive cash payments of $50 or less. This is the best that the capitalist legislators can do for the men who have risked their lives to defend the present system of exploitation.

And 865,741 workers and farmers, whom the government drove off the farms and out of the mills, mines and factories to the army camps will not receive a single cent of bonus.

But even this fraudulent bonus has a long road to travel before it can become law. The Senate fire must still be faced. Most likely the bill will fall into the hands of a senate committee to arrange for an agreement with the House. Then it will be sent back to the House for approval. The mighty pen of the capitalist agent Coolidge will then be wielded mercilessly unless a sufficient majority is secured to override the presidential veto.

How different this lengthy painful process of legislation is from the speedy manner in which the Esh-Cummins Law, granting a bonus of hundreds of millions of dollars to the railroad capitalists, was enacted!

It is only because the government we have today is a capitalist government owned outright by the employing class that a bonus of even the mildest brand has so many obstacles to hurdle, while fabulous bonuses totalling billions of dollars are granted to the exploiters with such ease.

Victor Berger is satisfied that Senator R. LaFollette is now a radical. He has adopted a plank for the public ownership of railways. After we get that, says Berger, socialism will have easy sledding. That is Berger socialism.

An Inspiration to Heroism

FOREWORD.

JOHN BROWN'S life is a grand, simple epic that should inspire one to heroism. No one asks for dates and minute details on hearing of the life of Jesus or Socrates. There are men who have proved their superiority to the pettiness of life, and who seem almost divine. John Brown is one of them. I think he was almost our greatest American. I know he was the greatest man the common people of America have yet produced.

He did not become a President, a financier, a great scientist or artist; he was a plain and rather obscure farmer until his death. That is his greatness. He had no great offices, no recognition or applause of multitudes to spur him on, to feed his vanity and self-righteousness. He did his duty in silence; he was an outlaw. Only after he had been hung like a common murderer, and only after the Civil War had come to fulfill his prophecies, was he recognized as a great figure.

But in his life he was a common man to the end, a hard-working, honest, Puritan farmer with a large family, a man worried with the details of poverty, and obscure as ourselves. Now we are taught as school children that only those who become Presidents and captains of finance are the successful ones in our democracy. John Brown proved that there is another form of success, within the reach of everyone, and that is to devote one's life to a great and pure cause.

John Brown was hung as an outlaw; but he was a success, as Jesus and Socrates were successes. Some day school children will be taught that this had been the only sort of success worth striving for in his time. The rest was dross: the personal success of the beetle that rolls itself a huger ball of dung than its fellow beetles, and exults over it.

John Brown is a legend; but I still see him in the simple, obscure heroes who fight for freedom today in America. That is why I am telling his story! It is the story of thousands of men living in America now, did we but know it. John Brown is still in prison in America; yes, and he has been hung and shot down a hundred times since his first death. For his soul is marching on; it is the soul of liberty and justice, which cannot die, or be suppressed.

When Slavery Was Respectable.

TO understand any of the outstanding men of history one must also understand something of their background. The Roman Emperor Marcus Aurelius persecuted and burned the primitive Christians; yet he is accounted one of the most religious and humane of historical figures, and his Meditations are commonly considered a book of the gentlest and wisest counsel toward the good life.

You cannot understand this paradox unless you know the history of the Roman state. And you cannot understand John Brown unless you understand the history of his times.

John Brown, until the age of fifty, had lived the peaceful, laborious life of a Yankee farmer with a large family. He hated war, and was almost a Quaker; had never handled fire arms, and was a man of deep and silent affections. He was deeply religious, read the Bible daily; Christianity imbued all the acts of his daily existence.

This man, nearing his sixtieth year, assembled a group of young men with rifles and took the field to wage guerrilla war on slavery. He became a warrior, an outlaw. What drove him to this desperate stand?

I think the answer is: Respectability. There is nothing more maddening to a man of deep moral feeling than to find that slavery has become respectable, while freedom is considered the mad dream of a fanatic.

The slavery of black men had become the most respectable institution in America in John Brown's time. It had had a dark and bloody history of a hundred years in which to become firmly rooted into American life.

There had been slavery in Europe for centuries before the discovery of America—but it was white slavery. Each feudal baron owned hordes of serfs—white farmers—who were as much a part of his land holdings as his castles, horses and ploughs.

With the invention of printing, gunpowder and machine production the system of feudalism declined. The French Revolution helped deal it a death blow. The last country where this ancient slavery of white men was not dead was in Russia; but African slavery, the slavery of Negroes, who were heathens, and therefore could morally be bought and sold by Christians, had been reintroduced on the northern coast of the Mediterranean by Moorish traders. In the year 990 these Moors from the Barbary Coast first reached the cities of Nigeria, and established an uninterrupted exchange of Saracen and European luxuries for black slaves.

Columbus tried to introduce Indian slavery into Europe but the church forbade it, for Indians were accounted Christians when converted. The unhappy Negroes were not considered convertible; their slavery was sanctified by the church. And for the next few centuries the African slave trade was the most lucrative traffic pursued by mankind. Black slaves were to be found in the whole vast area of Spanish and Portuguese America, also in Dutch and French Guinea and the West Indies. It was black men who cleared the jungles, tilled the fields, built the cities and roads and laid down, in their sweat and blood, the foundations of civilization in the New World. Great jealous and prosperous monopolies were formed in this traffic of slaves; and its profits were greedily shared by philosophers, statesmen and kings.

In 1776, the American colonies were inhabited by two and a half million white persons, who owned half a million slaves. Many of the most rational and humane leaders of the Revolution saw the inconsistency of slave holders making a revolution in the name of freedom. There was some early agitation against slavery, but the humanitarians were in a minority. Even then slavery had become respectable and profitable. It would have been easy and cheap to have freed the slaves then. It would have been the most practicable thing the young nation could have done. Not a life would have been lost; and the development of the country might have been even more rapid. But it was not done; such acts need more far-sightedness than the average man possesses.

Slavery grew by leaps and bounds, as the country was growing.

The slave trader, shrewd, intelligent and rich, kidnapped young men and women in Africa and did a huge business. His markets became the feature of every Southern town. The planters lolled at their ease, and devised ways and means of forcing their slaves to breed more rapidly. The slaves were treated as impersonally as animals. Mothers were sold away from their children, and husbands from their wives. Generations of black men died in bondage, and left their children only the sad inheritance of slavery.

The South developed an aristocrat class of indolent white men and women who looked down on all work as ignominious, and who used their minds, not in the arts and sciences, but to find new moral justifications for slavery.

Slavery was respectable. “It is an act of philanthropy to keep the Negro here, as we keep our children in subjection for their good,” said a Southern statesman. Slavery was moral. Even most of the respectability of the North enlisted in its defense. In 1826, Edward Everett, the great Massachusetts statesman, said in Congress that slavery was sanctioned by religion and by the United States Constitution.

The churches of almost every denomination were solidly behind slavery. The Supreme Court ruled that it was constitutional. A pro-Slavery President occupied the White House, and Senator Sumner, a lonely abolitionist, was beaten down with a loaded cane on the senate floor because he dared say a brave word against the nation's crime.

In 1838 William Lloyd Garrison, founded the Liberator, first of the abolitionist journals. He said that “the constitution is a covenant with death, and an agreement with hell,” and he fought slavery with all his power. “Our country is the world, our countrymen all mankind,” was the slogan of his journal. Garrison was beaten by a mob in a northern city for his courage; and other abolitionists were tarred and feathered, lynched, and attacked by mobs of respectable northern merchants and churchgoers, much as pacifists were beaten by mobs during the late war.

Slavery was respectable. Negro field hands sold for $1.000 each, and innocent black babies were worth $100 each to the white master as they suckled at a Negro mother's breast.

To attack slavery was to attack the constitution, the church, the government, and the institution of private property. To attack respectability has always been the crime of the saviours, and respectability is the cross on which they are forever hung.

THE DANCE OF LIFE

By HAVELOCK ELLIS

Houghton, Mifflin Company, Boston.

HAVELOCK ELLIS, in the Dance of Life, has written a sort of esthete's Bible.

This is the testament of a priest who has spent his long life in chanting great, solemn hymns to intellectual beauty.

The Saviour in his testament is Leonardo de Vinci; and the God in it is that mystic rythym that binds music, philosophy, science, thinking, all the life of rocks and trees, birds and flowers and stars, the body and soul of men, the body and soul of the universe, into a cosmic harmony for which the symbol is the dance.

Life is a dance, and Havelock Ellis stands before it in rapture, an esthete ravished by the spectacle of the world.

Havelock Ellis is one of the most learned men alive, and one of the wisest. And he writes with the glory of a young poet, and the far-reaching experience of a mellow scientist.

But I miss something in his testament. I feel like a peasant in a cathedral; I might pray here, but I could not live here. This is not Life, but a concept built by man. It is a beauty felt by the brain; but it is not the earth, and the cities, and the problems of bread, love, birth and death. These things cannot be arranged into a dance pattern; they are greater than concepts of man's mind, such as Havelock Ellis' dance symbol.

I cannot state his thesis here; one cannot summarize a symphony or a poem. One can only say a poem is not a philosophy of life. And as I must say that about Havelock Ellis' book, tho I reverently add he impresses me as a wonderful stage. But I am bewildered by anyone who tries to pack a complete theory of life into a book, and leaves out everything I have seen or heard in life.

I read part of this book at a murder trial I was reporting for a newspaper. I read another chapter of it while sitting in the front room of a tenement flat, where my paper had sent me to get the story of a starving widow and her five children. They had been living on toast and tea for two months. I read another part of the book in the ante room of the president of the Chamber of Commerce.

I felt as if I were dwelling in two worlds, Ellis', and the places where I read his book. And it seemed to me that no book of life could be complete that shirked starvation, murder, Chambers of Commerce, the problems of men's purposes and injustice.

Havelock Ellis wants an aristocracy of intellect. He is a eugenist, and his social theories are all based on the breeding of a finer face. His philosophy is intended for the joy of that super-race he visions.

I guess I am not a super-man, or an esthete, but one of the slaves. I see that someone will always have to work in this world, and that there will always be the necessity for action. There will always be suffering and struggle of some kind, against the evil in man, against the dangers and mysteries and cataclysms of nature. What has the dance of life to do with a world war? What has it to do with the felling of a tree in the Oregon lumber belt, or the hammer of picks in a coal shaft in Illinois? What has it to do with the weekly pay envelope, or famine, revolution, earthquake, flood?

The esthete's philosophy must forever be for the man who lives in the monastery; it does not help the man who must live in the world. Therefore it is incomplete, even when Havelock Ellis is its lyricist.

But I am ashamed of myself for having to criticize this book. It is like criticizing Jesus. Yet I want new philosophers to write, who will see what I and millions of other men have seen and who will not leave the world of living men out of their books. Too long have the wise men lived with their dreams, leaving the ignorant to wrestle with reality. Too long have philosophers and esthetes adored the mystic dance of life, while other men have suffered in its brutal drama.

What Good Are Kings?

Jackie Coogan too is now making propaganda for the Workers Party. Listen to this from a letter by Comrade George Kraska of Boston:

“My little boy Leonard went to the movies the other day to see Jackie Coogan in “Long Live the King,” after he came home he was very much enthused with the picture and related what a wonderful picture it was. I replied to him, (joking) that it was a poor picture and that there was nothing to it and this was his reply, “You ought to like it, because it has a little bit of Workers Party in it, because Jackie Coogan says in the play, “What good are Kings anyway!” Well, is not that good? My youngster is only seven years old.”—George Kraska.

William Jennings Bryan is getting old but he is still willing. He may accept the Democratic nomination if nobody else does. The self-sacrificing attitude of these capitalist politicians is really admirable. If Mr. Bryan is as successful in making votes for the Democratic party as he is in fighting the theory of evolution, we suggest that the donkey crowd nominate Edward Doheny.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

Dr. Charles Eliot, formerly president of Harvard University has celebrated his 90th birthday. He did not celebrate it alone. Congratulations poured in on him from the heads of the biggest capitalist institutions in the United States, from the White House to capitalist newspaper offices. No workingclass organization sent him a greeting. Calvin Coolidge, J. P. Morgan—from his pleasure yacht in the Mediterranean Sea—, Nicholas Murray Butler, the entire Coolidge cabinet,—with the exception of Daugherty who was kept out of the picture for obvious reasons—all joined in honoring the man who once said that “A scab was the highest type of American citizen”. Is it surprising that the capitalist class should appreciate such a valuable servant?

• • • •

Mr. Ramsay MacDonald is awfully worried over the mishaps of the handsome Prince of Wales. He has the falling sickness, which proves that Falls are not indigenous to the United States. The moment the prince sees a horse he is tempted and he usually falls. Now, Ramsay MacDonald has a heavy responsibility on his shoulders. He is saddled with the job of trying to reconcile the contradictions in capitalist society—a task that Karl Marx would throw up his hands in despair at—and also to save the neck of the prince of Wales for the collar of kingship. The Prince insists on breaking it. Ramsay being a socialist and not a communist does not feel the least bit of hostility toward the good looking lad whose misfortune it was to have King George as a father, even tho the class that Mr. MacDonald, the Hillquitian socialist, professed once to serve, pays his booze and doctor's bills.

• • • •

It has come to pass—as the gentleman who wrote the bible would say—that the Prince of Wales has fallen from a horse oftener than is good for him, and the last time the accident happened, Wales had his handsome face somewhat altered by the indelicate application of the animal's hoofs to his countenance. It seems the steed attempted to give him a massage without having any experience in the art. The result was not flattering to the prince. Mr. MacDonald, the King's socialist minister and master of his flunkeys, will ask the Prince of Wales to desist from riding horses. The British workers might lose a darned good king. The writer suggests to the Prince that if he cannot resist the temptation to ride animals, that there are two quadrupeds in the United States looking for jockeys and if he applies to the Republican and Democratic parties for the job he may lead either the elephant or the jackass to victory in the next election. Should the prince choose the jackass William G. McAdoo will lose ninety-nine per cent of his following.

Kamal Pasha is intent on making a clean sweep of religious monopolies in the Turkish Republic. He sent the Caliph scurrying for safety, throwing hundreds of happy wives and scores of contented eunuchs out of employment. While this added to the intellectual equanimity of the fastidious Kemal, it created a severe unemployment problem for him. Now Kemal is about to abolish the Grand Rabbi of Constantinople. Arthur Brisbane thinks this would be ad business and ungrateful. Has Arthur any money invested in Constantinople real estate?

• • • •

Speaker Frederick H. Gillet, of the National House of Representatives, speaking in Boston at the annual banquet of the Amherst Alumni Association, declared that the United States government was sound even tho corruption reached into the president's cabinet. Of course Calvin Coolidge is untouched by the rottenness! He said the retention of one crooked man in the government has done more to destroy public confidence in the capitalist government than hordes of honest men con restore in a generation. The capitalist politicians see the great destructive power—destructive to capitalist government—of the Teapot Dome scandal. Yet some radicals think it is none of our business! “Why should we worry about the troubles of the capitalists?” they say. Calvin has escaped the filth says Gillett, but is it not strange that such a wise strikebreaker can be so blind to the corruption of his associates?

Strange things are supposed to happen in Ireland. A few days ago several generals of the Free State army objected to the policy of disbanding a large section of the army and forwarded an ultimatum to the government demanding a cessation of this policy within a very limited time. The government did nothing. A cabinet minister offered his resignation, but later agreed to withdraw it. The situation became so serious that a special minister of defense was appointed. On the day before yesterday, Richard Mulcahy, defense minister raided a house in Parnell street, Dublin and arrested several Free State officers who were holding a meeting in the house. A cabinet minister was reported to be present. It now appears that President Cosgrave has sided in with the mutineers, that Richard Mulcahy, Minister of Defense and others have resigned and that the mutineers are to form a military dictatorship with Cosgrave at its head. The Republicans on the other hand, who refuse to take part in the Dail Eirean proceedings are featuring the work of Benito Mussolini in their papers and proclaiming him as a second “Napoleon” and the deadly foe of the British Empire. In the meantime, Thomas Johnson, leader of the Irish Labor Party is making eloquent speeches in parliament defending democracy.

NET MELLON IN $200,000 GRAFT

WITNESS TESTIFIES PAYING DAUGHERTY AID BIG SUM FOR BOOZE GRAFT PROTECTION

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, March 21.—In an amazing recital that dovetailed into the investigation of Jesse Smith, Harry Daugherty's friend, a man who acted as go-between for New York bootleggers today told the senate committee investigating Daugherty that he had paid $200,000 to two men with "influence in Washington" to get permits for withdrawal of 50,000 cases of liquor from warehouses and distilleries, one of which was the Overhold distillery, at Pittsburgh, owned by Secretary of the Treasury, Mellon.

The go-between was John Goroni, of New York. He said he paid the money to Will Orr and Orr's partner, Owen Murphy, for permits, which, he alleged, "Orr sold at $15 a case." Orr has already figured in the inquiry considering Dempsey fight pictures.

Goroni brought in the name of William J. Flynn, former head of the Department of Justice Secret Service. Flynn, Goroni said, sent him to Thomas B. Felder, a lawyer, when he wanted to engage counsel. The witness said Felder got back $40,000 or more of the $200,000, when certain permits "did not go thru."

Orr told him, the witness said, that he had influence in Washington and knew Jesse Smith and Howard Mannington well. Mannington has also been referred to as one of the visitors to the "green house on K. street" where Daugherty and Smith used to meet.

Of the $200,000, Goroni said, $150,000 came from a John Lynn, who "went into the liquor business" and who took his own life last year.

Goroni testified that "a special assistant attorney general named L'Esperance," got fifty cents out of each $15 paid to Orr and Murphy. L'Esperance, Goroni said, was in the office of United States District Attorney in New York as "Assistant United States Attorney."

A moment later Goroni testified that Orr told him part of the $15 was "split" with Jesse Smith.

Harry F. Sinclair today won a respite from the senate oil committee which had called him to testify. After heated argument of two hours between the committee and Martin W. Littleton, counsel for Sinclair, the committee postponed decision on Littleton's demand that Sinclair be excused from testifying further. Adjournment was taken until tomorrow, when a decision will be made.

A majority of members of the committee indicated strongly that they would vote to compel Sinclair to submit to examination.

Littleton presented a lengthy legal argument to the committee that it did not have the power under the constitution to compel his client to testify.

The committee, as a whole, did not seem impressed by Littleton's argument, but upon the request of Senators Spencer and Bursum, Republicans let the matter go over until tomorrow. Spencer and Bursum said they wanted more time to consider the question.

Senators Walsh, Dill, Adams, Kendrick and Chairman Ladd pronounced themselves unqualifiedly in favor of forcing Sinclair to submit to examination.

Littleton sought to keep Sinclair from the stand on the ground that evidence that he might give would tend to incriminate him.

DUTY TO SMASH INJUNCTION, SAYS STRIKE SPEAKER

Garment Workers Hear Engdahl Flay Writ

J. Louis Engdahl, editor of the DAILY WORKER, addressed a spirited mass meeting of the garment strikers yesterday afternoon at 180 W. Washington St., declaring that it was not only their right, but their duty to violate the contemptible injunctions issued by the courts, including that of the labor baiting Judge Denis Sullivan.

Engdahl declared that the only wish of the DAILY WORKER, in its fight for the garment strikers, was to bring about unity of all workers thruout the city in support of this struggle.

Get Fitzpatrick Out.

"Let us get John Fitzpatrick, Victor Olander, Oscar Nelson, all the members of the 'Committee of 15' and of the Injunction Committee of the Chicago Federation of Labor, out on the picket line", urged Engdahl. "Let us get Alderman Nelson active in the city council. Let us get the whole Chicago labor movement back of this strike. Then we'll win it easily".

"Conventions of the American Federation of Labor have repeatedly gone on record, demanding that workers violate the injunctions of the anti-labor courts", said Engdahl. "That is on paper. Let us translate these paper resolutions into action. That is our task at the present time in order to win out big."

Union Built By Fighting.

Engdahl told of the big strike of the men's clothing workers in 1911, out of which grew the present powerful organization of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America. He said there was no better time than now to organize the ladies' garment industry 100 per cent."

The strikers, who have been keeping the picket lines intact in spite of Sullivan's writ applauded the remarks enthusiastically.

Gary Contractors Plan to Wipe Out Organized Labor

GARY, Ind., March 21.—Forty-seven steel trust contractors have declared war on organized labor in Gary, Ind. In a full page advertisement inserted in the Gary Post-Tribune the following statement is made signed by the forty-seven steel lackeys:

"We the undersigned building contractors, electrical and painting contractors, hereby pledge ourselves not to pay any increase in wages during the coming year."

With this noble pledge as a basis, the anti-labor contractors of Gary, Ind., appeal to the public for support against the striking painters, who went out in a body this week. The contractors are unable to show that they cannot pay $1.50 an hour which the painters are demanding.

The building boom in Gary reached unprecedented heights last spring when the steel trust was importing Mexicans and Negroes by the carload. The building contractors at that time put up flimsy shacks to house Gary's vassals.

Besides a wage boost, the building trades workers who are organized 100 per cent, demand a 40-hour week. They are confident of winning before the depression sets in.

Agriculture Dept. Tool of Packers Is Charge of Probers

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, March 21.—Investigation of expenditures in the Department of Agriculture is about to start in the House. This is the first step taken to review publicly Secretary Wallace's violation of the Packing-House Control Law and the placing of numerous pro-packer employes on the staff of the Packers and Stockyards Act Administration. The inquiry will also show to what extent this hostile personnel has been used to obstruct the passage of the Norris-Sinclair Bill for the relief of farmers and consumers. Backers of this bill have long been suspicious as to the source of opposition to the measure, which provides for a government marketing corporation.

Students Ignore Court Writ

Planning to ignore Judge "Dennie" Sullivan's contemptible injunction, University of Chicago students prepared last night to come out on the picket line early this morning in behalf of the brave girls who have been holding the fort with little outside assistance.

The student picket squad was organized by the University Liberal Club, Ida Terbush, president, after Thomas Holland reported the police brutalities and vicious injunction rulings which the bosses are using against the workers from the sweatshops.

The students have been active in the special citizens' committee organized by the Chicago Church Federation to work for a strike settlement, but they feel that the Sullivan injunction is a challenge that forces them to take action on the picket lines.

Associated with Miss Terbush in the leadership of the movement are Miss Maida Bacon and Alexander Nelson. Several dozen students have been lined up and a good force is expected out this morning, with a larger group Monday morning.

The special citizens' sub-committee meets this morning in the office of Miss Mary McDowell, of the Department of Public Welfare, to

Sinclair Oiled Republican Machinery

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, March 21.—Will H. Hays, $50,000 a year, Czar of the movie world is on his way to the Capitol today to tell about the happy days when he was chairman of the Republican National Committee, the days when oil barons were generous and Harry Sinclair greased the elephant's trunk with 75,000 shares of oil stock valued at $1,875,000.

Hays has not denied the truth of the allegation but has been busy consulting lawyers, expert in the art of evasion, who may seek to convince the oil scandal committee that Will H. Hays, is as clean as a hound's tooth.

It is freely stated around the Capitol that Hays will make an open breast of the gift. "What about it?" will be Hays defense, those in a position to know claim. We confess that this policy might throw the probe committee off its guard; witnesses to date with the exception of a few who spilled the beans on Daugherty, being in the Ananias class and top notchers at that.

Harry Sinclair is due to appear before the committee today. It is believed that he will refuse to testify on the ground that anything he might say would incriminate him. He has good reason for taking that position. Only a few weeks ago on his arrival from Europe, Sinclair jauntingly told newspaper men that he would take the witness stand and tell everything. Wiser counsels prevailed since then. It is now clear that there is a conspiracy on to run the investigation into the ground.

COLORED GIRL PICKETS PUT STEIN AND SEIDEN BOSSES ON THE RUN

Stein and Seiden, scab garment bosses, looked with angry eyes at three colored girl pickets, members of the Ladies' Garment Workers' union, who were patrolling the snowy sidewalk in front of No. 212 S. Market St.

"Move on!" shouted these newfangled hundred percenters. "We won't stand for any colored pickets!"

The girls laughed at them and the two bosses retreated to their shop where eight untrained scabs are trying to do the work of 30 expert workers who are striking.

Stein and Seiden are easily scared. Strikers tell with amusement of Brother Stein leaving his shop at night with a police bodyguard to protect him against frail little girls. Stein huddles into his automobile and a copper takes the wheel and drives him home.

If you want more information page Officer 390 who acts as chauffeur for the boss, with his blue uniform changed for the civilian coat of Stein's clerk.

Dakota Vote Sensation.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

FARGO, N. D., March 21.—The remarkable race made by Senator Robert M LaFollette in the primaries here, on a sticker campaign, has created a sensation, not alone in this state but in the capitol. The LaFollette campaign was only a last minute effort. The fact that he led Senator Hiram Johnson of California, who carried on a vigorous speaking campaign indicates that the exploited farmers in the Northwest are sick and tired of the two old parties and have lost all hope in them.

LaFollette beat Johnson by almost 4,000 votes, with 226 precincts yet to make returns. The vote stood: Coolidge, 47,947; LaFollette, 34,096; Johnson, 30,253.

CLARA SMITH, JAKE HAMON'S KILLER, HAD FATE OF HARDING, CAL COOLIDGE, IN HER HAND

By CARL HAESSLER

When Clara Smith Hamon, the genial Oklahoma murderess, goes on the Teapot Dome stand before the senate committee in Washington she will give the following facts if she tells the truth. Some of them are of court record, others have since been independently corroborated and the vital ones are vouched for at first hand by a former associate of Jake Hamon who kept out of harm's way and unlike the late oil magnate is still alive and active in Chicago oil circles today.

Harding Hamon's Protege.

Clara shot and killed Jake. She killed him because of republican politics and she was acquitted because of republican politics. And the politics then as now were of oil.

A few hours before Warren G. Harding was nominated for president at the 1920 convention in Chicago, Jake Hamon, who held the Oklahoma delegation in his vest pocket, told his friend and former co-workers that Harding and Calvin Coolidge would be the Republican nominees and that Albert B. Fall and Hamon himself would be in the new cabinet. Then he entered the famous Blackstone hotel conference manipulated by Harry Daugherty.

Only One Yet Alive.

The nominations went off as scheduled and in due time the front porch campaign began at Marion, O. Among newspaper photos taken at the time is a fine group of smelly beauties flanking the late president. On Harding's immediate right is Hamon, since murdered in a sex triangle. On his left is Jesse Smith, seller of administration influence, since a suicide. The fourth man in the group is Harry M. Daugherty, probably the least respected man in public life today.

Fall made the cabinet as secretary of the interior but Hamon's expected appointment fell thru. Fall made good for the oil crowd and then was ditched by them and left public disgrace as a bribetaker who got caught.

Clara Was Stubborn.

Hamon might have been in the same position but for his private life. He was enjoying what theological authorities call "living in sin" with Clara Smith Hamon—his one lawful wedded wife notwithstanding. This was all right in Oklahoma oil circles, but was hardly the thing for a prospective cabinet man. The word went to Hamon to ditch Clara. He tried to but Clara refused to drop. The quarrel ended fatally for Jake. The trial ended happily for Clara who is now living in Los Angeles with an honest-to-God husband instead of an oil millionarie as a soul-mate.

Jake's Death Saved Harding.

The unpleasantness also ended happily at the time for the Republican administration. The grasping Jake with his promise of a cabinet job was out of the way and Clara had her court acquittal of murder as the price of her silence. If she had been convicted her squealing would have put the indelible stain on the Harding-Coolidge regime two years eariler than it actually became visible. The Teapot Dome and other gushers would have flowed their devastating way long before Harding descended to the grave.

The story as here given is known to Hamon's former business manager as well as to Clara Hamon and the Chicago friend. It is understood to be in the hands of the senate investigating committee for use when two of the trio take the oath to testify.

World's Temporal Lord Will Receive Yanks in Throne Room

ROME, March 21.—All Americans in Rome are to be received by Pope Pius in public audience in the throne room of the Vatican after the consistory at which Archbishop Hayes and Mundelein are to be elevated to the cardinalate.

Archbishop Hayes made this announcement following his private audience with the Pontiff in the private library last night.

"I found his holiness in excellent health and with a most alert mind," Hayes said. "Reports that his health is bad are sheer nonsense."

SLEUTHS TRAIL MUMA, CHIEF FILM PLOTTER

Belief He Is Hiding in Daugherty Office

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, March 21. — Scouting parties were out again today looking for Jap Muma, bosom friend of the late President Harding, and self styled "master mind" in the criminal conspiracy under the auspices of Harry M. Daugherty, Jess Smith, William J. Burns and others to violate federal laws by illegally transporting the pictures of the Carpentier-Dempsey fight films from state to state.

It appears that Muma was the connecting link between Daugherty and the other criminals, which causes his testimony to have an added interest. It is expected that Edward McLean's business manager will prove a reluctant witness, but the web of testimony is so securely woven around him that any attempt on his part to lie his way out of the mesh of intrigue into which his crookedness has led him, will only result in whetting the appetite of Senator Wheeler for the truth.

If the sleuths who are hunting for Muma fail to locate him—it was rumored here yesterday that he was hiding in the Department of Justice building—Roxie Stinson will take the stand in a mood that bodes ill for the attorney general. The efforts of Mal Daugherty, Harry's brother, to rob her of her share of Jess Smith's fortune, did not hurt this woman's feelings half as much as the attorney general's besmirching of her character when he stated publicly, that Smith's ex-wife was on intimate terms with the Ohio grafter, long after a divorce was secured and that she recently registered in the Hollenden Hotel, Cleveland, with a man by the name of Fink, both occupying the same room.

Senator Wheeler placed in evidence today a batch of telegrams from and to Jesse Smith, Daugherty and McLean. These messages, according to members of the committee, showed what powerful influence Smith wielded at the Department of Justice and gave new ramifications of his dealings with the attorney general.

District Att'y Lays Blame for Beer Murders on Police

Half of Chicago's policemen were accepting bribes from breweries until federal authorities drove the breweries out of existence, District Attorney Edwin A. Olson charged today.

"The federal government took the police department out of beer by taking the beer out of Chicago," Olson said.

With thugs and gunmen running the breweries, corruption slowly spread in the ranks of police until it threatened to engulf the entire department. Beer was flooding the city, he said, and many of the murders of the past two years were directly attributable to the traffic.

Sixteen breweries have been shut down in this district in the past year, Olson said.

INJUNCTION AND STORM FAIL BOSSES

Police Drive Pickets Into Snow But Lines Hold

consider what action it shall take against the infamous "Dennie" Sullivan injunction.

A poll of the members of the committee shows that the majority are thoroly opposed to the vicious and unconstitutional action of Sullivan in attempting to order workers off the public streets and to prevent peaceful picketing. It is expected that the committee will organize agitation against the injunction.

Watching "Committee of 15."

At the same time the girl pickets are watching the "Committee of 15" of the Chicago Federation of Labor which has promised to meet Monday with the injunction committee of the Federation, also a committee of 15 members. Strikers are demanding that this committee, which includes their paid attorney, Alderman Oscar Nelson, get on the job and carry out the mandates of the American Federation of Labor for the disregarding of labor injunctions.

"We will win!" the girl pickets told the "Committee of 15" Thursday.

They have determined to carry the fight to success regardless of what the "Committee of 15" does, but they are urging the committee to obey the orders of the Chicago Federation of Labor which promised to give full support to the strike.

Must Not Fear Jail.

They know that if the "Committee of 15" and the injunction committee take militant action that the strike will be won, even tho some labor officials may see the inside of a police station in the course of the winning of the battle.

John Fitzpatrick, before the strike, told members of the Ladies' Garment Workers' Union that the Federation would be at their "command" when they went on strike. They are urging him to carry out his promise.

Alderman Nelson Must Act.

Alderman Oscar Nelson, the strikers' paid attorney, MUST raise his voice for them at the next meeting of the City Council Wednesday morning, they say.

Nelson MUST raise his voice against the use of the city police to break the strike and must see that action is taken. Strikers are impatient at his apparent indifference to date.

Five More Arrested.

Failing to worry the pickets by driving them into the snow storm, police late yesterday arrested five more: Julia Ley, David Rosenthal, Walter Czwiski, Stanley Sklioris and William Wowicz. They were bailed out by the union promptly, and will demand jury trials when arraigned in S. Clark St. Court today.

Picket In Snow Storm

With furious wind and snow driving thru the streets the girl pickets kept their lines firm on all fronts, yesterday, the beginning of the fourth week of the garment strike.

Whenever a girl sought shelter from the storm for a moment Mayor Dever's bluecoats would drive her with curses away from the doorway on the inner edge of the pavement where she was standing.

Only the "sluggers," whom the garment bosses have mobilized from the underworld, and the uniformed police and detectives, were allowed to stand out of the driving storm that made the second day of spring seem like the worst winter weather.

Injunction Arrests.

Garment bosses from time to time called the policemen up to their offices and they came down flushed and ready to charge on the pickets again. The bosses had purposely left their sidewalks covered with snow in order to make things hard for the pickets.

Three arrests were made during the morning. Those arrested were Freda Reicher, Elianor Sadlowska, and Jennie Lieberman. They were all taken to the So. Clark Street police station where they were bailed out. They will appear in police court today.

Injunction Arrests.

Three more strikers were arrested yesterday on attachments to show cause why they should not be punished for contempt of court. They were Harry Dixler, John Gottlieb and Lena Moritz. When they appeared in Judge Sullivan's court their cases were set to be heard next Tuesday morning. They are out on bond.

The other contempt cases which were to be heard before Sullivan yesterday were also set over till next Tuesday. The attorneys for the firms who secured the injunctions are very anxious to push the cases as fast as they can but Sullivan had his court calendar filled yesterday and the cases promised to last till Tuesday and he could do nothing to accommodate the bosses' lawyers.

Miss Corn Out On Bail.

The people who had been fined and who came before Sullivan yesterday all paid their fines and were released. Florence Corn, who was sentenced to thirty days in jail, was released on $1,000 bonds pending the preparation of her appeal.

Twelve persons who were arrested Thursday along So. Market Street and who were airraigned in So. Clark Street police court yesterday all demanded jury trials. They were: Andrew Timm, William Elash, Morris Tiegman, Morris Sher, Freda Nitzberg, Sam Hoft, Nathan Held, Morris Gram, Isadore Litwinsky, Sophie Young, Pearl Cohen and Eva Boenfeld.

See Dever Today.

The officers of the I. L. G. W. U. are preparing to submit to the committee of 15 of the Chicago Federation of Labor in written form, all the facts on police brutalities in acordance with the request the committee made Thursday The committee of 15 will as soon as they get the facts take them up with the mayor and demand immediate action. Police brutalities have been so extensive that the compiling of the data is a big job.

The committee is expected to get the list of brutalities this morning from the union and Anton Johannsen, chairman of the committee, John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation and Victor Olander, secretary of the State Federation, are instructed to immediately take them to Dever and demand drastic action.

Praise Sophie Altschuler.

Sophie Altschuler, who was beaten up by police officer 3181 last week and who is still under the care of a doctor, is receiving letters from all over the country praising her for her bravery and wishing her a speedy recovery.

A typical letter from a person who has never seen Sophie but who became interested in her thru seeing her story in The DAILY WORKER follows:

"Dear Miss Altschuler: The DAILY WORKER informs me of your splendid fight in the front ranks of the striking garment workers and your misfortune as a victim of police brutality.

"Please allow me to express my sympathy for you and commend you for your self sacrifice in the cause of labor. You are a splendid soldier for the workers' cause. Yours fraternally, Peter Kranburger."

Why Isn't Oscar Nelson on the Picket Line?

OSCAR NELSON is vice-president of the Chicago Federation of Labor. He is a lawyer. He is a member of the Chicago City Council.

Oscar Nelson is employed by the labor unions who have had to fight the injunctions issued by Judge Denis Sullivan and other judicial lackeys of the Chamber of Commerce. He sometimes appears in court and splits legal hairs with the bosses' attorneys over the injunctions.

But nobody has seen Oscar Nelson on the picket lines since this dress makers' strike started. We have been told that he has refused to address strike meetings, fearing that by so doing he would get in bad with the courts. So far as we know he has not raised his voice in the city council in protest against the brutalities of Mayor Dever's police force.

Oscar Nelson does neither of these things, but he raves in the Chicago Federation of Labor when a radical introduces a motion calling for action on the picket lines instead of the futile policy of paying so much per head to lawyers for every striker hailed into court.

Surely a real labor leader would not be guilty of such criminal negligence. If Oscar Nelson thought of the interests of the workers, he is supposed to represent, instead of his own selfish advancement via the capitalist route, he would be on the picket line every day since this strike started. He would raise his voice so loud that every worker in Chicago would understand it as a clarion call to action. He would bring up the question of police brutality on the floor of the city council and he would insist that a committee be appointed to bring the facts concerning the sluggings of the police to the attention of the workingclass of this city.

Lawyer, vice-president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, city alderman—Oscar Nelson has sufficient titles to give him prestige. He is a public man. Why is he dumb? Is it because he is only against the Crowe faction of the republican party and is using the Dever democrats for factional political reasons?

We remember when John Kennedy—now secretary of the Washington Farmer-Labor Party and prominent leader in the movement to launch a national farmer-labor party on June 17—was in the city council. He surely made things hot for the bosses. Kennedy went to the trade union leaders and asked them what they wanted him to do for the workers in the city council.

But, of course, John Kennedy was a class-consious fighter whose heart was true to the great movement for the freedom of all workers from wage slavery. Nelson is just a plain capitalist hack politician, who hopes to rise up in the world by making of himself a door mat for the bosses to walk on. He has not raised his voice in the city council. He has not appeared on the picket lines. He has not urged that "The Committee of Fifteen," of which he is a member, take action. He did not even attend the second meeting of the committee.

The DAILY WORKER calls the attention of the organized and unorganized workers of Chicago to the record of alderman, lawyer, labor leader Nelson, in this strike. We urge them to keep their eyes on him. We urge them to bring such pressure to bear on him as will compel him to raise his voice in the city council and demand a real investigation of police slugging.

Russian Bazaar Draws Big Crowd To Ashland Hall

The second night of the bazaar of the Jewish Workers' Relief Committee, at the Ashland Auditorium, showed its popularity. A large crowd collected here to buy, dance and be entertained by a concert, a showing of historical living pictures and a comedy by B. Fishbein.

The great attraction, however, proved to be the Russian exhibition of the educational and relief activities carried on in Russia for the benefit of Jewish orphans, victims of pogroms. Great interest was shown in the pictures showing the life of Russia's destitute. Judging from the exhibition, the relief work is carried on in three main divisions: (1) Immediate relief in the way of food and shelter. (2) Placing and training of the young Jewish workers in agriculture, trade and vocation. (3) General education of all children hitherto deprived of such benefits. The exhibition is set aside in a special room at the bazaar and the display of pictures of children in their classes, in play and vocational training, drew hundreds of spectators.

This afternoon at 1 o'clock there will be a masque for children. In the evening a masque for everybody. Sunday another concert will be held.

Admission is only 25 cents. All net receipts go to the relief of the Jewish children, orphaned in Russia by pograms and counter-revolution.

BOSTON STRIKE SETTLED ON 42 HOUR WEEK BASIS

Too Much Reliance Put On Mayor Curley

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BOSTON, Mass., March 21.—After five weeks of struggle the striking garment workers of Boston voted to return to work on a compromise agreement granting them the 42-hour week in five days instead of the 40-hour week for which they went out. This represents a gain of two hours over the 44-hour week they had been working. However, the new contract eliminates five holidays with pay. The contract is for two years. The previous contract was for one year only.

Some of the larger manufacturers, it developed after the meeting, are refusing to settle so the struggle is not yet over in these shops.

40-Hour Issue.

Many of the strikers thought they were voting for a 40-hour week agreement. When the agreement was put to a vote there was no separate vote on the number of hours and the duration of the contract. The only vote was on the rejection or acceptance of the agreement. The issue was not clear to the workers, because of the parliamentary procedure followed, and many who were determined to hold out for 40 hours, voted for the amendment to sustain the proposed agreement. The writer personally asked several who voted in favor what they were voting about, and they said that they voted for the 40 hours. Acceptance was urged by the international officers and the strike committee; whereas the rank and file, many of them indignant, had no spokesman. The discussion was monopolized by the officials, and brought sharply to a close.

The strike was called to get an apparent victory before the biennial convention of the international in Boston on May 5. Left wingers, the most active in organization campaigns and strikes, had been expelled from joint boards, from the union, and from their jobs in the shops. The International officialdom had to show "accomplishments." So the issue of forty hours was raised, at best an ineffective one, so long as piece work was tolerated and the vast majority are piece workers. Week work should have been fought for.

The fight for the 40-hour week won in New York a year ago, was carried to Boston and Chicago. In Chicago, about 1,000 workers have already returned on 40 hours.

At Curley's Kite.

It was after the mayor had interceded that proposals were made leading to a compromise. According to one striker, "Fortytwo hours was all that Mayor Curley could fight out for us." Since when must militants who advocate a better order, rely on political climbers to fight their battles for them; another feather in the cap of the politician who is mayor of Boston, who has lined up behind him in his campaign for governor all labor leaders who aspire to political jobs. Labor which should carry the banner of a farmer-labor party, and go along with the surprisingly alive farmer labor movement now coming out of the west, is tied to the political kite of Curley, the democratic mayor of Boston. And those like Ninfo, first vice president of the I. L. G W U who from the platform proclaim themselves revolutionists, help along such political charlatans. Well did one striker ask, "What are you doing to make a reality the dream you profess to have?" What are they doing? Carrying out the most vicious plan of expulsions yet conceived, covering anyone with vision What answer could Ninfo give? He kept repeating "sacrifice," and "one hundred per cent victory."

Dress Bosses' $1,000 Bond Is Not Worth A Pinch of Powder

Strikers' attorneys are laughing at the statement which the new Chicago Association of Dress Manufacturers has issued that a bond of $1,000 would be demanded from each member of this association with the proviso that the money is forfeited if the member settles with the union.

Such a contract would not be worth the paper it is written on, say the attorneys. In previous cases the courts have ordered such funds returned. So this ambitious association which the Mitchell people are controlling will have to get a stronger chain to hold their members in line when they weaken before the determination of the strikers.

Raid on Los Angeles T. U. E. L. Is Blamed On Labor Fakers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SAN FRANCISCO, March 21.—Emanuel Levin, arrested on suspicion of criminal syndicalism in the latest raid in Los Angeles on Workers Party and Trades Union Educational league headquarters, is well known in this city, where he lived for some time and was an organizer of the People's institute, broken up during the war. Persons here acquainted with the situation in Los Angeles offered proof that these raids are inspired by reactionary A. F. of L. leaders of the southern city. Incidentally Chief of Police Vollmer, who is outdoing the activities of the late Chief Oakes in the San Pedro strike, was "lent" to Los Angeles for a year by Berkeley, where he became famous for his "college police force" of "psychological experts." In Berkeley he was considered rather a progressive and liberal official.

MORGAN LOAN IS PROP TO FRENCH STEEL MONOPOLY

Reconstruction Graft Is To Be Financed

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Support of the present reactionary government of France in an emergency which threatened wide-spread unemployment and radical labor activity is the real object back of the Morgan $100,000,000 loan. J. P. Morgan & Co. is acting to protect its own enormous investment in the French steel trust. This corporation has received a large part of the money from the French loans which have so seriously inflated the currency.

French Bankers to Blame

The fall of the franc is not due to foreign speculators with malicious intent as the propagandists of international capital would have us believe but is due to the policy of the French bankers who by huge loans have vastly increased the amount of currency in circulation. The fall of the franc will be permanently arrested only by halting the loans of private banks, especially those to building contractors for reconstruction purposes. And the object of the Morgan loan is to prevent a complete stoppage of work as a result.

These conclusions are based on an analysis of the loan by the Alexander Hamilton institute, one of the leading economic institutions of the country. Under the leadership of Jeremiah Jenks the institute is closely associated with the inside of big business.

40,000,000,000 Paper Francs.

The institute proceeds to point out that the policy of French banks has increased the number of francs outstanding to over 40,000,000,000 with billions more circulated as checks and drafts. In predicting the trend of the franc we must ignore speculation entirely and talk exclusively about currency inflation in France.

The institute points out the connection between heavy loans to contractors for reconstruction and inflation. It says: "The private banks of France have loaned so heavily to building contractors and investors in French government bonds that their resources are exhausted.

Reconstruction Graft

"The remedy for the franc is to have these private banks curtail loans to building contractors and to French investors in government bonds. . . . The credit of $100,000,000 extended by the J. P. Morgan syndicate to the Bank of France is virtually a loan to the building contractors of France who are reconstructing the devasted areas.

But, the institute points out, it is likely that the French will not be called on to repay the Morgan syndicate at all. Instead it is likely that New York bankers will sell a French loan to American investors later on and use the proceeds to repay the Morgan syndicate.

French capitalists have been guilty of the most outrageous corruption in connection with the reconstruction contracts. Their graft running into hundreds of millions of francs has done much to produce the inflation which has depressed the value of the franc. Poincare has recently blocked the prosecution of the most flagrant cases.

Loans for Munitions

These same capitalists have received the major part of the boodle from huge loans to such countries as Poland, Czechoslovakia, and Roumania, another major cause of inflation. For the loans have really been spent in France for munitions. And J. P. Morgan has been a partner with these capitalists thru heavy investments in such corporations as Schneider-Creussot, the great French steel and munitions trust. This is the real background of the Morgan loan.

Sanhedrin Represented Big Biz; Party Defends Negro Workers

THE Sanhedrin Conference did nothing, despite the demand of 98 per cent of the Race, to espouse the cause of the Negro workers. It was controlled by the Urban League, real estate sharks, the white Chamber of Commerce, and big business men. Because of this failure of any other organization to represent the workers, the Workers Party resolution demanding complete race equality and abolition of all race discrimination, has assumed the greatest importance to all Negro workers. Tomorrow we further expose the betrayal of their Race by the Urban League and similar organizations. The Workers Party is the only political party to incorporate into its program a definite demand for absolute race equality.

Workers Party Demands Race Equality While Sleek Sanhedrin Leaders Betray Negro Workers

Not one representative of labor or the farm was on the executive committee at the Sanhedrin Conference which pretended to represent the Race which is composed of 98 per cent of workers and farmers.

As the DAILY WORKER pointed out in reporting the congress, the carrying out of the Sanhedrin's program for the elimination of the color line in labor unions was left to the representatives of business, real estate sharks, religion, and the capitalist government at Washington.

The Negro labor and farmer delegates to the Sanhedrin declared after the conference that they were not discouraged.

They pointed out that not only was the Sanhedrin forced to consider the labor question, but also that it brought before the Race that the basis of race discrimination is an economic one, and that the only hope for the oppressed Negro workers and tenant farmers is thru solidarity with the oppressed farmers and workers of other races.

Sanhedrin Betrays Race.

The DAILY WORKER explained in reporting the Sanhedrin Conference, "Dean Miller comes from an institution subsidized by the republican administration. The real estate men GAIN BY THE POLICY OF SEGREGATION. The business interests generally gain by the policy of segregation.

"The Urban Leagues that act as open shop employment agencies in large Negro urban centers are as reactionary as any white chamber of commerce. They are against labor organization, and against aggressive racial action that might offend their white capitalist friends.

"Segregation into 'Black Belt' districts is one of the most vital issues before the Race at the Sanhedrin. Negroes are crowded into the worst parts of the cities and they are compelled to pay exorbitant rents—above the rates charged the whites. The poor people who are gouged by the rent hogs are crying out against the policy of segregation. But there are real estate men among the Negroes and other business men who gain by this policy. Their voice is not raised against this iniquity.

Effective Remedies Thwarted.

"Two effective methods of remedying the housing evil are proposed by resolutions presented by the Workers Party delegates.

"1.—Colored unions to refuse to pay exorbitant rents or refuse to live in inferior buildings or segregated districts.

"2.—A demand for legislation making housing a public utility and compelling landlords to rent their places to the first comer, regardless of race or color."

But the Sanhedrin did not urge definite action of any kind against the housing evil, and hence accomplished nothing in this direction. When presented with the opportunity for leadership of 98 per cent of the Race on the labor and housing problems, the Sanhedrin, controlled by conservative capitalists, as it was, did nothing.

"What does the Negro in America require in order to escape his conditions as an oppressed race?" asks Robert Minor in the current issue of the Liberator. "He requires abolition of restrictions upon his right of residence—that is, abolition of 'Black Belt' segregation."

Profits Deciding Factor.

Commenting upon the results of the Sanhedrin toward achieving a solution of the housing problem, Mr. Minor continues, "When it came to a question of housing, it became evident that the Sanhedrin Conference was heavily dominated by Negro business men. These men are theoretically in favor of the emancipation of their race, and they talk eloquently to this effect. But when Negro working people among the delegates, thru a delegate representing the Workers Party, offered a resolution calling for legislation by which the black-belt residence district could be broken up and landlords compelled to rent living quarters at a fixed rental to the first comer regardless of color and independently of the landlords will, this measure was killed because the Negro real estate men made enormous profits by confining the Negro tenant to a given district and charging him from twenty per cent more to twice as much as is paid for similar residence by white persons. THE NEGRO HAD TO GIVE UP THAT DEMAND IN DEFFERENCE TO THE NEGRO REAL ESTATE MEN."

Workers Party Steps In.

While this evasion of the clamor of the 98 per cent of the Negro race—who are workers—for a determined stand for better conditions was being carried on by the ambitious and sleek rich men of the race, there was one party which was standing by and in ringing tones rallying the workers against their false and selfish leaders. The Workers Party, at its recent convention, passed a resolution which was officially incorporated into its platform, for absolute equality among the races.

"The twelve million Negroes in the United States constitute an oppressed race, and as such they require and demand special attention," the resolution declares. "The workers of the white race must be enlightened to the giving of complete and equal participation in all forms of the political and industrial organization of the working class. The elimination of all race discrimination within the working class movement is preliminary to its elimination in society as a whole.

"The Workers Party pledges itself to strive, for the following ends: Abolition of all discrimination against the Negro in housing; equal wages to Negroes; equal rights of the Negroes to membership in trades unions; complete restoration of the right of the ballot and the right to hold political office; the right to assemble and to organize; drastic action to punish and surpress lynching of Negroes.

W. P. Defends Negro Workers.

"The emancipation of the Negro can be attained only in the emancipation of the working class as a whole. A fixed rigid status and the traditions of slavery bind the Negro as a whole to the working class. The Negro is condemned, while the capitalist class system prevails to a common interest with the working class. It is reasonable to expect, therefore, that this surpressed race, as was the case with the surpressed races in Europe, will ultimately play a large role in the future social upheaval."

The Workers Party is the only political organization, therefore, which definitely champions the cause of the Negro workers, and officially incorporates into its platform a demand for the abolition of all race discrimination, including abolition of discrimination in housing.

Bosses Open War In Seattle on the Building Trades

By HARVEY O'CONNOR.
(Staff Correspondent of Federated Press)

SEATTLE, March 21.—Altho facing the biggest year in history with $25,000,000 scheduled in new construction, the local building industry has been thrown into panic by activities of the open shoppers of the chamber of commerce and the Associated Industries.

After a committee of the local chapter, Associated General Contractors of America, had successfully negotiated a blanket agreement with the Building Trades Council, the contractors in general meeting suddenly turned down their own committee's report. The results were:

1. Mayor E. J. Brown cut short a vacation in Vancouver, B. C., and rushed back to Seattle in an attempt to restore industrial harmony. He severely reprimanded the chamber of commerce for its disrupting attitude.

2. Individual unions of the building trades, which had agreed to ask no wage increases for the coming year, immediately set in motion machinery to press pay increase demands.

3. The Building Trades Council in an appeal to the public, denounced the Associated Industries and the chamber of commerce for breaking the concord which has been established a year in the local building industry and which was to have been prolonged by the written agreement.

Catch International Bandit.

MARSEILLES, France, March 21.—Love of a woman led to the rearrest of Paul Camilleri, member of the gang which carried out the famous Shattuck jewel robbery in New York in 1922. Detectives, who had been shadowing the man's sweetheart for weeks, pounced on the international bandit here last night, just as he was meeting her.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

One of the correspondents of a well known news agency who was covering the Daugherty quiz, was suddenly taken off and shipped to Bridgeport, Conn., to glut the curiosity of the capitalist press readers with little items of news about the circus, which now starts on its yearly round to amuse the American people. The press association advises its clients that the correspondent will supply them with "springtime stories, with nothing of oil scandal or investigation in them." The capitalist press, tho compelled to publish the news breaking with such fury around the heads of the Coolidge cabinet in Washington, does so reluctantly so when another circus shows up, they trot along and try to switch interest to the most inocuous.

• • •

Much fuss was created in St. Joseph, Mich., by Daugherty's agents during the Communist trial, about an alleged sum of money received by the radicals to carry on propaganda, with the object of taking this government out of the hands of the oil grafters. While Attorney General Daugherty was busy trying to frame the Communists in Michigan, it appears from the evidence presented at the D. of J. probe in Washington, that the famous friend of law and order was engaged in protecting criminals and sharing in the proceeds of their energetic looting of the United States resources. We venture to say that the farmers of Berrien county, who were called on to pay the costs of the trials are having a hearty chuckle now. They refused, of course, to be saddled with the expense of the trials after D. of J. dicks promised that the expenses would be paid by outside sources. Who paid the bills? Were they paid from the proceeds of the oil and booze graft?

The New York east conference of the Methodist Episcopal church does not know whether or not it should favor another war. Several speakers voiced their opposition to organized murder in behalf of the capitalists, but Bishop Wilson, whose religion is of the shirt sleeve variety, that swallows every dogma, lock, stock and barrel, from the transmutation of water into wine to the immaculate conception, upheld Mars eloquently, and declared that if there ever was another war that he would do more killing or cause more killing—the gentleman remained in his pulpit—than in the last big carnage. When the bishop reached the heights of his gory rhetoric he was stopped by a great burst of applause and many of his followers of Jesus frothed at the mouth with patriotic frenzy.

These are hard days on Oswald Garrison Villard, enemy of armaments and the trustification of the press. We do not wish the venerable Mr. Villard any ill. He is as consistent as it is possible for a liberal to be, but he has our sympathy when he bases his hopes for world peace on the flimsy foundation of British Labor Party imperialism, and his goal of a free press on a vague prayer that modern capitalism will go back to the days when Horace Greeley thundered in the New York Tribune and the elder James Gordon Bennett edited the New York Herald. Now, the Ramsay MacDonald government continues to shoot Hindoos, and capitalist papers continue to consolidate, the latest merger being the New York Herald and the New York Tribune. The former was swallowed by the latter.

A new move was initiated here a few evenings ago to give the Illinois state police force bill another forward boost. Speakers from New York told of the favor with which the cossacks are received in that state by organized labor. The movement for state police is nationwide and it would be a matter of little surprise to have the so-called leaders of the trade unions everywhere boosting the cossacks. Labor officials in this vicinity, until quite recently had a reputation for progressiveism, but they are turning to the right so fast that they promise to outstrip Gompers and company before very long. They are quite busy just dodging action in the dressmakers' strike.

A local district attorney tells us that half of the Chicago police were accepting bribes from breweries engaged in selling beer in violation of the national prohibition law, until the federal department did away with the beer. It was then that the beer runners began to kill each other—when the stuff got scarce and the competition grew too keen. Naturally Mayor William E. Dever did not like this, so as usual, he asked the district attorney to give him the evidence and he would furnish the police. But perhaps the latter are too busy breaking the strike of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union. Know-nothing Dever seems to know as little about police brutality in the strike as he knows about the beer grafting.

FEAR 'DAILY' BOTH PROTESTANT AND CATHOLIC PLOTS

Subscribers' Wives Full Of Strange Fancies

To The DAILY WORKER: Your paper is the best labor paper in the English language. It beats everything in the line of a paper that I have seen yet. For years I was a constant reader of the New York Call and I thought nothing could surpass it, but you birds beat it a thousand ways.

In the first place The DAILY WORKER carries a different line of goods to what the Call used to peddle. It is only after one has read The DAILY WORKER a few times that one begins to realize the vast difference. What I like about your paper most of all is its straightforwardness.

Straight from the Shoulder.

You never beat around the bush; you strike straight from the shoulder every time. I must admit that I was prejudiced against the Communists, and very much so, before I became a reader of The DAILY WORKER. I, with thousands of others, blamed you people for splitting the old Socialist Party, and branded you fellows as enemies of the movement. Now the whole thing is very clear to me and the only thing I am sorry for is, that it was not split sooner. But how could it be, when the yellow traitors who controlled the Socialist Party and lied and misled the rank and file, had followers like me who fell for their bunk?

However, I will do my best to make up for lost time. I am doing my best to get subscribers for your paper. I work three nights calling on friends who are members or former members of the Socialist Party to get them to subscribe to The DAILY WORKER. I know that these people are in the same boat that I was before I became a reader, that is, that they religiously hang on to the Socialist Party like a Catholic sticks to the church, because they don't know any better.

"Catholic Plot."

Last night I called on a man who has voted the Socialist ticket for years. I approached him for a "sub" for The DAILY WORKER. He refused. His wife was present and said nothing. When I got up to leave he came to the door with me and said, "I will see you on Saturday when I get paid and give a year's subscription. But I did not want to say anything in front of my wife. She is a staunch Lutheran and believes that Socialism and Communist are plots on the part of the Catholic church to break up and destroy the Lutheran church."

Protestant Plot.

Tonight I called on another supporter of the Socialist Party. When I asked him to subscribe he, too, refused in front of his wife. But when I was leaving he came out on the street with me and gave me a six months sub. He explained "that he did not want to let his wife know that he was subscribing for a radical paper because she believed that radicalism was a Protestant plot to break up the Catholic church." On my way home I laughed till I was sick. Here were two supporters of the Socialist Party who were not able to enlighten their own wives. I said to myself, the Workers Party for me from now on.

I will do my best to get your paper all the support I can. I have not been here very long nor do I intend to stay, but wherever I am I will boost The DAILY WORKER. There should be a paper like it in every town in the country.—C. P.

Prosecutor Seeks Prison Terms for Ludendorff et al

MUNICH, March 21.—Prison terms ranging from eight years to one year, three months, were demanded for General Ludendorff, Adolf Hitler and their fellow conspirators of the beer cellar putsch of last November by the state prosecutor today.

Summing up for the state, the prosecutor asked the following sentences—Hitler, eight years; Ludendorff, two; Kriebel, Poehner, Dr. Weber six; Brueckner, Wagner, one year six months; Gernick one year three months.

End Passive Resistance.

DUSSELDORF, Germany, March 21.—Passive resistance has been given up in the Rhine and Ruhr valleys, but this has not put an end to unemployment. In Dusseldorf, every fifth person is unemployed; in Aix-la-Chapelle, likewise every fifth person; in Coblenz and Cologne, every seventh person, and in the occupied area at large, every sixth person.

Abandon Hope for 14 Men Imprisoned in Lost Jap Submarine

TOKIO, Japan, March 21.—Hope for the 14 officers and men imprisoned in the motor room of the sunken Japanese submarine No. 40, was abandoned today.

All attempts to communicate with them by emergency telephones rigged between the submarine and salvage ships have been fruitless.

No sign or word has come from within the submarine's hulk since 7:40 p. m. Wednesday when divers heard a cry of "Hurry, hurry, it is difficult to breathe."

A telephone connection was immediately established with the telephone system of the submarine but it has brought no answer.

Gompers Remains Calm

A great calm prevails at American Federation of Labor headquarters; it is the one quiet spot in the capital.

The department of justice under Daugherty and its bureau of investigation (a euphemism for brazen blackmail) under William J. Burns have been the most dangerous enemies of labor. Department of Justice operatives have been active in every strike of any magnitude; they have played the same role that spies and detectives always play—that is to say they have been doing their level best to aid the employers in their war on unions and union men.

During the railway strike of 1922 the department of justice came out openly as a strike breaking agency; thousands of its sleuths were detailed to spying upon the unions and framing evidence against their members. The strike-breaking activities of Daugherty and Burns culminated in a nationwide injunction against the strikers—a wholly illegal proceeding obtained by fraud and misrepresentation, it was a clear instance of the brazen disregard by American capitalism of elementary rights guaranteed citizens by the constitution of the republic.

In every frame-up of workers engineered by the employers Burns agents have figured; they are the bloodhounds of American capitalism and one would think that even a conservative labor leader like Brother Gompers would welcome an opportunity to tell what he knows concerning this anti-labor gang and its bosses, Daugherty and Burns, representing justice in our domain.

Not so. Vociferously garrulous and insistent that he be allowed to appear and denounce Soviet Russia before the senate investigating committee headed by Borah, he has indulged in no similar outburst relative to the Daugherty-Burns matter.

It may be argued that Brother Gompers knows nothing detrimental to these assiduous agents of the employers, but to admit this is to admit that he is the most monumental dumbbell that ever carried a union card. Brother Gompers is not a dumbbell and in the years that he has held office as the head of the American labor movement, he must have accumulated an instructive dossier concerning the activities—legal and otherwise—of Daugherty, Burns and their predecessors.

This is the appointed time, if Brother Gompers so desires, to put considerable of a kibosh on the injunction activities of employers and their governmental tools. Always a great believer in the force of public opinion and the author of several theses upon that interesting subject, Brother Gompers should know that the American public has turned its thumbs down on oil gladiators like Daugherty and Burns. This is the time to step to them, insert the harpoon into their quivering flesh, give it a few painful twists and call upon the dear public to watch their agonized antics.

Much good would accrue to labor from such action. The timid tribe of politicians would begin to think twice before glorifying injunction processes and in the future the vision of a squirming attorney-general and his gumshoe aids would be always before their eyes.

We fear that Brother Gompers is not made of such stern stuff. He is lifted to great heights of denunciatory eloquence only when a workingclass of a whole nation like Russia win to victory by other means than the use of the union label and "rewarding friends and punishing enemies." It must also be remembered that Brother Gompers entered into a united front with the department of justice against the Communists and it may be that this unity of action extends even farther into the labor movement.

Perhaps the astute Mr. Burns also has been busy compiling a dossier on the activities of labor leaders.

Abusing Our Patience

The political atmosphere is clearing and the likelihood for the organization of a third party opposed to the republican and democratic organizations is becoming more definite. By many attentive observers it is now taken for granted that all political calculations must reckon with a new third party organization in the coming elections.

Of course, the organization of a third party resulting from a split of serious magnitude in the republican and democratic parties would be a most welcome step in the direction of completely divorcing the working and farming masses from the democratic and republican camps, from the reactionary capitalist outfits. But there is great danger that unless those who have fought against the powerful capitalist interests dominating the two old parties take great care, some Wall Street faker or quack will jump on the bandwagon, get a place of prominence and importance in the new movement of revolt against the big business interests and thus utilize his position to sabotage and betray the very progressive movement he is supposed to be serving.

The reported suggestion that Josephus Daniels, secretary of the navy in the Wilson administration, will be a vice-presidential candidate of the third party movement in order to give it a broad enough base to appeal to former democratic, as well as republican followers, is a dangerous case of the above character. Daniels is an agent of the big capitalist interests, despite his proclaimed piety, or perhaps because of it.

Even to hint the name of Daniels is to abuse the excessive patience of the manhandled American masses. In pursuance of his pious policy, Mr. Daniels, as secretary of the navy, in co-operation with Mr. Payne, then secretary of the interior, made leases on navy oil reserve lands to many big oil concerns. It is true Doheny and Sinclair did not get any of these concessions. But what difference is there which clique of oil thieves gets away with the supply of oil that belongs to the country?

Daniels, who is now beginning to smear himself with progressive paint, handed out valuable oil leases for a song to the following corporations: The Boston Pacific Oil company, the Associated Oil company, Union Oil, Buena Vista Oil, Caribou Oil, General Petroleum, Record Oil, United Oil, and the Consolidated Mutual Oil company.

The workers and farmers will not fall for any such tricks. To the farmers and workers it does not matter whether Consolidated Mutual capitalists plunder the government with the aid of Daniels, or the Sinclair interests rob the country with the aid of Denby. Daniels is as guilty of aiding and abetting criminal capitalist ventures as Denby was. Hiding behind a third party label will not save Daniels. Such abuse of the patience of the great mass of workers and poor farmers will only hasten the doom of these capitalist charlatans of the stripe of Daniels.

Supply and Demand

One of the iron laws on which the present system of capitalist exploitation of the workers is founded is the iron law of supply and demand.

When the farmers are broke and are compelled by the big bankers and manufacturers to sell at prices lower than what it has cost them to produce, the economic experts earning their hire emit a wild cry to the heavens that the law of supply and demand is at work.

When a new wage-slashing campaign is launched by the bosses, the workers are told that there are more workers than needed, that there is a greater supply of workingmen than there is a demand. And who will dare tamper with this immutable law of supply and demand? Wages are cut to the bone. Farm prices are reduced to the vanishing point. Profits mount. The law of supply and demand is vindicated and saved!

The fact of the matter is that the law of supply and demand is not to blame. The source of the difficulty for the workingman and poor farmer is the capitalist control of the means of production and exchange, the control of the railways, the grain elevators, the transportation and marketing facilities by a small group of powerful financiers and industrialists for private profits.

An illustration of this point is the following condition confronting the farmers. According to the estimates of the Department of Agriculture the farmers have more corn, oats, and barley at this time than they had in the corresponding period a year ago. On the other hand stocks of wheat are less this year than a year ago at this time. According to the law of supply and demand corn, oats and barley should be lower and wheat should be receiving a higher price. But exactly the opposite condition is true. The wheat in the farmers' hands is worth $32,400,000 less on March 1, 1924, than it was on the same date in 1923, while the corn has gone up in price.

The law of supply and demand as it works in the United States is subject to the conditions of the world market of international capitalism. These conditions are wretched and hopeless, because of the very nature of capitalist production and exchange. Consequently, the conditions of our farming population are just as hopeless and wretched. The desperate state of affairs has been pictured by the noted farm expert Mr. Yoakum before the Kentucky farmers in these significant words:

"The world's greatest agricultural country is faced by a situation more menacing to the country's future than can be said of any economic problem in any part of the world."

Perhaps our capitalist misleaders would have us believe that the law of supply and demand is responsible for six and a half million farms having gone thru bankruptcy and foreclosure in the great depression?

The German bourgeois parties will have at least two-thirds majority in the new Reichstag after the elections of May 4. In addition to that they will have a neat fascisti dictatorship to supplement the democracy, that will be jammed down the workers' throats. The Socialists are losing out everywhere. Philip Scheidemann, once leading light in the German republic, after the revolution, is now mayor of Cassel.

JOIN THE WORKERS PARTY

"Efficient" American Capitalism

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

OVER-PRODUCTION is alarming the American capitalist class.

The spokesmen of this class are not exactly hysterical but I would not blame them if they were. The evidence submitted by such devoted adherents of capitalism as James J. Davis, secretary of labor, showing the tremendous productive capacity of American industry, when coupled with the phenomenon of the ever-narrowing world market, gives real reason for the grave concern manifested in the more analytical capitalist journals.

There is even an undertone of fear in the trumpet note of prosperity sounded by the daily press of capitalism.

Spurred on by the prospect of enormous profits during the war period, the industrial capitalists doubled, trebled and quadrupled the capacity of their plants. There is absolutely no grounds for believing that even the European markets were restored there would be an outlet for the full volume of production for which American industry now is organized.

The situation is further aggravated by the fact that in the constant war upon the living standard of the workers, the desire for ever cheaper production and thru the introduction of labor saving devices American industry, in addition to its tremendous expansion, has become more efficient.

Overproduction Figures.

Illuminating indeed are some of the facts cited by James J. Davis to prove that the influx of a million immigrants yearly would absorb but a negligible portion of the goods which flood the domestic market whose saturation is an important factor in the imperialistic adventures of American capital.

Starting with the soft coal mining industry we find that it is able to produce one billion tons per year. The yearly consumption of soft coal is something like one-half billion tons. The soft coal mines then, can, with the present equipment and man-power, produce twice the amount of coal needed.

The shoe market can absorb, under the most favorable conditions that have obtained, 325,000,000 pairs per year. The shoe industry can produce 578,000,000 pairs.

The Endicott-Johnson shoe factory, thru its efficiency system, gets an average of 12 pairs of shoes per day from each employe. With other factories operating on the same basis 25 per cent of the workers now employed in the shoe industry could produce enough to take care of the domestic market or the whole industry would need to operate but one-fourth of the year.

Marvels of the Machine.

In the most modern smelting plants a ton of pig iron is produced at the total labor cost of the time expended by one man for an hour and twelve minutes. In the industry as a whole under present conditions, all the market can take care of for a year can be produced in seven months. If the entire industry is brought up the level of efficiency now prevailing in the best equipped plants all the iron and steel needed for existing markets can be produced with a working force reduced by two-thirds.

Machinery is displacing with startling rapidity men in occupations hitherto believed to be specially the province of the unskilled workers. In the brickmaking industry of Chicago there is now a machine that turns out 49,000 bricks per hour; it is handled by one man. If the entire industry is equipped with such machines it is estimated that 5,000 men can do the work for which 33,000 are required now.

Lowering Labor Costs.

The larger proportionate increase in the wages of the unskilled workers during and since the war has prompted the employers to have devised and installed machinery for the rough jobs of loading and unloading material, clearing rubbish, etc.

In one plant in Bridgeport, Connecticut, hot iron cauldrons are handled by a conveyor operated by one man; twenty-five workers were formerly employed on this job. All kinds of automatic lifters, stackers and pilers are now being installed in warehouses and on the water front displacing the unskilled workers in an occupation which until lately, was thought machinery-proof.

That distribution in many lines has reached the limit of expansion is shown by the fact that in the distribution of foodstuffs there is one wholesaler for every four manufacturers! one wholesaler for every fifty-five retailers and one retailer for every group of seventy families estimated to include 315 persons.

"The ideal condition," says the steel trust secretary of labor, "is when capital and labor balance." Just exactly what he means by this he probably does not know himself, but doubtless he has a vague vision of some Utopia where labor produces just enough commodities for the market and then starves quietly until further demands revive industry.

A Grave Problem.

He seems to understand that American industry is confronted with a problem of the gravest character but it is too much to expect that he would show any knowledge of the fact that it can never solve that problem while the ownership of industry remains in the present hands. Even the ad clubs, the rotary clubs and the kiwanis clubs recognize the necessity of increasing consumption; they are engaged in artificially stimulating demand but they do not know that they are forced to operate within the narrow limits of the wage system. They are the bitterest opponents of the unions and other working class organizations engaged in attempting to increase the income and raise the standard of living of the workers.

It never occurs to the capitalists and their hangers-on to relax their warfare on wages and as a matter of fact they cannot because of the competitive nature of the international struggle for markets.

Destroying Markets.

Every nerve is strained to reduce production costs, i. e., to use less labor-power—to get along with less workers while at the same time increasing the output of commodities. It is in this manner that capitalist industry destroys its greatest market—by reducing the purchasing power of the great bulk of the population, the working class.

There are no great new fields of exploitation for the American capitalist class to conquer. The backward nations of a quarter of a century ago have now their own economy and require less manufactured commodities from America; raw materials they produce cheaper than we can.

American industry is organized for a world market; during the war it became the premier exporter of manufactured products because other nations were organized for war alone. Even before 1914 the American workers were suffering from mass unemployment, insanely efficient capitalist production had glutted the world markets.

The Future.

There has been a fall and rise of production since the war and now the period of readjustment is almost over. During that period the class of industrial workers had been increased by millions; white and negro farmers have been driven from the land and are competing with the older "hands"—to use the English term that so well expresses the capitalist opinion of the workers. Cunningly devised machines that do the work of hundreds of thousands of wage-earners have made American industry the most efficient in the world. It is centralized and ruled with an iron hand and it has summoned to its aid the best technical talent; its processes—chemical, mechanical and electrical—are the wonder of modern industrial civilization.

American industry has everything but markets. Like the sow that eats its young, American capitalism by its war upon the workers of America, its assistance to the ruling class of every other capitalist nation in the war upon their working class, has destroyed the greatest factor making for stabilization of American capitalism—a working class with a large consumptive capacity resulting in a high standard of living.

As the days pass we will hear more and more the whimperings of such apologists of capitalism as James J. Davis. As the ranks of the unemployed grow and industry stagnates—a process already beginning—the note of fear already perceptible will grow louder until it drowns out the triumphant note of the prosperity song that is chanted now by most of the babbittry.

Enthusiastic Support Given to Farmer-Labor Party Fund

By C. E. RUTHENBERG
(Executive Secretary, Workers Party of America)

The following letter received from the Harlem Jewish Branch of the Workers Party in response to the call sent to the party branches for contribution to the Farmer-Labor Party Campaign Fund which the party is raising to carry on its work in support of the June 17th Convention, shows the spirit of the membership on this question:

> C. E. Ruthenberg,
> Executive Secretary,
> Chicago, Ill.
>
> Dear Comrade: The appeal which you have sent to the party branches and sympathizers for support of the Farmer-Labor Party Campaign Fund, a campaign which is now in full swing, reached our branch a few days ago and the readiness and enthusiasm with which the appeal was met was great. The members of our branch have the view that the establishment of a Farmer-Labor party supported by the masses of farmers and workers is of the most vital importance to the movement in the United States and donated $25 from their scant financial resources.
>
> A class, mass Farmer-Labor Party supported by the proletarian elements and organized on a nation-wide scale should be the slogan of this great campaign.
>
> Yours in class consciousness,
> JOB. WEISMAN, Sec. Harlem Jewish Branch.

Branches which have sent in their quota since the last report are:

Harlem Jewish Branch	$25.00
Rocklin Finnish Branch	3.00
Wilkes-Barre Ukranian Branch	5.00
Zeigler South Slavic Branch	25.00
Toluca Italian Branch	10.00
South Bend Russian Branch	10.00

Party branches which have not yet acted upon the Farmer-Labor Party Campaign Fund appeal should make it a special order of business at their next meeting and see that every member purchases one of the Farmer-Labor Campaign Fund Labels.

We are in the midst of our greatest campaign, comrades of the party, and every party unit must make its contribution to make the Farmer-Labor Campaign a success. Every dollar contributed will aid the party in increasing its activity in support of the June 17th Convention and make more certain the organization of a mass, class Farmer-Labor Party at that convention.

Let us tell you how to make your money work for you. No Speculation, Gamble or Chance of Loss. Small monthly payments. Exempt from National, State or Local Taxation. Thousands have already made money on the proposition we are now offering you. Only a limited amount still available.

This Is the Story of John Brown

This is "The Story of John Brown," by Michael Gold. Published by the DAILY WORKER thru arrangement with Haldeman-Julius Company, of Girard, Kans. Copyrighted, 1924, by Haldeman-Julius Company.

* * * *

By MICHAEL GOLD.

How John Brown Became an Abolitionist.

IN the pagan ages and in the more distant days of savagery, men were individuals. They had no social imagination. They could stand by and see another man writhe in tortures, and laugh at him. Civilization has been developing social imagination; it has been breeding more and more the type of human being who feels the suffering and injustice of another as his own.

John Brown was perhaps born with this strain in him. In 1857, when he had already plunged into his life work, and was in the thick of bloody fights in Kansas, he sat down to write a most charming and tender letter to a little boy who was the son of one of his friends in the east. Those who think of fighters like John Brown as possessed by only a lust for battle, ought to read this letter. It reveals how soft was his heart under the grim mask of the Kansas warrior.

The letter is autobiographical. It tells how John Brown first became acquainted with the horrors of slavery, and what effect it had on his imagination.

The letter is so touching, and so remarkable for the picture it gives of John Brown's early years, also for the picture of the man's mature character as revealed by his own words, that I am tempted to give it in full. I shall give only parts of it, however.

Letter to Master H. L. Stearns.

"My dear Young Friend:—I had not forgotten my promise to write you; but my constant care and anxiety have obliged me to put it off a long time. I do not flatter myself I can write anything that will very much interest you; but have concluded to send you a short story of a certain boy of my acquaintance; and for convenience and shortness of name, I will call him John.

"This story will be mainly a narration of follies and errors, which I hope you may avoid; but there is one thing connected with it, which will be calculated to encourage any young person to persevering effort, and that is the degree of success in accomplishing his objects which to a great extent marked the course of this boy thruout my entire acquaintance with him; notwithstanding his moderate capacity, and still more moderate acquirements.

"John was born May 9, 1800, at Torrington, Connecticut; of poor and hard-working parents; a descendant on the side of his father of one of the company of the Mayflower who landed at Plymouth, 1620. His mother's father came at an early period to New England from Amsterdam, in Holland. Both his father's and his mother's father served in the war of the revolution; his father's father died in a barn at New York while in the service, in 1776.

"I cannot tell you of anything in the first four years of John's life worth mentioning save at an early age he was tempted by three large brass pins belonging to a girl who lived in the family; and stole them. In this he was detected by his mother; and after having a full day to think of the wrong, received from her a thoro whipping.

"When he was five years old his father moved to Ohio, then a wilderness filled with wild beasts and Indians. During the long journey which was performed in part or mostly with an ox-team, he was called on by turns to assist a boy five years older, and learned to think he could accomplish smart things in driving the cows and riding the horses. Sometimes he met with rattlesnakes which were very large, and which some of the company generally managed to kill.

"After getting to Ohio he was for some time rather afraid of the Indians, and of their rifles; but this soon wore off, and he used to hang about them quite as much as was consistent with good manners, and learned a trifle of their talk. His father at this time learned to dress deer skin, and John, who was perhaps rather observing, ever after remembered the entire process of deer skin dressing, so that he could at any time dress his own leather, such as squirrel, raccoon, cat, wolf or dog skins; and also he learned to make whip lashes, which brought him in some change at various times, and was useful in many ways.

"At six years old John began to be quite a rambler in the new wild country, finding birds and squirrels, and sometimes a wild turkey's nest. Once a poor Indian boy gave him a yellow marble, the first he had ever seen. This he thought a good deal of, and he kept it a good while; but at last he lost it one day. It took years to heal the wound, and I think he cried at times about it. About five months after this he caught a young squirrel, tearing off its tail in doing it; and getting severely bitten at the same time himself. He, however, held on to the little bob-tailed squirrel and finally got him perfectly tamed, so that he almost idolized his pet. This, too, he lost, by its wandering away; and for a year or two John was in mourning; and looking at all the squirrels he could see to try and discover Bobtail, if posible. He had also at one time become the owner of a little ewe lamb which did finely until it was about two-thirds grown, when it sickened and died. This brought another protracted mourning reason; not that he felt the pecuniary loss so heavily, for that was never his disposition; but so strong and earnest were his attachments. It was a school of adversity for John; you may laugh at this, but they were sore trials to him.

"John was never quarrelsome; but excessively fond of the roughest and hardest kind of play; and could never get enough of it. He would always choose to stay at home and work hard, rather than go to school. To be sent off alone thru the wilderness to very considerable distances was particularly his delight; and in this he was often indulged; so that by the time he was twelve years old he was sent off more than a hundred miles with companies of cattle; and he would have thought his character much injured had he been obliged to be helped in such a job. This was a boyish feeling, but characteristic, nevertheless.

"When the war broke out with England in 1812 his father soon commenced furnishing the troops with beef cattle, the collection and driving of which afforded John some opportunity for the chase, on foot, of wild steers and other cattle thru the woods. During this war he had some chance to form his own boyish judgment of men and measures; and the effect of what he saw was to so far disgust him with military affairs that he would neither train nor drill, but got off by paying fines; and got along like a Quaker until his age had finally cleared him of military duty.

"During the war with England a circumstance occurred that in the end made him a most determined Abolitionist and led him to swear eternal war with slavery. John was stopping for a short time with a very gentlemanly landlord, since made a United States marshal. This man owned a slave boy near John's age, a boy very active, intelligent and full of good feeling, to whom John was under considerable obligation for numerous little acts of kindness.

"The Master made a great pet of John; brought him to table with his finest company and friends and called their attention to every little smart thing he said or did, and to the fact of his being more than a hundred miles from home with a company of cattle alone; while the Negro boy (who was fully if not more than his equal) was badly clothed, poorly fed and lodged in cold weather, and beaten before John's eyes with iron shovels or any other thing that came first to hand.

"This brought John to reflect on the wretched, hopeless condition of fatherless and motherless slave children; for such children have neither fathers or mothers to protect and provide for them.

"He sometimes would raise the question in his mind: Is God, then, their father?"

ONLY WORKERS CAN DESTROY CHILD LABOR

By HARRY GANNES

EVERY soft-hearted charity worker has written something about child labor. A good many of the socialists, who later became howling war patriots, as for instance, John Spargo, have written books showing up the evils of child labor. And what have we as a result today?

Everything is being left to the U. S. governmental machinery which has flunked twice already. All the agitation, all the talk is directed to a couple of hundred graft-besmired congressmen and senators, many of whom are employers of children themselves.

Instead of carrying the issue to the outraged American working class which, thru its organizations could do some real anti-child labor work, Sammy Gompers and his crew of social workers are blind-folding the eyes of the toiling masses and pointing to the oil-soaked government as a life-saving depot.

2,500,000 Child Slaves.

Why is child labor such a pressing problem that even capitalist-senators cannot overlook it? For the reason that in a country that boasts of its high attainments there are over 2,500,000 children between the ages of 5 to 15 who work to create profit for some boss; and some of the children work as high as twelve hours a day.

Child labor in the United States is older than the Declaration of Independence. Since 1890, when 16 per cent of all the children between 10 and 15 years of age were employed, there has been a steady rise up to the present day with over 18 per cent of all these children employed. The rise seems to be changing into a flood when we discover that in one year there has been a 38 per cent increase in legalized exploitation of the youth; that means, that even if all the laws now proposed in congress had been passed and put into effect this rise of 38 per cent could not have been stopped.

There is an idea that child labor is restricted to the south. While it is true that our blue-blooded southern gentlemen employ the largest number of kids on their cotton plantations, the north and east furnish many volumes of records of brutalities and exploitation of children.

Rhode Island and New Jersey employ thousands of children in truck gardens and mills; in Michigan there are children five, six and seven who work ten and twelve hours a day in the beet fields. The coal mines of Pennsylvania and highly cultured Massachusetts manufacturers find it very profitable to work the little tots and deny them even the most elementary schooling.

Hair-Raising Reports.

In a large number of states the law permits this, which is the same as encouraging and sanctioning it. Where there exists some sort of prohibitive law, it seldom is carried into effect.

Where does the remedy lie? To the organized and unorganized wrath of the working-class is left open the opportunity for emphatic protest. The unions pull jurisdictional strikes now. Why not make it the law of every union in the United States not to work in any industry that employs child labor and to boycott products produced by child labor. Then the unions can open their doors to hundreds of thousands of these child workers themselves. Certainly where the law encourages those between 12 and 15 to work, these young workers should be taken into the protective economic organizations of labor—even without dues, if necessary.

Our Program.

The immediate task for every member of the working class is to help carry these demands into effect:

1) Trade unions and unorganized workers demand the abolition of all child workers under 16 years of age.

2) Better wages in those industries now employing children so that the adult workers can have a decent standard of living.

3) Vocational training for workers' children, to be under the guidance of the trade unions.

4) Organization of all working youth into the existing trade and industrial unions without discrimination and on the easiest terms.

The Color Line and Profiteers

ing law will have on south side business.

Alderman Jackson's Record.

Meet Alderman Jackson, who must knock about the disreputable houses, gambling dens, bootleg joints, and crooked deals which abound in his ward. Alderman Jackson is said to be worth a lot of money. As one shopkeeper said to me, on Indiana avenue, "The high class, protected dens of vice, which operate on a large scale, have put the small bootleggers out of business."

Into this complex Negro society, the DAILY WORKER launched a unique investigation. The DAILY WORKER, the negroes tell us, is the first newspaper to write up the actual facts of the conditions under which the Negro workers are forced to live, and then put the paper into the hands of these workers. Benefits in increased circulation undoubtedly resulted from this investigation. But, of course, our purpose was an educational one.

For the first time the masses of Negroes living on the south side have been told that there are other lines that they must draw which are more important to them than the color line. We see the Negro papers referring to members of "Our Group." And the DAILY WORKER has no quarrel with the Subject Race in demanding recognition and equality. We want to help the Negroes get the equality. But we have helped the Negro, we believe, to train his ear to get a different and more significant meaning out of the term "Our Group."

Workers vs. Profiteers.

"Our Group," to the writer, and to every worker, whether he be white or black, means those who work at a meagre wage, while their enemies—those who control the workers job—wield the economic power which determines how the workers shall live. The profiteers, whether they be white or black, live on the Boulevards and Gold Coasts of our city. The workers are inhabitants of the Federal streets of Chicago. They are the skilled and unskilled who have nothing in common with the wealthy of all races who profiteer on the workers, and make capital out of the workers' wants, in order to pile up profit for themselves. The white and Negro workers of Chicago belong to the same class and they are oppressed by the same class—the dividing line being one of property and wealth and control of industry and not of color.

The only way for the workers successfully to raise their standard of living is for the white and Negro workers to organize together and fight their common enemy. There is a white race and a Negro race, that is true. But much more important, there is a working class and a class of profiteers.

"The idea becomes power when it penetrates the masses."
—Karl Marx.

Special Magazine Supplement
THE DAILY WORKER

SECOND SECTION
March 22nd, 1924. This magazine supplement will appear every Saturday in The Daily Worker.

Down With the Capitalist Teapot Dome!

Forward To the Workers' and Farmers' Government!

Call for the Celebration of May Day, May 1, 1924, Issued by the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party of America.

THE CELEBRATION of May Day—the holiday of the International Workingclass—in the United States this year, must be a great demonstration against the Capitalist System and the Government which upholds and supports it.

Probably never in history has there been such an exposure of rottenness and corruption as in the Teapot Dome investigation and the investigation of Attorney-General Daugherty. The men in high offices whom the members of the working class are asked to look up to, respect and revere are shown to be the paid agents of the capitalists looting the nation for their own profits. Representatives, senators, members of the cabinet, yes, even the president, past and present, are splattered by the oily filth.

No worker who has read the story of corruption coming from Washington from day to day can any longer have illusions about the Capitalist System and the Government which supports it, whether Republicans or Democrats are in power. Capitalism is stripped bare. The capitalists stand before the workers and farmers as looters of the nation, using bribery and every form of corruption to attain their ends and satisfy their greed for greater profits. The Government is shown to be the instrument thru which the capitalists steal the nations natural resources and exploit the producers of wealth.

Teapot Dome is but an example of the whole Capitalist System. The methods of the capitalists in the oil industry are the methods of the capitalists in the mining industry, the railroad industry, the steel industry and every other industry. Bribery and corruption of public officials to secure the oil resources of the country have been matched in stealing the lands, the timber, the coal and other resources of the nation.

The methods used by the capitalists in gaining control of the natural resources are also used in exploiting the workers in the industries and the workers upon the land.

When the workers go on strike the capitalists use their government against them, just as they use their government to secure the oil of Teapot Dome. Need the industrial workers be reminded of the Daugherty Injunction, and hundreds of other injunctions issued to break their strike? Need they be reminded that government boards, courts and soldiers are always at the command of the employers in their fight against workers. The government plays the same part in the fight against workers who want higher wages and better working conditions as it does in giving the capitalists the natural resources of the country. It is the agency of the employers, of the capitalists.

The farmers who are being bankrupted and driven off the land by the millions know that they are being robbed thru Teapot Dome methods. They know that the banks which hold their mortgages, the marketing institutions which handle their products, the elevators which store them, the railroads which transport them, are all supported by cleverly drawn laws which aid the capitalist who owns these institutions to rob them.

All Capitalism is a Teapot Dome. Capitalism stands for corruption and bribery to secure the natural resources of the nation and to rob the industrial workers and farmers of the product of their toil. The Government is always the agent of the Capitalists, aiding in the loot of the natural resources and using its power to help maintain the system of robbing the workers in industry and on the land.

There is but one answer to the Capitalist Teapot Dome: Down with the Capitalist System.

This goal can only be achieved thru the industrial workers and farmers organizing their political power and using their political strength to take control of the government from the capitalists and their agents.

The experiences of the years since the end of the war have created an ever-growing movement on the part of the workers and farmers for a great Farmer-Labor Party to fight their political battles. Every experience of the workers in industry and on the land during recent years has shown that they cannot hope to win the struggle against their exploiters and oppressors, the capitalists, unless they first wrench control of the government out of the hands of the agents of the capitalists and establish a Workers' and Farmers' Government.

The Farmer-Labor parties of this country have called a great convention of industrial workers and farmers in the Twin Cities, June 17th for the formation of a great organization of workers and farmers which will carry on the fight against the old parties.

The Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party calls upon all organizations of industrial workers and farmers to join in great United Front demonstrations on May Day against the Capitalist Teapot Dome, for a Farmer-Labor Party and for A WORKERS' AND FARMERS' Government.

Let us make Labor's International Holiday a demonstration that at last the workers of the United States are awakening to the character of the capitalist system under which they are robbed and exploited. Let us make it a demonstration that masses of industrial workers and farmers are uniting to fight against the capitalist Teapot Dome and for a Workers' and Farmers' Government.

Workers and Farmers! Build a United Front for May Day! Build a United Front Against the Exploiters and Oppressors!

DOWN WITH THE CAPITALIST TEAPOT DOME!
FORWARD TO THE MASS FARMER-LABOR PARTY!
FORWARD TO THE WORKERS' AND FARMERS' GOVERNMENT!

Central Executive Committee, Workers Party of America,
C. E. RUTHENBERG, Executive Secretary.

The Color Line and Profiteers

By KARL REEVE

THAT the Negro districts of Chicago is a "Race within a race"—an entirely separate world—with its classes, arts and occupations, however, imitating and paralelling the white—is clearly brought out in an examination of the housing problems on the south side.

For the last quarter of a century the south side Negro quarter has been the subject of numerous housing investigations. Federal street is a paradise for the social worker. A muck-raking reporter can walk along Federal or South Dearborn streets, pencil and paper in hand, and as he walks, jot down a continual stream of atrocious bad-housing details, such as uncleaned streets, littered alleys, broken down fences and porches, falling doors and windows.

And thru these years of continual social investigations the Negro has stood on his porch and wondered with idle curiosity what the prying, curious white stranger is doing in his domain. Meanwhile the houses continue to deteriorate and the rents to go up.

Investigators Mere Frauds.

In a recent investigation of the housing situation in this district I talked to many Negro workers and shopkeepers. When I asked them if the Negroes were not a little resentful or at least a bit bored at being made so often the subject for so many futile investigations, the surprising reply invariably was, "The negroes don't know that they have been investigated. They never hear about what is written in the housing surveys."

There is a type of Negro, however, who is well aware of the interest of the white social worker in his miserable habitations. This is the successful Negro business man and property owner, the landlord and the store owner who pattern after the white bourgeois class. An investigation, to the wealthy negro who has built up a prestige for himself, means a chance to hobnob for a time with the white social workers. It means a fleeting chance to forget that he is the member of an oppressed race—a chance to get his name in the paper or in a pamphlet, and to eat lunch on terms of seeming equality with the liberal social worker who is temporarily interested in the "Downtrodden Negro."

As A. C. Thayer, of the Urban League, proudly put it to the writer, "I was a member of the Lowden Commission of Race Relationship. I am a property owner myself, you know."

The Negro Elite.

It is only a five minute walk from Federal street to South Michigan Boulevard, but in that long narrow strip of Chicago's negro nation, can be found the counterpart of every class and organization that exists in the white society. And it is on South Michigan Boulevard, incongruously enough, with its large, stone mansions, inhabited by the Negro wealthy, select class, that the influence of the investigations of Chicago's social workers has stopped. The influence of these surveys has penetrated no further into the consciousness of the negroes; no further than the upper crust where such influence is not needed.

In between the extreme squalor of the depressing fire-traps of Federal street and the palatial residences on the Boulevard, we meet all the complex business activity which is to be observed in any capitalistic society. Meet Charles Duke, in his busy office on Indiana avenue, near 35th street, who has made such profitable connections with the downtown bankers. Shut your eyes and hear any hanger-on of the capitalist bandwagon—whether colored, white, green or black. His language would be incomprehensible to the resident of Federal street. He can tell you about the value of any block on the south side; he can tell you how much money has been loaned on these properties, and what effect the zon-

The March Meeting of the Workers Party Central Executive Committee

(Review and Comment.)

By ALEXANDER BITTELMAN.

EVENTS are moving pretty fast nowadays. One might safely say that the rapidity of development of our political life is fast approaching that of Europe, altho our own class relations, looked at from the point of view of the direct proletarian struggle for power, are not as yet as sharply defined as are the European. However, the rapidity and frequency of political changes, which merely reflect the sharpened conflicts within the economic structure of America, are all here, which necessitates a frequent recasting of our plans and policies with a view for readjustment wherever and whenever necessary.

The last (March) meeting of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party of America had occasion to register and evaluate a number of very important facts in the present political situation. The result is the new statement of policy published elsewhere in this issue.

What are the new developments?

New Farmer-Labor Center.

First and foremost the new national center of the Farmer-Labor Party forces in the United States. This center has been definitely established at the March 12th conference in St. Paul which issued a call for a National Farmer-Labor convention on June 17th to be held in Minnesota. The organization committee, elected at the above conference to realize the convention of June 17th is in effect such a national center.

Up till March 12th the Federated Farmer-Labor Party has been serving in this capacity. It was the only national center of the labor and farmer elements working consciously and consistently for the formation of a class party of workers and exploited farmers. Now the basis of this national center has been broadened and extended. The Federated Farmer-Labor Party has joined hands with the farmer-labor forces of Minnesota and a number of state farmer-labor parties of the northwest and West with the result that a real national crystallization has taken place, and a political body has come into existence which will inevitably lead to the formation of a powerful class party of workers and exploited farmers.

Third Party Pressure.

Second, the multiplication of probabilities for a third party split. Teapot Dome is surely undermining the foundations and prestige of both capitalist parties. The old reactionary gang in the two old parties is on the run for its very life. The closer we approach the elections the more threateningly is looming up on the political horizon the probability of a third party ticket.

For the purpose of bringing the Labor-Party policy of the party in accord with the latest political developments, the C. E. C. has found it necessary to restate the party position and, therefore, adopted at its last meeting a statement submitted by Comrades William Z. Foster, James P. Cannon and Alexander Bittelman.

A study of the document will show that our immediate political task remains now the same as it was prior to and at the time of the last party convention; which is to work for the formation of a mass party of workers and exploited farmers. It will be noted, however, that particular emphasis is now laid on the proposition that the class Farmer-Labor party must be built on as broad a foundation as possible.

This is very important. The Workers Party was instrumental in bringing into existence the Federated Farmer-Labor Party. In doing so, our party has rendered a great service to the American labor movement and to the exploited farmers. The formation of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party on July 3rd, 1923, meant the coming together of the more militant and politically mature elements among the workers and exploited farmers for the purpose of arousing still wider masses and bringing them into the stream of independent political action. All the time the Federated Farmer-Labor Party has been working toward this end.

Real Achievement.

The results are really magnificent. Within a short period of seven months a mass movement has been created. We have come to the point where nearly all the politically organized Farmer-Labor forces of the country have joined in one single, mighty effort to realize a Farmer-Labor ticket in the coming presidential elections. And why was this possible Mainly because the Workers Party and the Federated Farmer-Labor Party have not permitted "organizational fetishism to develop which would interfere with any necessary or advantageous regrouping of labor party forces" (quotation from present statement of C. E. C.); and because our party and the "Federated" have been ready to co-operate with and make all kinds of concessions to the other Farmer-Labor groups in order to realize the broad, all-inclusive class party of workers and exploited farmers.

It is known, for instance, that the Workers Party and the Federated Farmer-Labor Party have been favoring May 30th as the date for the national convention of the Farmer-Labor forces. And for very good reasons. Reasons that had their basis in the very life interests of the class movement for a mass farmer-labor party.

But there were elements in this movement that were opposed to the May 30th date, and for bad reasons. Bad, that is, from the point of view of the workers and farmers. These elements favored July 4th as the proper date.

Two Views Clash.

These two views came to a clash at the St. Paul conference on March 12th. For a time it looked as if no agreement were possible. But at the critical moment the Federated Farmer-Labor Party accepted a compromise, and it was then unanimously agreed that the national convention be called on June 17th.

It is on a strategy allowing for such tactics and policies as were applied by the "Federated" in St. Paul on March 12th that the present statement of the C. E. C. is based. And what does this strategy consist of? It is this: "Drive with all your might for the formation of a class party of workers and exploited farmers. But at the same time make sure—doubly sure—that you get all the politically organized farmer-labor forces in it."

Another important feature of the present document of the Central Executive Committee is the manner in which is restated our attitude toward the third party movement.

Its general nature and economic basis have been known to us right along. What has become apparent only of late is that this third party movement may assume such proportions as to make it worth while for the capitalists to come in and attempt to secure control over it. And then this third party—if it materializes—may differ very little from either of the two old parties. The present statement of the Central Executive Committee proposes to make our attitude towards a third party dependent also upon the attitude that the capitalists will assume towards it.

And then the reasons for our support in case the third party crystallizes as a clear-cut mass revolt against the economic and political domination of big capital. The present statement of the Central Executive Committee gives four reasons for it. The comrades will do well to study these reasons carefully.

Basis of Attitude.

The basis for all of them lies in the tremendous and favorable effect that the third party movement has upon furthering and accelerating development of the class struggle in general and the movement for a Farmer-Labor party in particular.

Our general attitude toward this third party movement is expressed in the document in the following words; "It remains one of the most important problems of strategy for the Farmer-Labor forces to steer a course of action which, while retaining contact with the broad third party movement, will at the same time bring about the crystallization of the workers and exploited farmers into a separate party of their own."

Third, the sensational investigation of Attorney General Daugherty. For the so-called Progressive groups in Congress this is merely one phase of their general "house cleaning" campaign in the two old parties. But for the labor movement as a whole and for our party in particular this Daugherty investigation, because of the vicious and damnable part played by the Department of Justice in breaking the Shopmen's strike and in persecuting the Communists, presents a first-class opportunity for exposing the capitalist class nature of the American government and for arousing the workers to an independent political struggle against their class enemies. In dealing with this question the Central Executive Committee adopted resolutions submitted by Jay Lovestone:

Unemployment Situation.

Fourth, the unemployment situation is becoming clearer. The contention of some of our leading comrades, that an acute and widespread crisis of mass unemployment is already making its way into the lives of the American workers, have not been justified by events and further investigation. We are in for a crisis of unemployment in but a few industries (mining, textile), which calls not for an immediate national campaign of organization of the unemployed, but rather for a campaign of education and ideological preparation for the crisis that is bound to come in the near future. The thesis on unemployment by Comrade Earl Browder was adopted by the Central Executive Committee.

Co-ordinating Party Activities.

Fifth, the acute need of a balanced program of party activities. This need is a direct result of the recent political and organizational growth of our party and of the growing complexity of the tasks confronting us. We have reached a stage where balance and proportion in the manifold activities of our party have become the basic prerequisites for our further development. Such a program, submitted by Comrade William Z. Foster, was adopted at the last meeting of the Central Executive Committee and will be published in the next issue of this magazine.

June 17th is our next milestone. The Central Executive Committee of the party has given us the necessary directions and instructions. It rests now with the party membership and with each party unit to make that day a great day of achievement for the Farmer-Labor movement and for the Workers Party.

Introducing Senator Walsh of Montana

UNITED STATES SENATOR THOMAS J. WALSH, who is now in charge of the Teapot Dome investigation, has given many people the impression of being a zealous guardian of the public domain and a devoted conservationist.

Senator Walsh's record in this respect is spotless perhaps only when compared with the transactions of Mr. Fall. The senior Senator from Montana has himself played some Teapot politics tho not with oil interests directly.

The Butte Electric Company is a subsidiary of the General Electric Company, which is one of the two concerns controlling at least 90 per cent of the water power in the state of Montana. The water power interests along with the copper interests are the real driving force in capitalist circles in this state.

Mr. Walsh has played Teapot politics with the power interests. After he was re-elected to the Senate in November, 1918, Mr. Walsh introduced what is known as Senate bill No. 274 of the Sixty-sixth Congress. This bill provided for the "erection and maintenance of a dam across the Yellowstone River in the State of Montana."

Subsequently, April 11, 1921, which was the first day of the special session of the Sixty-seventh Congress, Mr. Walsh reintroduced his bill and numbered it Senate bill No. 275.

Played for Power Interests.

What this bill meant to the preservation of the country's great power resources is made clear by the following statement printed in the bulletin of the National Parks Association dated May 23, 1921. We quote in part:

"The important duty now before this nation is the defeat of the Walsh bill, just introduced in the Sixty-Seventh Congress, calling for the damming of Yellowstone Lake, Yellowstone National Park.

"This constitutes the most insiduous and dangerous blow ever aimed at American conservation, because it seems to ask for so little while really demanding the entire National park's system. For if Congress grants Senator Walsh his way with Yellowstone it cannot refuse to grant others their way with other national parks."

This bill was supposed to have gone to the Committee on Public Lands but Senator Walsh had it referred to the Committee on Immigration of which he was a member.

Mr. Walsh is reputed to be one of the greatest constitutional lawyers in the country. In framing this bill he used all the cunning at his command as a first rate lawyer.

Albrights' Protest.

Preparatory to his launching a drive for the enactment of this water power grab, Senator Walsh arranged in February, 1921, a meeting with the promoters of the Livingston power interests on the ground. Had it not been for the fact that the officers of the National Park Association learned of this meeting, Superintendent Horace M. Albright, of Yellowstone National Park, and George E. Goodwin, chief engineer of the National Park Service, would not have been present at the hearings which lasted four days. It was only thru the efforts of the National Park Association that the presence of these experts at the hearings was guaranteed.

Superintendent Albright emphatically declared that the proposed dam would submerge a part of Yellowstone Park. Engineer Goodwin branded the whole project impractical.

Despite this expert testimony Senator Walsh kept up his propaganda for the enactment of this bill. In May, 1921, he circulated amongst the members of Congress a typewritten statement contradicting the testimony of the government experts.

Significant comment on the Walsh proposal is found in the following excerpt from the Bozeman, Montana, Daily Chronicle, of May 15, 1921:

Oil and Water Don't Mix.

"Whether or not the granting of the special privilege in this particular case would result in detriment to the beauties of the park is not to our mind the issue at stake, but rather the fact that a granting of this paricular request would form a precedent, and the head of the camel would then be inside the tent, and it would be time for the family to move out. The Chronicle is unalterably opposed to the granting of any vested rights within the park to any state corporation, association or other combination of individuals whatever."

In view of the above tireless efforts on the part of Senator Walsh in behalf of the water power interests, one tends to view with great skepticism the "vicarious virtue" that the Teapot scandal has aroused in the senior Senator from Montana. It seems that the politics of Senator Walsh are based on the old adage that oil interests and water interests won't mix.

Youth Views

By HARRY GANNES

History Shows U. S. Child and Youth Exploiter.

The present tumult over child labor brings out the fact that the United States very early in its history sweated little children in its mines, mills and on plantations.

While telling the school children the wonderful opportunities they have, the teachers entirely overlook informing the future wage workers that this country has one of the vilest child and youth exploiting records yet written.

In the early English factory system the youth had a most miserable place; but hard and bitter as was the life of the early English youth proletariat, that of the American Negro slave youth was far worse.

Charles Dickens need not have lived in England to have written Oliver Twist, the story of an orphan boy in the dawn of the modern system of production. The early apprenticeship laws of the United States permitted parents to bind out their own children, and the orphan asylums shipped out great numbers of children for long periods of servitude.

American industry was virtually built up on the labor of children, youth and women.

Under the technicality of the rights of the individual states to pass whatever laws pleased the mill owners regarding the conditions of labor, most of the state governments protected the bosses in their use of children and immature youths for profit-making.

In spite of the high development of American industry and agriculture, American factory and farm owners do not want to part with what is now considered even by many who are in favor of the capitalist system of society as a worn-out and harmful practice.

Child labor was planted on American soil very early and it has spread its roots with the growth of industry. All attempts heretofore to do away with it have been useless. The number of child and youth workers constantly grows.

At its beginning child labor did not compete so directly with adult labor as it does today. The men worked on the farm or in the forests. The children worked in the textile mills. Today children and young workers are used in industries that ordinarily could employ men and women but which resort to younger workers because of their low standard of living, which means for the boss he can pay smaller wages.

Instead of pointing out to the youth that America has a pernicious and loathsome child labor history and that child labor on a large scale is distinctly a 100 per cent patriotic institution, such bodies as Sammy Gompers and the National Child Labor Commitee in their propaganda try to glorify America and its treatment of the youth.

HOW JOHNNY RED MADE A SPEECH

By BILLY SAYLES

"Honest, daddy, I made a good speech," Johnny Red was telling his father. "It was good, pop, but Holy Cats—I was nervous."

"But how did you go to speak there, Johnny?"

"Well, pop, we were helping to do some mailing at the office of the Friends of Soviet Russia and Workers' Germany and the speaker who was supposed to talk at the German Club got sick, and they didn't have anyone to speak there. And somebody said 'send Johnny Red' and they all thought it was a good idea.

"And Gee whillikens, pop, I didn't want to go, but 'Dutchy'—that's Mrs. Schmidt's boy that just joined our Junior Group—said he would go with me, so I went."

"All right, Comrade speaker," his daddy teased. "But what did you say?"

"Well, daddy, I was supposed to ask for money for the starving children in Germany. I read the letter we were mailing at the office so I told the people what was in it. And honest, daddy, it was awful.

"In Berlin—that's the biggest city in Germany, isn't it, pop "

"Yes," his daddy answered, "but what about it?"

"Well, in the part of Berlin called Wedding, over half the people, sixteen thousand of them, had no food and the city had to feed them.

"And somebody in the crowd said they didn't believe it and I showed them the letter.

"And Gee, daddy, everybody laughed at the man. And then I read from that letter that these were facts from the mayor. He showed that out of eight thousand babies six thousand of them didn't even have clothes. And that two thousand didn't even have a bed. That's a lot, isn't it, daddy And I said, Gee, that's awful, now isn't it?

"And I said the Friends of Soviet Russia and Workers' Germany were sending money and food and clothes and everything to these poor German kids.

"And then pop, Dutchy got up—Gee, he's got nerve, daddy!—and he said that all of us kids in the Junior Groups of the Young Workers League were collecting money and how we got fifty dollars already by holding a show. And he started passing his hat around and Gee, pop there was a big crowd and we got a peach of a collection."

"Did any refuse to give?" his daddy asked.

"Oh gosh darn it, I nearly forgot, daddy. That man who said he didn't believe me when I was talking, told Dutchy he wouldn't give a penny until he got proof of what I was saying.

"But 'Dutchy' was smart, daddy. He had the magazine Soviet Russia Pictorial—you know the one you get with all those pictures—and he showed the man those pictures of the poor skinny kids all starved. And the man looked and looked and looked.

"And then, pop, honestly, he had tears in his eyes. And he got up and he made a speech and he asked 'Dutchy' to go around again with the hat, pop, and we got more money. And daddy, he gave a whole ten dollar bill."

"Well, well," his daddy answered, "and then what?"

"Gee, it was late already, so the man took us home and even carried the money for us. Gosh, it was swell, daddy! And on the way he told him about the twenty-five thousand school kids that had no clothes And just in that one part of Berlin. You see, pop, I knew that but I forgot to say it in my speech, I was so nervous.

"And the man said it must be awful for the kiddies there. And pop, on the way home he bought 'Dutchy' and me an ice cream soda. And, oh boy! it was good!"

"Well, Johnny," his daddy said, "keep it up. Read a lot and study and some day you'll be a speaker. And then you can help not only German children—but the children all over the world."

And Johnny Red said "Holy Cats!"—but he was as pleased as anything.

True Today More Than Ever.

"Each state of Europe is ruined after a war of seven or eight years; each one has done more than its ordinary forces can accomplish. The states do the same as individuals; each one wants to go beyond his power. It has been often asked what becomes of these prodigious treasures during the war and the answer has been that they are buried in the coffers of two or three thousand individuals who have profited by the public misfortune. These two or three thousand persons enjoy their immense fortunes calmly at a time when the rest of the people must groan under new taxes, to pay a part of the national debts."—Voltaire.

Dinner Pail Epics
by Bill Lloyd

He laffs the best who laffs the last. The Reds can nail that to the mast. There's Daugherty, the chief red killer, who now is sorrily the filler of front page news from Washington about the crooked things he done. Some senators we sure should thank that Daugherty has walked the plank, and fell into the Scandal Sea, where he can drown for all of me, or suffocate in slimy ooze, composed of oil, fight-films, and booze.

The Reds can rise and say: "Well, well! How has our roaring fat friend fell."

From chasing Reds, he's took to heels and is emitting doleful squeals about his honor and his name, while they is showing up his game. Red-hunting musta bin his mask, while it appears that his real task was feathering Jess Smith's nest and his by wholesale dealing in graft biz. This Mutt and Jess Smith game is dead; Jess Smith he took a dose of lead. Now Wheeler's picking Harry's bones, while Henry Cabot Lodge he groans.

With spotlight turned on Harry's sins, you can't ask Reds to quash their grins. You must excuse them if they gloat, for Roxie Stinson's got his goat. And Calvin, who is awful canny, must watch or they will get his nanny. Seeing the wreck, I sure am vexed to know whose number they'll get next.

Wilson, the statesman out of school, did surely kill his party's mule. Now under Wheeler's awful roast, the G. O. P. gives up the ghost. And while the public holds its nose, this Wheeler throws it to the crows.

Keep hist'ry straight. It must be sed: 'taint Reds but Daugherty that's dead.

The English Labor Government and the Communist Party

NOTE:—When the British Labor Party assumed the task of forming a government and with the consent of the Tory and Liberal parties took upon itself the responsibility of guiding the destinies of the mighty British Empire the historic development was the occasion for much speculation on the probable course the British Labor Party government would take.

The Executive Committee of the Communist International in a resolution published below states the causes that brought the British Labor Party into office and sets forth the issues confronting the British workers which will test the metal and the "socialism" of the Ramsay MacDonald government.

Resolution of the Executive Committee of the Communist International

THE entry into office of the English Labour Party represents an event of great significance. It announces the awakening of growing masses of workers to class consciousness, and to the knowledge that both bourgeois parties are only representatives of the class interests of the possessing and exploiting minority. At the same time, the policy of the Labour government in England is the touchstone for the masses of workers of the whole world, as well as the oriental races, whether the principles of the Second International concerning the way to Socialism are correct. Therefore, the attitude of the Communist International and of the Communist Party of England to the policy of the Labour government has the deepest significance for the development of the Communist movement. This attitude will be decided by the following fundamental facts:

Must Define Issues.

1. The Labour government is the result of the economic and political distintegration of England resulting from the severe burdens and violent shocks of the world war. The fact that the Labour Party combined four million votes in the elections is not the result of its obstinate, energetic and consistent work for the liberation of the proletariat from the influence of the bourgeoisie. The very fact that the Labour Party possesses only one press organ for the whole of the English proletariat speaks against that. It proves how little this party has succeeded in awakening in the mass of the workers the capacity to make sacrifices for the struggles against the bourgeoisie. The Labour Party could not and would not set the interests of the working class clearly, irreconciliably and energetically against the class interests of the bourgeoisie. A large part of the working class still follows the Liberals and the Conservatives, and the Labour Party itself, in its leading elements, represents a kind of bourgeois fraction rather than a party of the proletarian class struggle. It has taken over the government as a party of the minority of the population, partly with the consent of he bourgeois parties, and partly thanks to the lack of unity in the ranks of the bourgeoisie and its inability to overcome this lack of unity in the face of the terrific tasks and difficulties which have been left over by the war.

Election Victory Not Eonugh.

2. The whole of the Communist International knows that the working class cannot free itself from its economic slavery and political yoke without conquering the bourgeoisie in a revolutionary struggle, without destroying the apparatus of the bourgeois state and creating its own state-form which is supported by the mass organizations of the proletariat. Therefore the English Communist Party cannot hope that the liberation of the English working class will be the result of an election victory, or the parliamentary tactics of the Labour Party. But the majority of the English working class still possess such democratic illusions, which are especially propagated among the masses by the leaders of the Labour Party. The regime of the Labour government now opens the way to experience for the English working class in order to test the value of bourgeois democracy.

Illusions of Democracy.

The Labour government is not a government of a proletarian class struggle, but on the contrary, it endeavors to strengthen the bourgeois state system by reforms and—as a substitute for the class struggle—by the class peace. Nevertheless it finds itself to a certain extent dependent upon the proletariat and its class interests. If, contrary to our expectations, proletarian class movements are successful in driving the Labour government into a struggle with capital, this will sharpen the domestic crisis in England to a very high degree. If, however, as is to be expected, the Labour government betrays the interests of the proletariat, it will in that way give the proletariat the very best object lesson for its liberation from the illusions of capitalist democracy, and will in this way greatly accelerate the revolutionizing of the working class.

Already the composition of the Labour cabinet, which is a block of Right Labour parliamentarians and trade union officials, with radical intellectuals, and even pseudo-radical representatives of the old civil service, permits of no hope that the Labour Party will pursue the way of struggle. On the contrary, it is to be feared that it will go the way of compromise with the enemies of the working class, with Lloyd George and Asquith, that its principles will consist in pleasing these leaders of capital and forming with them a block against the working class.

Communist Party Tasks.

In view of this danger it is the task of the Communist Party to do all that is possible in order to achieve the following:

a) The broadest masses of the English proletariat are to be mobilized in order to exert pressure upon the Labour government, so that it earnestly follows the path of conflict with the capitalist class.

b) The majority of the working class must be supported in this so that they convince themselves by their own experience of the complete futility of the leaders of the Labour Party, of their petty bourgeois and treacherous nature, and of the inevitability of their bankruptcy.

For this purpose the English Communist Party must carry out the following immediate tasks:

1. The Communist Party must at once pen a big campaign for the carrying out of the promises of the leaders of the Labour Party as well as for other actual solutions which are suited to mobilize the class conscious part of the mass of the workers for common action. These solutions which must contain demands which are simple and clear and which lie close to the hearts of the revolutionary workers, are to be laid down in a program of action of the Communist Party of England.

Demand Decisive Policy.

On the basis of this program, the English Communist Party must win the mass of the workers, to demand a decisive courageous policy from the government. This policy must serve the interests, not only of the working people of England, but also of the peoples who are under the yoke of English imperialism, including the Irish. It must be specially demanded, even if the government is overthrown by the combined parliamentary blocks of the capitalist fractions, the Liberals and Conservatives, that the Labour government shall decide in favour of the following demands:

a) For the purpose of combating unemployment, the government must take effective measures for the taxation of the capitalists as well as for the carrying out of the control by the state and the workers over the productive industries that have been closed down by the capitalists.

b) The government must take the initiative in the nationalization of the railways and mines which are to be administered with the assistance of the labor organizations.

c) The government must undertake energetic measures for the liberation of the workers and peasants of Ireland, India and Egypt from the yoke of English imperialism.

d) The government must take the lead in the struggle against the war peril in Europe and in the conclusion of an alliance with the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

e) The Labour Party must make use of these measures of its government in order to awaken new groups of the English proletariat, as well as workers and peasants of the colonies, to rise up to struggle against the English bourgeoisie.

Working Class Leaders.

Further, it must be demanded that if the bourgeois cliques in parliament unite in order to overthrow the parliamentary labour party government, the Labour Party must enter the election campaign as the defender and leader of the working class, in order to awaken the slumbering strength of the English proletariat and in this way prepare for its future victory.

2. The Communist Party must preserve its ideological, tactical and organic independence and carry on an active propaganda for its historically justied conviction that the proletarian revolution and the dictatorship of the proletariat are the only guarantees for the emancipation of the working class.

The Communist Party must turn with its propositions to every group and organization of the working class which demands that the Labour government shall carry on a determined struggle with the bourgeoisie. It must propose to them the summoning of joint meetings, the holding of joint demonstrations, and the sending of joint delegations and so on. For these joint actions the Party must endeavor to make agreements also with the "Left" poiltical organizations of the Labour Party.

The Communist Party of England must be conscious that the objective preliminary conditions are now arising for its expansion into an influential revolutionary mass party. Therefore it must make every effort to implant its organization everywhere, deep in the mass of the revolutionary workers and above all in the centres of production.

Dennie's Farce

By ESTHER LOWELL

HERE a dick, there a dick: "Dennie" Sullivan's court is full of dicks. If we let them worry us, we would never have peace. But one learns to accept these employers' dummies decorating the stage of labor war. One sees how indispensable they are in the court-room scenes.

These lay figures are distributed among the girls who are awaiting their hearings. Their dumbness does not make them deaf, however, and their wax minds register whatever sounds impress them.

The dicks and their fellow lackeys, the sluggers, are never shooed out of the court when the room becomes too crowded. A word to the bailiff is sufficient, if he doesn't recognize them. They must be kept for their cues to witness whatever the prosecutor demands.

When he is ready, Attorney Taylor presents his pal, Judge "Dennie," the affidavits of the alleged "attorney" working with him, of the sheriff's deputies, of the chief of the sluggers, of the various scabs, and of course, of the employers.

Andy Smith's Mistake.

Andy Smith, "captain of the guard," has made so many affidavits that he doesn't always remember what each contains.

"This is your affidavit?" Taylor shows the paper to Andy, giving him ample time to refresh his memory by glancing over the details. Andy hesitates no longer. Later he may have to look at Taylor for confirmation on a hazy date.

LeBosky interviews the thugs and dicks outside:

"You are employed by—?" He gets them all straightened out so that he won't call the wrong witness in a case, tho any one of the boys would have "presence of mind" enough to give the proper answers in emergency or error.

Employers and their sons sit familiarly and almost affectionately among the most obvious bruisers. The less known dicks are assigned among the girls. The bosses beam with trust in God and their lawyers, who will surely put on a good play with a happy ending. The puppets dance their jigs so well.

The Rogue's Gallery.

Most of the sluggers are left out on the lines. Their chief talent is girth. Court business requires a more adaptable automaton. The dicks respond better on the stand. Some of them slink in the older mode but most of them are confidently at home and affable. One looks as tho he might have been taken from the other side of the bars for his job. Some are short and some are tall, but they all cock their ears alike, and their eyes don't miss much. Most of their mouths show the same surly tilt. One wears his patriotism on his lapel.

Everybody laughs when Sergeant Grable tells how he was laid up four days with his abraised elbow, which unluckily wasn't fractured when the little striker defended herself against him. The scratch on his forehead looked like a streak of dirt.

"This is no vaudeville!" proclaims the court. No, indeed, serious enough drama The bailiff takes his cue and clears the room of all standing. Dicks may stay but girls and their parents must leave, if they cannot find seats.

Most of defense Attorney Sissman's objections are over-ruled. "Dennie" is so polite, so very Christianly tolerant. But why should he grant the defense anything more than a short hearing. The case is obviously against them. All these good gentlemen of his own class and clubs say so. Let's get this business over with as soon as we can; and "won't you help?" "There are others here—" who want to get out to wine and dine.

Bailiff Gets a Smile.

Every once in a while the bailiff goes into the back room and returns much refreshed. He reels about the court-room winking and chaffing with the girls. He warns them:

"Be sure to stay until I say you can go." One must play even a minor part up to its fullest. And the bailiff can afford to be genial.

The clerk wags his jaw over the oath each time. One young boss is so eager to testify that he nods and says "I do" several times before the clerk finishes. But why do this same young fellow's eyes look shamedly down during his statements?

It doesn't take a machine to detect liars. The heart effect is all to readable on faces. The little scab isn't sure whether the bosses' money will be enough to pay the priest when she confesses. Does she know how to sew, let alone design? Her corroborator scarcely understands the questions put to her and replies with nods more than words.

"Dennie" Plays the Martyr.

"Dennie" assumes his role well. He is the martyr. He didn't ask these workers in, his manner says. Possibly the law will have more consideration for them than they have for the law. It is nothing to him whether they obey or not. He actually feels sorry for them! (He would certainly pity himself if they were all meek and "law"-abiding and brought him no business). He tries to support his conclusions from the prosecution's testimony that these people were merely the victims of "someone working in the background."

Sissman remonstrates that the strikers are actuated by a sense of duty. Surely they must protect themselves when no one else will

O yes, the court will protect the property rights of bosses whose palms are lined with dollar signs but it will not protect any "vested interest" of the worker in his job. Someone else can have the job and if the worker raises his care-lined hand the court objects. "Thirty days" or "fifty dollars."

The black robe of the law is appropriate!

The Activities of the Workers Party

Declaration Adopted by the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party.

AT THE present time some controversy exists in the Workers Party relative to the general propositions of education, organization, and Party strategy. This is because the Party has not yet established a clear-cut, well-balanced program for the schooling, building, and functioning of our organization. Various groups lay greater or lesser stress upon one or another of the several activities necessary to the development and life of our Party, some overstressing education, others attaching too much importance to bare organization, and still others devoting themselves almost entirely to actions and maneuvers of the Party, to the neglect of education and organization. The consequence is much confusion, wasted effort, and one-sided development. Only by a clarification and unification of the membership's conceptions of the questions can this intolerable condition be remedied. Hence the C. E. C. feels the necessity for the following statement upon the general proposition of Party activities.

In the development and utilization of the Workers Party in the class struggle it must be constantly borne in mind that it is a Communist Party. This means that it must be thoroly educated firmly organized, and possessed of a militant strategy. It must be a revolutionary fighting organization, the membership of which understand not only the ultimate goal of Communism but also the every-day program of the movement; it must be a compact, centralized, disciplined, mass body, and it must take a leading part in all the political and industrial struggles of the workers. The building of such a well-rounded, balanced Party must be our aim. Only a Party which carries on simultaneously the necessary work of education and organization, and which is animated by a militant strategy, can be in fact, as well as in theory, the vanguard of the proletariat.

* * *

EDUCATION

Educational work is one of the basic features of the general activities of the Workers Party. This must reach not only the circle of sympathetic workers about the Party, but especially the members of the Party. In addition to the fundamentals of Marxian theory, this educational work should include an intensive instruction regarding the practical policies and every-day life of the Party. Thus the stream of new members constantly entering the Party will be assimilated and equipped for active participation in Party life. The Party must lay greater and greater stress upon its educational program, systematizing it and institutionalizing it as it develops.

But this does not mean that the Party shall be allowed to become merely an educational body, as some in our ranks think it should. Such a course would condemn it to a sectarianism like that of the Socialist Labor Party and the Proletarian Party, and would eliminate it as a vital factor in the class struggle. Our Party must first of all be a fighting organization and its educational program must be calculated upon the principle of bringing forth the Party's greatest virility and fighting strength. When thus connected and co-ordinated with the every-day struggles of the working class, the Party's educational work will be lifted above the academic atmosphere and made a dynamic factor, at once re-enforcing the Party in the class struggle and being itself vitalized and stimulated by the Party experiences, in the battles of the workers.

As things now stand the educational work of the Workers Party, both for the masses in general and for the members in particular, is still in a primitive state of development. It is the intention of the C. E. C. to remedy this condition as rapidly as possible, and to develop an effective campaign of educational work. A lead idea in this campaign will be to establish systematic routine that will constantly bring its educational work before the Party committees for attention and action. Within the C. E. C. itself an educational committee is being established to co-ordinate and stimulate this phase of Party work everywhere.

It will put into effect the educational program, published in THE WORKER of November 3rd, 1923, as rapidly as resources will permit. That program is, briefly; to provide definitely in the Party budget for the educational work which shall be developed along the following lines: Selection of a national Educational Director; founding of "Lenin College", a central school for Party workers; establishment of classes in the various cities, organized in circuits and covered by professional teachers; extensive tours for lecturers on theoretical subjects; publication of popular theoretical pamphlets and books; periodic discussions in branch meetings of current events and decisions of the C. E. C. on party policy.

The beginnings so far made, in the establishment of a circuit of study classes in District 8 and in District 1, a Party school in New York, the projected publication of the "Lenin Library" of 10 volumes, all a part of the national educational system, will be supported and extended until every member of the Party and every sympathizer has full and complete opportunity for sound education in every phase of the international communist movement. The youth movement shall be utilized more and more in this same field.

ORGANIZATION

The Party organization must be gradually and systematically transformed from its present territorial basis to that of shop and factory units. Special articles, communications from the Communist International and plans for this re-organization work will be published in the near future.

In the mean-time all educational and political activity must be closely followed by organization. The Party must absorb and make use of all the workers brought into sympathetic contact with the Party thru education or common participation in the struggle. Organization is a question of life and death to a Communist movement; our activities of every sort must receive special organizational attention, they cannot be allowed to drift along in a vague and uncrystallized form.

The Party is the organizational center for the entire movement and must therefore have first organizational attention. Many thousands of workers are ideologically prepared now for membership in the Workers Party, and it is a major task for us to reach them and bring them into the organization. From the Workers Party as the center must radiate a complete network of auxiliary organizations, crystallizing all communist activity and permeating the masses in all fields of struggle. In every case where Communists are active, organization and the Party must follow closely behind, the object of constant and energetic attention.

Our campaigns for amalgamation, the Labor Party, and other issues of immediate appeal to the workers, must be followed up closely by the organizing machinery of the Party so that the elements made sympathetic to us shall be absorbed into the Party. Every action supported by non-party elements must be made the basis for an appeal to them to join the Workers Party as the instrument that made effective action possible. Every party unit must have a permanent committee on recruiting new members. Party members must be systematically instructed in organizational methods and plans for work within trade unions, fraternal societies, etc. Only when system and order, with definite and authoritative organizational forms, follow all Communist activity, will the full results of our work be obtained.

On the other hand it must be pointed out that, just as a one-sided emphasis upon education at the expense of other sides of Party activity, produces sectarianism, so does undue stress placed upon bare organization (the tendency to organizational fetishism) produce sterility and political bankruptcy. Organization alone is futile. Thus the Socialist Party once had 100,000 members, quite an organizational showing, but because it had no solid educational basis nor possessed of a sound and militant strategy in the class struggle, its organization melted away overnight. The problem of organization for a Communist party is the problem of keeping pace at all times with party education and party strategy, without allowing organizational work to become an end in itself.

It is the intention of the Central Executive Committee to intensively develop organizational methods and activities, to constantly survey and appraise the working of each unit of our organization, to stimulate lagging sections, to correct errors and abuses, and draw the movement more tightly together everywhere. This it also lays down as the basic organizational duty of every party committee.

* * *

PARTY STRATEGY.

Party strategy is the systematic and planful application of fundamental Communist principles in the class struggle. It is "The Party Inaction," functioning as the leader of the working masses, organizing and educating them, crystallizing their revolt, giving them direction for immediate and definite actions, establishing a proletarian fighting morale, and occupying the front ranks in every struggle against the capitalist system, against the employers, and against the agents of capitalism within the labor movement. Party strategy is that expression of our organization that makes of it a communist party.

Party strategy, to be fully effective, requires the intelligent participation of the entire membership. While it is particularly the responsibility of the Central Executive Committee, and the District Committees under its lead, to give direction and control, yet the whole party which puts that strategy into effect in the life of the working class must be permeated with a deep understanding of what the party is trying to do and the methods of doing it. The Party as a whole must follow the stategy from point to point in the struggle, must pass judgment upon it, must criticize and correct it from time to time. Successful Party strategy is thus based directly upon the understanding of the membership (education), and upon its facilities for united action (organization). To the full extent that education and organization have laid the foundation the Party strategy must be extended and developed.

The capacity of the Party, measured by its understanding and organization strength, is thus of equal importance with a realistic valuation of the objective facts of the class struggle. That strategy which correctly estimates the objective facts, the political and economic situation and the relation of forces, and also correctly judges the power of the Party, and which throws the Party energetically and intelligently into the struggle to the limit of those powers, is the successful strategy toward which we must strive.

Our Party is faced with a tremendous responsibility. It finds a working class from which all other leadership has abdicated. The so-called progressives, by their cowardly retreats and surrender to Gompers have left the labor movement with none but the Communists to lead the struggle for the Labor Party, amalgamation and for even the mildest reforms. It is the duty of the Workers Party to accept this responsibility, and to participate in every action of the working class, leading it on step by step to our goal. Those few individual comrades who object to this constant and active participation in the every day struggle and who call for a life of quite study and peaceful organization of the Communists, show that they do not understand the function of a Communist party.

On the other hand the Central Executive Committee is determined to guard against the other danger, the tendency to wild maneuverings to running ahead of the Party membership, to ill-considered actions, that defeat our primary purpose by creating distrust among the workers. Our Party strategy must be so soundly based upon the fundamental interests of the working class, and so clearly explained to the workers, that it will at all times retain that mass support necessary to give it power. Strategy shall never be allowed to degenerate into political maneuvers having no relation to the real facts of the class struggle and the relative strength of the party.

In the immediate future the Workers Party will be engaged in most important political battles in which the Party strategy will be supremely important. Smooth and rapid adjustment of the entire Party to each development so that the Party may strike quickly and with its entire power, is a supreme necessity. The Central Executive Committee is informing the membership from week to week of its political estimate of the situation, the Party press is day by day carrying the story of the immediate struggle, the Party position is being explained on each issue that arises, the full power of the Party is being exerted within the working class movement.

The C. E. C. expects to intensify this active participation in the whole political life of the working class, which will become more complex and heated as the presidential campaign develops and the farmer-labor movement comes to expression More than ever it is necessary for all Party members and all Party units to study and to understand the Party strategy, and put it into effect with all their ability and energy, constantly keeping before the eyes of the workers the ultimate aims of the class struggle, i. e., the seizure of power and the proletarian dictatorship.

* * *

A BALANCED PROGRAM.

Our supreme objective, our fundamental conception in the period immediately before us, must be the building of a mass Communist party. That means that the activities of our Party must be developed upon a balanced program of education, organization, and strategy. Education thru intensive, systematic effort, hooked up closely with organization and action, will give our Party a sound foundation without leading the sectarianism or scholasticism. Organization of all activities, definite in form and reaching out to embrace the workers prepared for our movement and its work, will put firmness and backbone into both education and Party strategy, steering clear of both organizational fetishism and jellyfish-like helplessness. Party strategy, based upon education and organization, correctly adjusted to the resources of the Party and the facts of the class struggle, will act as a stimulus to all other phases of Party life, as an instrument of education and organization, and at the same time it will fulfill the responsibilities placed upon us, and will put our Party in its proper position as the vanguard of the proletariat, the leader of the working class.

The Central Executive Committee calls upon the entire Party to establish this conception of a balanced program of activities as a central and leading idea in the Party life. Let each of our work be developed together and in harmony, without artificial differentiation or one-sided emphasis. Each is necessary and is intimately connected with all the other; they are but different faces to the one reality the Workers Party, which is the collective organization of every phase of Communist work in America. With consistent and systematic study, with thoro and well-disciplined organization, and with intelligent and energetic action, our Party will leave behind all the remaining vestiges of factionalism, opportunism, infantile disorders, and sectarianism, and will march forward to its proper place as a mature and responsible section of the Communist International.

INEVITABLE

The tide sweeps all along with it,
Driftwood and dreamer,
Pious and sinner,
Fighter and vanquished,
All go beneath the flood.

Nor all your coward tears can thwart its flow,
They only add to its torrential strength,
Be they the tears of prayer, the tears of pain,
Naught can avail, naught can this force restrain,
The deluge feeds and swells with human blood
Till the whole earth is cleansed.

Present Economic and Political Situation and Our Immediate Tasks

Memorandum to the E. C. C. I. Adopted by the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party, March 16, 1924. Submitted by Foster, Cannon and Bittleman.

The Economic Situation

INDUSTRY—The industrial system of America, alone among the capitalist nations of the world, still shows great strength. The year 1923 was a peak year in production, in spite of the drastic curtailment of exports as compared with other boom years. This unprecedented expansion was, however, due largely to tremendous capital expenditures, (constructive, building, replacements and extensions of plant and equipment), which have already reached close to the limitations imposed by production for profits. The continuous decline since May, 1923, now interrupted by a slight counter-tendency, altho it still leaves production on a fairly high level, shows that the limits of the domestic market have been reached.

The enormous capital expenditures, by increase of plant and equipment, have still further increased the potential productive forces of American industry, but no new markets are available to absorb that production. The pressure of the accumulating capital, intensified by the influx of gold into America, is already presaging a crisis in industry, and at the same time is bring about tremendous internal changes.

Concentration of capital is proceeding at an unexampled rate; new industries, infants of a few years ago like oil and automobiles, are becoming giants; great industrial trusts that completely overshadow anything seen before are coming into being; the economic basis is being completed for the most powerful imperialism the world has seen.

The present depression is undoubtedly leading to a crisis, in which capitalism will repeat the historic cycle described by Marx. This developing crisis is bringing with it the inevitable pressure upon the working class, in the shape of wage reductions, wars against the unions, lengthening of hours, and loss of previous gains in working conditions. At the same time it makes more difficult any effective economic struggle.

The weakness of the labor unions is accentuated by the complete bankruptcy of the official leadership, which is going over bodily to an open policy of collaboration of classes, abandoning all pretense of class struggle. The approaching crisis is at the same time pressing upon the middle bourgeoisie especially the smaller industrialists, independent producers, small retailers, professionals and intellectuals, and furnishes the economic basis for the growing political revolt of the city workers and middle class.

• • •

AGRICULTURE—The crisis in agriculture is much farther advanced and more acute than in industry. Development of agricultural technique has long been demanding more capital than was possessed by the tillers of the land, under the prevailing mode of individual production. Trust-farming, to correspond with the development of industry under similar conditions, was unable to develop on a large scale. It was necessary to find a method which, while retaining the form of individual ownership, allowed an actual concentration in the hands of the money interests. This was achieved in elaborate and comprehensive extension of the mortgage system, and along with it, tenantry. Agriculture, considered only on its productive side, flourished and grew for a time.

But the farmer, gradually but surely, began to find himself in the financial position, not of the independent producer, but of the dependent worker or worse. In a flourishing industry he found himself unable to pay his bills. Just as the coal miners are starving in one of the wealthiest industries of the country, so the farmers who produce the food are finding themselves actually going hungry. The ownership of the land, and with it the produce of the land, has actually passed out of their hands. Today a bare third of agriculture is carried on by those who hold clear ownership of the land they till.

Accompanying this has gone a concomitant development of increasing taxes that further pressed upon the bankrupt farmer. The expansion of the war period, with its price-fixing of wheat and indirect subsidies to agriculture, gave a temporary relief, but at the same time immeasurably stimulated the process which is the fundamental trouble of the working farmers. This was realized in life when the deflation began in 1920. With the barrier of war conditions removed, the full force of the accumulating changes in the fundamental basis of agricultural ownership was felt. The prevailing system of individual production, because it no longer fits the economic facts, begins to destroy the individual ownership of which it was supposed to be the basis.

Capitalism, blindly following its own laws and appropriating the products of agriculture, has changed the fundamental basis of the system of agriculture by taking the ownership of the land from its tillers, but it has failed to substitute the social and productive forms necessary to adjust the individual productive forces to the centralized financial control and ownership. The result is the present major dislocation, the wholesale exodus from the land of the bankrupt farmers from their flourishing industry. The entire agricultural system has been brought to a fundamental crisis by the operations of capitalism. This crisis has shaken the conservative and individualistic American farmers out of their old political channels and is forcing them in alliance with the city workers and middle classes, into independent political action.

• • •

The Political Situation.

The mass revolt against the two old parties.— The present political situation is characterized by a growing revolt of the workers, farmers, and lower middle classes against the leadership and domination of the two old parties. The Democrat and Republican Parties do not represent the interests of the masses that have been supporting them. Neither the workers nor the exploited farmers, and not even the lower middle classes find their interests represented and defended by the two old parties. Both are dominated by the big finance and industrial capitalists of the country who are using interchangeably the machinery of the two old parties to suppress and exploit all the other groups and classes in American Society.

Because the old parties are being dominated and controlled by big capital these parties have proven themselves to be totally incapable to cope with the present situation and to satisfy even partially the needs of the exploited masses of the cities and farms. The present industrial and agricultural crisis is accentuating this fact and is giving more impetus and force to the already strong movement of revolt against the old parties,—a movement which is assuming daily ever wider and bigger proportions.

The disclosures in the Teapot Dome Oil Scandal and in the Veterans' Bureau Investigations have badly shattered the confidence of the masses in the two old parties. This fact has already had the effect of increasing the disgust with and intensifying the opposition to the political leadership of the Democrats and Republicans. The outcome of it is a veritable mass revolt against these political instruments and tools of big capital.

The political expression of revolt against old parties.—This revolt finds its expression in a large mass movement tending to split away from the two old parties and towards a new party. The workers, exploited farmers and large sections of the petty bourgeoisie, spurred on by the industrial and agricultural crisis and by the disclosures of the present senatorial investigations, are moving very speedily in the direction of a third party. Insofar as this third party movement has as yet crystallized, its organized expression is the so-called La Follette group in Congress, the Conference for Progressive Political Action, and a number of smaller political groups and state organizations.

As this mass revolt against the old parties develops there is to be seen a clearly defined tendency of the more politically conscious workers and exploited farmers to differentiate themselves from the amorphous mass and to organize into a class farmer-labor party distinct and separate from the general third party movement. The principal organized expression of this movement is the group of farmer-labor parties which is calling the convention of June 17th and of which the Federated Farmer-Labor Party and the Workers Party are a part.

All the elements participating in the general revolt are present in both the third party and labor party movements. The thing that differentiates them is the preponderance of petty bourgeois elements, their leadership and ideology in the third party movement; as against the preponderance of workers and exploited farmers, their leadership and ideology, in the farmer-labor movement.

Forces Making for Third Party.— The forces moving with various degrees of political consciousness and determination in the direction of a third party are dominated by the petty bourgeoisie. Altho this movement includes large sections of organized workers and exploited farmers, yet its political expression and leadership is centered in a group of petty bourgeois liberal Senators and Congressmen known as the La Follette group, which really represents the interests of well-to-do farmers and small manufacturers and other middle class elements. This group in Congress is looked upon by millions of workers and farmers as their leaders against the domination and oppression of big capital. And it is this fact that makes the political strategy of the La Follette group one of the determining factors making for the formation of a third party in the coming Presidential Elections.

The strategy of the La Follette group has been to gain the leadership of the revolting masses preferably under the banner of the Republican Party. If they fail to control the Republican Convention they will very probably split and try to unite the entire mass revolt against the two old parties into a third party under their leadership. On account of the great and rapidly growing discontent now existing in the ranks of both old parties this split may be of such a far-reaching nature that a section of the capitalists will go along with it in order to control it. In such an event the new party would approach the old parties in character.

The Conference for Progressive Political Action is another political force moving in the direction of a third party. Altho it is based on and maintained by the railroad unions its political ideology is very much the same as that of the La Follette group. The leaders of the sixteen standard railroad unions who are also founders and leaders of the Conference for Progressive Political Action, were committed up till the Feb. 12th Conference in St. Louis, to the nomination and support of McAdoo on the Democratic ticket.

But because McAdoo was involved in the Teapot Dome oil scandal, they did not dare to nominate him at St. Louis, but contented themselves with vague third party propaganda and the calling of the July 4th Conference in Cleveland. A few days later, however, these same leaders of the Conference for Progressive Political Action participated in the McAdoo Conference held in Chicago and endorsed McAdoo as presidential candidate of the Democratic Party. Since that time, however, the chances of McAdoo receiving the Democratic nomination have dwindled down to zero and this has drawn the C. P. P. A. more deeply into the current of the third party movement led and directed by the La Follette group

But it can safely be depended upon that the reactionary labor leaders controlling the C. P. P. A. will not support a third party movement unless they are driven to it by the pressure of the masses, and they are quite likely to betray the whole movement by endorsing one or the other of the old capitalist party presidential candidates in the coming election

Forces Making for a Farmer-Labor Party.—The forces making for the formation of a class party of workers and exploited farmers are primarily the left-wing of the labor unions and the politically mature sections of the exploited farmers. These forces have crystallized into a number of city and state farmer-labor parties, most of which are following the lead of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party and the Workers' Party. The national center of this movement is the organization committee in charge of the convention of June 17th, in Minnesota.

In this combination of forces making for the formation of a mass farmer-labor party, the Workers Party, and the Federated Farmer-Labor Party are the most conscious and determined factors. A large section of this combination, altho consciously in favor of a class party is still strongly influenced by the ideology of the La Follette group. It remains therefore, one of the most important and urgent problems of strategy for the farmer-labor forces to steer a course of action which, while retaining contact with the broad third party movement, will at the same time bring about he crystallization of the workers and exploited farmers into a separate class party of their own.

• • •

Workers Party Strategy.

Our attitude towards the split from the old Parties.— The movement for the split of the working and farming classes and the petty bourgeoisie away from the Republican and Democratic Parties, which are dominated and controlled by big capital is creating a fundamental change in American politics. It cannot solve any of the problems of the workers and exploited farmers nor bring any real relief to them. Nevertheless, this split greatly accelerates the development of the class struggle and must be supported by the Workers Party for the following reasons,

1. It represents a revolt of workers, farmers and lower layers of the owning class against the political domination of the big capitalists. It breaks the capitalist ranks and weakens their leadership over millions of workers, farmers and small business and professional elements who have hitherto followed them. It makes a successful united attack upon the workers more difficult.

2. Millions of workers and poor farmers are following this split movement away from the old parties. The split breaks the lethargy of these masses, sets them in motion and renders them highly susceptible to propaganda for a class party. The split of these working and farming masses from the capitalist parties, which they have followed up till now, if properly utilized, nan be made the starting point for the development of a great class farmer-labor party.

3. It is not a matter of indifference to the Communists as to who misleads and betrays the working masses. The latter are already disillusioned about the old capitalist parties but they still look with faith to the third party movement. The betrayal of their interests by the La Follette group, because of the greater promises it makes and the higher hopes it inspires, will have the most profound effect on the masses and will eventually force them to turn to a class party of their own and toward the leadership of the Communists.

4. This split will shatter the A. F. of L. Bureaucracy which stands today as the most formidable obstacle to the revolutionary development of the trade unions. The A. F. of L. Bureaucracy is tied to the capitalist parties. The split from the old parties will tear loose great masses of organized workers from their allegiance to the capitalist parties and their own leaders who are agents of these parties. It will upset the balance of power in the A. F. of L. and open the door for a general development of the trade unions in all directions.

• • •

The Workers Party and the Farmer-Labor Party.

Our chief task and aim in the present situation is the organization on a national scale of a class party of workers and poor farmers on as broad a basis as possible and the advancement to the utmost in this party of the ideology and leadership of the Communists.

The attitude of the Workers Party towards a class farmer-labor party is determined by the united front policy and tactics of the Communist International. We participate in the movement and fight for the formation of a mass party of workers and exploited farmers because this is at present the best means at our disposal by which we can mobilize and organize large masses of workers and farmers for a struggle against capitalist exploitation and the capitalist state and because it gives us the broadest and best field for revolutionary agitation and propaganda.

The success of this policy depends, however, upon our ability to constantly agitate and organize the working masses for the final struggle for power and the establishment of a proletarian dictatorship. Our success in the fight for the farmer-labor party and the constant broadening of its scope and strengthening of its class character must carry with it the constant strengthening and development of the Workers Party, to such an extent as to make it the real leader of the working class and the movement that will result from our activity for a farmer-labor party.

We must, as part of the campaign for the organization of the whole left wing, assist in maintaining, organizing, and strengthening the Federated Farmer-Labor Party. This does not mean that we shall allow organizational fetishism to develop which would interfere with any necessary or advantageous regrouping of the labor party forces. Our aim is the building of the Workers Party into a mass Communist Party, and our strategy in the Farmer-Labor movement must always be directed to this end.

• • •

The Farmer-Labor Party and The Third Party.

While we carry on our campaign for the organization of a class farmer-labor party, we must at the same time try to drive the third party forces to split away from the old capitalist parties. And if this split takes place and a third party is organized, which is an expression of revolt against Wall Street and which is not merely another capitalist party, the farmer-labor party must make an election alliance with it against the old capitalist parties and the capitalist government. Such an alliance, however, shall not take the form of organizational unity between the class farmer-labor party and the third party, but of common campaigns against the capitalist parties and against the government of big capital.

The attitude of the class farmer-labor party toward the third party has to be determined by the nature of the third party and the attitude of the big capitalists toward it. Present indications point to the formation of a third party led by La Follette or some other of the same group on a program of struggle against the domination of the big capitalists. With such a party the farmer-labor party should and must make an election alliance in the 1924 campaign.

This does not mean that the farmer-labor party can support the candidate of the third party under any and all circumstances. We must not be blind to the possibility that a section of the capitalists, seeing the tremendous movement of the masses away from the old parties, will also enter the third party movement and take command of it. With such a third party the farmer-labor party cannot make an election alliance no matter who may be the candidate, but must fight against it.

On the other hand, it is not out of the range of possibility that La Follette or one of his group will secure the Republican nomination at the hands of the big capitalists who control the Republican Party and attempt to lead the revolting back into its ranks. Under such circumstances, of course, the farmer-labor party must wage a relentless campaign against this reactionary maneuver.

Insofar as the political developments can be foreseen now we can specify the general conditions for an election alliance of the farmer-labor party with a party led by La Follette or one of his group as well as the conditions for refusing such an alliance.

The election alliance which would involve the support of the candidacy of La Follette or some similar leader of the third party movement for president in the 1924 elections can be made if:

(a) he runs as an independent candidate;

(b) he becomes the candidate of a party formed at the Cleveland Conference of the C. P. P. A.

(c) he becomes the candidate of a new party formed directly by the progressive group in Congress revolting from the old parties and excluding the political agents of capital from the control of the Party.

The farmer-labor party must oppose the candidacy of La Follette or any other leader of the third party movement in the election, if

(a) he betrays the movement by accepting the Republican nomination,

(b) he becomes the candidate of a new party controlled by capitalists.

In state and city elections the policy of the farmer-labor party should be as follows, as stated in the Convention thesis:

"(a) The farmer-labor party will nominate its candidates on its own party ticket wherever possible and carry on an independent campaign.

"(b) Wherever the farmer-labor party candidates have a chance to win we will carry on the fight to elect these candidates against those of the old parties and the third party. Wherever the Socialist Party or any other labor political group has a chance to win we will support these candidates against all other parties including the third party.

"(c) Wherever neither the farmer-labor party nor the third party candidates have a chance to win, we will vote for the farmer-labor party candidates in the election.

"(d) Where the farmer-labor party candidates have no chance to win and the third party can unquestionably win against the capitalist parties with our support, we will vote for the third party candidates."

If under the conditions set forth above an election alliance, either national or local, is made the farmer-labor party must maintain a distinct organization and carry on an independent campaign for its own program and utilize the situation to the utmost to crystallize in the definite form of an organized farmer-labor party all those workers and exploited farmers who can be brought to the support of a class party.

Thruout any campaign in which we maintain an alliance with the third party, we must constantly criticize and expose it and its candidates, show up the futility of its program, and make it clear to the workers who are reached by our own campaign that the third party will bring them no salvation and no relief. We must make it clear that the whole campaign is simply a starting point in the struggle for the establishment of a workers' and farmers' government, which in turn is a step towards the Proletarian Dictatorship, the one and only instrument for their liberation.

• • •

The June 17th Convention

All the elements of the classes which are participating in the revolt against and split from the old capitalist parties will be represented in the St. Paul convention on June 17th. But the probability of the class farmer-labor party elements—the rank and file workers and poor farmers—predominating will be greatly increased by the aggressive role of the Workers Party in the campaign for the convention and the tendency of the third party elements (including the labor bureaucrats, who are ideologically a part of the petty bourgeoisie) to turn to the Cleveland Conference of the C. P. P. A. or to some other center which may be created by the La Follette group to serve as the nucleus of the third party.

Our task at the June 17th Convention will be to strengthen and clarify its class character, fight for the adoption of a class program, organize it into a class party separate and distinct from the Cleveland conference or any other third party conference which may be held. The party formed there shall negotiate, thru committees, with other conferences on the question of common campaign or common candidates only as an organized body.

At the St. Paul Conference we shall nominate and fight for proletarian candidates as against any other candidates at the conference. We shall utilize the conference to lay the basis for the organization of the farmer-labor party thruout the country and also advance there the proposal and plans for an economic organization of farmers to serve as the foundation for their political organization.

Preparations for June 17th.

It is necessary to throw the last ounce of the Party's energy into the campaign to make the June 17th conference a tremendous mass gathering of the rank and file workers and poor farmers. We must undertake to draw the whole genuine class farmer-labor movement to June 17th, and away from July 4th and all other third party conferences on the ground that June 17th alone is the center around which the whole class movement can and must be crystallized into a separate and independent body.

An organization campaign must be started at once. Party units must be instructed immediately to initiate the work of forming local and state farmer-labor parties which shall be represented on June 17th. The question of their affiliation to the F. F.-L. P. must be determined in each case separately according to the policy laid down in the convention thesis which is as follows:

"The F. F.-L. P. should sonsider each situation separately and thoroly. It should organize the Federated Farmer-Labor Party only in such places in which the organization of the F F.-L. P. will not bring a split in the left-wing; that is, of the followers of the class labor party movement."

Party members thruout the trade union and farmer movements must commence a systematic agitation to send delegates to the June 17th convention from their local trade unions, co-operatives, farmers' organizations, and labor fraternal societies.

We must develop an educational campaign in connection with the June 17th convention and the political situation of which it is a part. This campaign shall have two objects and two sides:

1. To educate the Party membership as to the reasons for and necessity of the Party tactics laid down in this thesis and carried out in the campaign, so that all actions and maneuvers of the Party will be understood and participated in by the largest possible number, and the C. E. C. kept in closest touch with the membership.

2. To educate the broad farmer-labor masses to the class point of view, to point out to them the hopelessness of the program and leadership of the whole La Follette third party group and to prepare them for the inevitable break with this third group.

RUSSIAN NEWS IN THE MAKING

By EVELYN BEIDELL

The scene is a hotel room in Berlin—or Riga. American newspapers, the Chicago Tribune, The New York Globe, and others, are scattered about. The room has a solitary occupant, a man sunk deep in thought, sitting before a typewriter.

He frowns as if at the recollection of something unpleasant, or perhaps because of futility. Nervously, he picks up a sheaf of typewritten papers, and glances thru them. They are newspaper dispatches, variously headlined; "Trotzky Slaps Red Chief", "Cheka Foils Attack Upon Trotzky", "Revolt Impending In Russia", etc.

He stops at one sheet and gazes at it ruminatingly. It seems to have provoked a train of thought. Suddenly his expression becomes intense, absorbed. Deep wrinkles are registered upon his brow. They indicate that a profound process of conception is going on within. Presently, he places his fingers upon the keys. Parturition seems about to take place! It begins with a clatter of the keys.

A headline in capitals spread itself upon the paper: "TROTZKY SENDS THREAT TO PETROGRAD."—A slight pause, and, all details envisaged and correlated, the inspired correspondent dashes on. Armies, generals, cities, Communists and Communist disputes are deftly inserted by the flying keys. Even a quotation from Trotzky's "belligerent message" makes its appearance.

In a few minutes, the article assumes the earmarks and proportions of a regular news dispatch. To all purposes and intents it is a fully authenticated and first hand version of "developments in Russia". And as such, it will be published in the capitalist newspapers in America.

Biggest Campaign Fund Wins the White House

NO man can be president of the United States unless the great capitalist interests GIVE HIM THE MONEY in the form of a campaign fund with which to run.

Since 1860, with one exception, the man who had the biggest campaign fund has been elected president. The one exception was Wilson's second election in which (unless the money was secretly given and handled) the millionaires (including Mr. Doheny) put up only $1,400,229 to elect Wilson, while other millionaires (including Harry Sinclair) gave $2,012,535 to Charles E. Hughes' campaign.

The presidents of the United States from 1860 to 1920 with their campaign funds are:

1860—Lincoln, $100,000—elected. Douglas, $50,000.
Breckenridge,——

Hungarian Hangman Greets Coolidge Tool As Country's Savior

(By The Federated Press)

BUDAPEST, March 21.—Nicolas Horthy, the Hungarian regent who personally conducted the torture and massacre of hundreds of socialists, liberals and Jews during the white terror, has been telling American correspondents here of his delight at W. P. G. Harding's appointment to the commissioner generalship of the league of nations in Hungary. Harding is the former U S. federal reserve board director, who recently left for Europe, presumably to act as receiver for the bankrupt Magyar government.

Horthy declares that Harding's presence in Budapest will restore foreign confidence in Hungary. With Horthy still in power and with every liberal and labor movement in that country checked with bayonets, confidence in Hungary requires a tall bit of restoring, labor men say.

JOIN THE WORKERS PARTY!

You Have Nothing to Lose But Your Chains!

The old order changeth—

O fellowman! of the world and its pain to you—
What can you tell?
Which of your dreams for tomorrow remain to you
Out of its hell?
Turn to your artists, mere dabblers in form,
Scientists, dumb to each sham-raking storm,
Bigots, professing the word of reform, . . .
What! of such lies is the stuff of your mould?
Look at your babbling drunkards and smile,
Pity your cripples, your lepers revile,
Poor men and slaves all your "freedom" defile, . . .
Why do your heroes lie silent and cold?
Answer me, man!

Yielding place to new—

Comrades awake!—of the strength in the best of us—
Are you aware?
Do not our taunts at the sloth in the rest of us
Baffle despair?
We who have struggled mere thousands of years,
Wrenching from billions the truths of the spheres,
Bridging with labor the valleys of tears,
Are we then pygmies and puny, who fight?
Nay we are storming the heights of the skies,
Building new worlds from the old we despise,
Killing the gods that our souls tyrannize;
Let us strike hard with our fast growing might—
Workers unite!

NEW FACTS BALK EFFORT TO STOP OIL PROBE

COMMITTEES ACT TODAY ON INJUNCTION

Students Continue Defiance of Sullivan Writ

"Down with Judge 'Dennie' Sullivan's injunction!" will be the cry of organized labor at a monster demonstration which will be staged in Chicago at an early date.

Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, is expected to speak at this demonstration, Vice-President Meyer Perlstein, of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, informed the DAILY WORKER last night.

He has just received word from New York City that the International union expects to have Gompers here to lead the attack on the writ which attempts to deny union labor the right to walk the streets.

Parade Thru Strike Zone.

The demonstration will be staged jointly by the Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and the Chicago Federation of Labor, it was learned from other sources. It may take the form of a huge parade thru the strike zone as well as a mass meeting.

"The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union is determined to win this strike," announced Perlstein. "Splendid support is coming from all parts of the union."

Cloakmakers Give $10,000.

"A $10,000 donation has just been made by the Cloakmakers' Union of Chicago. The check was turned in to us this morning. It was a voluntary donation. In addition, every member of the Cloakmakers' Union here, 3,000 of them, is assessing himself $1.00 a week for the strike. And all the strikers who have returned to work are assessing themselves 10 per cent of their earnings."

This will be a big day in the strike of the garment workers. Picketing will be carried on in all the dress manufacturing districts on a larger scale than has ever been attempted before.

The regular strikers will have as assistants in their picketing a large group of members of the University of Chicago Liberal club. Saturday 25 members of the club picketed with the strikers and two of them were arrested. They will continue defying the infamous injunction day by day.

Strikers Watching Committees.

After the morning picketing is over the attention of the strikers will be rivetted on the meeting of the "Committee of 15" and the "Injunction Committee" of the Chicago Federation of Labor. This meeting will be held at two o'clock this afternoon and the strikers are hoping for quick, decisive action in aid of the strike from the committees. All the strikers are frank in hoping that there will be a call from the committees to ignore Dennie Sullivan's injunction and calling on the men of the Chicago labor movement to go to the picket ilne with the girl strikers.

A sub-committee of the "Committee of 15" consisting of John Fitzpatrick, Anton Johannsen and Victor Olander will see Mayor William E. Dever and tell him how his police force have been treating girl strikers. The committee was given a startling report by the I. L. G. W. U. on police brutalities Saturday, but since Saturday is a half day for politicians, the sub-committee did not get a chance to see Mayor Dever.

List Police Assaults.

The report takes a few typical instances of brutality on the part of the police and gives the complete details of them. No instances were cited where the union was not in possession of complete details. In each instance of police brutality cited by the union the names of the girls assaulted and the numbers of the policemen doing the assaulting are given.

The sub-committee which will see the mayor will make known to him in no uncertain language that the labor movement wants police brutality to stop and to stop at once. No excuses for its continuance will be taken. The mayor will not be allowed to pass the buck any longer;—his uniformed men are guilty with Crowe's.

POINCARE PLACES WAR BURDENS ON POOR OF FRANCE

Only Property of Rich Reconstructed

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, March 24.—The opposition to President Poincare has had a tremendously powerful weapon placed in its hands by the government's decision to discontinue work in the devastated regions and to reject the damage claims of thousands of small home owners.

Leon Eseoffier, a deputy from one of the devastated areas, is quoted by papers here as authority for the statement that the government has refused to allow small claims totalling 25,000,000 francs; that the minister of finance has vetoed the measure proposing a loan for reconstruction purposes of 150,000,000 franc to the department du Nord and that many crews of workers now engaged in reconstruction work are to be discharged.

All further claims for damages to personal property are to be paid not in cash, but in ten-year notes and all credit loans with the exception of 4,000,000 francs, will be cancelled.

The properties—factories, etc.—of the wealthy have either been restored or the owners compensated and the burden now falls exclusively on the workers and peasants who can least afford to sustain the losses. The Poincare government policy has thus resulted in saddling the physical damage of the war upon the poorest section of the populace and no talk of the victory in the Ruhr can prevent this fact being known by the victims.

Even the recovery of the franc following the loan from the Morgan interests has not served to quell the dissatisfaction with the government in the devastated districts.

Compensation Law Fought Bitterly by Quebec Employers

MONTREAL, March 23.—Quebec employers are fighting vigorously against the reforms in the Quebec workmen's compensation law which are being advocated by organized labor. A striking evidence of this antagonism has been given by the repudiation by Representative Lowe of the Quebec section, Canadian Manufacturers' Association, of the findings of the interprovincial conference of 1921, which has been the basis of recent reforms along this line.

The opposition of the employers to labor's proposals is being backed up by the lawyers of the province and by insurance companies.

Fire Fighters Organized.

SEATTLE, March 23.—The firefighters' union in Seattle has succeeded in attaining a 90 per cent organization and will press for wage increases and abolition of the so-called efficiency rating system.

SOVIETS FREE ROMAN CLERIC; GIVE HIM GATE

Ikons and Vodka Losing Out in Russia

MOSCOW, March 23.—Archbishop Zepliak has been released from prison after serving a year of his 10-year sentence for conspiracy against the government.

Zepliak originally was sentenced to death after conviction on charges of opposing seizure of church property and conspiring with the enemy during the Polish offensive. Later his sentence was commuted to 10 years in prison.

The archbishop will be expelled from Russia.

Simultaneously it was announced the case against Patriarch Tikhon and his co-defendants, accused on the same charges for which Zepliak was sentenced, has been dropped completely.

Action of the government is attributed to the fact that "the population is becoming less superstitious about religion and is turning more to the study of science."

POLICE THREATEN TO RAID DAILY WORKER AND BEAT UP EDITORS

BRITISH LOSE TWO DEAD IN IRISH SKIRMISH

Free State Government Fears Complications

DUBLIN, Ireland, March 23.—The killing of two British soldiers on a Queenstown pier and the wounding of a score of others by a party of men in Free State uniforms has created a sensation in Ireland. The attackers driving a fast motor car, used a machine gun which caused havoc among the British troops massed on the pier.

The Cosgrave government boasted recently that there was not a British soldier within 20 miles of any of the twenty-six counties included in the Free State.

President Cosgrave immediately sent apologies to Ramsay MacDonald and promised to bring the responsible parties to justice. The Free State military headquarters in Cork City issued a statement declaring the shooting was done by the anti-treaty forces, who it is charged, have resumed gurellla warfare following the mutiny in the Free State army.

All the capitalist papers denounce the incident as an outrage and called upon the government to adopt whatever drastic measures may be deemed necessary.

Cosgrave's message to MacDonald reads: "I am profoundly shocked to hear that British troops have been fired on in Irish territory, and I hasten to assure you that this cowardly crime will arouse the same horror and detestation thruout Ireland that it caused myself and my colleagues."

The attacking party also fired several shots at a British cruiser which was in the harbor.

Teachers Seek Job Control.

NEW YORK, March 23.—The Teachers' union of New York has submitted to the board of education a proposal regarding organization of the new Thomas Jefferson high school. It is suggested that at least one-half of the teachers engaged at the new school should be members of the union. It would be the teachers' task to draw up a constitution for the school's government.

HAYS HELPS TEAR MASK OFF G. O. P.

Sinclair Oil Stock Helped Pay Campaign Deficit

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Mar. 23.—Repeated efforts to choke off the Teapot oil investigation are proving powerless in the face of a series of revelations that may prove more astounding than anything that has yet been disclosed by the Walsh committee.

A trail of political intrigue by big business interests involving the entire republican party as an organization has been uncovered.

Will Hays, now czar of the movie industry, and formerly national chairman of the Republican committee, was compelled to admit before the public lands commitee that Harry F. Sinclair, one of the big three in the oil scandal, gave $75,000 to the Republican campaign fund to help pay a deficit after the 1920 elections.

Hays denied that the gift was in stocks and insisted that it was in cash. This statement was elicited from Hays after considerable difficulty.

Further interest has been aroused in the investigation by the refusal of Harry F. Sinclair, upon the advice of his counsel, Martin Littleton, to take the stand and testify. Sinclair was to be questioned about the report that his contribution to the Republican campaign fund was given in the form of 75,000 shares of Sincail oil stock.

The Hays Confession.

When Hays was asked what Mr. Sinclair had to do with the campaign contributions of the Republican party he replied: "I assumed it was not the purpose of the commitee to go into campaign contributions. I thought you would think that was irrelevant. I am out of that now and not competent to testify about them. If you want o go into the campaign expenditures of both parties in 1920, I have some very definite ideas for you. I know a good deal about that which I will tell you, if you wish."

After a spirited discussion the committee voted 6-4 to compel Hays to answer this question.

Thereupon Mr. Hays admitted that the Sinclair gift was $75,000 and replying to Walsh's question whether he himself solicited any of the Sinclair money, declared: "I did at times suggest to some of my friends that they contribute. I may have suggested it to Mr. Sinclair. I asked Sinclair and others to contribute. Sinclair told me he would be responsible for $75,000. I think that money went as part payment of a note at the Empire Trust Company."

Blames Brother.

Hays went on to testify that the Liberty Bond transaction between Sinclair's secretary, G. D. Wahlberg, as told the senate committee when the latter appeared before it, and a man named Hays might have been a personal transaction with his brother, Hinkle Hays.

The committee will look further into this matter.

It was also disclosed that the firm of Hays and Hays with which he was associated had Sinclair as a client while Hays was in the cabinet.

Subpoena Upham.

Following up this lead, Senator Walsh announced that Fred Upham, now treasurer of the Republican national commitee, would be called to testify before the committee and bring all his books and financial records for examination and scrutinizing.

It is likely that Mr. Upham will be called today.

Sinclair Defies Committee.

With Sinclair the committee did not succeed in getting any light on the financing of the Republican party by oil interests.

After the committee voted to compel him to testify, Sinclair read a prepared statement refusing to answer questions.

"I shall reserve any evidence I may be able to give for those courts to which you and your colleagues

What Did the Chicago Tribune Get For Its School Land Lease?

THE DAILY WORKER demands that The Tribune tell the workers of Chicago what it got from the Union Trust Company for its 99-year lease on school property, at the corner of Madison and Dearborn Streets.

Washington is getting at the inside of the oil land leases. Chicago's workers must get the truth about the Tribune's school lease, to know how much the Tribune is profiting, in golden dollars, at the expense of Chicago's school children, housed in 50 firetraps, admitted by the fire department, jammed 50 and 55 into small rooms with a single teacher, crowded into unsanitary "tin can" portables.

The Chicago Tribune, in December, 1923, transferred its stolen school lease, gotten thru a shady deal, to the Union Trust Company.

The Chicago Tribune has not made public what money consideration was involved in the transfer. That the Tribune got a good hunk of coin out of it, there can be no doubt. The workers of Chicago ought to know how much.

CROOKED AS TEAPOT STEAL

When the Tribune's crookedness got a 99-year lease on Chicago's school land, it committed a crime just as grave as that involved in Sinclair's plundering of Teapot Dome. The oil reserves were set aside for the people of the nation. The school lands were set aside for the children of Chicago. Originally one square mile of land, in the center of what is now the "Loop" or downtown business district, was given over to the school children. If this square mile of land had been reserved for the children, the workers of Chicago would not now be called upon to pay one cent in taxation for the upkeep of the schools. The money to run the schools would come out of the high rentals of the tall skyscrapers. But this square mile of school land has been squandered, in bargain counter sales or cheap leases, and the Chicago Tribune has been in on the ground floor of the steal.

STOLE ONE OF BUSIEST CORNERS

It got its 99-year lease on the property, just one block from State and Madison Streets, the busiest corner in the world, in 1880. It, therefore, runs until 1980, fifty-six years more.

It was in 1895 that the attorney of the Chicago Tribune, who was also president of the Chicago School Board, secured the wiping out of the 10-year revaluation clause in the lease, so that property values in Chicago's business district might rise and rise, but the Tribune school lease never brings an additional cent for the children.

Now the Tribune has moved to the North Side, into a building of its own, and it doesn't need its old location. So it has gone to the Union Trust Company, to whom the children of Chicago will continue to pay tribute, thru their inability to secure the education to which they are entitled.

We ask the Chicago Tribune, "How much did you get for this valuable lease? How much did the Union Trust Company pay you? How did you divide the swag? The workers of the city of Chicago want to know."

McCORMICK, ONE OF THE THIEVES

One of the beneficiaries of the millions in profits earned each year by the Chicago Tribune is United States Senator Medill McCormick. How much is he getting out of this debauchery of Chicago's school lands?

If United States Senator McCormick will profit by the plundering of a school land lease in Chicago, he will support Doheny, Sinclair, Daugherty and the rest of the business and political bandits in Washington, D. C., in robbing the nation's oil reserves and its other natural resources.

We ask United States Senator McCormick, "How much are you profiting by the transfer of this school land lease from the Chicago Tribune to the Union Trust Company? You are up for re-election and the workers of Chicago want to know. And they are going to find out."

"PEOPLE IN GLASS HOUSES."

The Chicago Tribune, that robs Chicago's school children, cannot be expected to call for the impeachment of Coolidge, the resignation of Daugherty, and the ousting of Burns.

It cannot be expected to join in demanding that all graft and corruption in high places be exposed to the public gaze.

It cannot do this because it benefits itself from this same form of corruption. The DAILY WORKER demands that the workers of Chicago be told how much The Tribune received from the Union Trust Company for its ill-gotten 99-year school land lease.

PICKET FREED BY JURY; EXPECT 141 MORE ACQUITTALS

Boston Shoe Strikers Win Court Victory

BROCKTON, Mass., March 23.—An instructed verdict of not guilty was rendered by the jury in the case of Thomas J. Moore, Brockton, who was arrested as a loiterer during the shoe strike here last summer. It was the first of the so-called strike cases and the decision should affect 141 other cases to be tried for the same offense. If conviction should follow it will be possible to arrest and convict all pickets in the vicinity of the struck plant as loiterers.

The defense argued that a person who moves to and fro cannot be convicted of loitering, especially if at the time of arrest he is engaged in picketing a factory, and continues to walk up and down covering approximately 100 yards before turning.

District Attorney Wilbar, in his argument said, "The purpose of the defendant was to picket the factory. He replied to the officer when accosted, 'I'm here for my health.' Evidence shows there were 200 or more pickets about. His presence did tend toward obstructing free passage."

The court instructed the jury to bring in a verdict of not guilty. This does not repay the damage done the shoe workers in this district. But it establishes a precedent that will perhaps prevent a repetition of such arrests.

LONDON WALKS AS TRAM AND BUSMEN STRIKE

Subway Labor Threatens Sympathy Walkout

LONDON, March 23.—Threats of a sympathetic strike of subway employes today, brought London face to face with the biggest paralysis of its rapid transit facilities in its history. Forty thousand tram and bus workers have quit work forcing the entire city traffic on the subways which are breaking down under the strain. Only a few "private" busses can be seen on the streets.

Thousands of people were late for work. All kinds of conveyances were called into action to take care of the 4,000,000 persons who are daily transported on the trams and busses.

The strikers are demanding a wage increase of about $1.95 a week.

The government immediately set up a court of inquiry but the strikers announced that they would refuse to recognize its decisions as binding having an experience in another strike which cured them of any faith in the alleged impartiality of such capitalist instruments.

The Ramsay MacDonald government purposes to show the capitalist parties something about conciliating the classes without having to resort to the extremity of wearing black shirts ala Mussolini. This might work very well if they had only the capitalists to consider but the British workers, tho given a bad reputation by their friends for a subservience which is justified by the facts, are not inclined to stand for any more nonsense from King's minister Ramsay MacDonald than they would from a similar flunkey representing British imperialism thru either the Tory or Liberal parties.

The partial victory won by the dockers has encouraged the labor movement of England to try to recoup its losses of the past two years.

Bronx Entertainment April 5.

NEW YORK, March 21.—Saturday evening, April 5, will find the workers of the Bronx enjoying themselves at the annual entertainment and dance arranged by the Bronx English Branch of the Workers Party at Workers Hall, 1347 Boston Road. Many novel features are being arranged and a splendid orchestra under the direction of Fred Lilienstein will furnish the music. Admission will be only 35 cents.

Women's Night Work Ban Sustained.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—In an opinion by Justice Sutherland, the U. S. supreme court sustains the New York statute prohibiting employment of women in restaurants in cities of the first and second class, between 10 at night and 6 in the morning. The law was contested by Joseph Radico, a restaurant proprietor in Buffalo.

Lawyers Quit Their Union.

ST. LOUIS, March 23.—The Missouri Bar Association has dwindled in membership until the present roll is 550, it has become known. About 2000 members have been suspended from this lawyers' union for nonpayment of $10 dues. A cut to $5 has been suggested. There are nearly 500 alwyers in the state.

Talk About June 17th.

NEW YORK, March 23.—The New York Farmer-Labor party will hold a conference April 2, to discuss policy and its attitude toward the national Farmer-Labor convention June 17, in St. Paul.

28 National Conventions of American Labor Over 40 Years Call on Workers to Fight Injunctions

The DAILY WORKER is today publishing extracts from the declarations of 23 different conventions of the American Federation of Labor, over a period of 40 years, declaring relentless war on the injunction power of the courts, declaring for the right to strike, and to picket.

These are the official declarations of attitude of the American Federation of Labor on injunctions from 1885 down to the present time. These are the statements written down on paper after thoro deliberation.

The Chicago Labor Movement is called upon to carry out these declarations in the strike of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union now being waged in this city. The workers of Chicago are called upon to carry htose resolutions into action.

Labor Heads Meet Today.

"The Committee of 15," appointed by President John Fitzpatrick, of the Chicago Federation of Labor, has not taken the lead in carrying these declarations into action. Instead it has called in the "Committee of Injunctions" of the Chicago Federation of Labor appointed after a meeting with President Samuel Gompers, of the A. F. of L. in this city. These two committees are scheduled to meet jointly today. The DAILY WORKER hopes this joint committee will take some action to carry out the declarations of the organization of which they are official heads. For their information, for the information of the striking garment workers, for the information of the whole labor movement, any section of which may be engaged in a strike and facing injunctions on the morrow, we publish the official stand of the American Federation of Labor, with year and city in which the respective A. F. of L. conventions were held, as follows:

Here Is Labor's Stand.

1885, Washington, D. C.—Declared a Washington police judge should be removed from office for violent language toward labor unions in a suit against the right of unions to employ pickets during a strike.

1891, Birmingham, Ala.—Condemned decision of a justice of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court which said: "Inasmuch as the wage-workers do not own the product they can not have a label certifying the character of the labor employed in its production." Pledged aid to printers in testing constitutionality of Pennsylvania conspiratory laws.

1892, Philadelphia, Pa.—These charges were made: A judge became virtually the attorney for a giant corporation and a common prosecutor of striking workmen; he declared unions tyrannies, while the treasonable acts of the Carnegie Corporation in making war on the state was justifiable. Another judge said unions were rapidly getting under control of men unacquainted with our tongue and antagonistic to our institutions. Child labor laws have been treated with ocntempt by the minor judiciary. "It is said 'the blood of martyrs was the seed of the church.'" It is possible that thru the blood of the men who died on the Monongahela in July may come a realization of the true condition of affairs, and that the legislation of the future will be in favor of the masses rather than for the aggrandizement of the few. The true status of labor conditions in Pennsylvania were the comparative lack of organization and that wage earners had been owing allegiance to political parties first and to themselves as a class last. If the organized workmen were to hold in check the political powers of the state and make their rule "workers first, party last," then the legislature would make laws and judges construe them in the interest of the workingmen.

Reckless Disregard of Constitution.

1893, Chicago, Ill.—These decisions, tho based on the responsibilities imposed upon the common carrier, indicates a reckless disregard for the spirit and intent of the American Constitution, and undoubtedly an invasion of the laborers' rights to effectively protest against irksome conditions while they in no wise protect him against discharge for any whimsical reason advanced by the corporation.

1894, Denver, Colo.—Protested against unjust decrees of Massachusetts courts in behalf of capitalist enemies of labor.

1896, Cincinati, Ohio.—Demanded amendments to the U. S. Constitution depriving judges of the power to set aside laws enacted by Congress, "as we believe the proper function of courts is to expound and administer law but not to make it."

1897, Nashville, Tenn.— . . . We not only demand the right of trial by jury for any offense charged, but also that we, as workers and citizens, shall not be restrained in the exercise of our lawful and natural rights. Courts do not and can not issue injunctions restraining persons from committing crimes or misdemeanors and should not when there is another complete remedy at law. The police power is presumed to be a preventative, and, when that is insufficient, the arraignment at the bar of justice to answer for offenses is the means by which the state seeks its safety and the maintenance of its dignity. It is but just that the workers insist upon being regarded as equals before the law, and that in their activity to prevent infringement upon their rights, and their hopes and struggles to maintain their manhood, extra-judicial proceedings should not lie against them as is now the case by the use, or, more properly stated, abuse, of the powers of the courts in the issuance of writs of injunction. . . . An extraordinary feature of this industrial struggle is the use made of the writs of injunction. While writs of injunction have a legitimate and proper function we hold that when used to prevent free speech or public assemblage to discuss grievances, be they political or industrial, and to compel men to continue to labor for private individuals against their will they amount to judicial usurpation and are a flagrant infringement of the rights of the citizen, are wholly un-American and destructive to popular government. Any judge who will use his sacred positon for such purposes should be promptly impeached and removed from office.

1898, Kansas City, Mo.—We insist that the workers have the right to quit their employment, either singly or in unison, whenever the conditions of employment become irksome, or a change or improvement is desired; that when any representative of the workers engaged in a contest is directed by them to perform any duty for the furtherance of the purpose for which the cessation of work was inaugurated that he shall have the right to perform that duty without judicial interference by injunction.

Dockets Filled With Indictments.

1899, Detroit, Mich.—Instructed president to seek legislation curbing the power of courts in issuing injunctions in labor disputes.

1900, Louisville, Ky.— . . . From the time of the first organization of labor, the courts have stigmatized the trade-unions as combinations in restraint of trade, and the dockets are filled with indictments, and the jails filled with men charged with conspiracy because they were members of trade-unions: this too, notwithstanding the fact that the trade-unions are the most beneficient organizations the world has ever witnessed to promote the welfare of all the people.

1901, Scranton, Pa— . . . During th year several of the courts have still further extended the scope of injunctions, even going so far as to restrain workmen from "persuading" even by peaceable means, other workmen from taking employment in establishments in which a strike prevails. When the fact is borne in mind that there is neither constitutional nor statutory law under our federal or state governments by which these injunctions are warranted, that they constitute an invasion by the judiciary of the legislative functions of the Congress and the legislatures, we are all the more reminded of the warning of the founders of our Republic that, unless the people are alert at all times and shall safeguard themselves, the judiciary will silently but steadily filch from us the rights we have acquired and which we assumed to be constitutionally guaranteed. Against this specious legislation we cannot be too persistent in warning our members.

Cut Off Peaceful Evolution.

1902, New Orleans, La.—If thru the use of the equity power, vested in the courts, our rights as workers to quit at will, and to induce others to quit with us, can be taken away, then the peaceable evolution toward industrial democracy is cut off, and the workers will be compelled to look to more revolutionary measures for redress of existing grievances, and the obtaining of better conditions in the future. If we permitted to withdraw our labor in unison from any establishment where we have grievances to be redressed, then the development may go on the lines of the development in England towards political democracy, thru parliamentary control over taxation and appropriation. If it is to be taken away, then we might as well now realize that peaceable development will stop.

1903 to 1908—American Federation of Labor conventions reaffirmed demand for anti-injunction legislation.

1908, Denver, Colo.—We, therefore, declare that we will exercise all the rights and privileges guaranteed us by the Constitution and laws of our country, and insist it is our duty to defend ourselves at all hazards, and we declare that such be our action, taking whatever results may come. We further declare that when cited to show cause, why such injunctions should not be issued, we should make no defense which would entail any considerable cost, and when cited for contempt the proper policy is to personally, as best we can, defend our rights before the courts, taking whatever consequences may ensue.

1909, Toronto, Ont., Canada.—Modern American courts assume the right to issue injunctions interfering with the personal rights of man in exercising free speech, free press, peaceable assemblage, and in their personal relationship with each other. The rights of free speech, free press and peaceable assemblage are specifically guaranteed by the Constitution. They are the fundamental safeguards of a free people which neither courts, kings nor cajolery should be permitted to destroy.

Used Only Against Workers.

1911, Atlanta, Ga.—Injunctions as issued against workmen are never used or issued against any other citizen of our country. It is an attempt to deprive citizens of our country, when these citizens are workmen, of the right of trial by jury. It is an effort to fasten an offense on them when they are not even charged with doing things in violation of any law of state or nation. We protest against the discrimination of the courts against the laboring men of our country which deprives them of their constitutional guarantee of equality before the law.

1912, Rochester, N. Y.—Convention reaffirmed its attitude on injunctions.

1915, San Francisco, Calif.—The Model Antitrust Limitation Injunction law sent to all state and city federations with recommendations that efforts be made for its enactment.

1916, Baltimore, Md.—We recommend that any injunctions dealing with the relationship of employer and employee, and based upon the dictum, "Labor Is Property," be wholly and absolutely treated as usurpation and disregarded let the consequences be what they may. Such a decision as that rendered by the Supreme Court of Massachusetts has its roots in class interests; it is usurpation and tyranny. Freedom came to man because he believed that resistance to tyranny is obedience to God; as it came so it must be maintained. Kings could be and were disobeyed, and sometimes deposed. In cases of this kind judges must be disobeyed, and should be impeached.

Stand Is Re-affirmed.

1917, Buffalo, N. Y.—Convention reaffirmed its stand against injunctions.

1922, Cincinnati, Ohio—In cases dealing with disputes between business men and organizations of labor, the courts clearly establish the fact that in similar cases there is one rule for workers and another rule for employers. A case in point is that involving boycott by a Citizens' Alliance of St.Paul, Minn., of the firm of Delaney Brothers, plumbers, because Delaney Brothers refused to put in their window an "open shop" card. Delaney Brothers applied for an injunction to protect them from the boycott instituted by the Citizens' Alliance, which included practically all of the business men, manufacturers and bankers' associations of St. Paul. The court refused to protect Delaney Brothers from the boycott and thus sustained the right of business organizations to use the boycott.

1923, Portland, Ore—The modern and extensive use of the writ of injunction as used in the labor disputes is revolutionary and destructive. The injunction writ was designed when popular government was unknown and at a time it was difficult to enact such laws as would permit a speedy and adequate adjustment of controversies subject to legal determination. . . . Indicative and demonstrative of the unwarrantable use of the injunction writ in labor disputes is the fact that in England, from whence are imported this extra legal devise, the equity power is limited to property and then only where there is no remedy at law. In England the injunction writ is not permissible in labor disputes. Our courts have vested themselves with the most oppressive and repressive legal weapon ever devised and designed to hold in subjection those who must earn their way thru life by the sweat of toil and under the domination of a "master class."

Number of Writs Issued Increase.

These injunction writs in labor disputes have been issued in ever greater and greater numbers, and each succeeding injunction goes further in its repressive features than the one before. Indeed, this special form of class legislation by judicial decree is assuming an enormous proportion and the wage earners are compelled to suffer under a set of class laws which apply to no other group within our government.

It is inconceiveable that this form of government by injunction can long prevail without serious reckoning. As an American people we have escaped government by the king. If we are to preserve this "government of the people, by the people, and for the people" then any and all usurpations by the judiciary must be as sternly resisted as usurpations by any king or other form of executive.

have deliberately referrel all questions of which you had any jurisdiction and shall respectfully decline to answer any questions propounded by your committee."

Committee to Act.

The committee has decided to take measures to compel Sinclair to testify. He will be certified for contempt for his refusal to talk. The matter will be held off until oil prosecutors Pomerene and Roberts, return from the coast to Washington.

There are two courses of procedure open to the committee. Contempt proceedings may be conducted before the senate as a whole. The other method that the committee may employ is to certify the case to the district attorney of the District of Columbia.

The likelihood is that the senate as a whole will be chosen to air these charges and try Sinclair. This course will afford the democrats a fine opportunity to make considerable political capital out of the oil scandal. Besides, the latter method is frowned upon by some members of the committee because the local district attorney is a Coolidge appointee who might be under the influence of "Ned" McLean, who is the real political boss of the District of Columbia as was shown by the Coolidge telegrams to him regarding certain district appointments.

Sinclair Admits Loan.

After the committee adjourned its hearings Saturday Sinclair broke his silence and admitted for the first time that he had loaned $25,000 in bonds to ex-Secretary of Interior Albert B. Fall.

The loan was made to Fall just before he sailed for Russia as an employee of Sinclair in an effort to get an oil concession there. An additional sum of $10,000 was allowed Fall for his expenses.

The oil magnate declared he had paid $1,000,000 to Fred G. Bonfils of Denver for alleged claim to Teapot Dome "in good faith." He said if there had been any fraudulent representations or blackmail he would seek redress in the courts.

Sinclair also denied that he had entered into any negotiations with Fall for the lease of Teapot Dome as early as March, 1921, the month Fall took office.

Sinclair bitterly assailed the Roosevelt family, young Archie and his brother, Theodore. He said he had hired Archie and treated him kindly "but he never could and never would make good.'

Archie's salary was raised from $5,000 to $15,000 in a short time, Sinclair said.

Sinclair declared Archie was an "attempted assassin of my character." Sinclair also charged "it is easy to be seen that G. D. Wahlberg was framed by the Roosevelts." Wahlberg testified he had become suspicious of Sinclair and it was this testimony which first led to unearthing the oil scandal. Wahlberg was a former private secretary to Sinclair.

Ach Himmel!

SAN FRANCISCO, March 23.—The Actors' Equity Association won a victory here when Superior Judge Graham ordered Nat Goldstein, local theatrical producer, to pay to the Equity $3.900, representing salaries due to members of the Oh, Boy! company, organized here and stranded in New York eight years ago.

20 Hurt In Wreck.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 21.—Twenty persons were slightly injured today when the Rock Island Hot Springs Limited was derailed at Cicalla, Arkansas. The engine, baggage car, a coach and a diner were wrecked. The locomotive dived into a ditch.

PRAGUE, Czechslovakia, March 23.—The young republic of Czechoslovakia finds that it can afford to spend 3½ per cent of its national budget on education. But for the army it makes 13 per cent available.

3 COMMITTEES ACTING TODAY ON INJUNCTION AND POLICE BRUTALITY

The following events affecting the garment workers' strike will take place today:

1. A sub-committee of the "Committee of 15" will see Mayor Dever this morning at 11:00 to report to him on police brutality and demand immediate action looking to the suppression of such brutality.

2. The "Committee of 15" and the injunction committee of the Chicago Federation of Labor will hold a joint meeting to outline a policy toward the garment strike and the injunction issued by Dennie Sullivan. Mass picketing and the report of the committee which visited Mayor Dever will also be considered.

3. The strikers will picket the shops, re-enforced by the members of the University of Chicago Liberal Club.

4. More than thirty strikers who were arrested Saturday for picketing will be arraigned in S. Clark St. police court. Two members of the U. of C. Liberal Club will also be arraigned.

5. The Citizens Committee headed by Father Seidenberg will probably make a public declaration during the afternoon on their work which has consisted in an effort to get stand pat employers to consent to collective bargaining and to enforce the right of the strikers to walk the streets peacefully without interference by the police.

The DAILY WORKER will have the news tomorrow: Read the DAILY WORKER for all the labor news.

The World Flight.

SEATTLE, Wash., March 23.—American air pilots here on the trip around-the-world worked on their airplanes today in order to prepare for the flight to Alaska and the orient. Major F. L. Martin, commanding the squadron, was at the hangars before dawn directing the mechanicians in transfering the planes into seaplanes for the overwater flights.

union reported to the sub-committee which will see Dever is the one committeed on Olga Levin by Sam Golden with the assistance of police officer 3401. Miss Levin was in front of 325 W. Adams St. when a taxi drove up and officer 3401 and Sam Golden got out of it. Miss Levin was surprised at seeing Golden who was formerly a member of the union going to scab and called to him. Golden shouted at her, "Leave me alone you dirty son of a bitch." Miss Levin asked the police officer if he was going to permit Golden to use such language to her and the officer replied by giving her a shove.

Struck and Kicked Girl.

Miss Levin landed in the arms of Golden and he began to beat her about the head. He knocked her glasses to the ground. He struck and kicked her. The brave copper finally called to Golden to leave Miss Levin alone when a crowd began to collect. The officer then escorted Golden into the hallway of 325 W. Adams St.

There were several witnesses to this beating and the union has offered to produce them if the committee wants to have them accompany them to visit the mayor.

Most of the members of the University of Chicago Liberal club, who will be on the picket line this morning got their first strike experience Saturday.

Defy Sergeant and Injunction.

Judge Dennie Sullivan's injunction proved unable to keep these determined young people off the streets in the Loop districts. Arthur Weiss found that out. Sergeant Gentile ordered the students to keep away from the pavement in front of the Weiss shop on W. Adams St., or they would be arrested. They answered by forming a squad and walking back and forth more than 20 times. Gentile didn't attempt to arrest any of them.

Before the morning was over two of the students were arrested—along with 34 strikers. They were Eugene and David Siskind, both members of the University Liberal club. David Siskind graduated from the University of Chicago School of Medicine, Friday, and celebrated by going on the picket line Saturday.

Back on Picket Line.

They will both be arraigned on charges of disorderly conduct in the S. Clark St. police court this morning. They have both indicated that as soon as they are released they will go back to the picket line with the other members of the Liberal club.

One of the girl members of the club said to a striker picket: "We have learned more about industrial disputes here on the picket line this morning than we could have learned in a month in a class room."

Thirty-four strikers will be arraigned at the same time the Liberal club boys are. This is the record half day.

They are: Bessie Katz, Olga Galish, Morris Sher, Vera Dubrow, Esther Freeman, Elianor Sadlowska, Fannie Yannes, May Stanker, Vivtor Cisslakieviecz, Anna Jaffe, Rora Rubin, Versie Rhode, Morris Keavetz, Yetta Hornstein, Julia Broza, Martha Rybricka, Sarah Shapiro, Yetta Kessler, Elianor Smahl, Anna Draznin, Racheal Kaar, Marie Siegel, Katherine Toonscevich, Lillian Dietman, Sylvia Sunshine, Mary Goldberg and Caroline Weglski.

The Citizens committee which was appointed by the Commissioner of Public Welfare Mary McDowell and which is headed by Father Fredric Seidenberg met Saturday and announced that they had received no replies to the letter which they sent to the dress manufacturers.

Strike Statement Today.

They will make a public statement to the newspapers this afternoon. The statement is expected to enlist public opinion in behalf of the right of strikers to walk the city streets and to urge employers to yield to collective bargaining.

Two more workers were yanked into Judge Sullivan's court for contempt Saturday. David Kruse was arrested on an attachment Friday night and taken to the country jail where he spent the night. He and Fannie Rosen were released on their own bonds till Tuesday when their cases were set to be heard.

DEMAND HARRY DAUGHERTY GET OUT IS GROWIN

Charge Coolidge Fear To Sign Ouster

WASHINGTON, March 23.—Th demand that President Calvin Coo idge immediately suspends Harry M Daugherty is expected to becom irresistible this week after the sen sational disclosures made last Satur day by Roxie Stinson, ex-wife of Je Smith, suicide and close friend of th Harding family.

Not alone is Harry M. Daugherty enmeshed in the network of graf from which it is impossible for hi to extricate himself, but no less crime than the death of his forme boon companion and partner in crim is laid indirectly at the door of th attorney general.

Vanderlip Aids Investigation.

With Frank A. Vanderlip, millionaire banker, placing his money at th disposal of the Wheeler committee investigating the criminal acts of th union-wrecking Daugherty, in orde to defeat the efforts of the Department of Justice to thwart the investigation this week is expected to unearth evidence that will compel Calvin Coolidge to make a last desperat effort to save something from th political wreckage and dump Daugherty overboard.

That this will mean trouble fo Coolidge nobody knows better tha the New England Puritan, but "beggars can't be choosers" and confronted with a choice of two evil Coolidge must choose the lesser.

Daugherty has already threatened the president with swift politica punishment should he listen to the advice of his backers and show the D. of J. head.

It is even said that the Ohio grafter shook his fist in the president's face and thumping the table shouted to the cowering figure of "Silent" Calvin that he would break him politically the moment he put his pen to the letter suspending him from his office.

The president may be a brave man when he defied the Boston police who were deserted by Samuel Gompers but face to face with the towering figure of Daugherty, he was a mild man and threw up the sponge.

Col. Thomas Felder is expected to take the stand early this week. Felder is a close personal friend of the attorney general and had the endorsement of William J. Flynn, former head of the bureau of investigation of the Department of Justice and as unscrupulous a confidence man as ever stepped in shoe leather.

The high spots in last Saturday's testimony were:

1. The charge made by Roxie Stinson, that after a visit of Harry M. Daugherty to the notorious "shack" outside Washington Courthouse during which the attorney general mercilessly flayed Jess Smith for the mess into which they got themselves, Smith went to a hardware store and bought a revolver with which he shot himself.

2. The charge made by the same witness, that for six months before his death Jess Smith lived in mortal dread of assassination at the hands of agents of the attorney general. He never cared to go out after dark and took the middle of the road in the daytime fearing an assassin's dagger or bullet from some door or alleyway.

3. The framing of Roxie Stinson by agents of the attorney general in the Hollenden Hotel, Cleveland. A man named Fink reserved a room for her there under a fictitious name and afterwards threatened her with arrest and exposure unless she made a statement that she would not reveal her knowledge of Daugherty's criminal acts.

4. That Harry Daugherty and Jess Smith had many secret conferences with a German agent in 1921 who was here over the American Metals Case.

5. The tilt between Senator Wheeler and Daugherty's defense over the continued retention of the attorney general by the president who was using the powers of his giant machine to block every effort of the committee to reach the truth and even to intimidate witnesses.

Mrs. Stinson charged that a newspaper man offered her $1,000 for a lead on the attorney general which she turned down. William A. Orr, former secretary of ex-Governor Whitman of New York, will be recalled to the stand to give testimony regarding money paid by him in liquor deals to Howard Mannington, Daugherty's friend who lived in the "little house on K street."

Felder will be questioned regarding Goroni's charges that the lawyer offered him $250,000 for permission to turn over 7,100 cases of Scotch to bootleggers.

Investigators for the Wheeler committee learned that securities worth in the vicinity of $300,000 were found in Jess Smith's safety deposit box at Mal Daugherty's bank at Washington Courthouse when it was opened and that securities worth $89,000 had been discovered in a box at the Riggs National Bank here.

Talk About It Anyway.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—Thru the British embassy and the state department, the children's bureau has been invited to take part in the third English-speaking infant welfare conference in London next July under the auspices of the National League for Health, Maternity and Child Welfare.

MELLON GRAFT PROBED BEHIND CLOSED DOORS

Tried to Hide Facts of Big Tax Frauds

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, Mar. 23.—When the senate finance committee, led by Senator Smoot, voted to hear Secretary of the Treasury Mellon behind locked doors, it raised a new storm of protest at the Capitol and put a fighting edge on the investigation of the internal revenue bureau in Mellon's office by Senator Couzens' special committee.

Benjamin C. Marsh, executive secretary of the People's Reconstruction League, immediately issued a denunciation of this star chamber trick. He called atention to the fact that a hearing on the Mellon tax bill had been refused him by the committee and he suggested that Smoot and Mellon did not want the country to know the truth about the corporation profits and tax evasions.

Dodge Taxes on Billions.

"The profiteering corporations whose gross income in 1921 was $91,250,000,000, were allowed to deduct $90,791,000,000 as expenses to escape taxes," said Marsh. "Twenty-four and a half billion of this is listed at 'miscellaneous expense.' Over half of the corporations reported no net income. The corporations kind enough to report some net income gave the totals for 1921 as $4,336,047,813, but the total tax they paid was only $701.573,432—or 16.18 per cent of the net income they were not able to conceal."

Big Business is Lost.

"The net income of the U. S. Steel corporation in 1921 was $36,617,000, and in 1923 was $108,729,000; the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, $10,833,000 in 1921, and $14,374,000 in 1923; the United Fruit Company, $16,976,000 in 1921 and $23,097,000 in 1923; of the Cuba Cane Sugar Corporation, $1,007,000 in 1821 and $6,477,000 in 1923. These are typical excess profits which Secretary Mellon and Chairman Smoot don't want to tax. An expensive campaign is at hand—and the oil interests have been to thoroly exposed."

Ebert, Socialist Head of Germany, Is Bum Jockey

(By The Federated Press)

BERLIN, March 23.—Fritz Ebert, president of the German republic and still classed as a socialist tho his union (the saddle makers) has expelled him from membership and tho his own district in the socialist party has demanded his expulsion from the party, more and more adopts the mannerisms and methods of the old regime.

The latest story on this point is the following: Every morning Fritz Ebert goes out riding for an hour or two. That is, he is still in the experimental stage. He has not yet brought himself to review the troops from a high steed, but it is freely predicted that he will soon emulate the example of William II in this respect, and the companies of national guardsmen are speculating on who will be the first to see Fritz Ebert accept the military honors as he is perched on a more or less fiery charger.

Ebert seems to regard his riding lessons as something of a secret, for he takes his auto out to some secluded spot in the Grunewald, on the western outskirts of Berlin, and only there does he leave the auto and mount the horse.

California State Supreme Court Reduces I. W. W. Bail

(By The Federated Press)

SACRAMENTO, Calif., March 23.—The California state supreme court has reduced from $250 to $100 the bail of Robert Wood, who is appealing against sentence under Busick anti-I. W. W. injunction. L. J. Morris, of Los Angeles, is also an appellant. These are test cases designed to determine the validity of the injunction; which is a direct blow at the right of labor to organize. Judge C. O. Busick, its author, has frequently been accused of prejudice in criminal syndicalism cases, and of being openly an enemy of the radical workers.

Can't Oust "The League."

VIENNA, March 23.—The league of nation's commissioner to Austria, Zimmermann, in disregard of the demand for his retirement and the removal of league control, announces his intention of remaining at his dictatorial post until the league council terminates his work.

Fight On Segregation, Not Back to Africa Movement, Is Negroes' Hope, Says Housing Investigator

Negroes have been forced since the war to realize that what they must have in order to solve the problems of their Race is not more segregation, or colonization, but absolute abolition of segregated districts.

Back to Africa movements, and programs for the complete withdrawal of the Negro from participation in white affairs have been found to be based on mere sentiment—to be cowardly, unethical, and impossible of fulfillment.

Ever since the civil war, when the abolition of slavery released the Negro from his bondage to the soil, there has been a greater migration from the rural to city life corresponding to the lesser migration of the white farmers away from the land into industry. The movement of the Negro into the large cities has now reached huge proportions. Acording to U. S. Department of Labor figures, 476,000 Negroes migrated from the South to the Northern cities in 1923.

Segregation Not Legal.

We have already seen, from our study of Chicago's South Side, what miserable surroundings greet the Southern Negro on his arrival in his new Northern home. In a legal sense, there is no segregation of the Negro in the United States. The United States Supreme Court in 1917 handed down a decision voiding existing state and city segregation laws. "They prevent the occupancy of a lot by a person of color in a city block where the greater number of residences are ocupied by white persons. Where such a majority exists colored persons are excluded. This interdiction is based wholly upon color, simply that and nothing more."

"We think this attempt to prevent the alienation of the property in question to a person of color is not legitimate," concludes the decision, "and is in direct violation of the 14th amendment to the federal constitution. The ordinance, therefore, cannot stand."

Nevertheless, it is a well known fact that in every city, Chicago included, incoming Negroes are expected to take up their residences in more or less definitely prescribed areas. The white residents resist prsistently the attempts of the fast growing Negro ghetto to spread out into the outlying districts.

Expansion Necessary.

It is extremely necessary for the colored population to expand. The segregation in Chicago's South Side for instance, has lumped together, not only all types and classes of Negroes, but as is usually the case, the whites have selected the Negro quarter as the "Red light district." Hence we find white prostitutes rooming in the same houses with cultured and highly respected colored families. The Negro youth, thirsting for education, is forced to live in suroundings near gambling halls, cheap cabarets, and dens ot crime. It is the desire of the Negro families to get out of these squalid surroundings into better neighborboods, that leads to expansion of the Negro districts, and consequent friction with the surrounding whites.

"It is not pleasant for colored people to break into a new neighborhood," says Mary White Ovington. "If they are not bombed, they are often insulted and subjected to much petty attack. They are also subjected to the sharpest of sharp real estate practices, always being charged more rent than the whites have to pay, which makes the Negro skeptical regarding loss in real estate values which they so frequently hear."

The only expansion of the colored districts freely allowed is into surrounding neighborhoods which the whites have already and are abandoning, and these homes are taken up at the cost of much higher rents than the whites have been paying.

Death Rate Higher.

The evil results of consequent pressing together of the Negro are freely admitted. It has been shown that the Negro residences are the oldest and most dilapidated in the city.

Summing up the state of Negro dwellings, a minister speaking before a recent colored congress tells us, "There are three types of Negro structures, all of which are not adapted to 20th century civilization. All ideals of comfort, progress and safety are excluded before the Negro family enters.

"These types are the little separate shacks built of the cheapest material and chosen because of the negro'e inability to live elsewhere, old buildings abandoned by whites, the negroes getting little or no repairs or improvements, and overcrowded tenement houses."

The death rate from tuberculosis for whites is 16 to every ten thousand of population, as compared to 58 for every ten thousand among the Negroes. This is caused, according to Dr. Henry Barton Jacobs, of Baltimore, and authority on the subject of tuberculosis, by the fact that Negroes live in sections, "where the streets are narrowest and least cleaned."

In Cincinnati, the death rate from tuberculosis is 675 for Negroes compared to 224 among whites. This high Negro death rate is said to be caused by "overcrowding of the Negro migrants pouring into tenements in Northern cities, and filling them from cellar to garret.

Negro Ghettos Permanent.

The flocking of the Southern Negro farmers to Northern cities is a steady and permanent movement. In 1880 29.5 per cent of the Negro population was urban, while in 1910 Negroes in urban centers had increased to 46.3 of the total Negro population of this country. These facts warrant the conclusion that the Negroes, along with the whites, affected by causes which will undoubtedly operate for an indefinite time, will continue to come to towns in large numbers, and many will stay. We shall, therefore, continue to have a large permanent city Negro population.

It is almost unbelievable in view of the evident evils of overcrowding, high rents, antagonism, and bad environment which results from segregation, that some Negroes themselves favor this policy of segregation. At many confeernces in the past strange as it may seem, the prominent Negroes have spoken in favor of the policy of segregation, on the ground that it concentrated the power of the Negroes, making them more independent of the whites.

The Dream of Segregation.

Prominent Negroes have discussed the possibility of benefiting their Race thru segregation for many years. Some years ago Dean Miller Kelly made a guarded plea for segregation, saying, "The Negro Race in this country is segregated. We must face the facts. The real problem is not so much a political one.

"There must be found some influence which will serve to help things as we find them—the germ of self sufficiecny is the most hopeful indication of the settlement. All they need is the proper stimulus in the course of time, which will develop an independent territory."

Answering Dean Miller's statement, Rev. Oscar Scott declared, "We ought to conclude that it is absolutely a "pipe-dream" to think of getting the Negro into any state or territory and there expect him to be able to enjoy all the rights of citizenship in America."

More and more the Negroes have come to realize that Garveyism and other forms of segregation are impossible and ineffectual attempts to dodge the struggle for Race equality. The Negro workers are coming around to the viewpoint of the Workers Party on this matter—that to advocate segregation is to run away from the race question instead of solving it. The Workers Party, in their resolution on the Negro question says, "The Workers Party will oppose among the Negroes all movements looking to the surrender of the Negroes' rights in this country such as the "Back to Africa Movement," which is only an evasion of the real struggle and an excuse to surrender the Negroes' rights in their native land—America. The United States is the home of the Amerian Negro, and the Workers Party champions his full, free and equal partnership with his white brothers in the future society."

Tomorrow we will tell what place the migrating Negro has found in the industrial system of the North, and why it is impossible for him to divorce himself from the white race thru segregation.

Davis' Finger-printing Plan Given Another Flaying in Chicago

Resolutions protesting against the fingerprinting and registration of foreign born workers, to be sent to the proper senators and representatives, were unanimously passed yesterday, at a meeting of the Society for the Protection of Foreign Born Workers, in Croatian Hall, 18th and Racine.

After William F. Dunne, of the DAILY WORKER had spoken, a collection of over fifty dollars was taken for the fight against discrimination against the foreign born workers. Over 500 attended the meeting, which was organized by the South Slavic branch of the Workers Party.

Anton Gazich, Carl Milalachky and John Vreanac also spoke in defense of the foreign born workers.

Polish Socialist Government Wages War on Unionists

(By The Federated Press)

WARSAW, March 23.—The Polish government has declared war to the knife upon the trade unions and the political organizations of the workers. Not a day now passes without the arrests of Communists, socialists and trade union officials. On the night of Feb. 22, 30 working class leaders were arrested and put in jail.

Negro Segregationists Run Away From the Race Problem

SEGREGATION is the crux of the bad housing situation among the Negroes. Formerly the Negroes were divided on the subject of segregation—some prominent members of the Race claiming that segregation would eventually result in the setting up of independent territories for the Negroes. But now they realize that America is the home of the American Negro, and that it is impossible to solve the race question by running away from it. Segregation, the Negroes now realize, has brought an increased death rate, a dumping of red light districts and dens of crime upon the Negro, and has made them pay high rents for ill-repaired homes. The Negro's dream of getting political representation thru race concentration has been found to be a pipe-dream.

STEEL TRUST IS RUSHING SEDITION CASES IN FARRELL

Grand Jury Meeting on April Seventh

(Special to The Daily Worker)

FARRELL, Pa., March 23.—The Mercer County grand jury hearing the Farrell sedition cases of the six workers arrested at a Workers Party meeting will be called two weeks ahead of schedule. Instead of meeting on April 21st the grand jury has been called for April 7th.

In their anxiety to railroad these workers thru to prison the alleged Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and its pseudo police chief in Farrell believe that they will weaken the defense by putting the cases ahead several weeks.

Defense Will Be Ready.

The Defense Committe is laboring hard to have the defense ready and if the support continues to arrive the way it has been during the past week the defense will be ready to battle anytime.

Chief of Police Leyshock boastfully announces that he has his array of patriotic stool pigeon talent ready and that some of the alleged "countrymen" of the defendant workers will testify against them.

It is also rumored that Chief Leyshock, who is now considered the village clown, has discovered several "bomb" plots where the alleged "Red Terror" threatened to blow up his home.

Chief of Police Leyshock—the Wm. J. Burns of this hamlet, arrested defense attorney Ben Marks for parking his car on the alleged wrong side of the street.

Warrant For Chief.

Attorney Marks swore out a warrant for Leyshock's arrest and the trial is coming up soon.

Leyshock's school on communism, which he testified at the hearing of the defendants, was being conducted in his office will be presented with a copy of the constitution of the commonwealth of Penna and the United States in order that his school may have something to study before the sedition trials come up at Mercer.

Prominent business people in Sharon and Farrell openly support the cause of the defendant workers and the cases of these workers has done more to open up the eyes of the workers than all the oppression practiced in the past by the steel barons and their flunkies.

Judge Plays Role of Bouncer for Bosses When Off the Bench

Judge Boyer, of Evanston, who hears the cases of garment strikers accused of walking the public highway is so zealous in the interest of the scab manufacturers that he takes the law into his own hands and acts as bouncer for them when he is off the bench.

Thomas Holland, former labor manager for Hart, Schaffner & Marx and now an investigator who has been working with the special non-partizan citizens' committee headed by Father Frederick Seidenberg had an encounter with the Evanston judge at the home of one of the strikebreakers. Holland was asking the girl, who lives at 1431 Sherman street about wages and conditions in the non-union shops and the girl, a Miss Eberhard, was readily replying when Judge Boyer entered the hallway and ordered him out.

The judge began making a scene, exclaiming that Holland had no right to talk to the girl. Holland knew his rights but the girl became intimidated and withdrew into her room.

Judge Boyer is notorious in Evanston as an official who loves to prate of the "constitution," without knowing anything of the rights it is supposed to guarantee.

Thousands Jobless Among Miners of Pittsburgh District

To The DAILY WORKER: There is an evident increase in unemployment in the mines of Chartiers Valley, Pa., which is in District 5 U. M. W. of A. Approximately 2,500 coal miners have been unemployed for the past four months and about 600 working part time.

The following are the mines that have been shut down completely for the past four months: Manifold No. 1 and No. 2, Enterprise, McGovern, Midland No. 1, Hendersonville, and Westland. The following mines are on part time, working three days a week: Hazel, Davis, Rich Hill and Country Club. Some of these above named mines have recently slowed up with prospects for more slowing up. The apparent reason for the diminished amount of work is due to the fact that 265,000,000 tons of coal were stored up in the central competitive field while preparing for the strike.—MORRIS PASTERNAK, Washington, Pa.

Hoover Trust Tool.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—Secretary of Commerce Hoover today issued a sharp reply to Samuel Untermyer, who in a letter to Senator Capper charged that the American public was trust ridden because of Hoover's "convenient blindness and inaction," with respect to the anti-trust laws.

The Milwaukee Elections

By ARNE SWABECK.

RUNNING on a platform which contains no plank for the improvement of the conditions of Milwaukee's many thousands of workers, Mayor Daniel W. Hoan, "The Socialist," caters to the voters for another term of office at the city elections on April 1st.

Opposing him stands David S. Rose, "The Democrat," champion of the wide-open town and the interests of the big employers. For the other city offices two slates of the same character as the leading candidates contend for power. Whether Daniel or David wins little is to be gained by the workers.

Hoan points to his record as mayor of Milwaukee for the past eight years as the "Golden Age" of the city's progress. During these eight years Hoan boasts that "Milwaukee has experienced an increase of 100,000 in population. The value of the city's manufactured products have doubled, the building operations tripled, and the city limits expanded by leaps and bounds."

This boast certainly must sound good and will undoubtedly win the whole-hearted approval of Milwaukee big business. However, Hoan says nothing about how this "Golden Age" affected the thousands of workers who toil in the big machine shops, the tin factories, the steel mills or the immense tanneries of the City of Milwaukee, most of whom are completely unorganized and work from nine to ten hours a day for the sum of $30 a week and less.

Daniel W. Hoan claims that during the period of his administration property value increased at least eight-fold. He forgets the fact that rents increased 100 per cent while many workers have had their wages cut since the war. Of course, this claim shows that Mayor Hoan, and the Milawukee Socialist Party, champions the interests of the Milwaukee property owners and small businessmen. He lays no claim to particular improvement in the conditions of the workers.

Mayor Hoan enumerates a long list of achievements to strengthen his claim to the period of the "Golden Age", such as: ownership of riparian rights along the waterfront, the best municipal harbor, the finest and most economical street-lighting system, low taxes, the finest and most up-to-date building code and yet he forgets to mention that the Milwaukee building trades workers are amongst the lowest paid of such crafts in any city of the United States. Laborers receive an average of 50c and building mechanics receive from 60c to 85c an hour. He boasts of the fine civic celebrations, honesty in city government, great savings by putting the city on a real business basis and he lays claim to the finest and best police and fire departments of any city in the United States. Mayor Hoan even boasts that no large city has experienced as little labor trouble as Milwaukee and this, while he himself, knows that practically all the large establishments of the city are working on an "Open Shop" basis, with the workers unorganized and utterly unable to take up an aggressive fight against the explotiers. Yet the Mayor and the Socialist Party make no mention of the need of organizing the unorganized and have nothing to offer to strengthen the unions.

The Socialist Party of Milwaukee and Mayor Hoan, from what appears in their campaign platform, are blissfully unaware of the fact that a class struggle goes on in Milwaukee as well as elsewhere in the country. Or rather, they are deliberately ignoring this fact in order to enlist the sympathy of the employers and particulrly, the small businessmen. They are following the usual trend of the Socialist Party thruout the country, of refusing to carry on a militant struggle to gain an improvement in the conditions of the toilers. Thus they are betraying the best interests of the working class. The platform advanced by the Socialist Party and Mayor Hoan is a typical example of petty-bourgeois class collaboration schemes with some petty reforms as baits for votes. The platform contains the usual hypocritical phrase of the Socialist Party being for industrial, as well as political democracy and then it goes on to enumerate a number of points as to what the Socialist Party and Mayor Hoan stand for, such as: Honesty in public affairs, rights of workers and liberties of the people, merit system in appointments, clean police department, comprehensive city planning, a dollar in service for a dollar in taxes, development of city public works, etcetera, and even the legalization of beer and light wines.

What does the Socialist Party and Mayor Hoan propose to do to eliminate the injunction weapon from the hands of the employers? What do they propose to do to assist the workers to raise their standard of living? to assist the unions or to assist the unemployed? either thru the muncipality, or by compelling the employers in Milwaukee to care for those who are out of work? The number of unemployed in Milwaukee at the present time amounts to about 8,000 and with a serious industrial depression facing the whole country this becomes one of the vital problems on which the workers should demand a definite answer from the Socialist Party of Milwaukee. What assistance has the Socialist Party of Milwaukee given to the formation of a great national Farmer-Labor Party which could take up on a national scale an aggressive struggle against the encroachments of capitalism? Nothing has been mentioned on these points so vital to the workers, in the platform advanced by the Socialist Party.

Has the Socialist Party of Milwaukee made any demand that the United States recognize Soviet Russia, so that trade relations may be opened up with that country and thus help not only the young Soviet Republic, but the American workers as well? No! On the contrary, Victor Berger, the spokesman of "Milwaukee Socialism," supports the plan of the international bankers for a loan to Germany on the security of the entire German railway system—just another ill-disguised scheme of international capitalism to enslave the German workers.

Yet the present political elections in Milwaukee are of great importance to the workers. Two candidates contend for the mayorality: Hoan, "The Socialist," and Rose, the candidate of the big employers and "open shoppers."

The Socialist ticket, in this case, is the only ticket which stands in opposition to the capialist candidates. Therefore, the Milwaukee workers should vote for the Socialist ticket, but in doing so they should demand that the Socialist Party become a party fighting militantly for the emancipation of the workers.

They should demand that the Socialist Party join the great effort being launched to organize a National Farmer-Labor Party which will carry on the struggle of the workers until victory is won.

GOSLINGS KNOCKS E. SHORROCK FOR A ROW OF TEETH

Banker Loses Incisors Over Sinclair Book

Upton Sinclair, author of "The Goslings," has received the following letter from a correspondent in Seattle, telling how the "Goslings" knocked a banker and school board czar for a row.

"Will you pardon the terrible typing while I tell you an interesting episode in connection with the reception of your "Goslings" in Seattle?

"Saturday night, March 8th, the High Priest of the Seattle schools (as described in your "Goslings," page 141), Ebenezer Shorrock, walked into the Wilson Bookstore (of the same family as your salesman Carl Wilson)—and proceeded to look over a copy of the "Goslings." Soon he started a discussion of the book and your stuff in general with one of the clerks who did not happen to know Shorrock. A little disagreement resulted in which Shorrock called the clerk a liar. The clerk retaliated with the statement that he was sorry he had made the mistake of assuming that he had been discussing the matter with a gentleman.

"Shorrock repeated his charge of liar and struck at the clerk who retaliated with a blow that removed some of Eb's incisors and in the language of the street, knocked him "for a row of apple-trees." The irate banker got up literally spurting blood, some of it, like Holy Water, baptizing some books that were knocked over in the scuffle, including several copies of "The Goslings."

"Shorrock is up for re-election Tuesday. I wonder if the story will get around?

"I thought you might be interested in the story of the first blood drawn by your new book in Seattle."

"Teapot Special" Was Great! Watch Out for "May First"!

LETTERS pouring in to the DAILY WORKER office proclaim the excellency and the effectiveness of our "Teapot Special" Edition of the DAILY WORKER. We are publishing herewith one of these letters that embodies the spirit of the rest.

"Keep up your good work! You are doing fine!" proclaims this letter, and it is under this stimulus, shared by all of our readers, that we are pressing forward to a greater achievement for our next big effort—THE MAY DAY SPECIAL of the DAILY WORKER.

This MAY DAY SPECIAL will be dated SATURDAY, APRIL 26, so that it will reach all sections of the country for the big International May Day Celebrations to be held on THURSDAY, MAY FIRST.

This gives all workers' organizations, Workers Party branches, trade union locals, fraternal organizations, and others that will celebrate INTERNATIONAL MAY DAY, MAY 1st, 1924, a full month during which to take up the question, at their regular meetings, of ordering a big bundle of this issue.

We shall announce from time to time the valuable material that we are securing for this issue, just to give you an idea of what it will be like. In the meantime here is what one reader thought of "THE TEAPOT SPECIAL":

1029 N. La Salle St., Chicago, Ill., March 20, 1924.

Editor, Daily Worker, Chicago, Ill.

Dear Comrade: Permit me to congratulate you on the splendid Teapot Dome Edition of the DAILY WORKER.

In view of the desperate attempts being made by the Capitalist Class, and their newspapers to sidetrack the affair and bury it in an avalanche of silence, due to its showing up in all its brutality, the interweaving of Government and the Capitalist Interests, and demonstrating conclusively the fact that we as Communists have always contended namely that the American Government is the Executive Committee of the Capitalist Class of America, and exists solely to serve and protect their interests, your Oil Edition has done good work and done it very effectively.

Particularly interesting was Robert Minor's article on "The History of Oil in the United States," which traced so well the development of oil, and its political significance from its birth right up to the present moment. In my opinion the Article is so good, and has such propaganda value, that it should be put in pamphlet form and become part of the permanent literature of the Workers Party.

The DAILY WORKER is constantly increasing its prestige and influence by the excellency of its work, and is read by friends and foes alike, who look to it as the source of their information on Labor and Revolutionary subjects.

The DAILY WORKER, as an organ of our Party, is indeed blazing the trail and is quickly enabling our party to become a Mass Communist Party which will lead the American Working Class in its struggles of the future.

Keep up your good work, you are doing fine.

Fraternally, ERNEST ETTLINGER.

That is now of the past! We are pressing forward to a greater achievement in the near future—THE MAY DAY SPECIAL. Send in your order, make your preparations for this year's May Day. Make an order for this special issue of the DAILY WORKER the first item on your preparations for the celebration of this year's International May Day. Who will order the first bundle? Here is the Order Blank!

Here Comes 'The May Day Special'

THE DAILY WORKER, 1640 N. Halsted St.,
Chicago, Illinois.

Send me..............copies of "The May Day Special" Edition of the DAILY WORKER, to be dated Saturday, April 26, 1924, at the rate of five cents per copy; $1.75 for 50; $3.50 per 100. I want to help the workers and farmers learn the real meaning of the world struggle of Labor on its International Holiday.

NEGROES GIVEN UNFAIR DEAL BY R. R. LABOR BOARD

Decision Discriminates Against Trainmen

By LELAND OLDS.
(Federated Press Industrial Editor.)

The U. S. railroad labor board's decision sustaining the right of the St. Louis San Francisco railroad to discriminate against certain train service employes simply because they are colored and unorganized is condemned by A. O. Wharton, labor's most active member of the board, in a dissenting opinion. He finds it incomprehensible that a tribual created by congress to deal out justice to citizens irrespective of their race, creed or nationality should reach such a decision on the evidence presented.

Unfair to Negroes.

The evidence shows, according to Wharton, "that the carrier has arbitrally disregarded the rights of these employes and reclassified their titles without changing their duties; that it has reduced their rates of pay and established less favorable working conditions because they are colored men and for no other reason. It has sought to establish a separate and distinct class based solely on the fact that they are of the Negro race instead of the white race."

The case involves 145 passenger brakemen whom the board describes as follows: ":The employes involved in this dispute are colored men and on Feb. 1, 1921, the effective date of the wage reduction complained of they were unorganized. Up to the time of the hearing of this case they were still unorganized and their complaint is submitted by 100 (or more) unorganized employes in accordance with a provision of the transportation act."

Barred From Union.

On account of their color these employes are ineligible to membership in the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen. Prior to the war the carrier took advantage of this fact to classify them as train porters altho they were required to perform the duties of passenger brakemen. In this way the management was able to evade the agreement with the trainmen and to pay these colored employes a lower wage.

Government control changed this situation. The U. S. railroad administration defined the duties of passenger brakemen and ordered that colored trainmen performing those duties should be so designated and paid the same rate of wages as white men in the same capacities. The road then classified these colored employes as passanger brakemen and paid them accordignly.

In 1921 the labor board confirmed the conditions established by the railroad administration subject to change only by agreement between management and representatives chosen by a majority of any class of employes. It specified that such agreements should apply without discrimination to all the craft of class covered.

Railroad Cuts Pay.

The St. Louis-San Francisco railroad disregarded this order of the board and on Feb. 1, 1921, arbitrarily reclassified its colored brakemen as train porters. It thereupon cut their pay to $120 a month based on 240 hours' work. The carried admits that no change was made in their duties.

Representatives of the employes affected made two efforts to get the carrier to conform to the conditions established by the authority of the board and then on July 6, 1921, submitted the case for the board's consideration. The fact that decision in such a case involving the major principles of race discrimination was delayed for more than two and half years is itself a commentary upon this government tribual.

112 Trainmen Coerced.

Evidence presented in the case showed that subsequent to the submitted to the submission 112 colored trainmen were individually coerced into signing an agreement to accept the conditions established by the railroad in violation of its agreement with the trainmen. In spite of the fact that they later sent signed statements to the board repudiating this agreement as made under coercion, the majority board members took this technicality as an excuse for refusing to right a clear cut wrong against their own decision, the transportation act and the constitution itself.

Cement Finishers To Strike.

EAST ST. LOUIS, March 23.—Six hundred union cement finishers here will strike April 1, unless an increase of 10 cents an hour in wages, from 70 cents to 80 cents an hour, is granted. Cement finishers in St. Louis, across the river, have just won a scale of $1.50 an hour.

THE PARTY AT WORK

Note: The membership drive outlined in the following plan for District No. 2 contains suggestions which every party district and every city central committee might well adopt. It is being published as a means of stimulating similar work in other districts.—C. E. Ruthenberg, Executive Secretary.

LENIN MEMBERSHIP DRIVE,

April 1st to July 1st.

EVERY MEMBER GET A NEW MEMBER

Issued by the District Organization of District 2.

ABOUT 25,000 people attended or attempted to attend the Lenin Memorial Meeting held under the auspices of the Workers Party on Feb. 4. This as well as many other indications, as, for instance, the sympathizers we have in the trade union work, shows that there is a fertile field in our district for strengthening our Party by bringing those close to us into it.

We feel that with the proper kind of effort our membership in this district can be doubled by the next National Convention.

Our Party is now engaged in several united front campaigns, the Labor Party Campaign and the Protection of the Foreign Born Campaign, as well as our continuous industrial activities. While carrying on campaigns of this kind we come in contact with many non-Party people who are very sympathies to our Party.

It is during this kind of Party activities that the opportunity for drawing new members presents itself most, and furthermore during these periods of contact with the masses we must continuously have in mind the building and strengthening of our Party.

We have two outstanding purposes in our "united front" campaigns. One is the extending of our influence among the masses of the workers and the other is to gain all the organizational benefits possible for our Party.

This membership drive campaign is to be on a different basis than that which we have recently been carrying on, and has as a fundamental purpose the development among our comrades of continuous efforts to bring those that belong to us into our Party. This campaign is to be based mainly on individual efforts, in which the branch plays an important part, insofar as it directs the work of its members in this campaign. This plan we intend also to help in developing more interesting branch meetings, as one of our problems is to retain the members that join the Party and this cannot be done very well if the branch meeting is dull and uninteresting. The plan is as follows:

1. Party members while in contact with the sympathizers with whom they are working, be it in shop, industrial nuclei meetings, or any of our united front activities are to talk "Party" and what it stands for, pointing out that the Party is the intator of and furthers these united front campaigns, which are based on the life needs of the working class, as, for instance: A Labor Party, amalgamation, protection of the foreign born, et. Comrades do not necessarily have to go out of their way to talk to these sympathizers—they are more or less in contact with them at present in their work. They must see to it that these sympathizers are supplied with literature occasionally, such as the pamphlet, "Why Every Worker Should Be a Communist and Join the Workers Party," the DAILY WORKER, the Labor Herald and any other such literature that the comrades may think is appropriate for the particular sympathizer. After working on the individual or individauls for a short period of time he is to invite him to a branch meeting, not necessarily his own, where there will be a special speaker who will make a talk on some live current topic, after which a member of the branch will make an appeal for new members. If the sympathizer does not join at that meeting, we must see to it that he is brought to another meeting. We must also make all attempts possible to get the sympathizers to come to our general mass meetings, and other Party affairs, to instill in him the idea that we are a live, virile organization.

2. Branches must arrange their business so that at least an hour and a half of one of their meetings a month can be devoted to speaking, questions and a general discussion. The time of this meeting should be definitely established. Either the first meeting of the month, the last meeting of the month, or any other meeting of the month that the branch wishes to set aside for this purpose. This is the meeting to which the sympathizers will be brought as above referred to. The taking up of some business at this meeting is desirable, provided it is handled in a snappy, businesslike fashion. This will show to the sympathizer present that we do business in a businesslike way.

To organize your meetings in this fashion it is necessary to have a real, functioning executive committee, that takes up the lengthy communications and reports to the meeting on the substance of them, and make its recommendations on the action to be taken. The executive committee should also devise ways and means to expedite the routine and technical work so that more time of the meetings can be devoted to discussion and action on the real Party problems.

The executive committee should check up on the activities of all the members of the branch and see to it that every member has a function to perform, and that no one member is so overloaded with work that he cannot do justice to any one of his jobs.

The matter of getting the branch to function properly is very essential because it is a means by which we can retain the new members that join our Party, as well as keep our old members inspired and on the job. The speakers at these meetings must speak in one language, as we cannot expecte sympathizers to come to a meeting at which two-thirds of the time is devoted to speaking in languages that he cannot understand. This is mentioned to contrast the present drive with our old drive, where we had meetings addressed in two or more languages.

The branch being the basic unit of the Party must see to it that the members of the branch carry out the work assigned to them relative to this campaign by having them make reports as to what they are doing in this drive.

The branch must see to it that literature is on hand so that the member can get a supply for this campaign. A very effective piece of literature for this purpose is the small pamphlet, "Why Every Worker Should Be a Communist and Join the Workers Party," above referred to. This pamphlet can a bought at 1c a copy or $8.00 a thousand, from the Jimmie Higgins Bookstore, 127 University Place, which is the district literature department. The bookstore has a supply of these pamphlets and also other literature that can be used in this campaign. See to it that your members are supplied with literature as the written word is one of the most effective ways of convincing sympathizers as to what we stand for and why he should join with us in the struggle.

Branches should not engage separate halls for the open meetings above referred to as every meeting place is large enough to accommodate the sympathizers that will be brought in to these meetings. We do not wish to burden the branch with any additional expense, as we know the membership is called upon continuously for financial contributions, branches may, if they desire, have throwaways printed for their propaganda meeting for distribution. This is effective, but not absolutly essential.

Branches should arrange to take care of this membership drive campaign, even to the extent of making arrangements for the speaker when possible. The district office will, of course, assist all that it possibly can and supply the speakers where the branch cannot do so itself.

3. The language branches are to apply the above plan, making whatever modifications are necessary and see to it that their district committees and central committees give them full co-operation, as well as supply the speakers of the particular language where the branch cannot supply one itself.

Where there are two or more branches of a particular language in a given locality it may be wise to arrange for the monthly propaganda meeting in only one branch, and all of the prospective members brought to that particular meeting.

Language branches must also distribute English literature, because a much greater percentage of workers that we must reach use the English language than the ratio of English speaking members to foreign language speaking members in our own party. This will help to build up our English speaking membership.

Comrades, we must strive to build a mass party in this country. Our Party is numerically weak, considering the importance industrially, financially and otherwise, of this country, and the millions of workers engaged in the class struggle here.

We must put forth special efforts to inaugurate the above outlined campaign between the period of April 1st to July 1st, by which time it ought to be a more or less firmly established institution of the Party and then continued indefinitely. This is possible because no great efforts are called for insofar as the units of the Party are concerned.

Let us show that we are the organization we claim to be—militant, class conscious, organization — a Communist party.

Every member should get a new member.

Forward towards the goal of doubling our membership by the next national convention.—Charles Krumbein, District Organizer.

Private Boodle in Hot Rebellion on Taxation Enemies

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, March 21.—Private wealth in America has started a revolt of its own against continued sacrifices forced upon it during war time. That is the meaning of the demand for the Mellon tax plan as explained in a booklet by Otto H. Kahn, banker, sent broadcast in the national capitol by the Mellon plan propaganda committee headed by Major General O'Ryan. On this committee are numerous university presidents, corporation lawyers, publishers, and several ex-presidents of the U. S. chamber of commerce.

Kahn says that after the war capital came to realize that the justification for high surtaxes no longer existed: "It came to feel that the maintenance of such taxes was not due to the needs of the country but to political considerations or to class prejudice or sectional animosity, and that their continued exaction was something not far removed from economic violence." It then took steps to escape this taxation. Collection of federal taxes on incomes of $300,000 or above, which had been $243,600,000 in 1919, fell to $84,800,00 in 1921.

THOUSANDS OF WORKERS LOCKED OUT IN NORWAY

Communist Papers Are Fined for Strike Support

By DR. KARL F. M. SANDBERG

A general lockout was declared in Kristiania on Feb. 22, by the employers association. It has been divided in two sections, the first one comprising the building, textile, tobacco, tailor, woodworking, furniture, explosive and metal mining industries with some 30,000 men, takes effect at once, the second one, involving workers in the breweries, chocolate factories, electro-chemical industry, Norwegian Hydro, sawmills and the bookbinderies, some 13,700 men, becomes effective a week later. It is considered a strategical move against the 9,000 striking iron and transport workers, who have been out for some time. 9,000 workers in the paper, cellulose and wood pulp industry have declared strike in sympathy with those locked out. Of the F. of L.'s 100,000 members 24—30,000 only are working, about 70,000 on strike or locked out.

Students Becoming Radical.

The students of the University of Kristiania have elected a communist president of their society and an executive committee on a communist platform. Some students having acted as strikebreakers in the transport workers' strike, the society resolved that none of its members may serve as strikebreakers. Olav Scheflo spoke before the society on Lenin and Leninism. The technical school is located at Trondhjem, Martin Tranmael spoke before the students society there on "Dictatorship." He pointed out that engineers sooner or later would have to choose between capitalist dictatorship and proletarian dictatorship.

Some farmers from Haus and Fane having worked as strike-breakers, the Bergen Creamery resolved not to accept any more milk from them.

Tranmael and Scheflo, respective leaders of the two communist factions, have been found guilty of "praising an outlaw strike" in their papers and sentenced to a fine of 500 kr. each.

Cost of Living.

The Gold Custom Law has been passed by the Storting, 96 votes for, 47 against. Customs will now have to be paid in gold. There is no gold in circulation. The Bank of Norway is exempt from redeeming its notes in gold and they are worth less than half. A duty of one crown will mean more than two of paper. The result will be higher duties and higher prices. A general protest was raised against the law.

The Bergen Steamship Company will in the near future open a regular line on the Black Sea. The Norge Mexico Gulf Line in connection with the Swedish-America-Mexico Line and the Swedish line "Trans-Atlantic" will commence monthly sailings between American Gulf harbors and Petrograd. The first boat, "Delaware," will load the last part of March.

Borah May Pinch Hit for Elephant In Coming Election

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, March 23.—Senator Borah's name is mentioned in connection with the possible revolt in the republican national convention against the nomination of Calvin Coolidge. Republicans who will not follow La Follette into a Farmer-Labor movement, even temporarily, and who still shrink from the brand of Daugherty and the oil crowd, are trying to imagine a situation in which the party is to be redeemed when its handpicked delegates meet in Cleveland in June.

The idea is that Pinchot in Pennsylvania, Capper in Kansas, Norris in Nebraska, LaFollette in Wisconsin, Ladd and Frazier in North Dakota, and Brookhart in Iowa, will be able to bring so many protesting voices to the convention that the old guard cannot safely nominate its own candidate and will be obliged to choose some one like Borah to save it from annihilation.

This theory is scouted by the regulars, who maintain that all of the progressives will be with La Follette anyhow, and that the regulars will refuse to be stampeded into a surrender of the organization. They may be beaten at the polls in November but they will retain intact the machinery to protect their position for the future, as against Borah, Pinchot, and all other semi-progressives.

Communists Leave Hall in Protest At Scheidemann

CASSEL, Germany, March 22.—Philipp Scheidemann, who loyally supported his kaiser during the war and who, with President Ebert, is largely credited with having prevented Germany from becoming a workers' state after the revolution, is chief mayor of Cassel. Cassel was chosen as the convention city this year for the German Metal Workers' union, the largest single union in the world.

Scheidemann, as mayor, arose on the first day of the convention to extend the greetings of the city to the metal workers. Thereupon the Communists, who number a little more than one-third of the entire membership of the union, arose as a man and left the hall.

Corporations Are Stealing Millions Thru Andy Mellon

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, March 23.—Evidence in the hands of Senator Couzens which will be laid before his committee investigating wholesale frauds in the Internal Revenue Bureau of the Treasury Department shows that millions of dollars have been stolen by big corporations from the government by highwaymen methods. Documentary evidence that various corporations owe the government great sums in income taxes which were falsely returned at too low a figure has been stolen from the files of the bureau. Employes of the bureau have been deliberately bribed to steal this proof from the files. Without the proof the government cannot collect the taxes, which were due years ago and the evidence of which cannot now be collected from original sources. The names and ownership of Tin Plate and other metal corporations involved in this fraud and bribery will be established.

Scab Railroad Is Panhandling Uncle Sam for Big Sum

ST. LOUIS, March 23.—The interstate commerce commission recently certified to the secretary of the treasury that the Missouri Pacific railroad was entitled to $13,243,448 in full payment of the gaurantee of earnings, given the roads for the first six months after they went back to private control. Of this $660,448 remains unpaid.

The Missouri Pacific is holding out for $2,000,000 more. This the Missouri Pacific claims for alleged undermaintenance of the company's properties during government control. The commerce commission has turned down the claim.

This railroad fought the shopmen for two years. Strikebreakers have cost money, but they haven't delivered the goods. The Missouri Pacific has figured in a number of wrecks since the strike, caused, experienced railroad men say, by defective equipment. Large verdicts have been awarded in damage suits growing out of wrecks on this road.

Barkley-Howell Railway Labor Bill Goes to Bat Soon

WASHINGTON, March 23.—Hearing of statements from the railroad labor organizations in behalf of the Barkley-Howell railroad labor bill has been completed by the senate committee on interstate commerce. The railway companies will be heard against the bill within a week or two. Chairman Smith and a majority of the committee appeared unwilling that the opposition should drag out discussion of this measure, which proposes the repeal of title 3 of the transportation act and the setting up of adjustment boards, mediation boards and arbitration boards in transportation with recognition of the nationally organized rail labor unions.

Hearings before the house committee have been requested, but will probably be refused by Chairman Winslow. In that event the friends of the bill will circulate the petition for discharge of the committee, made possible by the new rules of the house. This cannot be done until 30 days after introduction of the bill, or until March 30.

Big Communist Vote In Czechoslovakia: Elect Nine Deputies

ROSICE, Czechoslovakia, March 23.—Results of general elections in Ruthenia show that the Communist party has received 100,000 of the total 250,000 votes cast. Of nine deputies thus elected to parliament the Social-Democrats, Agrarians, Trudova and Hungarian Nationalist parties each have one, while the Communists have five. The Communists will also send two representatives of Ruthenia into the senate.

Ruthenia is an autonomous province of Czechoslovakia, possessing a Ukranian culture. Situated among the foothills of the Carpathians, this territory has passed thru a stormy career during recent years. It was occupied by the Magyar red army during the Hungarian Commune, and it is largely the influence of those days, coupled with the lingering feudal despotism, that has strengthened the Communist following. Despite its adherence to the Czechoslovak republic, Ruthenia has remained in the hands of a few absentee landlords, who keep the native foresters, peasants and lumberjacks in serfdom.

IMPEACH COOLIDGE!

SOCIALIST PARTY IN OKLAHOMA HAS SIX MEMBERS

Workers and Farmers Prepare for Action

By DAVID COBB.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., March 21.—A few years ago, the State Socialist convention of Oklahoma was a big event. Several hundred delegates from all over the state attended. There was life, there was earnestness, there was enthusiasm, then.

But in 1916, the party began to dwindle, and gradually lost in membership, till in 1921, the dues-paying members had fallen far below the required number to retain a charter, and for that reason Otto Branstetter, the National Secretary revoked the state charter.

In 1922, the National Secretary called a state convention to assemble on April 9, in Oklahoma City for the purpose of reorganizing the party. In response to this call fifty-six delegates met, paid their dues and reorganized the party. We started out on the political campaign. But the old comrades who had formerly furnished the finance necessary to carry on a campaign failed to render any substantial assistance in any way. Our vote had dwindled to five thousand in the state. In 1914, before woman suffrage, we cast fifty-two thousand votes. We said then Oklahoma will be the first state in the Socialist column.

Again late in 1922, E. H. H. Gates assembled a part of the Socialist Local of Oklahoma City together and over the protest of the State Executive committee called a state wide convention in Oklahoma City for the last of December. The convention which met pursuant to this call was composed of something like fifteen qualified delegates. Another Socialist convention of Oklahoma, met again on March 9, of this year, with exactly six paid-up dues paying members. Four of these were from the city, two from the country, and three out of the city were from one family.

Truly it may be said, "How the Mighty Has Fallen."

It is a joke pure and simple, everyone knows there is no such thing as a Socialist party in Oklahoma.

The time was never riper, the psychology of the farmers and laborers never better to organize a real class farmer-labor party, than now. The Socialists have lost faith in doing anything thru the old Socialist party.

The entire group composed of Socialists, progressive Democrats and Republicans who attempted to work thru the Democrat party are dissatisfied with results, and have lost faith in the idea that they can effectually use to their benefit the Democrat machinery. I say the entire group, but I must make one exception, the professional politician in the ranks.

Heretofore the law has prohibited a farmer-labor party as such in this state. This defect has been cured by the passage, on March 15, of a bill which will recognize a Farmer-Labor party as a legal political party, and the names of their candidate can now be printed on the official ballot.

Such a party will be organized in a very short time and you may look for big things from Oklahoma.

RAILROAD LABOR BOARD IS TOOL OF MANAGERS

Average Wages Have Declined Since 1920

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

The United States railroad labor board is revealed as a tool of management in the statistical picture of railroad wages during 1923 just issued by the interstate commerce commission. The commission shows that the average wages of the 1,879,770 employes, including the high paid executives, officials and supervisors amounted to only $1,588 for the year.

Kept Wages Down.

Comparison between the present level of railroad wages and the level of wages in outside industry shows clearly the extent to which labor board regulation supported by Daugherty injunctions has been used to hold railroad wages down. Factory wages, free from the control of such tribunals, are today within 3½% of the peak of 1920 and considerably more than 100% above the pre-war level.

During the period of industrial depression factory wages were deflated to a point approximately 11% below 1920. But they responded to the increased demand for labor during 1923 with a rebound while railroad employes held in the labor board vise were unable to take advantage of the favorable turn of the labor market.

Hit Unorganized Worker.

The policy of the labor board has been to hit the lowest paid and least organized worker hardest. This is shown in the following table which pictures the average annual earnings of 14 typical railroad occupations in 1920 and 1923:

	1920	1923	P. Ct. decrease
Machinists	$2,238	$1,995	13
Boilermakers	2,317	1,972	15
Blacksmiths	2,129	1,847	13
Common shop labor	1,311	1,058	19
Section labor	1,192	888	25
Work train labor	1,355	972	28
Yard engineers	2,616	2,412	7½
Yard firemen	1,973	1,800	8½
Yard brakemen	2,207	1,956	11
Freight engineers	3,422	3,085	10
Freight firemen	2,440	2,148	12
Freight brakemen	2,313	2,028	12
Passenger conductors	2,990	2,810	6
brakemen	2,081	1,872	10
Train dispatchers	3,043	3,096	..

Section men whose wages have been cut 25% since 1920 earned only $888 by a full year's work with considerable overtime thrown in. There are over 200,000 of them condemned to a boxcar existence as witness from their ranks told the labor board in 1922. Another 60,000 work train laborers whose wages have been cut 28% earned only $972 during the war. While still another 100,000 shop laborers whose present annual earnings barely exceed $1000, were cut 19%.

Unorganized Mine Fields Threaten Miners' Union While Lewis Wars On Many Rebel Union Members

By SCOTT NEARING

Miners hold a conspicuous position in the labor movements of the world. There is scarcely an important coal producing country in which they do not figure prominently, both as to the extent and solidarity of their organization and their fighting spirit. The United States is no exception. Since 1902, the American miners have been looked upon as one of the strongholds of the American labor movement.

The recent Indianapolis convention left many important issues unsettled, but none was of more vital concern to labor than the disorganization of the American mine workers.

There are not many figures available regarding the membership of the United Mine Workers, but tucked away in the United States coal commission report (release for Oct. 17, 1923) there is a detailed table of union membership since 1899. Here are some of the figures:

Table Tells Story.

Relative strength of unionism in various coal areas as shown by the paidup membership, U. M. W. of A., for fiscal years ending Nov. 30, percentages based on average number of employed in the industry as reported by United States Geological Survey:

State—	1902	1912	1918	1921	May 1923
Alabama	64.0	0.2	25.9	5.0	2.2
Ark., Okla. and Texas	15.1	79.6	88.6	61.0	33.1
Colorado and New Mexico	13.6	6.7	14.7	29.0	2.6
Illinois	90.7	94.2	100.0	92.0	87.5
Indiana	84.8	82.7	88.9	73.0	73.6
Iowa	93.3	95.9	100.0	100.0	88.0
Kansas	49.5	89.3	88.0	19.0	85.7
Ken., Tenn. and Va.	30.5	10.9	22.8	23.0	20.6
Maryland and W. Va.	7.0	2.8	29.9	29.0	22.4
Michigan	100.0	78.4	67.4	82.0	80.2
Missouri	52.0	67.6	75.1	85.0	61.4
Montana	...	89.9	100.0	93.0	88.6
Ohio	75.0	84.5	84.7	78.0	76.5
Pennsylvania	23.0	39.0	38.3	29.0	41.4
Washington	...	84.8	100.0	49.0	9.9
Wyoming and Utah	...	66.9	52.8	66.0	54.4

(U S. Coal Commission, Sept. 22, 1923. "To the President and Congress." Page 7.)

Among other things, the report states: "The non-union areas lie around the union fields in a broken crescent. The northern end of this crescent juts up into the Pittsburgh district and central Pennsylvania. This non-union portion of Pennsylvania comprises the Connellsville, Latrobe, Ligonier, and Greensburg regions and most of Westmoreland and Somerset counties.

"From nonunion Pennsylvania the crescent extends towards the south. It includes practically all of Maryland, West Virginia (except the Fairmount district and the upper half of Kanawha), Virginia, eastern Kentucky, most of Tennessee and all of Alabama.

Washington Non-union.

"West of the Mississippi river, the second half of the broken crescent begins with the lignite areas of western Texas, passes around the unionized mines of western Texas to New Mexico and extends northward, taking in the states of Colorado and Utah. In so far as the operations representing half the tonnage of the state of Washington changed to a non-union basis in 1921, this state may be included in this group."

The union mines are concentrated "near industrial centers and consuming markets." Except for the nonunion areas in Pennsylvania, "the nonunion areas are located away from the manufacturing centers in the mountains of West Virginia and eastern Kentucky and in states comparatively undeveloped from the standpoint of industrial organization."

The importance is seen when it is realized that "when the present system of bargaining was established, the central competitive field embraced the bulk of the miners and the tonnage of the bituminous industry. Today 65 per cent of the tonnage is produced and a similar proportion of the wage earners are located in the outlying fields."

Serious Danger.

Let this process go on for a few more years and the nonunion fields will be sufficiently productive to supply most of the normal industrial needs. Then at any time, the crescent can be hinged in the center, "pincers can be applied and the locals in the central competitive fields can be starved into submission."

In 1919 the United Mine Workers had organized coal mines that were producing about 72 per cent of the total tonnage (Coal Situation, April 1, 1922. Chamber of Commerce, Washington, D. C.) The depression beginning in 1920 resulted in heavy loss in membership. The Alabama organization, like those in Colorado and New Mexico was practically wiped out. In Washington, the organization was reduced to a fifth of its 1921 strength. The organizations in Arkansas, Oklahoma, and Texas were cut in half. Illinois and Ohio report losses. Among the 17 districts listed by the coal commission, only three show gains.

This is a matter of vital concern to every man who mines coal, and to every man and woman who is working to build up the American labor movement.

The miners must gain back their lost membership. They must organize the outlying nonunion fields. The health and strength of the American labor movement are both seriously involved.

Labor Party Is Formed at Meeting At Reading, Pa.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

READING, Pa., March 23.—A Labor Party was formed in this city at a conference of several Labor Unions, the Federated Farmer-Labor Party and the Workers Party held at the Labor Lyceum here. Provisional officers and an Executive Committee of nine was elected.

An appeal will be sent to all labor organizations of Reading urging them to affiliate and to send delegates to the Executive Committee. The question of national affiliation and of sending delegates to the June 17th Convention was laid over for action to the next conference which will be held May Second. The Socialist Party was not represented. The Executive Committee was instructed to prepare a draft of a platform and by-laws of the organization to be submitted to the next conference for adoption.

J. Newton Brown, of the American Federation of Railway Workers, was unanimously elected chairman, and James Master was elected secretary. The resolution introduced by Delegate Keiser, of the Moulders' Union, and adopted unanimously by the conference follows:

"Whereas, Events of last several years have shown conclusively that the governmental power is constantly being used against labor,

"Whereas, the Teapot Dome investigation has again proven that both the republican and democratic parties are equally corrupt and are mere agents of big capital,

"Whereas, signs of a new unemployment crisis are already evident in many parts of the country and millions of farmers go bankrupt while high government officials loot the wealth of the nation and,

"Whereas, a nation wide movement for a labor party is now taking place for the purpose of uniting politically the workers and poorer farmers,

"Be it therefore resolved that this conference, consisting of representatives of various labor organization of Reading, Pa., joins hands with organized labor of other cities and declares itself as the Labor Party of this city."

Another Quiz is Born.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—A sweeping investigation of federal prohibition enforcement was demanded by a resolution introduced in the House today by Representative Kendrick, New York.

The resolution directed an investigation of the office of the federal prohibition commissioner by a commitee of five members appointed by the speaker.

ST. LOUIS DICKS BRUTALLY BEAT LAD TO DEATH

His Mother's Agonized Cries Infuriated Brutes

By MARTIN A. DILLMON.
(Staff Correspondent of Federated Press)

ST LOUIS, Mar. 23.—A dramatic scene was enacted at the coroner's inquest into the fatal shooting of Claud Mitchell by city detectives when the unfortunate lad's brokenhearted mother took the witness chair.

Mitchell was fatally attacked by detectives last week, who say he attempted to escape after his automobile had figured in a minor collision. The accident was so slight that no damage or personal injuries resulted. The officers claim young Mitchell failed to heed their command to halt. They pursued him a distance of one block where a number of officers joined the chase and opened pistol fire on him. Five blocks from the scene of the collision, Mitchell reached his home, alighted from his car and fell to the sidewalk, wounded by one of the bullets.

In front of the home, Mrs. Mitchell charges, detectives set upon her wounded son and fatally beat him with the buts of their pistols, the effects from which he died soon afterwards at the city hospital.

Evidently the police picked witnesses with caution. Of a score of witnesses to the attack, the police summoned one. Fourteen came voluntarily to testify. The pathetic testimony of Mrs. Mitchell brought many spectators to tears as she recited the events which robbed her of her son and chief support.

"I was in bed," she told the coroner's jury, "when suddenly I ran to the window at the front of the house. I saw three men beating a man who was on the pavement. They were kicking and punching him and stamping on him. They just kept it up.

"Finally," she said as she clenched her wrinkled hands and choked back sobs, "I saw that they were beating my boy. I ran out in my nightgown and cried, 'You're beating my boy! Stop! You're beating my boy!' One of the men grabbed me and threw me against the side of the house. 'How in the hell do you know it's your boy?' he scowled at me. My boy was on his hands and knees and I took his head in my arms. 'Oh, Claud,' I said, 'they've killed you—they've killed my boy.'

"They grabbed me again," continued the scantily clad little mother, whose weight is below 100 pounds, "and they pulled me away from my boy. They threw him down on the sidewalk. I could hear him moaning, 'Oh, Lord, oh, Lord,' over and over again.

"'You've got to let me help my boy' I cried, but one of the detectives said, 'Get to hell out of here or we'll arrest you.' I told them I wanted to be with my boy on the way to the hospital, but they told me, 'Get to hell away from here.' They picked up Claud, dragged him to their machine and threw him on the back seat. He was all crumpled up and bloody, and I ran to the machine to be with him. They shoved me back and I fell to the sidewalk. Then they took my boy away."

Indentified Killers.

Asked if she could identify her son's assailants from the detectives present, she pointed out Detective Sergeant Linder and Detectives Moran and Hefele in the courtroom as the sluggers.

Detectives on the stand sought to strengthen their case by telling of the finding in Mitchell's car three bottles which contained "wine and whisky." Young Mitchell was an employe of a furniture store, and his mother contends the bottles found were furniture polish containers. Circuit Attorney Sidner testified he examined the bottles. One of them, he said, contained what appeared to be furniture polish and the other two were empty.

No Whisky in Car.

Edward Lietner, whose car the detectives commandeered to chase Mitchell, was probably a surprise witness so far as the police were concerned. He said he remained in his car upon arriving on the scene, for fear of being shot. He said he saw "ten men jump on Mitchell like so many flies on fly paper."

The inquest has been continued pending further investigation of the affair. At police headquarters there are indications of a desire to whitewash the slugger-detectives. The police board has ordered a "thoro investigation," and says conviction of the officers will cost them their jobs. It is recalled, however, that previous probes of cases of this nature have not resulted in convictions.

Must Not Fraternize.

Seemingly, the spirit of the brute and autocrat is a necessary qualification for the rank of commanding officer on the St. Louis police force. It is reported several sergeants are to be reduced in rank, one of the complaints being that the sergeants in question "pal with the patrolmen under them."

"We find that many sergeants still cling to the old-fashioned belief that they must be pals of the patrolmen under them," says a member of the police board. "That old system is to be eliminated. If they hobnob with their patrolmen, the efficiency of the department is null. When a sergeant treats his men as pals the morale of the force is at stake."

Prominent Speakers at T. U. E. L. Meeting

THE MONTHLY meeting of the local T. U. E. L. holds much in store for Chicago's militants. Leland Olds of the Federated Press, well-known economic writer and statistician will speak on "American Imperialism and Unemployment"—a lecture that promises to further establish the Local Chicago T. U. E. L. meetings as the monthly treat of educational value for all militants and sympathizers of Labor.

This meeting is to be held on Wednesday, March 26, at the North-West Hall, North and Western Aves., has additional features for those coming to hear Leland Olds.

Earl Browder, whose monthly summary of the most interesting events in the world of Labor have proven so popular, will speak on "The Situation in the German Trade Unions", a subject so much in today's discussions.

Both of these lectures, of interest to every militant trade unionist will be augmented by the short reports from each important trade in the city—a true picture of every development of local labor.

The executive board of the Trade Union Educational League is bending every effort to make the monthly meetings of interest and educational value to every thinking worker. The success of the last meeting promises to be duplicated in the coming one on March 26.

New York Launches LaFollette Boom on Third Party Ticket

NEW YORK, March 22.—The LaFollette-for-president boom on a third party ticket in New York has now been definitely launched. As in Pennsylvania and Idaho, the third party movement in this state has adopted Progressive party as its name. A state convention in New York City early in May will be a preliminary to the Farmer-Labor meeting in St. Paul June 17.

A third party committe has already been entrusted with the task of circulating the petitions, required to place the party and its candidates on the November ballots. Fifty signatures from each New York county, or a total of 12,000 names thruout the state, will be mustered at once, and the blanks will be distributed in April.

Conflicting reports are being circulated concerning Wall Street's attitude toward Coolidge's re-election. While it has been admitted at Republican party headquarters here that influential banking groups during the past week openly expressed their opposition to Coolidge's candidacy, the same Republican spokesmen now declare that a reconciliation with the recalcitrant financiers has been effected.

Hold Up White Slave Charge.

DANVILLE, Ill., March 21.—Lawrence T. Allen of the office of the district attorney stated today that no warrant charging Rev. Lewis Holloway of Attica, Ind., with white slavery had been issued, and that none would be until a thoro investigation has been made of the charges against him.

Every new DAILY WORKER reader means a new recruit in the ranks of militant labor.

Canadian Pacific Sacred Cow of Dominion Papers

By SYDNEY WARREN.
(Staff Correspondent of Federated Press)

VANCOUVER, B. C., March 21.—Oliver Twist had nothing on the Canadian Pacific railway when it came to asking for more. Canada's railway octopus with its tentacles into every phase of Dominion activity, despite the fact that in 1922 it cleaned up $129,000,000 surplus over operating expenses, is asking for the right to take more in the shape of higher express rates.

The Canadian Pacific railway has been given millions of dollars worth of concessions in the form of timber, mineral and coal lands, apart from outright cash subsidies. The total of these would easily reach the $400,000,000 mark.

The C. P. R. owns a vast system of railway and steamship lines, wharves, hotels and fleets of vessels plying in all ports of the world. Its employes are notoriously poorly paid, skilled as well as unskilled, and in many cases the latter are forced to compete with coolie labor to hold their jobs. The company has grown to regard Canada as its private preserve for exploitation and guards its privilege zealously.

The C. P. R. heads the Sacred Cow list of nearly every newspaper of any size in the Dominion and in the columns of these newspapers, as on the lips of the old line politicians, nothing must be said against the railway company and at all times must it be shown the profound respect due a Sacred Cow.

CHILD SLAVERS IN BITTER FIGHT ON AMENDMENT

Mobilize in Washington Before Hearings

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 23—Representative Israel M. Foster of Ohio, Republican, sponsor for the federal child labor amendment in the house of representatives, and a member of the house judiciary committee, brought this question to a vote in the committee, after the long extended hearings having closed a few days previous.

Notwithstanding the fact that a majority of the committee say they are in favor of he bill, the opposition of the chairman, Representative George S. Graham of Philadelphia, Pa., one of the "old guard" Republicans of that state, has prevented a favorable report. The chairman took the position that the committee should not report the amendment until the hearings had been printed, and he himself had had an opportunity to make an argument to the committee members against the amendment. So it went over until April.

Textile Bosses There.

During the hearings it became apparent that the opposition was strengthening its lines and throwing in its heavy forces. The last two days brought before the committee the Washington representative of the National Association of Manufacturers, James A. Emery, and representatives of the southern textile interests led by David Clark of the Southern Textile Bulletin. Mr. Clark introduced to the committee two members of the State Welfare Board of North Carolina to testify in opposition to the federal amendment. There was no indication on the part of either of these two members of the State Welfare Board that their appearance in open alliance with manufacturing interests was anything unusual for public officials in North Carolina.

In addition to the National Manufacturers Association representative there appeared two or three representatives of the Manufacturers Association of Pennsylvania, Chairman Graham's state.

Sabotaging the Amendment.

On the senate side the child labor amendment is still in the subcommittee of the judiciary committee. Meantime, the Wadsworth-Garrett amendment, which proposes a change in Article 5 of the Constitution, in order to make the ratification of all constitutional amendments more difficult, is being pushed by its sponsors.

A Joke On You

Mayor William E. Dever, last Saturday, officially launched Chicago's fourth annual "Own your own home week," given at the Coliseum under the auspices of the Chicago Real Estate Board. Greetings were read from President Coolidge, Secretary Hoover, the governors of many states, and many well known national figures.

When asked what it was all about, Mr. Jones, an executive of the Chicago real estate board, told the DAILY WORKER, "We must carry on an extensive campaign all over the country. Not only will an increase of home owners solve the housing shortage, but it will help greatly to Americanize and stabilize the American people."

But Mr. Jones forgot to add the interesting figures that over 90 per cent of the people in Chicago are living in apartments, flats and over stores, and that of the homes which are occupied, 73 per cent of them are rented from real estate companies, another 17.2 per cent being mortgaged to the bonding and real estate companies at a high interest.

We do not charge all the worthy gentlemen supporting the "Own Your Home" drive with trying to assist the Chicago Real Estate Board members in increasing their business. But it is a fact that large employers would rather hire married workers than single men. The married man, having more responsibility, is more closely tied to his job. He is less independent and necessarily shows more loyalty to his boss, in order to be able to keep his family with security. For a similar reason, the large employers like to have their men live in their own home—preferably one they are paying for on installments. It makes the workers better Americans—that is they are better slaves, because they cannot run the risk of losing their jobs which would also mean the loss of their homes. The hundred Illinois mayors who assisted His Honor, Mayor Dever, in the opening ceremonies, no doubt had some such idea in mind. If more citizens own their own (mortgaged) homes, there is less danger of "radicalism" in their communities. A mortgaged home not only keeps the employes faithful, and their wages down, but it enables the employers to get back a large slice of these wages in the installment payments on these homes, and in the large interests netted from the mortgages.

The Tribune and Pacifsts

The Chicago Tribune on Sunday morning carried a first page cartoon which, in addition to being a direct incitement to violence against pacifists is, in view of the scandalous revelations in Washington, D. C., somewhat illogical. The cartoon depicts a stern-faced Uncle Sam admonishing a cringing pacifist instructor to "teach patriotism."

Our wholehearted sympathy is extended to the teachers who take the Tribune seriously. We can think of no task requiring more ability to sidestep, duck and explain than that of working up a heated patriotic enthusiasm for a government represented by such individuals as Daugherty and Coolidge who have, accepting only the recorded facts, been engaged in peddling the salable assets of the nation ever since they have been in office.

Passive resistance to evil seems to arouse the Tribune to an insane frenzy, but if it is wise it will begin to show some consideration to the pacifists. Only in a country where tolerance of oppression has become a slavish servility could the individuals involved by the recent odoriferous disclosures continue to control the machinery of government.

We are of the opinion that Al Jennings, reformed bandit will doff his hat in admiration to the new school now operating in Washington when he learns how they "do their stuff" in the Capitol. Bet Harding and Jess Smith are now giving the razberry to Captain Kidd, Jesse James and the Younger Brothers in their "little Green House" on the Styx. Those were mere pikers.

Will Hayes left the witness stand "looking like a man not entirely happy." There was no reason why he should get so excited granting that Harry Sinclair only paid $75,000 to pay the deficit of the campaign for making Warren G. Harding president. Why, Daugherty would not accept that amount as a birthday gift from a bootlegger.

Ramsay MacDonald's cabinet ministers are making quite a hit with English royalty. They even wear the purple when the king says it is not necessary. Just going out of their way to please His Majesty.

JOIN THE WORKERS PARTY

North Dakota Straws

The supporters of Coolidge can find little solace in the results of the primary elections just closed in North Dakota. At best the fact that President Coolidge received a plurality of the participating voters makes a bit more certain that which was already assured—his nomination at the Cleveland convention. Beyond that, the prospects of the republican party and the administration have not been brightened in the least.

The surprising weakness of Hiram Johnson, whose supporters waged a vigorous campaign and spent plenty of money, is significant. The unexpected strength of the LaFollette vote, gotten thru a sticker campaign, after the Wisconsin senator had withdrawn from the contest, is of like significance. The low vote of Johnson and the high vote of LaFollette show that the voters of North Dakota, on the right and on the left, are in no mood to brook halfway, artful dodging devices and prefer to act definitely either for the spokesmen of big capital, Coolidge, or for the opponent of the big banking and industrial magnates, La Follette. Hiram Johnson, avoiding a position on the agricultural crisis and evading every fundamental problem confronting the masses, was consequently snowed under.

Coolidge's getting a plurality, but not a majority, of the republican primary voters, with LaFollette a good runner-up, tho formally not in the campaign, will not ease things for the reactionary clique. The local leaders had been won over by promise of lucrative jobs. The official peace ship of the administration, the Mayflower, was called into action. Special tete-a-tetes were held at the White House between Coolidge and Roy Frazier, of the republican state committee. The Non-Partisan League was corrupted. LaFollette, knowing the game Coolidge was playing, refused to get into such a fight despite the fact that his past experiences with North Dakota assured him a clean sweep. Plenty of Coolidge money was poured into the state. Yet Coolidge could not get a majority of even the primary voters and was especially weak in the rural areas.

With a defeat chalked up against him in Noth Dakota, Hiram Johnson is at a disadvantage in the South Dakota race. With so much strength for him even in the less progressive ranks of the republican fold of the state, in the ranks of those who refused to heed his advice and keep his name out of the contest, La Follette can safely view the North Dakota result as a further indication of the tremendous support he could marshal in a determined fight against the reactionary republican party.

The North Dakota result is an index of the sharpening of the political conflict, and is the best indication of the fact that now is the time for the masses to organize themselves to strike telling blows at their capitalist enemies running the democratic and republican parties and dominating the government in behalf of Wall Street.

Invincible Soviet Russia

The last Morgan mortgage on France and the delayed de jure recognition of Soviet Russia by China are not without connection. Morgan has secured a lien on the policies of the French government on the continent, in the Near East, and the Far East. It is the Morgan pressure that is responsible for French interference with the resumption of complete friendly relations between China and the Soviet Republic.

The failure of the Chinese government to ratify the agreement drawn up by its representative, Mr. C. T. Wang, with the Soviet spokesman, Karakhan, is caused by the opposition of the French imperialist agents in Peking who fear that the Sino-Russian agreement is a menace to their investments and spheres of influence, particularly to the French stockholders in the Russo-Asiatic Bank seeking to dominate the Chinese Eastern Railroad.

Soviet Russia on the other hand holds that the status of this railroad is a subject for negotiation solely between itself and China. The Soviet Republic will see to it that the French government keeps its hands off this railway. It is evident that Mr. Morgan is now vitally concerned with the balance sheet of French imperialism. He is the moving hand in the pressure brought by the French government on China.

At best Morgan and Poincare can only delay the re-establishment of friendly relations between China and Soviet Russia. The Chinese people have been smarting under the lash of their foreign imperialist oppressors. The masses of China are more and more seeing in Soviet Russia their only friend and are putting ever more faith in the Russian workers and farmers. Soviet Russia is looked upon by the Chinese and by all other oppressed nationalities as the one unconquerable, steadfast champion of their freedom from capitalist domination.

There is a tremendous demand in China for close co-operation and friendship with the Soviet government. It will not be long before this great demand will wipe away all the lackeys of the Morgan-mortgaged French and other imperialist plunderers of China's huge natural resources.

Before the invincible Communist republic the heavy hand of the Czar of International capitalist finance, J. P. Morgan, will meet the same fate that befell the whole dynasty of Czars.

King Fuad of Egypt formally opened parliament a few days ago. His Majesty's photograph appeared with the news item and reminds one of the face of a successful beer-runner.

Stalin Discusses Russian Party Problems

NOTE.—The DAILY WORKER today begins publication of a sapeech made by I. Stalin, of the executive committee of the Russian Communist Party. He takes issue with the position of Comrade Leon Trotsky and his group, whose views we have already published.

• • •

STALIN SAID:

I. How the Opposition Seems to Be Gradually Disappearing.

THE discussion which has been proceeding for several weeks on the situation of the Party is evidently drawing to a close. At least this is the case with Leningrad and Moscow. As is known, Leningrad declared in favor of the line of the Communist Central. The principal districts of the town of Moscow have likewise adopted the platform of the Communist Central. The conference of the Moscow Party functionaries, which was held on December 11th, has fully approved of the organizatory and political line of the Communist Central. Without doubt the forthcoming general Party conference of the Moscow organizations will follow the example of the districts. The opposition, composed of the bloc between a part of the left Communists (Proebrazensky, Stookov, Pyatakov and others) and the so-called democratic centralists (Rafael, Sapronov and others), has been annihilated.

The phases of the discussion, and the transformations which the theses of the opposition have undergone during the same, are of the highest degree of interest.

Opposition Demands.

The opposition commenced by demanding nothing less than the revision of the principles of organization of the Party and of its inner policy which had been laid down two years ago and had been followed during the whole period of the New Economic Policy. The opposition demanded the entire carrying out of the resolution of the Tenth Congress regarding democracy within the Party and, at the same time, insisted upon the abolition of the restrictions adopted by the Tenth, Eleventh and Twelfth Congresses (prohibition of group forming, etc.). But the opposition has gone much farther. Claiming that the Party had, in its very essence, been transformed into an organization of a military character, and that the Party discipline had been transformed into a military discipline, the opposition demanded that the entire staff of the administrative apparatus be overhauled from top to bottom and that the most important functionaries be recalled, etc. The campaign of the opposition included the most violent attacks and reproaches directed against the Communist Central.

The Communist Central, as such, did not during this period, participate in the discussion carried on in the columns of the Pravda, as it wished to allow full liberty of criticism to all Party members. It did not even deem it necessary to refute the absurd accusations levelled against it, as it considered that the Party members possessed enough independent judgment to be able to decide the questions at issue for themselves.

Tired of Accusations.

This was, so to speak, the first period of the discussion. The second began when the Party members grew tired of this campaign of accusations and demanded the objective discussion of the questions at issue. This period was opened by the publication of the resolution of the Communist Central on the Party structure.* From this moment it was no longer possible to confine the criticism to mere generalization.

The concrete scheme presented by the C. C. and the C. C. C. faced the opposition with the alternative, either to assent to this scheme, or to come forward with another scheme of a concrete character regarding the realization of democracy within the Party. From this point it became clear that the opposition was incapable of opposing to the Communist Central scheme its own concrete one which would have corresponded to the requirement of the Party organizations. Thereupon the opposition began to beat a retreat. It no longer insisted upon its demands for the modification of the principles of Party structure followed during the last two years. The demand of the opposition regarding the abolition of the restrictions upon democracy, which were imposed by the decisions of the Tenth, Eleventh and Twelfth Congresses was likewise promulgated with less vigor. The demand for the overhauling of the apparatus from top to bottom took on a more feeble note and was relegated to the background. The opposition considered it expedient to substitute all their demands by proposals calling attention to the necessity of "a precise formulation of the question of fractionism," "proceeding to the re-election of all the organs of the Party," and "abolition of the system of nomination from above." It is characteristic that even these proposals of the opposition which had taken on a very feeble note, have been rejected by the workers' organizations of Krasnaya, Presnaya and of Zamoskvaryetchye (districts of the town of Moscow), both of which have, by an overwhelming majority, adopted the resolution of the Communist Central.

Third Party of Discussion.

This was, so to speak, the second period of the discussion.

At present, the third period has commenced. Characteristic for this period is the further retreat, I venture to say, the wild flight of the opposition. This time, in the resolution of the opposition, there are not even the greatly toned down demands. The last resolution of Comrade Proebrazensky* (which for the moment is the third one to be enumerated) which has been presented to the meeting of the responsible comrades of the Moscow organization attended by more than a thousand comrades, runs as follows:

"It is solely by the rapid, general and sincere carrying out of the resolutions of the Political Bureau, in particular by the renewal of the Party apparatus by means of re-elections, that our Party will be able to enter the new period of its development without interior struggles, which would distort its structure; it is only by this, that the cohesion and the unity of the Party can be confirmed in the true sense of the word."

It is certainly not a mere chance that the meeting has rejected even this absolutely harmless proposal. It is equally no mere chance that it has, by an overwhelming majority, adopted the resolution on the "approval of the political and organizatory policy of the Communist Central."

(To Be Continued [illegible].)

Every American Boy Has a Chance to Be President

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

WARREN GAMALIEL HARDING, the "just folks" president, and Calvin Coolidge, his Puritan moralist running mate, were the puppets of as low a crew of crooks and grafters as have ever appeared on the pages of American history.

Harry M. Daugherty, Jesse Smith and Jake Hamon—blackmailers, boodlers and bootleggers—engaged in any and every form of crime that promised revenue, from stealing oil leases to protecting booze-sellers plying their trade on Indian reservations, chose Harding and Coolidge for the American people in 1920 in behalf of themselves and the oil interests.

Harding—the front porch campaigner, the small town churchman and gray-haired respectable; Coolidge—the possessor of a New England conscience and enemy of the mildest form of liberalism, the frozen-faced apostle of Back Bay Brahmanism—were made president and vice-president by the Daugherty-Hamon-Smith trio whose political strength came from their successful manipulation of votes of the underworld of vice and crime in a dozen states.

The price of the presidency was agreement to appoint Hamon and Fall to cabinet positions where they could loot the oil resources of the nation.

Jake Hamon's pharamour, Clara Smith, stood in the way and when he conveyed, none too gently, the news that she could not go to Washington with him, she shot him. She was acquitted by a jury picked for the purpose after she had made threats to tell the whole sordid story.

Upon the good-will of an oil-field adventuress hung the fortunes of Warren Gamaliel Harding and Calvin Coolidge—the "just folks" candidates who represented the ideals of the plain people on Main Street.

The American people are easily fooled.

A 7,000,000 majority was piled up for the precious pair by preachers and teachers, housewives and husbands, Y. M. C. A's, Christian Endeavor societies, anti-saloons leagues, Women's Christian Temperance associations, Rebekahs, Maccabees and the whole horde of religious and moral uplifters who crawled onto the Harding-Coolidge bandwagon and were driven to the polls by the choicest collection of criminals that ever peddled lemon extract to Indians.

The mystery of the friendship of Harding for Ned McLean, the Washington publisher and debauchee, is explained; the protection of McLean by Coolidge is likewise explained for McLean is the man who knows the inner secrets of the Harding-Coolidge circle and who rides herd on presidents to see that the wishes of dead Jake Hamon are fulfilled by the puppets.

Everything that has happened since the election of 1920—the theft of the naval reserve oil, the bribery of public officials, the use of government agencies for personal purposes by men holding no official position, the control of the White House by McLeans, Sinclairs and Dohenys, the frenzied efforts to prevent the connection of the White House with the lowest element in American politics being known, the use of the bureau of investigation under Burns to intimidate men who were on the trail of corruption—has been according to the plans made by the Daugherty-Hamon-Smith trio and the endorsement of those plans by Harding and Coolidge as the price of election.

A government of the people? Excuse the laughter.

Consider the background of the Harding-Coolidge slate once more:

Harry M. Daugherty—a shyster lawyer and third-rate politician; Jesse Smith, his friend and partner, under-cover man in a hundred shady deals; Jake Hamon, bootlegger and gambler extraordinary, turned oil operator and his mistress, Clara Smith. These were the instruments used by the oil kings to pick and elect the president and vice-president of the United States.

All of which proves that every America boy has a chance to be president.

Health Experts To Russia.

NEW YORK, March 23.—A trip to Russia at the invitation of the health department of the Russian government is being contemplated by Dr. Alice Hamilton, expert on occupational diseases; Lillian Wald of Henyr Street settlement, and Elizabeth Farrell, director defective children in New York schools. Their journey would survey conditions in their specialized fields, presumably allowing Russian and American industrial, social and educational institutions to examine their findings. It is probable that the three American women will leave in May for Moscow.

STATEMENT FROM THE PARTY PROGRAM ON THE NEGRO QUESTION

THE NEGRO WORKER.

The Negro workers of this country are exploited and oppressed more ruthlessly than any other group. The history of the Southern Negro is the history of brutal terrorism, of persecution and murder.

During the war tens of thousands of Southern Negroes were brought to the industrial centers of the North to supply the needs of the employers for cheap labor. In the Northern industrial cities the Negro has found the same bitter discrimination as in the South. The attack upon the Negroes of East St. Louis, Illinois, the riot in Chicago are examples of the additional burden of oppression which is the lot of the Negro workers.

Altho the influx of Negro workers in the Northern industrial centers has laid the foundation for a mass movement of Negroes who are industrial workers, because of neglect of this problem by organized labor little progress has been made in organization of these industrial workers. The Negro has despaired of aid from organized labor, and he has been driven either into the camp of the enemies of labor, or has been compelled to develop purely racial organizations which seek purely racial aims.

The Workers Party will support the Negroes in their struggle for liberation and will help them in their fight for economic political and educational equality. It will seek to end the policy of discrimination followed by some labor unions and all other discriminations against the Negro. It will endeavor to destroy altogether the barrier of race prejudice that has been used to keep apart the black and white workers and to weld them into a solid union for the struggle against the capitalists who exploit and oppress them.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

J. P. Morgan is one of our most respected "citizens." In fact, he is no longer a citizen. He is a master and the rest of us are his slaves. Not alone does he dominate the United States and the South American republics but he reaches over to Europe and makes proud Poincare dance to his tune. Even the Chicago Tribune admits now that France is no longer free—it is ruled by the great international banker. The French franc was tottering in the wake of the mark. Poincare was fighting for his political life. Then Morgan stepped in. He made his deal with Poincare, closed a stiff bargain and then saved the franc and won a victory for Poincare. It is reported that Morgan cleaned up enough on the rise in French currency to give him back his principal and still be a French debtor to the extent of $100,000,000. Even Ambassador Myron T. Herrick invested $200.000 in francs and made a profit of $75,000. That is how the capitalists make their money. Easy, isn't it?

• • •

Sir Esme Howard, new British Labor Party ambassador to Washington addressed one thousand pilgrims in New York last week. Among those who talked besides the knightly labor representative, were Jules Jusserand, French ambassador; John W. Davis, former U. S. ambassador to Great Britain, and Frank L. Polk, former acting secretary of state. Sir Howard indulged in the customary twaddle about the good relations existing between the United States and England. As a matter of fact, the capitalists of the two countries are as fond of each other as two hungry wolves in the vicinity of a rabbit.

• • •

Well, the war veterans have a bonus bill. Perhaps Coolidge will veto it, tho I do not see why he should. The bill gives those who won the war a twenty-year paid up insurance policy. But Coolidge, we understand, is opposed to the principle of the bonus. It would place a price on patriotism and that is something our rulers cannot tolerate. Should not the workers consider it an honor to be allowed to risk their lives for a country where a few men control most of the wealth and the remainder live at the mercy of the few?

• • •

Communists made big gains in the Ruthenian elections for the Czecho-Slovak Chamber, polling 100,000 out of the 250,000 votes cast in the election. They will be represented by five deputies. The social democrats, Agrarians, Trudova Party and the Hungarian parties elected one deputy each. The Communists also elected two members to the senate against one for the Hungarian Party. As the social democrats align themselves more and more with the foes of labor, the working class of Europe are turning to the Communists for leadership.

• • •

It is refreshing to hear language like that used by President Manuel Quezon, of the Filipino senate, in speaking on the question of national independence. "American capitalists in the Philippines will not need protection of the American flag after independence has been granted the islands, but will be treated squarely, even generously," he said. Our rulers tell us that the United States government holds onto the islands because of consideration for the welfare of the Filipinos. Quezon makes it quite clear that the "people" of the United States have nothing to do with the subpection of his native land. But the American capitalists have.

• • •

There is much anti-militarist propaganda carried on in the French army, we learn from a Paris press dispatch. The military lords got alarmed a few days ago and raided the headquarters of the Communist groups, where they claimed to have discovered "incriminating documents." As usual the propaganda came either "from Germany or Russia." How beautifully definite! The French now need a stronger army than ever to compel the workers to pay the interest on Morgan's hundred million dollar loan.

SENATE CITES SINCLAIR FOR CONTEMPT

GIRL PICKETS ASSAILANT TO GO OFF FORCE

Workers From Many Unions Defy Injunction

Scores of Chicago workers from all trades joined the picket line of the garment girls yesterday in defiance of the "Dennie" Sullivan injunction.

Carpenters, printers, members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union, and workers from numerous other trade unions were seen "picketing and patroling," as Dudley Tayor calls it, side by side with the regular garment pickets and the 30 students from the University of Chicago Liberal club.

Workers Party Influence.

Most of the recruits from trades not affected by the strike come thru the influence of the Workers Party.

At the same time came the cheering word that Local 22, of the Waist Makers, New York City, had given $5,000 to the strike fund, and that Mayor Dever had promised to kick off the force Officer 3401 who committed the brutal assault on Olga Levin.

Willing Mass Picketing.

The appearance of members of organized labor in trades not affected by the strike was a complete surprise to the strikers. Many bricklayers, carpenters, and other building trades workers made their appearance and said that they were tired of seeing girls beaten up and hauled off to jail without the Chicago Federation of Labor making a protest. They were there to show the Federation and the Committee of 15 that if they called for mass picketing in defiance of "Dennie's" injunction there were plenty of workers who would be willing to express their contempt for the old boys writ in a practical way.

Students Discharged.

The two Liberal Club members David and Eugene Siskind who were arrested Saturday and arraigned in S. Clark St. police court yesterday morning were discharged by Judge Trude. The thirty-four strikers who were arraigned at the same time all demanded jury trials and were released on bonds.

Anton Johannsen and John Fitzpatrick of the Committee of 15 saw Mayor Dever yesterday and told him that organized labor held him personally responsible for the brutality of his police force to the strikers.

Promises to Can Brute.

Johannsen read to the mayor the report of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union to Committee of 15 on police brutality. He laid special stress on the assault committed on Olga Levin Saturday by Sam Golden in the presence of and assisted by officer 3401. The stress was laid on this case, Johannsen explained, only because it was a recent case and showed that the police are still brutal in spite of the promises of the Mayor that it would stop.

The Mayor said that he would have the Chief of Police in his office at 2 p. m. and see to it that the offending policeman was taken off the special strike detail and suspended. The Mayor also said that if the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union was ready to furnish witnesses to the assault he would see that officer 3401 was taken to the police trial board and fired from the force.

What the Mayor will do to stop the brutality of his police force remains to be seen.

That part of the report which Johannsen read to the Mayor dealing

COMMITTEES IN LONG DEBATE ON INJUNCTION ISSUE

Will Support Plan For Gompers Speech.

The "Committee of 15" of the Chicago Federation of Labor had an all afternoon meeting with the labor "Injunction Committee of 15" yesterday afternoon in the Federation building and at the close announced they hoped to get President Samuel Gompers here to speak against the "Dennie" Sullivan injunction at a mass meeting.

In addition they intend to publish a full report exposing the anti-labor record of State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe, who has given over his office to strike-breaking purposes.

Nelson Wouldn't Talk.

Committee men were loath to tell what the results of their long confab were, when they came out at six o'clock. Our reporter first asked Oscar Nelson, member of both committees and strikers' attorney and was referred to Anton Johannsen, chairman of the committee of 15.

Johannsen, just as loath to discuss the matter referred him on to Meyer Perlstein, vice-president of the striking union.

Fitzpatrick Quiet Too.

Perlstein also had nothing to say and directed the inquirer on to John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor and chairman of the injunction committee, having been appointed by Samuel Gompers after the Morrison Hotel meeting last August when Gompers spoke against the injunction which Federal Judge Carpenter gave the Mitchell Company against the garment union.

But Fitzpatrick was just as reticent and suggested the reporter see Johannsen again.

Back to Johannsen.

So back to Johannsen the reporter came and finally got the news about the sum total of the joint committee's activities for the afternoon.

Having got this information about the anti-Crowe publicity and the Gompers meeting the reporter hurried away to find out how many arrests had been made that afternoon of girl pickets or volunteers from other Chicago unions under the Sullivan injunction while the committee was talking.

Another Bank Gives Up Ghost As Bankruptcy Forces Farmers Into the Farmer-Labor Ranks

CROOKSTOWN, Minn., March 24.—The Merchants National Bank of Crookstown, one of the oldest and largest financial institutions in Northwestern Minnesota, with deposits in excess of $1,000,000, closed its doors recently and was taken in charge by a bank examiner. The excuse for the debacle was "frozen assets."

The fact is, of course, that the bank is a victim of the widespread bankruptcy which has swept like a tornado thru the northwest and left hundreds of thousands of ruined farmers in its wake.

Every bank failure is a fresh argument for a farmer labor political alliance and another nail in the coffins of the two old capitalist parties.

Denby Applauded By Gorged Diners At Alumni Feast

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, March 24.—Congressman Clancy, corporation democrat representing the Polish district of Detroit, testified to the nobility of character of Edwin Denby, recently kicked out of the cabinet on his oil record, at a dinner given by Michigan alumni here in honor of President Burton of the University of Michigan. Denby presided over the meeting and acknowledged the plaudits of two hundred old grads who stood and cheered with all the fervor of a Tammany precinct rally.

President Burton mildly deprecated the materialistic tendencies of the age and pleaded for recognition of scholarship and artistic and scientific achievement. He discovered, however, that he had been used as a vehicle for a Denby whitewash demonstration by politicians of both old parties.

CHICAGO TRIBUNE LEGION ROWDIES FAIL MISERABLY

Could Only Muster Nine Hoodlums

The attempt by the Chicago Tribune and the American legion to incite a riot at a Sunday evening church meeting of the Epworth league yesterday failed when only nine members in the audience of several hundred voted against hearing a talk on the youth movement in Germany.

The wound-be riot was directed not against the subject or the church, but against the principal speaker, Brent Dow Allinson, who had chosen to take his medicine as a pacifist by serving in Leavenworth penitentiary during and after the war while many vociferous patriots of his standing in civil life enjoyed dollar a year swivel chairs and improved their private fortunes.

Allinson spoke on invitation and despite threats, among them a scurrilous letter from a safety-first colonel named Wigmore who heads the Northwestern university law school. Many Northwestern students, including those who have denounced the taking of corporation money by the university, attended the Allinson meeting which passed off decorously until the speaker had finished.

Then an American legionarie leaped up to announce a talk on real Americanism and demanded that flags be produced. His evident attempt to start something brought hisses which the Tribune reported on the front page of its Monday issue in an eight-column streamer reading HISS FLAG—CHEER SLACKER. This is incorrect insofar as the hissing and the slacker is concerned. The hissing was for the interrupter of an Epworth society meeting and the man who was cheered was not a slacker but one who had faced the war issue squarely with no attempt to evade the consequences.

CLAIM SHELL OIL BACKED DE LA HUERTA

Doheny, Too, Mixed Up In Bloody Business

By E. G. WOLFE.

MEXICO CITY, March 25.—"The Mexican government possesses sufficient information to show that the principal directors of the oil company Al Aguila (the Eagle) frankly lent their aid to the recent rebellion led by Adolfo de la Huerta."

This statement is made by President Obregon to the press. El Aguila gave all sorts of facilities to the rebels, while obstructing the government forces. At the same time evidence that American oil interests want to separate northern Mexico from the rest of the country is at hand.

A Shell-Standard Fight.

Great emphasis has been placed on the influence of foreign capital in the recent Mexican counter-revolution. The reactionary rebellion was for the most part a final attempt of the landed interests to regain complete control of Mexico. But it was also a part of the world-struggle between the British owned Royal Dutch Shell (of which El Aguila is a subsidiary) and American Standard Oil.

The charges that American oil aided de LaHuerta in his rebellion are questionable. On the advice of A. B. Fall, Doheny's Huasteco oil concern advanced 10,000,000 pesos ($5,000,000) to the Mexican government. Secondly, the facts recently discovered point unmistakably to British aid to the rebels.

Plot To Buy Generals.

Nevertheless, Fall and Doheny and the whole group of American oil interests have made one assault after another upon the sovereignty of Mexico. The whole country is rocking with the exposures in El Universal Grafico. Words fail to describe the gall of the American imperialist. Nothing less than the shameless political conquest of the whole north of Mexico—all the oil lands—would satisfy these hungry souls. The plot of Fall aimed at the political separation of Lower California, Sonora, Chihuahua, Coalhuila, Neuvo Leon, and Tamaulipas, including the port of Tampico, from Mexico. The plan was to buy a few Mexican generals who were to make a revolution and then the United States was to recognize all these seceded states. They are the states richest in oil.

As early as 1915 telegrams from the files of the Doheny's Huasteco company showed an attempt at the partitioning of American oil interests. While this plot was in formation Doheny was saying that Mexican oil lands were worthless because salt water was entering.

Muzzling Article 27.

The money spent by American oil on Wm. G. McAdoo and George Creel and A. Mitchell Palmer has not gone to waste, for thru their efforts article 27 of the Mexican constitution has been muzzled. The Mexican government, under the severe pressure of Doheny and Sinclair, has decided not to make this article, which would have recovered untold mineral plunder for the nation, retroactive.

Greeks Adopt Theses On The Art Of Ditching Monarchs

ATHENS, Mar. 24.—Greece, one of the oldest of the world's monarchies, today took steps to become the newest republic. The Greek assembly, by an overwhelming majority, adopted the cabinet's program for dethronement of the monarchy and establishment of a republic.

CITATION HOLDING BIG OIL THIEF IN CONTEMPT OF SENATE

"That on the 22nd day of March, 1924, a witness, Harry F. Sinclair, being called before the committee and being on the stand, refused to answer any questions that might be propounded to him by any member of the committee as set forth in the report made by the committee to the Senate on Saturday.

"That upon such statements so being made by the said witness, Harry F. Sinclair, questions pertinent to the inquiry being prosecuted by the said committee were addressed to the witness which the witness severally declined and refused to answer as therein set forth.

"And now your committee reports to the Senate that the said Harry F. Sinclair, having appeared as a witness before your said committee, refused to answer questions pertinent to the question under inquiry and is in contempt of the said committee and of the Senate."

FOUL PLAY IS HINTED IN JESS SMITH'S DEATH

Committee Finds There Was No Autopsy

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, March 24.—The senate Daugherty committee, tho in recess because of the illness of Senator Wheeler, Mont., today decided to dig deeper into the circumstances surrounding the death of Jess Smith, Attorney General Daugherty's intimate, who was found dead, supposedly a suicide, in Daugherty's apartment here last May.

Tho Mrs. Roxie Stinson, Smith's divorced wife, expressly denied any intention of hinting at the possible murder of Smith when she testified before the committee Saturday, Senator Brookhart today announced that the committee had decided "to investigate all phases of the alleged suicide of Smith," in view of the fact that no autopsy had been performed at the time of his death.

While no subpoena has been issued for Dr. J. Ramsey Nevitt, District of Columbia coroner, Brookhart said he expected to call him to explain the failure to perform an autopsy and other circumstances surrounding Smith's death.

"There was no need for an autopsy," Dr. Nevitt told the news reporter today. "It was a plain case of suicide, if I ever saw one. There was no mystery about it and no suspicious circumstances so I issued a certificate of death by suicide without an autopsy."

Brookhart set the next session of the committee for Wednesday when the examination of Mrs. Roxie Stinson, divorced wife of Jess Smith, will be resumed.

After the senate vote citing Sinclair for contempt, Senator Dill, Washington, called for suspension of Attorney General Daugherty in view of the senate's action in turning over prosecution of contempt proceedings to the federal district attorney.

"With this question of the right of a committee of congress to examine witnesses being taken to the supreme court, there is an added reason why Daugherty should be suspended." Dill said. "The federal district attorney cannot be as free to prosecute Sinclair as he would be if he did not have a superior like Daugherty who is friendly to Sinclair.

"Daugherty should be suspended by the president so that the federal attorney may have a free hand.

"Another phase of the question is that Daugherty himself is now being investigated by another senate committee and is therefore deeply personally interested in the outcome of the action."

Senator Walsh in his brief argument said there was not the shadow of a legal doubt but what Sinclair's pleas to avoid testifying were totally without merit.

TURNED DOWN QUESTIONS OF OIL PROBERS

Quiz to Go Before the Grand Jury Soon

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Mar. 24.—The senate today ordered contempt proceedings instituted by federal authorities against Harry F. Sinclair, lessee of Teapot Dome, for his refusal to answer questions before the oil investigating committee.

The committee, at the instigation of Chief Prosecutor Walsh, cited the oil magnate for contempt and the senate formally approved its action.

Seek Grand Jury Indictment.

The next step is now up to the federal district attorney here, who will lay the matter before a federal grand jury.

If the grand jury finds Sinclair in contempt, he faces prosecution and a jail sentence, until he tells his story of his relations with former Secretary of the Interior Fall from whom he obtained the lease of the Wyoming naval oil reserve.

In his citation Walsh pointed to resolutions adopted by the senate empowering the committee to subpoena and question witnesses.

When the committee met today, Senator Spencer, new Republican member of the committee, called for a subpoena for the treasurer of the Democratic national committee.

Must Probe Both Parties.

"We cannot investigate the Republican national committee without investigating the Democratic national committee," Spencer said. Fred W. Upham, Republican party treasurer, was subpoenaed Saturday.

Spencer said E. L. Doheny had contributed to the Democratic national fund, having admitted before the committee to giving them $75,000.

"If the senator thinks that is relevant to the investigation I have no objection," Walsh said.

Where G. O. P. Got Dough

Chairman Ladd read the committee a telegram from Joseph O'Neill, publicity man in the office of Will H. Hays, in which O'Neill denied that he had made any statement to Harold Vivian, New York Times reporter, concerning an alleged gift of 75,000 shares of oil stock by Sinclair to cover the deficit of the republican party, about which Hays was questioned by the committee Saturday.

O'Neill stated that he had talked with Vivian and had been questioned about the campaign deficit, but declared he had made no statement to Vivian which could have been interpreted as an admission by Hays that he had obtained the stock.

Vivian then was called.

"Please tell the committee about your efforts to obtain an interview with Mr. Hays and your talk with Mr. O'Neill," Walsh asked.

"The city editor told me to go to see Mr. Will Hays," Vivian said. "I went to see Mr. O'Neill whom I had known for a long time.

"O'Neill told me Hays was out but I arranged to call him later. When I went back about 5 p. m., O'Neill said Hays had come and left.

Were Good Pals.

"I said, 'Well, what about it?' O'Neill said, 'He's going to tell them he got the stock.' I walked into his inner office with him and asked him, 'Well, Joe, who did he get the stock from?' O'Neill answered, 'I don't know but I presume from Harry Sinclair, because they have been good friends for many years.' O'Neill

CROWE'S DICKS BEAT AND DRAG STRIKER ABOUT

Then Sullivan Finds She Is Wrong Woman

Ray Grable, a dick attached to the office of State's Attorney Crowe yesterday tried to arrest Victoria Cislakiecz on a "Dennis" Sullivan attachment for contempt of court. The girl was in the hallway leading to the So. Clark St. police court when Grable and another officer came up to her and told her she was wanted at Sullivan's court. Miss Cislakiecz demanded to see the attachment and when it was shown her said that the name on it was not hers. Grable and his friend told her that didn't matter and tried to yank her around. Victoria resisted.

Brutes In Action.

The fearless coppers who are never afraid to try to maul up a woman yanked the more. They tore her coat and struck her and in the scuffle her purse was lost. Finally the coppers got her down stairs and dragged her across the street and literally picked her up and threw her into an auto driven by Mr. Dolinsky of the dress firm of Katz & Dolinsky.

When Victoria was taken into Judge Sullivan's court she was a wreck. Her coat was torn. Her hat was off and her skirt was mostly gone. The brave defenders of the dignity of Judge Sullivan's court had delivered their victim.

Was the Wrong Woman.

When Victoria's case was finally called she was sworn and told the judge she was not the person named in the attachment.

The judge excused her. Did he raise hell with the cops for making a blamed fool of his court? He did not. Did he say anything about police making sure they had the right person before they arrested anyone? He did not.

The cops had brought in the wrong person. That merely proved to Dennie that they were industrious, hard working bulls who had the best interests of his court at heart and did not give a fiddler's darn what innocent worker was hurt while they "did their duty."

Big Cooper Union Meeting Endorses June 17 Conference

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, March 24.—The Workers Party held a successful meeting at Cooper Union with Joseph Manley, National Secretary of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, Ben Gitlow, J. C. Bentall, and Juliet Stuart Poyntz as speakers, the oil scandal was explained from the workers viewpoint, with the audience applauding.

It was pointed out that the whole system of capitalism thrives on swindle, graft and corruption. The reason some senators are pushing this investigation, speakers pointed out, is because the constituents that they represent the middle class farmers of the north and middle west who are going bankrupt by the tens of thousands demand that they do something to relieve the desperate situation in which these farmers find themselves.

Joseph Manley showed that the scandal has opened the eyes of many workers and farmers and made plain that the government is owned and controlled by the capitalist class thru it's politicians—the two old parties—that this year would see a Farmer-Labor Party in the field.

A resolution was adopted condemning the government as the tool of big business and indorsing the June 17th convention at St. Paul, pledging to work for sending delegates to St. Paul.

Wants "The American Cossack."

To The DAILY WORKER: I am trying to find a copy of Maurer's book, "The American Cossack." I can't find it in any of the libraries in New York. I am sure there must be some reader of the DAILY WORKER who has a copy and will be glad to part with it for a dollar. Will you be kind enough to put a notice to this effect in The DAILY WORKER? I am sure it will bring results and I will appreciate it very much.—ROBT. W. DUNN, American Civil Liberties Union, 100 Fifth Ave., New York City.

Must Go to Jail.

NEW YORK, March 24.—William H. Anderson, former state superintendent of the anti-saloon league, convicted of forgery and sentenced to from one to two years imprisonment, must go to jail immediately unless his counsel succeeds in interposing some new obstacle.

Can The Tribune Remain Silent?

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE remains silent on the disposal of its school land lease at Dearborn and Madison Streets, to the Union Trust Company.

It is trying to shroud in darkness this transaction, remaining silent on how much it is profiting at the expense of Chicago's school children.

The charges set forth in the DAILY WORKER, accompanied by the question directed to The Tribune, "How much did you get?" were also made, at a mass meeting held at the Auditorium Theatre, by Miss Margaret Haley, of the Chicago teachers.

This great gathering unanimously adopted a motion calling upon The Tribune to answer, "How much did you get?"

The motion also included a question to United States Senator Medill McCormick, one of the owners of The Tribune, now up for re-election, asking "How much did you get?"

The Tribune published a story about the Auditorium Theatre Mass Meeting. But it carefully refrained from saying a single word about the questions addressed to it and to Senator McCormick. It was absolutely silent on the serious charges made. It has remained silent up to the present.

Before the DAILY WORKER came to Chicago, The Tribune could get away with this silence, flaunting its crimes in the faces of the workers of Chicago and the nation. But that day is over.

Copies of yesterday's issue of the DAILY WORKER have been mailed to Senator McCormick at Washington, D. C., asking him, "What have you got to say?" We continue our demand that The Tribune tell the workers how much it got out of the transfer of its 99-year school land lease, a lease worth millions, if not tens of millions of dollars.

The oil grafters expected to get hundreds of millions out of their Teapot Domes and Elk Hills concessions. The Tribune got its graft when its lawyer, president of the Chicago School Board, put over the school land lease.

As one result of this school land lease steal, many school children in Chicago are being housed in firetraps, forced to attend classes in "tin can" portables, crowded 50 and 55 into small rooms with a single teacher.

The children are not getting the education they are entitled to because the Tribune, with the Daily News and other rotten interests in Chicago, were able to put over their steal.

We again ask the Chicago Tribune, "How much did you get out of this transfer of the school children's land lease to the Union Trust Company?"

We again ask U. S. Senator McCormick, one of the owners of The Tribune, "How much did you get out of it?"

The workers of Chicago want to know.

Girl's Assailant May Lose Job

with the assault on Miss Levin follows:

Assault On Miss Levin.

While this report was being prepared (morning of March 22nd) for your committee Olga Levin, 365 E. 59th St., was assaulted by a man named Sam Golden who is employed by Lipson Bros. at 325 W. Adams St. in the presence of officer 3401. Officer 3401 not only refused to arrest Golden but assisted him in assaulting Miss Levin.

Miss Levin was employed by Lipson Bros. before the strike and this morning went on W. Adams st. to see if her shop had settled with the union. When she arrived in front of 325 W. Adams st. she saw a Yellow taxi cab drive up and Golden and officer 3401 get out of it. Golden was formerly a member of the union and Miss Levin in surprise at seeing him going to work while the strike is still going on cried, "My God there is Golden." Golden looked at her and said, "Leave me alone you dirty son of a bitch."

No Arrests Made.

Miss Levin asked Officer 3401 if he intended to permit Golden to use such language to her. For reply Officer 3401 pushed Miss Levin into the arms of Golden. Golden began punching her and knocked her glasses from her face. After Golden had struck her repeatedly Officer 3401 called to him to leave her alone and escorted him into the hallway of 325 W. Adams St.

This attack was witnessed by Harry Schlur and Ethel Friedman, 2628 Rice St. No arrests were made in connection with this incident.

More Pickets Arrested.

There were six arrests made on the picket line during the morning, they were, Bessie Katz, Reuben Columbus, Jennie Lieberman, Rose Garret, Bessie Lasky, and Mary Gureitz. They will all be arraigned in S. Clark St. police court this morning charged with disorderly conduct.

The Citizens Committee headed by Father Fredric Seidenberg has disbanded. In a statement yesterday it announced that it had been unable to get any of the large employers to agree to arbitrate the demands of the union and as a result they thought that their usefulness was at an end.

The report of the committee was delivered to Mayor Dever by Father Seidenberg. The Mayor would not make any statement on the report.

Citizens Committee Strikes.

After outlining the work the committee did both in investigating violence in connection with the strike and in attempting to bring about settlement of the issues involved, closes by saying:

"The hub of the matter is this: the Union insists upon recognition and collective bargaining; the manufacturers are evidently opposed to granting recognition and collective bargaining. The Committee does not see that it can now be of any further service to the parties to the struggle or to the public, which, in its opinion, has a most decided interest in the matter because it pays practically all the bills, be they what they may. The Committee drops the matter, but expresses the hope that the public will inform itself with reference to issues so that sooner or later a better day will dawn.—Frederic Siedenburg, S. J., Chairman, Mrs. B. Frank Brown, H. A. Millis, Norman B. Barr, B. M. Squires, A. J. Todd, Mary E. McDowell."

Citizens Roughly Handled.

Members of the special citizen's committee are sharply aroused over the denial of civil rights in the strike zone which they have experienced themselves. Prof. Arthur P. Todd, member of the special sub-committee of the larger committee was roughly ordered by policemen when he attempted to read one of the injunction notices posted up in front of a garment factory building on S. Market street.

Todd protested that as a citizen of Chicago he had peacefully walked the streets and read the injunction, purposely posted up for the public to see, but the policeman grew more ugly and would not hear what he had to say.

Two Red Hats Given to Hayes And Mundelein

ROME, March 24.—Patrick J. Hayes, of New York, and George W. Mundelein, of Chicago, became America's new cardinals of the Roman Catholic Church today. At 10 a. m. the pope convened the secret consistory announcing the elevation of the American archbishops.

The reasons for the honors conferred on the American bishops was given by His Holiness in the allocution. The main point made by Pope Pius was that the generosity of the American Catholics entitled them to this special consideration.

His appeal for aid in behalf of the starving victims of the Russian famine was answered generously by the American Catholics, he declared.

KLAN FACTIONS BATTLE OVER RIVAL WIZARDS

Ten Dollar Dubs in Indiana Meet

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MUNCIE, Ind., March 24.—Autocracy of the existing Ku Klux Klan and the one-man rule under which it is alleged affairs of the order are conducted, were charged in opening speeches made this afternoon at the auditorium where 150 delegates from ten northern and midwestern states and fifteen hundred visitors from all parts of the country gathered for the national convention called for the purpose of organizing "The Independent Klan of America".

More visitors and delegates are arriving on every incoming train and traction cars with special trains due this evening from Chicago and Columbus, Ohio, and by Tuesday it is expected 10,000 persons will be here for the meeting.

The constitution for the new organization is being drafted today and will be presented on the convention floor Tuesday morning. Two strong factions have developed among the delegations, one representing William James Simmons, Founder of the Ku Klux Klan, but now withdrawn from it, and the other representing Hiram W. Evans, present Klan head, and which is seeking to avert the forming of the new organization or at least a formal withdrawal from the parent body.

Ohio has the strongest delegations present from any state outside Indiana, with Illinois running a close second.

Independent Night Shirts Meeting to Oppose Southerners

MUNCIE, Ind., March 24.—Altho their advice may be asked in matters of organization, neither E. Y. Clark, Colonel William Joseph Simmons, Hiram W. Evans, nor D. C. Stevens, former Ku Klux Klan leaders, will be elected to executive offices in the Independent Klan of America to be organized at the first national congress which opens here today.

Colonel Simmons, founder of the Klan, and who, together with the other men have since withdrawn from the parent organization, arrived here after receiving definite announcement the new organization would not amalgamate with the Knights of the Flaming Sword, which Simmons is forming.

Five hundred delegates, representing eleven of the midwestern and northern states, arrived in Muncie early today and it is expected fully ten thousand delegates and visitors will be here by this evening. The convention, for the purpose of forming a Northern Klan Independent of the Southern organization, will continue over Wednesday. A new woman's auxiliary will also be formed.

Wilmington Union Men Responded to Teapot Dome Talks

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WILMINGTON, Del., March 24.—A Teapot Dome meeting here, Comrade R. Baker, of New York, member of Machinists Union and a comrade from the Young Workers League of Philadelphia, spoke on the Teapot Dome Scandal and pointed out how necessary a Labor Party was to defend the interests of the workers and farmers.

They stressed the fact that the Workers Party had carried on an energetic campaign for a Labor Party for the past two years.

Trade Unionists, who heard Communists speak for the first time, resolved to bring their fellow workers to the next meeting.

The militant unionists in this town are very much handicapped. During the Shopmen's strike over a year ago, many struck, and several hundred men are still out in this section.

One of those who struck in 1922, father of six children, is forced to labor at 35 cents an hour, which makes a total of $15.40 a week to feed the children, clothe them, and send them to school. Also, the rent must be paid, which is not less than $18.00 a month. Of course, it is impossible to do all of this with a small wage. The mother must go out and scrub for a living.

Electrical Workers Debate Throwing London into Darkness

LONDON, March 24.—London's double strike of tram and bus workers continued 100 per cent effective today, with employers of the city's underground lines meeting to consider joining the walkout.

Electrical workers will debate throwing London into darkness in sympathy with the strikers.

The labor government, confronted with the third industrial crisis of its brief administration, is groping for a three-fold solution, acceptable alike to the strikers, the private bus companies and the London county council, which controls the municipal tramway system. The strikers are asking increases of eight shillings a week.

IMPEACH COOLIDGE!

Demand Oscar Nelson Raise His Voice Against Thugs

AN open letter from the Chicago Executive Committee of the Workers Party, makes the sharp demand on Alderman Oscar Nelson, vice-president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, and paid attorney for the striking garment workers, that he raise his voice in the city council against the police brutalities and the violence by private thugs which is running rampant in the strike zone.

The letter, which is signed by Arne Swabeck, District Organizer for the Workers Party, and delegate to the Chicago Federation of Labor from the Painters' Union, demands to know why he has allowed these criminal actions go unchallenged so far and insists that he take immediate action. The Letter, which is dated March 24, follows:

• • • •

Alderman Oscar Nelson,
179 W. Washington Street,
Chicago, Illinois.

Dear Sir and Brother:——Speaking for those workers who are members of the Workers Party, and voicing the sentiments of the militant trade unionists of Chicago, we believe that the situation which has developed during the period of the strike of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union against the unfair garment manufacturers, demands certain actions on your part, as a member of the City Council, but principally as an officer of the local labor movement.

• • • •

DEMAND NELSON ACT.

You are aware, as well as the whole Chicago labor movement is aware, of the fact that the police force which is assigned to "keep order" in the strike zone are grossly partial in this strike situation, showing every possible ambition to protect the scabs and harrass, insult and mistreat the striking workers who may appear in that territory, while nothing is being done by the city authorities to change this situation. You are aware of the fact that striking girls have been brutally manhandled by these assigned police as well as by thugs, while little or nothing has been done to change this situation and bring those who are guilty to justice. You are aware of the fact that private gunmen, hired by the bosses, are assuming the authority to rule the streets within the strike zone, molesting not only striking workers but innocent bystanders as well. We want to know why nothing has been done on your part to stop this disgrace.

• • • •

NELSON MUST RAISE VOICE.

The District Executive Committee of the Workers Party, District Chicago, therefore demands that you bring these matters to the attention of the Chicago City Council, and demand from it:

First, that policemen, assigned to uphold "law and order" in the strike zone, actually do so and give the same protection to the striking garment workers as to anybody else;

Second, that proper action be taken toward punishing those policemen who have violated their oath of duty and been instrumental in beating up and mistreating striking workers;

Third, that all private gunmen and sluggers, the so-called guards, hired by the clothing manufacturers, be ordered removed from the steets, and that striking workers be deputized to keep order in the strike zone.

Fraternally yours.
ARNE SWABECK,
District Organizer, Workers Party, Chicago.

• • • •

Many trade unionists of Chicago are demanding that Nelson use his seat in the City Council for the strikers whose rights are being violated and whose lives are endangered by police thugs—paid by the city. A "labor representative," they insist should give the workers some of the support that he is now giving his friend, the Fire Commissioner, who is accused ofgraft and inefficiency.

Sinclair Cited For Contempt

told me about the Hays law firm in Indiana being counsel for Sinclair.

"O'Neill called me later on the phone and told me not to use anything to make it look like a statement from his office and asked me what I was going to write.

"I told him I was going to say that Hays got the stock and it would probably develop he got it from Sinclair. O'Neill said 'All right, but don't say anything about the $75,000. The story appeared and no denial came frm Mr. Hays. I fully expected when Mr. Hays took the stand Saturday that he would admit he got the stock."

Hays denied on the stand Saturday that he received any block of 75,000 shares of stock from Sinclair.

"Has Hays said anything to you about the story?" Walsh asked.

Hays Gets Anxious.

"After Hays testified here, he leaned across the table where I was sitting and asked 'What did Joe tell you?' I answered 'Joe told me you got the stock, Mr. Hays.' He shook his head. That was the only time that he protested to me in any way in regard to my article."

Stanfield brought out from the witness that the stock had an estimated value of around $500,000 at the time it was supposed to have been delivered.

"You cannot now say that Hays did receive the 75,000 shares of stock to help make up the deficit of the Republican Party?" Senator Bursum, Republican, asked.

"No, but I received the assurance from Mr. O'Neill that Mr. Hays was going to admit it. Mr. Hays could have corrected the story on [illegible], or denied it, if he wanted to."

"Is Mr. O'Neill's statement in the telegram just read to the committee true or false?" Stanfield asked.

"It is absolutely false."

Vivian then was excused.

Charles E. Oelschlager, Philadelphia architect, was called.

"Did you ever have any conversation with Powers in connection with a lease of Teapot Dome?" Walsh asked.

"I once overheard the conversation between Powers and Circelli," he replied.

"Powers said that he, a man named McGlynn and Darden were to get together $200,000 to get the lease of Teapot Dome."

"Was there any statement at that time in regard to a gift from Colonel Darden to the Harding campaign fund?"

"Mr. Powers said that Darden had given $225,000 to the campaign fund and was accordingly close to the administration."

Oelschlager was then dismissed.

Criminal proceedings will be started by the government against "certain principals of the naval oil lease scandal" before a grand jury here on April 19, Owen J. Roberts and Atlee Pomerene, special government counsel, announced today.

Cleveland Co-op Has Good Year; Is Expanding Work

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CLEVELAND, March 24.—The Co-operators Company of Cleveland, a grocery concern organized in this city some ten years ago thru the sale of stock at $5.00 per share to workers, is at last showing signs of becoming a thriving enterprise. At the last stock-holders' meeting the financial report and inventory of 1923 showed a marked improvement over other years, showing inventory and cash on hand at the close of the year at about $800 in excess of the amount of stock purchased.

Plans for expanding the business and opening another store are under way for the coming year. Delivery service to all parts of the city is in operation from the store and warehouse located at 1195 E. 71st street.

CLOAKMAKERS' STRIKE IMPENDS IN NEW YORK CITY

Union Demands Call for Voice in Industry

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, March 24.—A crucial test of strength is impending between workers and employers in New York's cloakmaking industries. Existing agreements between the Union, on the one hand, and manufacturers, jobbers and contractors, on the other, will expire in but a few weeks.

The workers' organization has already indicated the industrial reforms, the embodiment of which it will demand in the new contracts with employers. The Union's program, comprising ten demands which promise to become the crux of a grave struggle, will be discussed in conferences to which the employers have been invited by Morris Sigman, president, International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

The rejection of the Union's proposals would drive the cloak trade in this city to the verge of a serious crisis. It is still possible that such a crisis may be averted. Otherwise, New York's dress and cloak workers may follow in the path of their Boston and Chicago comrades, and accept the employers' challenge.

In a recent statement, Sigman outlined the changes to be insisted upon by the Union when the new agreements are drawn up. The union's demands are:

Limitation of the jobber to a specified number of contractors or sub-manufacturers during each season; a minimal number of guaranteed weeks' labor each year; free access for the Union to the employers' records, in order to ensure fulfillment of the agreement; raising of the minimum wage scale and systematizing of wages thruout the industry—a demand which implies the total elimination of piece-work and the computation of pay on the basis of the working week; on the principle that "the industry owes to its workers a living all thru the year," the union demands establishment of an insurance fund, to which both jobbers and manufacturers would contribute, and from which payment will be made to unemployed or part-time workers during the slack season; reclassification of finishers in the trade; enforcement of disciplinary measures against employers who violate the agreement; use of the union label on every manufactured garment; opening of a labor bureau by the union, upon which the industry shall draw for all its workers; establishment of the 40-hour week.

Peace or strife within New York's cloak industry will depend upon the employers' attitude towards these ten demands. Sigman has repeated his wish that all subjects of contention shall be settled peaceably. The alternative to such conciliation is a struggle of the most serious character.

Mexicans Waged Brave Struggle Against Fascisti

By ELLA G. WOLFE
(Staff Correspondent of Federated Press)

MEXICO CITY, March 24.—The Mexican farmer delegate to the First World Peasant Congress held in Moscow last year, was returning to Vera Cruz just when the Fascist rebellion broke out. He was warned by cable not to land in that port, but he did anyway. His was noble work leading a large group of campesinos against the generals serving the land owners.

His assistant, Rafael Carrillo, the leader of the Communist Youth of Mexico, and a delegate to the last Congress in Russia sent us the following letter from Vera Cruz: "Since the begining of the Fascist rebellion the activites of all workers groups ceased. All workers organzations without distinction of color or affiliation, or ideology were suppressed. Under these conditions the Communist group of Vera Cruz organized an illegal organization. Secretly we provided the agrarian forces under our Comrade Galvin, with arms and ammunition."

The secretary of the Communist Youth, Guillermo Lira, was taken prisoner by the rebels and hanged. The peasant youth organizations were dispersed and annihilated. Hundreds of peasant leaders were captured, tortured first, and hanged afterwards, and their bodies left to the vultures."

Comrade Carrillo goes on mentioning other atrocities committed against the workers and peasants, by the tools of the exploiting classes. But all this brutality, all this beastliness and injustice has been branded deeply into the souls and minds of the workers of Vera Cruz, these workers that last year were divided into several groups, strangling each other, are forming a united front. They are resolving all their differences. A commission has just been elected by 12,000 of them to draw up a platform on which they will unite in their struggle against their exploiters. It is a pity that the workers have to pay so dearly for their education.

Pretty Big Rabbit.

Miss Marion Goodman, 21, a teacher, was in a hospital here today suffering from numerous bites inflicted by two dogs yesterday. A rabbit fur coat she wore probably caused the attack, police believe.

OUT WITH DAUGHERTY!

WORKERS PARTY OUTLINES POLICY ON FOREIGN-BORN

Urges Councils Support Farm-Labor Drive

The Workers Party is taking steps to build a permanent foundation of the Councils for the Protection of Foreign Born Workers it was so instrumental in setting up to fight its successful battle against the forty odd laws aimed to hit workingmen who happened to be born in countries other than the United States.

Efforts are now being diected to build as many of these Councils, as practicable, into bases for the organization of Farmer-Labor branches which will be able to cope even more successfully with the menace of anti-foreign legislation. If the reactionaries should succeed in smothering the Teapot and Daugherty investigations there is a likelihood that the enemies of the foreign-born workers will make a last desperate effort to rush thru some of their vicious bills that have been held up so far.

In view of this danger the following plan of the Workers Party is of tremendous significance to all workingmen:

* * * *

Comrades:—The campaign initiated by our party for the organization of Councils for Protection of the Foreign Born Workers to carry on a fight against discriminatory legislation directed against foreign born workers has developed a mass movement of native and foreign workers against the proposed laws. Councils representing thousands of workers, in some cases tens of thousands have been formed and many mass meetings held. All kinds of workers' organizations have adopted resolutions opposing the proposed laws thru our initiative.

Immigration Committee Backs Up.

The pressure thus exerted has had the effect of compelling the Committee on Immigration to leave out of the law reported to the House of Representatives some of the worst features of the bills which were introduced in Congress and referred to the committee. The Johnson bill, reported to the House of Representatives by the Committee on Immigration, however, contains the following provisions:

1. Limits immigration to 2 per cent of the number of foreign-born of each nationality in the United States in 1890.

2. Provides that each immigrant must secure an immigration certificate

Photographs Required.

3. A photograph must be attached to the immigration certificate. The applicant must answer questions giving a detailed description of himself. In this section there is the provision that the immigrant must give "such additional information as the secretary shall by regulation prescribe as necessary to the proper enforcement of the immigration and naturalization laws."

Under the authority given in this section of the law the Secretary of Labor may require statements from each new foreign born worker coming to this country as to his political beliefs and union affiliation.

Would Bar Radicals.

4. Another section of the law prescribes that no immigration certificate shall be issued to an immigrant "if it appears to the consular officer, from statements in the application, or in papers submitted therewith, or otherwise, that the immigrant is inadmissable to the United States under the immigration laws." This section can be used to exclude those whose political views do not suit the ruling class in the United States, for it makes the test of securing an immigration certificate those laws under which many workers whose political views were contrary to the interests of the capitalists have been deported in recent years.

5. The immigration certificate of each immigrant will contain his photograph will be kept on file in Washington, thus providing for a registration of all foreign born workers who come to this country in the future.

6. The Johnson bill does not apply to foreign born workers now in the United States, as did many of the other bills introduced in the House and Senate.

Our Policy.

1. While the immediate danger of registration, photographing and finger-printing of all foreign born workers in this country is not so great as it was earlier in the year, the danger of amendments to the Johnson bill still exists. The danger of such legislation against foreign born workers also continues as a future threat.

2. The provisions of the Johnson bill are of such a character that the bill should be opposed by every worker. Immigration is still more limited than under existing law. By making the census of 1890 the basis of the quota certain nationalities are discriminated against. The requirements in regard to securing an immigration certificate make careful sifting of immigrants in the interests of the employing class possible. The bill provides the machinery for excluding those whose political views are not satisfactory to the ruling class.

Keep Councils Intact.

3. It is, therefore, necessary to keep up the fight against legislation against the foreign born and to keep the Councils for Protection of the Foreign Born Workers intact.

4. Our policy in these councils should be to show the workers' organizations represented that slave laws directed against foreign born workers are a constant threat, in fact, many discriminatory laws are now in the statute books, as shown in the pamphlet, "The American Foreign Born Workers." The only protection of the foreign born-workers against such legislation is to join with the native born in their industrial and political struggles. This means of conducting the fight is thru the organization of mass Farmer-Labor Party which will fight the political battles of native and foreign born workers alike.

Need Farmer-Labor Party.

5. We should endeavor to promote support of the organization of a Farmer-Labor Party in each council and to secure a resolution of endorsement of the formation of a local unit of the Farmer-Labor Party where none exists, or endorsement of the existing organization where formed. We should also endeavor to have the June 17th Farmer-Labor National Convention endorsed by the councils and a delegate elected from each council.

6. In such cases where the council is favorable to the idea of the formation of a local branch of the Farmer-Labor Party the council should act as the organizing committee to create such a party.

7. Our tactics in each council should be adjusted to the conditions existing, the direction being in every instance to secure support for the formation of a mass Farmer-Labor Party and the June 17th Convention.

Fraternally yours,
C. E. RUTHENBERG,
Executive Secretary.

Bughouse Fables

FABLE NO. 1.

ONE thousand striking dressmakers led by Oscar Nelson marched thru Market street yesterday, carrying banners "Down with the Injunction; Long Live the DAILY WORKER" and "We make the garments but the bosses' harlots wear them." "Dennie Sullivan is a capitalist hack; let us have labor judges" and "Mayor Dever may be a friend of labor but he says it with Clubs."

The parade started from the headquarters of the Chicago Federation of Labor with the Musicians' Union band playing, "Hail, Hail, the gang's all here." John Fitzpatrick stood in the window of his office waving his hat at the column as it swung into Wells street. Anton Johannsen was busy preparing bail for Meyer Perlstein, who was caught in the act of cleaning up twelve clothing bosses single-handed. He was charged with attempting to overthrow Chicago.

As the demonstration approached the strike zone, a call was sent in for police reinforcements, but the latter when they saw who was leading the parade dropped dead from laughing, and the girls won the strike, the bosses having no more sluggers to protect the scabs.

Bulls Who Beat Youth to Death Get Whitewash

ST. LOUIS, March 24.—The expected coat of whitewash has been applied to the city detectives, charged with having fatally beaten Claude Mitchell after he had figured in a minor auto collision which caused no damage or personal injury. Detectives say he failed to heed their command to halt. They captured the lad in front of his home, where he fell wounded. His mother, supported by eye witnesses, says the detectives beat her son with their pistol butts as he lay in the street. He died at the city hospital. A coroner's jury holds that the detectives did their work in performance of their duty. The matter will be laid before the grand jury.

Russian Cartoons Make Merry Over U. S. Oily Grafters

MOSCOW, March 24—Cartoons in the Russian papers are evently distributed between the American oil scandal and the British Labor government's gradual transformation into an imperialist government. The cartoons point to the fact that Premier Ramsay MacDonald is finding that pacifism and imperialism can not go hand in hand.

It's a Dark, Dark Year for Farmers, Uncle Sam Admits

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 24—Admission that the farmers of the United States can hope for no improvement in conditions this year is made in the official summary of "The Agricultural Outlook for 1924" issued by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, U. S. Department of Agriculture. Reports from 43,000 farmers thruout the country stating their intentions as to the planting of spring crops, have been sudied in connection with market conditions, and the bureau finds that "a normal production program is in sight, with no reduction in costs and no increase in the world market price for American wheat, pork, cotton and tobacco.

The situation this season, says the Bureau, with respect to labor, machinery, fertilizer, credit and other cost items is not such as to favor any expansion in production.

A surplus of corn next winter is anticipated, and the hog industry is declared to be "going thru a period of liquidation and discouragement." The dairy industry, also, will produce more than can be consumed in this country. Potato acreage is being reduced but oats, barley and hay will have a bigger acreage than in 1923. The spring wheat acreage will be somewhat lower than the total harvested last year.

The average wages per month, without board, for farm labor in 1923 was $47, as against $42 in 1922, and higher wages are expected this season. The Bureau recommends the reduction of hiring to a minimum. Nevertheless, purchases of farm machinery for the past season have been much below the normal for the preceding three years.

Bankers' Alliance Kills Russo-Chino Treaty Negotiations

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, Mar. 24.—Informed quarters here point to the recent redoubled activities of the American, as well as the French ambassador to China, in connection with the rupture of Russo-Chinese negotiations. The intrigues which led the Chinese government to terminate conversations with the Rusian envoy, Karakhan, are traced to the French-controlled Russo-Asiatic bank, with its subsidiary Pekin-Chita railway. It is suggested that French interests in China have offered important concessions to American investors in their sphere of influence, in exchange for American support against Chinese recognition of Russia. Moscow journals which are usually informed from Russian government sources claim to be in possession of proof of Franco-American-Japanese intrigues against China's amicable policy toward Russia.

Czarist Refugees Will Get Proceeds Of N. Y. Leg Show

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, March 24.—Theater goers in this city who attend the opening night of the Shubert performance, "Vogues," will contribute their money to Czarist conspirators and their victims in machinations against Soviet Russia. Proceeds from this performance will be devoted to maintaining the Russian White Hopes.

Several thousand voluntary exiles, mainly former officers of the Czarist armies, have chosen to remain abroad. It is for the benefit of these forlorn conspirators that proceeds of the Shubert leg-show will be handed to Prince Youssoupoff, the former aristocrat who is now in this country on his own invitation.

Olds and Browder Speak Tomorrow For the T. U. E. L.

Leland Olds and Earl Browder will be the speakers at the monthly meeting of the Chicago local of the Trade Union Educational League tomorrow at 8:15 p. m., at North-West Hall, North and Western avenues.

Olds, well known economic writer and statistician connected with the Federated Press, will speak on "American Imperialism and Unemployment."

Browder, associate editor of the Labor Herald, will speak on "The Situation in the German Trade Unions."

Discussion follows. No militant can afford to miss this meeting.

Chance for Few More.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—Denmark is the only country still entitled to send 1,000 emigrants to the United States before July 1. Norway's quota is down to 953, France's to 898, Esthonia's to 741, and Sweden's to 425. Russia and Armenia can still send 58, Iceland 53, Jugo Slavia 36, and Austria 22.

NEGRO UNIONIST PROTESTS BLACK CAPITALIST PLOT

Denounces Conspiracy Of Negro Press Ass'n

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 24.—Declaring that the stand against labor unionism taken by the Negro Press association means that 52 newspapers will seek to keep the Race in economic bondage, a Negro union miner makes a clear and ringing argument for workers' organization in the current issue of the Pittsburgh American, a Negro paper. The miner's letter from Finleyville, Pa., follows in part:

It is indeed discouraging to note the action of the Negro Press Association in its recent session in Nashville, Tenn.

It calls upon the Negro race to stand squarely behind capital, and announces its intention to use its powers to discredit all forms of unionism and economic radicalism. What does this mean to the Negro? We are a race of working people—hewers of wood and drawers of water. We are compelled to sell our services for our daily bread. The exceptions are negligent. (About two per cent.)

Unions Dropping Color Line.

The migration of the Negro has created a new problem in the labor world. The unions have seen that they must admit Negroes on equal terms or eventually "bust." Therefore, there is a movement on foot to organize Negroes. This is decidedly in our favor. Membership in a labor union means higher wages, better working conditions and opportunities to obtain positons which hitherto have been closed to our people. To remain out of a union when we have a chance to join is to sacrifice these benefits.

Non-unionism Means Slavery.

The capitalists desire Negro laborers to remain unorganized in order that they may maintain long hours, low wages, company stores which sell the poorest grade of goods at the highest prices; always have a supply of strikebreakers and keep us in a state of poverty and ignorance. They desire that we be herded like cattle in industrial camps and be driven like slaves by the state constabulary, the iron and coal police and other similar "cossacks" for which the industrial states are famous.

They hope to continue the peonage system of the south by which our people work from the early morning hours until the last beam fadeth and are cheated out of their earnings, always remaining in debt. All of us know what happened in Arkansas in October, 1919, when Negro farmers attempted to form a temporary organization to secure a fair price for their cotton.

We are told much about Negroes owning industries sufficient to employ our people. Capital knows no color line. A black capitalist is no more human than a white one. They all follow the dollar mark.

Radicals Make Progress.

The action of the Negro Press Association means that fifty-two papers will use their influence to keep us in economic bondage. Whatever we think of the radicals we must acknowledge that all reforms are and always have been advocated by radicals. We should not forget that they are the only people who advocate a square deal for every man whose blood is red.

Why should not leaders of this type be classed with Judas who sold his Lord for thirty pieces of filthy lucre

Safety First for Workers, Costs Too Much, Railroads Say

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 24—Alfred Thom, representing the railroad companies of the United States, has protested to the Interstate Commerce Committee of the Senate against the proposed legislation requiring the use of steel baggage cars as a means of protecting the lives of mail clerks and baggage-handlers in railroad wrecks. Thom told the committee that the cost of this protection to the lives of workers on the railroads would be too great, and that a great deal of time would have to be allowed for the change in case it were ordered.

Boycott For Their Comrades.

NEW YORK, March 24.—At a meeting here, German-speaking seamen passed a resolution in favor of boycotting ships belonging to those German steamship lines whose employes have been sentenced to prison because of their participation in the recent strike in English harbors. An appeal has been addressed to American seamen's and transport workers' organizations to support their German comrades in the boycott of the specified German ships in United States ports.

Every new DAILY WORKER reader means a new recruit in the ranks of militant labor.

BURNS MUST GO!

Urban League Sells Cheap Negro Labor to White Bosses: Always Sidesteps Real Issues of Race

The constant and increasing drift of the Negro farm tenants from the South into the industrial life of the North has paralleled the drift of the white farmers into the city factory life.

The Negro migration, however, has been on a much larger scale, proportionally, and the Negro has been forced to accept more humble positions than the white migrants.

"In recent years there has been a large increase in the number of Negroes working in factories," we learn from the 1919 Negro Yearbook. "The Negro worker in the factories is, to a large extent, doing the rougher, cruder and semi-skilled work.

Between 1900 and 1910 there was an increase of 173 per cent in the number of these factory workers. Negroes doing menial jobs in the textile industries increased 283 per cent in the same time."

A Race of Laborers.

Of the total Negro population in the United States, 87.4 per cent of all the males and 54.7 per cent of all the females are engaged in gainful occupations. These figures include a large number of Negro children, working in violation of child labor laws. Of the working males, 1,099,715 are engaged in domestic service (servants), 2,893,674 are farm help, and close to a million are employed as factory laborers.

These figures mean that the Negro Race as a whole is employed at unskilled labor. Economically the Negro Race is a Race of servants and laborers.

Over half the total female population of the Negro Race is working at gainful occupations. Out of the two and one quarter million Negro women employed, over one million are employed as servants, factory laborers, charwomen and cleaners, maids, seamstresses, waitresses, and chamber maids. Another million are employed as farm laborers, laundresses (taking in washing at home), cooks, and cigar makers. Practically all of the 54.7 percent of the total females of the Negro Race, including many children, work at unskilled and menial labor.

Home Life Destroyed.

We have seen that in all the large Northern cities, the Negro, living in segregated areas, in wretched houses, and paying higher rents than any other group, are working for low wages at unskilled labor. The Negro has less home life than any other group; for over half the total females are forced to labor as well as raise their families, because the low wages of the Negroes are combined with the high rents. Not only are the women and children forced to go into factories, but in order to make both ends meet nine out of every ten Negro families are forced to take in at least one lodger, in many cases destroying the private family life, irritating the women of the house, and having a bad effect on the children.

And yet the leaders of the Race, both individually and in their business and welfare organizations, instead of squarely facing these appaling facts, by trying to organize the Negroes in their unions to demand higher pay, instead of taking a determined stand on the housing and segregation evils, instead of putting the true conditions of the Race before their people, not only ignore these issues, but are underhandedly, nevertheless directly traitors to their Race.

League Dodges Issues.

"It is impossible", says L. Hollingworth Wood, President of the National Urban League, "To adopt a definite program and enforce it in all its branches, the theory of our organization being that general principles are suggested by the National body, and the local groups of white and colored men and women forming the branch organizations in each locality are charged with the working out of these principles in the way best suited to the locality in which they have set up their organization."

In stating these general principles, Wood goes on to say "Negroes and whites are admitted to membership. Racial co-operation is the slogan. We have branches in 41 cities. Large numbers are visualizing the Race question in terms of world peace and good feeling." We will readily admit that the Urban League talks generalities.

League Bought by Bosses.

At the last national convention of the Urban League it was decided that "The Negro housing problem cannot be left to agents or private interests working for profit. It can best be handled by corporations employing Negroes, under direction of welfare agencies, or by building and loan societies".

No mention is made of organizing the Negroes into a militant party in order to gain the power to enforce their demands for better housing and more wages. No mention is made of strengthening the Negroes in trade unions. No demand against Negro segregation is made.

In fact, here in Chicago, the Urban League seems to be run by men like A. Hill, who favored the Negro girls acting as strike-breakers in the garment strike, or A. C. Thayer, who boasts of being a property owner, or the white employers who draw on the League for cheap labor, or wealthy Negro real estate concerns who profit from the present Negro housing crisis.

Employers Like Urban League.

The money required to run the Urban League for the next year is now being raised. The Urban League seems to exist thru donations. But where do these donations come from? The citizens campaign committee of the Chicago Urban League, at a dinner last Friday night, at the Appomattox Club, made its first call for contributions. We are told by the League, "Three firms contributed $500 to the fund. Six well-known business men tossed in their check for $100 each." The Liberty Life Insurance Company, the Pyramid Mutual Company, and Your Cab Company, were the firms which contributed $500. Included in the "well-known business men who contributed" were A. C. Thayer, an officer of the League and member of the Lowden commission on Race relationship. T. A. Hill, contributed $50. He heads the Chicago Urban League.

Workers Organize Selves.

Can it be expected that this well-known welfare organization, controlled by large white and Negro business men, will take a real interest in the conditions of the workers, when that interest might raise the price of Negro labor, and lower the rents, both of which would cut the profits of those who control the Urban League.

Remember what the Workers Party says about the Negro Worker. "The American Negro population will be an important factor in the class struggle, a factor which might be used as a weapon of reaction for the defeat and further enslavement of both themselves (as the Urban League is trying to do), and their white brother workers, or which, if enlightened to its own interests, can be a decisive factor for the liberation of the exploited classes of both colors. The winning of the Negro masses who toil in industry and in agriculture, is a primary task. Simultaneously the workers of the white race must be enlightened to the giving of complete and equal partisanship in all forms of the political and industrial organization of the working class. The elimination of all race discrimination within the working class movement is preliminary to its elimination in society as a whole".

Negro Women Are Forced Into Factories by Leaders of Race

THE NEGRO has less home life than any other group of people. Over half of the total Negro females, including many children, are forced to enter factories, to meet the high rents. In addition, nine out of every ten Negro families take in at least one lodger, destroying all Negro family life, and irritating the women of the Race. The combination of low wages paid to Negroes and higher rents for Negro dwellings has forced women and children to work and raise families, too.

The Urban League dodges real issues like Race segregation and the housing problem. To the Urban League, "race co-operation" means supplying cheap labor to white employers who support the League, and extracting high rents from the Negroes, which go into the pockets of the wealthy Negro real estate firms—who support and direct the League.

Amalgamation of Shoe Workers Is Issue at Confab

BOSTON, March 24.—Delegates from New York and from 11 Massachusetts towns, representing locals of four independent shoe worker unions, met in Boston to plan a united labor front in the industry. Amalgamation at this time was held up by questions of union property, existing contracts with manufacturers and constitutional points.

The problem is becoming pressing because manufacturers are moving into the middle west, leaving the employes without money enough to follow their jobs.

Fears American Legion.

EBERBACH, Germany, March 24.—Grover Cleveland Bergdoll wants an official of the United States government to guard and accompany him if he is to return home and face charges of draft evasion.

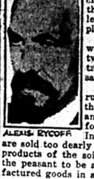
Bergdoll said he would be willing now to stand trial for evasion of the draft at almost any time, since the maximum sentence is one year's imprisonment, but that he intends to stay in Germany for a while yet. He is still without official offers concerning his proposed return.

Snow Halts Rail Traffic.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 24.—Rail traffic in some sections of central Illinois was seriously hampered by one of the heviest snows in years.

Rykoff Tells of City-Land Crisis In Red Russia

Alexis Rykoff, the new premier of Soviet Russia, in a recent interview, declared that the Soviet Republic which weathered many crisis since the Communists first seized power in 1917, is today faced with a crisis equal to any that the Russian leaders ever grappled with.



ALEXIS RYCOFF

"There is no working basis between the industrial clases and peasants," Rykoff said. "They are not running parallel in the matter of wages and compensation for their products. Industrial products are sold too dearly in Russia and the products of the soil too cheaply for the peasant to be able to buy manufactured goods in any but the smallest quantities, if at all."

Rykoff's Analysis.

Russian cities, M. Rykoff pointed out, have only 20,000,000 people at the present time, yet this urban population consumes seven-tenths of the manufactured products of Russia, while the peasant population of over 100,000,000 consumes only three-tenths of such products.

"When the peasant refuses to buy your calico and your kerosene and your nails," said Rykoff, "because he cannot afford to pay for them, because the price is too high, what do you have then? You have a chain that is broken, and one end of the chain hits the workmen. If the peasants won't buy, the production of such articles will have to be curtailed and the city workman will be thrown out of his job.

"Our crisis," said Rykoff, "is not a crisis of poverty and want. It is, on the contrary, a crisis of overproduction and surplus—a surplus of grain for which there is no market in our cities, and which, therefore, keeps down the price of bread and reduces greatly the buying power of the peasant."

Lack of Balance.

The premier was quite well aware, he said, that "the lack of balance between industry and agriculture is a historic fact in Russia. It existed before the war, when Russia was exporting 500,000,000 to 700,000,000 poods of grain. (A pood is 36 pounds.) Even then Russian industry was kept going to a large extent with foreign money, money which came either in government loans or else from investments by foreign capitalists in Russian industries, particularly in the mining and metal industries."

The premier touched upon the subject of Russia's foreign policy. In general, his attitude is that of "watchful waiting." He made no denial that the Soviet government was anxious to attract foreign capital and utilize it in the upbuilding of Russia's economic life. Some foreign capital was, in fact, already at work in Russia.

Necessity of Extreme Caution.

"But," he said, "the greatest obstacle in this direction is the absence of recognition of the Soviet regime by such countries as France and America. We have even no trade agreements of any sort with these countries. There is no official connection between us and them that could give a legal guaranty to any business transactions between us and citizens from those countries. To talk of concessions, therefore, is wellnigh useless. Even in a preliminary discussion about concessions with business representatives from those countries we must act with extreme caution."

New Baritone to Be With San Carlo Opera This Week

Local opera fans attending the performances of the San Carlo Grand Opera Company, which comes to the Auditorium Theater for a week's engagement on March 31st, will hear a new baritone, who is making his initial appearance in this city. The new singer is Mario Basiola, an importation from Italy last fall, and an artist whose singing has aroused the New York, Boston, Philadelphia and other large town critics.

Probably Basiola's greatest success is his work in Rigoletto, in which he will be heard here on Wednesday evening, April 2nd, with a noted cast including Consuelo Escobar, coloratura; Stella DeMette, Demetrio Onofrei, the sensational young Roumanian tenor; Pietro De-Biasi and others.

Report Shows 80 Pct. Of German Children Are Undernourished

(By The Federated Press)

LEIPSIC, Germany, March 24.—Investigations recently made in one of the working class suburbs of Leipsic, Liebertwolkwitz, show that 80 per cent of the school children are undernourished. Of these, 28 per cent are so badly undernourished that International Workers' Relief had to assume responsibility for them immediately, without waiting to see where the money was to come from. It was further demonstrated that many of the children wore no shirts on their bodies, tho this is a severe winter.

JAP FARMERS AND WORKERS FORM ALLIANCE

500,000 Members in Big Farmers' Union

(Special to The Daily Worker)

TOKIO, March 24.—The Nippon Nomin Kumiai, or the Farmers' Union of Japan, a strong proletarian organization, officially united in the political action with the General Labor Confederation of Japan when 300 farmer delegates unanimously passed a resolution to stand side by side with the radical labor organization. The meeting was held at a Y. M. C. A. here.

The farmers' union includes socalled "dirt farmers," tenants and farm laborers. The big farmers' movement sprung up almost over night.

Two years ago, February, 1922, the Nippon Farmers' Union held the first meeting of the kind in the history of Japan, with less than 300 union members represented. At the second annual meeting the membership had increased to 20,000. At the end of 1923, there were 250,000 members and the latest information reaching here shows over 500,000 in the movement, which has grown with remarkable rapidity, as "the fire on dry June grass," according to the way Editor Inamura, of the farmer movement, preferred to describe.

There are three active geographical centers subdividing the Japanese farmers' movement, namely: Gunma, Niigata, as the center of eastern Japan, and Gifu district, in central Japan. Okayama district comes to the front in western Japan, Kobe alone having 485 disputes between landlords and tenants in the single year of 1923, is second to none. Among the 300 farmer delegates at the convention there was one who represented the tenant farmers of the Imperial Household Ranch at Kamikawa, Mokkaido.

Japanese Farmers' May Day.

On the first of May, 1923, farmers from four counties in Okayama district flocked to a country town named Saidaiji and celebrated May Day. Over 1,500 participated in spite of police interference. Shinzo Katsura, of the Workers' and Farmers' Alliance (a soviet, made in Japan), delivered a fiery speech, quoting "30 years ago the American workers shouted eight hours and human emancipation, fixing this day as the toilers' holiday; six years ago Russian workers rejoiced in it as his own and on the May Day four years ago industrial workers of Japan hoisted a red flag in the Ueno Park, Tokio, and today we, the Japanese farmers, declare independence from capitalism." Already they are planning big demonstrations for the next May Day.

Communist Leader.

The wide awake farmers are indebted to Prof. Sano and Prof. Inomata, of Waseda University, the latter kept in jail as the active Communist, while Prof. Sano, also condemned to prison, is still keeping himself underground.

In response to the farmers' appeal for the united front, the General Labor Confederation, as well as many other left wing labor organizations, headed by Comrade Suzuki and Rev. Kagawa held a joint meeting accepting the proposal wholeheartedly. The committee elected from both farmer and labor side are mapping out the plan for the future, according to the recent report.

Are you self-conscious about the impression you make on people?

PERSONAL appearance has a lot to do with the way you feel. Clothes count, of course. But still there is one thing so many people overlook—something that at once brands them as either fastidious or careless—the teeth.

Notice today how you, yourself, watch another person's teeth when he or she is talking. If the teeth are not well kept they at once become a liability.

Listerine Tooth Paste cleans teeth a new way. At last our chemists have discovered a polishing ingredient that really cleans without scratching the enamel—a difficult problem finally solved.

THE POWER COLUMN

SUBS from all over the country are pouring into the office of THE DAILY WORKER in the National "Daily Worker" Subscription Campaign for 10,000 new readers by June 15th, their number increasing with every mail.

Not only are the subs coming in from some sixty of the largest towns to which quotas have been assigned by the business office, but they are coming in from towns and hamlets, all over the country, showing that THE DAILY WORKER has made its home in these small towns and is already producing material results in ever increasing its circulation thru the co-operation of its militant readers in those outlying districts.

Cities to which quotas have been assigned, in writing acknowledgments of their quotas in all cases accompanied by a number of new subs, express confidence not only in reaching their quotas but of unquestionably passing them.

Concrete plans outlining the campaign for new readers within their territory are being sent in to us by our active city and branch agents, showing that THE DAILY WORKER has been firmly established in those cities and has become a center of workingclass activity there and the mouthpiece of militant workers.

The rule seems to be that once a copy of THE DAILY WORKER reaches a worker it makes him its friend and it is up to the members of the Workers Party and other militant workers thru whose efforts THE DAILY WORKER has been established, to see that the workers in their vicinity become acquainted with THE DAILY WORKER, become subscribers to it and are drawn into our ranks.

There is no better time than the present in which to approach workers with our militant organ. Disgusted at the recent Teapot Exposures which involves all which heretofore had been held sacred by American citizens, they are more than ever ready to listen and heed the slogans of the militants. And there is no better way to reach all workers, organized as well as unorganized than thru THE DAILY WORKER.

The special offers made in this great campaign for 10,000 new readers are proving of tremendous help to our friends and boosters. Thru the offer of two months trial subscription for one dollar, they are able to enlist into our army of readers sympathetic but hesitating workers and for every new one year's sub they will earn for themselves a half year's subscription to either "Soviet Russia Pictorial", "The Liberator" or "The Labor Herald".

Ten thousand new readers of THE DAILY WORKER by June 15th is not a wild figure thrown to the winds. It is a close estimate of what the friends of THE DAILY WORKER can do. It is what we confidently expect YOU and thousands of other classconscious workers to do. You need not be expert salesmen or able speakers. THE DAILY WORKER speaks for itself. All we ask you to do is show your shopmates, neighbors and friends a copy of THE DAILY WORKER, approach them with a subscription blank and urge them to subscribe.

DETROIT, Mich.—The Subscription Drive of the Detroit "Boost Our Press" Club closed with the Press Banquet, Saturday evening, March 15th.

The enclosed 15 new subscribers and one year's renewal is "Exhibit A" in our case to establish Detroit as the premier subgetter city of THE DAILY WORKER family. Even more convincing evidence will be sent with each succeeding mail until long before June 15th we will have made our case impregnable.

We only got started in the last Drive and we will show the country that the dynamic which usually prefaces Detroit doesn't mean "maybe".

We only hope other cities will not be discouraged as they take note of Detroit taking the lead in the race for subs.

LET'S GO!

THIS WISCONSIN CITY NEVER HAS BEEN ORGANIZED

Beloit Has Disgraceful Open Shop Conditions

Enclosing a contribution for the Farmer-Labor campaign a Workers Party member writes the National Office from Beloit of the difficulties in the way of pioneer work in that open shop industrial town of Southern Wisconsin. Tho the 23,000 people of the town are employed under the worst conditions in machine, foundary, wood-working and knitting industries they have never been organized for resistence.

Never Have Had Unions.

Listing the bigger open shop places he says:

There is the Fairbanks-Morse and Co. making oil engines and water pumps, employing about 3,000: the T. B. Yates Wood Working Machinery Co. employs about 1,200; The Beloit Iron Works has about 500 and many other foundries, machine shops, paper mill,—all open shops—never have been union.

T. B. Yates died last year and left 32 million to his daughter, 15 years of age.

The workers are the way the bosses want them. They never think about union or strike; they all talk about their chickens, if they have any, about cars, houses, if they have one or dream to buy one, and about the very, very, best man of all, Henry Ford.

Piece Work System.

Worst of all the above shops I mention is the Bradley Knitting Co. employing about 100 girls and women. Each one is compelled to work piece work and to make at least $2.25 a day. If she makes less, they fire her, because there is a city or state law requiring every one to get at least $2.25 if she fails to make that much the company must make up the difference. Now for my part I can't do very much or even nothing because I am a foreigner and can't speak the English language, very much. I am a member of the Greek Federation of the Workers Party and Greeks that live in Beloit are worst than their shop mates. They all think about Greece and money. This is my true story, please advise me if there is anything that I can't do.—Gust Phillips.

Brookwood School's Board and Tuition Is 20 Bucks Weekly

(By The Federated Press)

KATONAH, N. Y., March 24.—Brookwood Workers' College will give two summer school courses this year. The first is a one-week Labor Institute, June 23-28, and the second a two-weeks' labor problems course, July 7-20.

The Labor Institute is especially for delegates to the annual convention of the Women's Trade Union League but is open to all men and women of the labor movement. Among the subjects are How to Increase Wages, Technical Changes in Industry and Their Effect on Trade Union Activity, the International Connections of Organized Labor, and the A. F. of L. Declaration on Industrial Democracy.

The two weeks' course is for officers, organizers, business agents, active rank and file members of the unions, including union teachers who have taught workers' classes. Company unions, labor banks, the labor press, wages, the business cycle, scientific management, the Plumb plan, labor in politics, will be discussed.

This course will be in charge of David J. Saposs, instructor at Brookwood, co-author with John R. Commons of the "History of the Labor Movement in the United States." Among those who will lead discussions are W. Jett Lauck, Walton H. Hamilton, Stuart Chase, Otto Beyer and Chris Golden.

Brookwood is located on a 50-acre tract, among the hills of Westchester county, 40 miles from New York.

The total cost of board, room and tuition for either course is $20 a week. Thirty students can be accepted for each course. Address Secretary Summer School, Brookwood, Katonah, N. Y.

NEW ORLEANS, March 24.—Princess Santa Borghese, a Fascist propagandist, spoke here in the auditorium of Loyola university on the Fascist movement in Italy. The princess traced the violence of the movement and claimed it was good for the world.

WITH THE YOUNG WORKERS

CONDUCTED - BY - THE - YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE

To All Young Workers, Soldiers and Sailors!

DO YOU want to go out and fight in a war to protect the interests of those who are today plundering and robbing the nation of its resources?

Are you interested in fighting a war to make safe the profits of the millionaires of this country, the Rockefellers, Morgans, Dohenys, Sinclairs and the rest of that crew?

You have been taught to lay down your lives in defense of this country, to protect it from robbery and oppression.

Yet, the very ones who have always been the first to urge you into a war are the ones who are today plundering the wealth of America. The highest officers have been found guilty of treason to the interests they were sworn to defend.

The secretary of the navy, Edwin Denby, has sold out the oil lands belonging to the navy to Doheny and Sinclair. He has proved traitor and he goes scot free.

Another War Is Coming!

War, the murder and torture of the young workers of this country, is coming again to the United States and the rest of the world! You, young workers in the factories, mine and mills, in the army, navy and marines, are going to be called upon to go out and fight in another war "to end all wars."

Do you know what a war means? Do you remember the last war for democracy? Are you anxious to get into another bloody slaughterfest where the young workers are dolled up in uniforms and sent off into the dirty stinking trenches to have their guts ripped out by the bayonets of other workers; their limbs carried away by shrapnel; their bodies riddled by bullets, left in a torn, bleeding mass on the red battlefield? Are you anxious to go and get killed to protect the money of the capitalists of this country who are exploiting you every day in the place of work?

When you are dragged into war, for what do you fight? Whom do you sacrifice your life and health for? Is it democracy? Is it to protect the honor of your country, or the women and children?

Fighting for Oil and Steel.

In Washington today we see one of the greatest scandals of government that has yet been revealed. The greatest and most honored government officials have been proved to be crooks, grafters and traitors, bribed by the oil magnates, Doheny and Sinclair, into selling the rich naval oil reserve lands of the government. The big men in the government, whom we were taught to admire, respect and worship, have been shown up once more as tools in the hands of the millionaires of this country. "Teddy" Roosevelt, Jr., Attorney-General Daugherty, ex-President Harding and even Coolidge, all are in the oily mess, tools of the capitalists and bankers of this country. The oil lands which were supposed to be used for the navy's reserves were practically donated to these oil men.

After the World's Oil.

What does this mean? Is it merely another case of graft and corruption, or has it a more important significance?

The Teapot Dome oil steal is another piece of evidence to show the struggle among the nations of the world to get the control of the oil resources of the world. A struggle which is one of the factors leading to another war!

Oil is now the leading fuel of the world. Battleships using it are vastly more efficient than the old style coal burners. But the oil of the world is limited and the capitalists of every nation rush to get control of all of the oil lands they can lay their hands on. When Wilson interfered in Mexico it was to protect American oil interests. When Secretary of State Hughes refused to grant recognition to Mexico it was for the same reason.

The government of this country is the tool in the hands of the capitalists of this country and when another war comes—and it is coming as surely as the last one—you, young workers, will be fighting for the dirty dollars of the bosses of the United States!

Preparing for Slaughter.

The rulers of this country realize that we are heading towards another war. They know that the struggle between England and the United States for the control of the oil, seas, coal, markets and iron of the world will sooner or later bring on a war and that the youth of this country will have to be prepared to serve as cannon fodder to fight for the investments and profits of Rockefeller and Morgan and Gary.

This is why the bosses of this country are carrying on a campaign for the Boy Scouts, the Citizens Military Training Camps and for enlistments in the army, navy and the marines.

What Will You Do?

Young workers, remember the last war for "democracy!" Remember the hundreds of thousands of youths who died on the bloody field of battle and the many others who came home: human wrecks. Remember that while you were giving your lives and health, the millionaires were coining profits galore, sitting at home [illegible] patriotism. Remember the promises that were made to you! The bonus, relief for wounded vets. What you got was NOTHING! Graft in the Veterans' Bureau of the United States and kicks all around was all you got. What are you going to do when the next war comes around?

Are you going to wait until it is too late to protest and act effectively against being dragged into a murderous war to safeguard capitalist interests?

You know what happens during the war. You know what happens in the armed forces of this country before a war. While Mr. McAdoo, a presidential candidate, nabs off hundreds of thousands of dollars and others get millions out of the naval oil steal, rotten grub, rotten conditions, and rotten, brutal officers are the reward of the buck private, gob and leatherneck. This is what is suffered for the oil-smeared government.

Young soldiers, sailors and marines! While you are suffering under these conditions in your military and naval unit, you can now see what those at the head of the government are doing. Those who shout loudest for patriotism, are those who are the first to direct you into a war, are the ones who are at the same time corrupt grafters. They are bought up like articles on a market by the big capitalists of this country who sit at home and safeguard their dirty hides while the youth is murdered on the battlefield.

What are you going to do?

To Hell With Capitalist Wars!

The Young Workers League of America calls upon you to organize against capitalist wars. We want no more workers to be sacrificed to capitalist profits. No more workers' blood to be shed for their dirty interests.

Young Workers! You have no interest in fighting in a capitalist army or navy. Join labor in its fight against the state militias and national guard! Fight against the Boy and Girl Scouts! Boycott the Citizens' Military Training Camps!

Young Workers of America! United against militarism and war!

THE YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE OF AMERICA.
Martin Abern, Executive Sec'y.

T. U. E. L. Bulletins Just Off Press Deal With Live Questions

Two March Trade Union Educational League Bulletins, hot off the press, the Metal Trades Amalgamation Bulletin and the Building Trades Worker should be read without fail not only by the workers in these trades but by all those who want an insight into the industrial question. There are certainly no official trade journals, they are fighting organs, giving the militant viewpoint, and carrying instructive information on the local and the international situation. In the Metal Trades Amalgamation Bulletin a great deal of space is given to the campaign of organizing the unorganized electrical industry. William F. Dunne leads off with a splendidly written article, "The Unorganized Electrical Industry," which, in addition to all the information that it gives, is highly readable.

"The Progressive Building Trades Worker" is somewhat larger. It throws some light on the infamous Landis award. It tells of the combat of the St. Louis workers against the one big union of the Master Builders. There is an interesting article on the shrinking of construction work and the slump in the building trades. Mike Ross in plain language tells the workers what they should know about a union and about the five-day week. The Russian and international situation of the building trades is well covered.

The address of the "Metal Trades Amalgamation Bulletin" is 1426 S. Keeler avenue, Chicago, Ill., subscription: 35 cents a year. "The Progressive Building Trades Worker" can be procured from 166 W. Washington Street, Room 303, Chicago, Ill., subscription price: 35c a year.

FILIPINO LEADER SPEAKING UNDER AUSPICES OF W. P.

Insurrecto Leader and Nearing to Talk

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, March 24.—Down with imperialism: free the Philippines! will be the demand of the big mass meeting which the Workers Party is arranging for April 2 at 8 p. m. at Webster Hall, 119 E. 11th street.

Scott Nearing will speak side by side by Manuel Roxas, speaker of the Philippine congress, and with Pedro Guevara, resident commissioner from the Philippines and Jay Lovestone, head of the research department of the Workers Party.

Led Three Insurrections.

Guevara led three insurrections against Spanish and American oppression of the people of the subject islands. His most signal contribution, perhaps, was his founding of the Seamen's Union of the Philippines and his leadership of the first strike there.

This meeting has special significance because the issue of Philippine freedom comes up before congress a few days later when the House Committee on Insular Affairs makes its report. The speakers and meeting resolutions will demand that the American government keep its original promise to the islanders and get out.

Appreciate Workers Party.

Workers Party efforts in behalf of Philippine freedom have been warmly appreciated in letters from the Philippine Federation of Labor and statements from their official representatives of the islanders.

Philippine labor has none of the fear of radical thought that is characteristic of the Gompers officialdom. That will be shown again on May 1 when the Philippine Federation of Labor will stage a huge demonstration for freedom. That International Labor Day is the labor day of the Philippines as it is of the workers of Europe.

BURNS' COPPER SPYING EXPOSED IN MORE LETTERS

Private Dicks Worked Under D. of J. Men

Further disclosures of the Burns' labor spy in the copper industry are being made by the Industrial Workers of the World in this issue of Industrial Solidarity which is publishing more of the 200 confidential letters which have fallen into its possession.

Today's disclosures show that Department of Justice agents acted as foremen over the private Burns Dicks who were retained in behalf of the associated copper companies in Arizona and Southern California. Former disclosures showed Burns sending D. of J. men to assist his private operatives in the work for which his agency was being paid for the magnates. These letters reveal the D. of J. men as the expert directors of the lower grade private dicks.

Under Noonan's Direction.

For instance we find the Los Angeles branch of Burns agency informing J. G. Crowley, who is representing their espionage interests at Jerome, Arizona, July 19, 1923:

"This is to advise that an operative will call on you soon, identifying himself as Z-3, and giving you his name and address. He will be in and around Jerome for some time to come and will be more or less under the direction of Noonan of the Department of Justice, who will probably be in Jerome in the near future.

"I am of the opinion that this operative, while not a whirlwind, will make a very good man in that district . . ."

The letter is marked PLEASE DESTROY. The "Z-3", referred to, is J. J. Spear, an I. W. W. delegate until he was expelled following these disclosures. Z-3 was appointed delegate thru the influence of Fred Haines, alias Harris, a Burns spy who was also a delegate in the Metal Mine Workers Industrial Union until he was uncovered.

Operated in A. F. of L.

Burns agents operated in the A. F. of L. unions freely. Reports to the Los Angeles office from "Inspector L-42", "Inspector L-43" and Operative "N-1", transmit to the Burns Los Angeles office odds and ends of data on wage conditions and gossip picked up in union halls in various Los Angeles cities.

Writing from Miami, May 14, 1923 Inspector L-42 tells that he overheard "Barry of the Cooks and Waiters" say that the heads of the Mexican social organizations tell of plans to organize the mine workers under the banner of the "International", meaning the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers of the A. F. of L. The "Club de Mineros", a Mexican organization, is particularly mentioned in the stool's report as active for the union. The rest of the letter deals with I. W. W. miners' organization movements at Globe.

A later letter from "Inspector L-42", May 23, brings in President Moyer of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers union, passing on the information that a local citizen had received a letter from Moyer, saying he was sending two organizers to the Globe-Miami district and would have co-operation from the United Mine Workers.

Inspector L-42 goes on to report who will speak at the Miami central body's meeting.

Don't Know Labor Movement.

The Burns agents, however, show slipshop methods and lack of knowledge of the labor movement, as when "Inspector L-42" says a union speaker represented the "Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor".

Long letters from operatives deal with such "shadower" details as the trailing of A. F. of L. and I. W. W. organizers from town to town in Ford cars. The agency in turn writes shariffs and other officials telling where the men are and what indictments they have over their heads.

Raise Stool's Pay.

This Fred Haines, listed in the Burns files as operative "W-1" turned in so many unionists to the companies that H. D. Dowell, who handled the paying of the detective agencies for the associated copper companies, writes from Globe, Arizona to George P. Pross, Burns' Los Angeles manager, July 19, 1923, that "W-1's" salary be increased $50.00 a month, "same to be charged to the clients concerned".

Haines and J. J. Spear, "Z-3", were the two operatives sent to Globe several weeks before in response to a request by William J. Burns, from Washington, on the stationary of the Department of Justice.

Stool's Expense Account.

Z-3's expense account for the day he lined up in the I. W. W. are illuminating as showing the expensive nature of labor espionage; It reads:

Wages, $10; lunch, 75c; card and two months' dues, $3; ticket to Needles, $14.11; Sleeping car reservation, $4.50; Dinner, $1; Taxi, $1—total, $34.36.

Stalin Discusses Russian Party Problems

NOTE.—The DAILY WORKER today concludes publication of a speech made by I. Stalin, of the executive committee of the Russian Communist Party. He takes issue with the position of Comrade Leon Trotsky and his group, whose views we have already published.

• • •

STALIN SAID:

II. Comrade Trotzky's Letter.

THE resolution passed by the C. C. and the C. C. C. (Central Control Commission) on the inner Party democracy, published in December, was unanimously accepted. Comrade Trotzky voted for this resolution. It might therefore be assumed that the members of the Central Committee, including Comrade Trotzky, would apply unitedly to all members of the Party and call upon these to support the C. C. and its resolutions unanimously. This assumption has, however, not been realized. Comrade Trotzky has just published a letter to all Party corporations, which can only be regarded as an attempt to weaken the will to unity among the Party members, with respect to support of the C. C. and its decisions.

The reader may judge for himself. Comrade Trotzky mentions the bureaucracy of the Party apparatus and the danger of degeneration threatening the old guard, that is, the Leninians, the fundament of our Party, and goes on to say:

Degeneration of Old Guard.

"A degeneration of the 'old guard' is to be observed several times in the development of history. Let us take the most recent and most striking hisorical example; the Leaders and parties of the Second International. We know perfectly well that Wilhelm Liebknecht, Bebel, Singer, Victor Adler, Kautsky, Bernstein, Lafargue, Guesde and others have been direct and immediate disciples of Marx and Engels. We know, however, that all these leaders—some partially, others totally—degenerated towards opportunism . . . And we must say—we, the 'old guard'—that our generation, which, of course, plays the leading role in the Party, does not by itself include any guarantee sufficient in itself, against a gradual and imperceptible weakening of the proletarian and revolutionary spirit, if the Party tolerates the further development of the bureaucratic methods of the apparatus, which transform the young generation into a passive object of education and unavoidably confirm the alienation between the apparatus and the mass, between the old and the young..." ..."The youth is the Party's surest barometer, it reacts against Party bureaucratism in the most energetic manner..." "The youth must make the revolutionary formulas their own by fight...."

I must in the first place dispel a possible misunderstanding. It may be seen from Comrade Trotzky's letter that he counts himself among the old guard of the Bolsheviki, thus declaring himself prepared to take upon himself all accusations which may possibly be brought against the old guard, should this really pursue the path of degeneration. It must be admitted that this readiness for self-sacrifice is doubtless a proof of nobility. But I must defend Comrade Trotzky against Comrade Trotzky himself, for he cannot and must not, for comprehensible reasons, take upon himself the responsibility for a degeneration in the fundamental core of the old Bolshevist guard. Self-sacrifice is naturally admirable, but do the old Bolsheviki require it? I am of the opinion that they do not require it.

Why the Comparison?

In the second place, it is quite incomprehensible that such opportunists and Mensheviki as Bernstein, Adler, Kautsky, Guesde and others, can be named in the same breath as the old Bolshevist guard, which has been fighting honorably all this time against opportunism, Menshevism, and the Second International, and will, I hope, continue to fight them in future. What is the cause of this error, of this confusion; what need is there for it, if nothing but the interests of the Party is held in view, if there are no ulterior motives behind it, aiming by no means at the defence of the old guard? How are we to understand these insinuations as to opportunism with regard to the old Bolsheviki, who have been reared in the midst of a fight against opportunism?

In the third place, I am by no means convinced that the old Bolsheviki are absolutely immune against the danger of degeneration any more than I can reasonably maintain that we are for instance immune against earthquake. Such a danger can and must be admitted as a possibility. But is this intended to signify that this danger is actual and present? I do not believe it. Neither has Comrade Trotzky mentioned any signs indicating that the danger of degeneration is an actual danger. However, there does exist a number of elements within our Party who are likely to bring about real danger of degeneration among a section of the Party. I am thinking here of those Mensheviki who got into the Party against their own will, and who have not yet abandoned their old habits. At the time when our Party was being purged, Comrade Lenin wrote as follows about these Mensheviki and the danger threatened thru them:

"Every opportunist is distinguished by a capacity for adaptation, and the Mensheviki, as opportunists, accomodate themselves in a certain sense on principle to the prevailing trends among the workers; they take on protective colors, as the hare takes to a white fur in winter. It is necessary to be aware of this peculiarity of the Mensheviki and to reckon with it. But to reckon with it means to purge the Party of 99 per cent of the total number of Mensheviki who joined the Party after the year 1918, that is, after the victory of the Bolsheviki had first become probable, and then certain."

Oppose "Old" and "Young."

How could it happen that Comrade Trotzky could disregard this and other actually existent dangers, and place a possible danger in the foreground, the danger of degeneration in the old Bolshevist guard? How is it possible for anyone to shut his eyes to real danger, and to drag into the foreground a possible danger, one really not existing at all, if he is anxious to preserve the interests of the Party, and not to undermine the authority of the majority of the C. C., the leading core of the old Bolshevist guard? Is it not perfectly obvious that such methods of procedure are simply grist to the will of the opposition?

In the fourth place, why does Comrade Trotzky oppose the "old," thus liable to degeneration, to the "youth," "the Party's surest barometer"; the "old guard" which may become bureaucratized, to the "young", "which has to make the revolutionary formulas their own by fight?" Why this placing in opposition, and what purpose does it serve? Have the youth and the old guard then not always marched in one united front against internal and external enemies? Is the unity between "old" and "young" not the main source of strength in our Party? Then why this attempt to deprive the old guard of its glory, and to bring about a demagogic incitement of the vanity of the youth, so that the slight cleft between these two main groups of our Party may be widened? Why is all this being done, if the interests and unity of the Party are being pursued, and no attempt is being made to shake this unity in the interests of the opposition?

Is this the way to defend the C. C. and its resolution on inner Party demoracy, which, it must not be forgotten, was passed unanimously?

It is probable that Comrade Trotzky did not set himself any such task when he laid his views before the public in his letter to the Party organizations. Probably he had another object in view, the intention of using the defence of the resolution passed by the C. C. as a cloak enabling him to lend diplomatic support to the opposition in its contest with the C. C. of the Party.

The True Meaning.

If we got to the bottom of the matter, this also explains the ambiguity permeating Comrade Trotzky's letter.

Comrade Trotzky forms one of the block of the "democratic centralists" and a section of the "left communists"—this is the political meaning of this letter from Comrade Trotzky.

RAILROADS YIELD WAGE INCREASES TO EMPLOYES

B. & O., Pennsy, L. I. And Southern in Line

NEW YORK, March 24.—Wage increases similar to those negotiated by the Big Four railroad brotherhoods with the New York Central are spreading in the east.

Agreements have been signed with the Baltimore & Ohio, the Pennsylvania, the Long Island and the Southern railways providing increases ranging from 5 per cent to 6.2 per cent to engine and train service employes.

30 Cents A Day More.

The new Pennsylvania agreement with the train service brotherhoods provides the following increases: 30 cents a day to conductors, baggagemen and brakemen in passenger service; 32 cents a day to brakemen and switchtenders in yard service.

Financial writers have expressed some surprise at the fact that other large roads are following the lead of the New York Central in view of the statement of railway executives that the Central's action was out of line with what other roads would grant. They expect a real controversy to deveop at the conference now in session at Chicago between the train service brotherhoods and representatives of ten of the largest western carriers. These carriers contend that their last year's profits were not up to those made by eastern railroads.

Poverty Plea the Buck.

The hypocrisy of this poverty plea is apparent upon examination of the 1923 financial reports of the ten carriers in question. Altogether they earned a total net income of $238,263,988, or enough to afford a return of 5 per cent on their combined capitalization including stocks, bonds, equipment notes, etc. As this capitalization is excessive the return on actual investment appears to be nearer 7 per cent. Five of the ten roads, operating nearly 60 per cent of the total mileage earned profits in excess of 11 per cent on their common stock.

While only two of the ten earned less than 4½ per cent for their common stockholders and these two are known to represent speculative investment beyond the actual requirements of the territory served. All ten carriers earned sufficient profit to cover their fixed charges so that no one of them can claim a deficit on last year's operations.

LAUGHS AT COMPARISON OF DAILY WORKER WITH ONEAL'S NEW LEADER

"I was ever so glad to hear you were on the Worker," writes a friend. "They are a live bunch and it is certainly some paper. I compare it with the New Leader of New York. The comparison makes me laugh. Your paper, militant, defiant, aggressive, educational with no pretense to high brow stuff and theirs an expression of a timid intelligentsia which looks with longing envy on the respectables and hopes that some day they may be confounded with them.

"The only consolation I get is that the Wallings, the Spargos and Chester Wrights must feel that it is too bad they parted from such a sterilized, denatured bunch themselves, even if they found a shelter under tht wing of that foul bird, not too old to long for carrion, but far too old to fly and which can only flutter his ill-feathered wings and squawk at Russia."

Cleveland Metal Workers Demand City Ownership

CLEVELAND, March 24.—Extension of the muncipal lighting plant is demanded by union machinists in answer to attempts of the privately owned Cleveland Illuminating Co. to encroach on the muncipal field. The city plant charges 3 cents per kilowatt hour while the private company charges 5 cents. The machinists, organized in Lodge 439 of the international union, declare for public ownership and for development of the city plant so that all customers can be served by it, including the Cleveland Railway company.

United States Sailors Take Over Honduras In Bankers' Interests

WASHINGTON, March 24.—The tropical radio station at Tegucigalpa, capitol of Honduras, is now manned by American operators and guarded by American bluejackets, so that communications with this country may be maintained, a dispatch from the commander of the U. S. Cruiser Milwaukee to the navy department said today. Conditions in the Honduran capitol are quiet at present.

State department officials were closely watching the situation in Honduras where serious revolutionary disorders threaten to hurt the interests of United States capitalists.

CANADIAN RAIL LABOR EXPECTS WAGE INCREASES

Brotherhoods Conduct Negotiations

MONTREAL, March 24.—New wage schedules are expected to result from negotiations going on here between the Canadian railway companies and the various brotherhoods. Negotiations between the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Men and the railway association were resumed. The strike vote taken recently among the Canadian membership of the brotherhood resulted in a majority in favor of a walkout.

More Wages Expected.

The Brotherhood of Railroad Employes and representatives of the Canadian Pacific railway are in session here now to arrive at a new wage schedule from two different schedules used on the C. N. R. and on the Grand Trunk railway. Since the latter has been combined with the C. N. R. the demand for one single wage contract for all grades of freight handlers, clerks, store and warehouse-men, covered by the brotherhood was made. Altho the company is willing to agree to this proposition discussion arose over the demand of an increase of $16 a month for monthly rated men and 8 cents an hour for hourly rated men. Here too the final result of the negotiations are expected to be favorable for labor.

Amalgation Discussed.

The amalgamation scheme for the 16 standard railway unions will be discussed in a conference expected to take place here March 23. Altho in the old craft organizations there is some strong sentiment against amalgamation it is hoped that the conference at least will succeed in forming a central Canadian committee which shall combine the various sections of the movement thruout the Dominion. The fact that the Brotherhood of Railway Employes has voted in favor of amalgamation and that the conference is to be held immediately prior to the conference of Division 4, Railway Employes' Department, A. F. of L., gives the amalgamation conference a special significance.

"Black Jack" Writes Book.

PARIS, March 24.—Incognito, General John J. Pershing has been inspecting once again the battlefields of France, obtaining material for a book on the world war which he is writing, it was learned today.

TOLEDO I. A. M. WOULD EXPEL LEFT WINGERS

Prosecutors Ignorant of Our Program

(Special to The Daily Worker)

TOLEDO, Ohio, Mar. 24.—Charged with being members of an organization dual to the International Association of Machinists, eight members of the Workers Party who are also members of the Trade Union Educational Leauge were brought up on trial before a committee of local union 105 of this city last week.

The members accused are: Joseph Willnecker, Ralph M. Huff, Charles Stephenson, Clarence Buehler, J. F. Chapman, R. E. Cook, Walt Harris and Charles E. Weber.

They were also accused of circulating false charges against the officials of local 105. Three Grand Lodge organizers have been busy in this city for some time since they realized that their jobs were in jeopardy thru the success of the left wing elements in the union in being able to win some of the offices in the local. A letter was sent out signed by the Grand Lodge officers calling a meeting of a certain number of members of the local. This meeting was kept secret from the radicals. Charges were preferred then against the members who are now on trial.

Toledo Under Klan Control.

Being asked to appear for the defendants in the case, I arrived in the city of Toledo Wednesday the 19th. This was rather short notice to prepare the defense. I attempted to get all of the details of what lead up to this situation.

At the present time the Ku Klux Klan and other reactionary anti-labor organizations seem to hold full sway in the city of Toledo, the mayor being supported by the Klan and this white robed order recently marched undisturbed in parade thru the city with all the night caps and other regalia. Even the Socialist Party of Toledo is said to have its majority of membership also members of the Klan. Under such circumstances and in such an atmosphere, we found that our comrades' trial in the I. A. of M. resembled the Michigan trial of the Communists.

Ignorant Witnesses.

On Thursday night the testimony from the prosecution and the defense was taken by the committee which, by the way, is appointed by the president of the local according to the constitution of the union. The prosecution appeared with a great number of witnesses who all practically with the exception of the business agent, Mr. Erbright, denied having any knowledge of ever having read the Workers Party program or the program of the Trade Union Educational League. As one of those witnesses stated, "I haven't read it and I do not want to read it!"

The defense in cross examining Organizer Griffith, found that this wonderful representative of labor had not studied neither the program of the Party or the League. The defense in cross examining several of the witnesses found that those who had worked with the defendants thought that they were good union men and loyal union men and good fighters on the job. In the defense cross examination of the defendants it was found that almost everyone of them had been active in one or more strikes. Especially in the Overland strike in Toledo.

Amusing Testimony.

Some of the testimony given by the witnesses appearing before the prosecution is quite amusing. However, the documents pertaining to some are not on hand as this is being written. But one of them stated that he was disgusted because said defendants continually talked on Russia and China and other foreign countries and he didn't like that and in cross examination by the defense this witness was asked on what occasion speeches had been made on Russia and what particular examples he could give as to what had been said. He stated that Brother Willnecker had spoken on an article written by Senator LaFollette describing his experience while being in Russia. The defense asked this witness whether he ever studied the Journal of I. A. of M. and whether he ever saw articles by Senator LaFollette on Russia. He answered that he did and also that he believed the Brother was within his constitutional rights to speak on said question, but that he and others did not like it and consequently they would stay away from the meetings.

Practically all of the witnesses for the prosecution admitted that these brothers were within their constitutional rights to speak on these questions which they thought were for the good and welfare of the organization. None of the witnesses were able to prove that the members of the Workers Party and of the T. U. E. L. ever dealt with the employers directly which should be proven if the charges were correct, that these organizations were dual in character to the union. None of them could explain what a dual union really is. Quite a number of them stated that they were within their constitutional rights in all of the actions they had taken in the local union.

Absurd Accusations.

The prosecution represented by V. S. Gauthier in its closing speech laid emphasis on the fact that these men intended to overthrow the present democratic Teapot Dome government and institute in its place a so-called workers republic in this country. Also that they were taking instructions from a one Wm. Z. Foster who had conspired to destroy the organized labor movement of the United States. In fact his plea reminded me of any prosecutor against the reds in a capitalist court. Defense in its closing argument pleaded for dropping of the whole matter inasmuch as the charges had no foundation inasmuch as no violation of the constitution could be proven by the prosecution, giving the examples of loyalty of the members of the Party and the T. U. E. L. in the Ladies' Garment Workers' strike in Chicago where they are the most active on the picket line and also citing the threatened split in the United Mine Workers in District 5 which was presented by the agitation of the Trade Union Educational League and the Party.

Good Union Record Admitted.

The defense also pointed out the fact that all those defendants had been participating in one or more struggles of the working class and that some of the witnesses appearing for the prosecution admitted that they were good and loyal members of the union. The defense warned the committee against the expulsion of these defendants from the union and pointed out the need of the militants in the organization and gave examples where their expulsions would lead to the complete destruction of the union and also the disillusionment of the workers following such struggles.

Defendants—Loyal Unionists.

The final case is to be decided at the local union meeting Friday the 28th. The defense is of the opinion that the rank and file has been aroused sufficiently to turn out in great numbers and vote down this dastardly proposal of the international officials in fact the members working in one shop signed a petition to the local union protesting against the action in this case, but it was not considered by the local. This is in fact not a trial of militants but it is Machinists Union Local 105 on trial whether it wants to develop and become a real fighting organization to effectively wage a struggle against the bosses in the city of Toledo and again become a city where organized labor will be recognized as an economic and political force. The defendants are determined to carry this fight to its logical conclusion which will be victory for the left wing.

Lusk Probe Lawyer Resents Effort to Quiz Big Oil Baron

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, March 24.—Senator Dill, Washington, a member of the senate oil committee, today charged in the senate that Martin W. Littleton, counsel for Harry F. Sinclair, was leading "a fight against all congressional investigations that would be effective."

Dill said Littleton "challenged the right and jurisdiction of the oil committee in subpoenaing witnesses before it and asking private questions."

"When Will Hays is about to come before the committee and go under cross examination relative to the receipt of 75,000 shares of Sinclair oil stock, to wipe out a deficit in the treasury of the Republican national committee and when Harry Sinclair is about to be questioned about the Teapot lease, we find Littleton here telling us we can't ask private questions," said Dill.

Big Revolutionary Meeting Is Held by N. Y. Workers Party

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Mar. 24.—The large crowd that packed the New Star Casino to celebrate the Paris Commune was one of the most enthusiastic that has ever attended meetings conducted by the Workers Party.

From the very beginning when the chairman of the meeting, District Organizer Charles Krumbein, mentioned the Paris Commune the crowd cheered for a long time, and this was enthusiastically repeated every time the speakers that followed mentioned the heroic struggles of the French comrades and those of the Russian comrades.

The meeting was proof of the growth of the influence of the Workers Party in this city, for not only was the New Star Casino packed but similar meetings were held in many parts of the city.

An excellent musical program was rendered and the meeting closed with the crowd singing the International.

LIVE MASS PAPER, SAYS PRAVDA OF DAILY WORKER

Russ Communist Daily Gives High Praise

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, March 24.—The appearance of the DAILY WORKER, of Chicago, is hailed by PRAVDA, official organ of the Russian Communist Party, as follows:

The American Workers Party has started to publish "The Daily Worker", the first Communist English language daily in the world. The office of "Pravda" already received a few issues. Judging from these the Daily Worker is taking the right course and is a real live mass paper answering the needs of the workers. (The Daily Worker is also printing serially Libedinsky's book "A Week".)

The Workers Party has 11 dailies in foreign languages serving the needs of the foreign-born workers in America. The fact that the Workers Party was able to raise $100,000 for the purpose of publishing the Daily Worker proves that the American workers realize the importance of a daily Communist paper.

Bankers Couldn't Stop It.

The Daily Worker is published in Chicago. When it became known that the party decided to publish this paper the bankers and business men of Chicago started a campaign to frighten the workers about the horrors of Bolshevism. But this attempt was futile.

This organ has to carry a different character from that of the German, Jewish, Russian, Polish, Ukranian, Lithuanian, Finnish and Hungarian papers. All of these publications have a circulation of 155,000. This is a very large circulation in view of the 22,000 members in the party. If we are to take into consideration that one paper is read not only by one worker but also by members of his family and friends, this circulation does not represent the actual number of readers.

Daily Worker, Farmers' Organ.

The Daily Worker will have to supply all information regarding strikes, workers' conferences and conditions of the working class. The paper must also serve the farmers as well as the workers. Comrade Zinoviev in his contribution to the first number of the Daily Worker pointed out the relationship between the workers and farmers and stressed the significance of the farmers in the struggle as the conditions in the United States are such that the farmers are more revolutionary than the workers. This condition is explained by the crises in which the farmers are now passing. Before the Daily Worker lie big problems, a large field and many tasks.

Warmest greetings to the first Communist daily paper in the English language in the land of the greatest revolutionary possibilities.

Committee Urges Compromise on Jap Immigration

WASHINGTON, March 24.—A new scheme for the settlement of the immigration exclusion quarrel with Japan is proposed by the National Committee on American-Japanese Relations, thru George W. Wickersham, chairman. The committee proposes a new treaty under which the Japanese would repeal all laws creating dual citizenship of Japanese children born in the United States; the migration of laborers from each country to the other to be stopped; and "most favored nation" treatment to be granted to all persons of either nationality residing under the jurisdiction of the other.

The committee asserts that for the period of 1908-1923 the net increase of Japanese thru immigration into the United States, including Hawaii, has been 16,096, of which 8,031 came to the continental United States.

Electricians Win Strike; Scabs and Police Are Canned

NEW ORLEANS, March 24.—The strike of electricians and linemen against the New Orleans Public Service, Inc., has been settled. The unions obtained their demands. According to the terms the two men in dispute will be reinstated, and the men who struck on their account will be given full seniority rights, insurance, etc. All men will be in their jobs before 90 days, the strikebreakers to be fired gradually.

The settlement is the work of Organizer Pollard, Atlanta, who called on each director of the public utility. The board of directors a few days ago ordered the general managar to make peace with the unions.

Thirty-eight cops were dropped from the police department after the settlement.

Teapot and the Colonies

The colonial beneficiaries of American imperialism, on whom our soldiery and House of Morgan spokesmen have been urging governmental reforms based on the American plan, are convulsed with laughter these days.

Uncle Sam, self-appointed guardian of the morals of backward peoples, has been caught in an illicit alliance with highly questionable characters—oily footsteps have been discovered leading to his bedroom—and from one end of the Western hemisphere to the other brown faces are crinkled with smiles.

This is a source of great embarrassment to our best people and Congressman Fred A. Britten, of Illinois, recently returned from Cuba, gives tongue in protest.

"Suggestions for political changes in Cuba," says Mr. Britten, "are met with cartoons of Uncle Sam smeared with muck, mud and oil and labeled, 'Why not clean your own house first?' " Mr. Britten quite rightly ascribes this cocky attitude on the part of the proteges of the sugar trust to what he calls "the hysterical investigations" now being conducted in the senate.

There may be some hysteria in connection with the investigations now under way, but it is manifested mostly by the persons and interests whose misdeeds have been disclosed and Mr. Britten's testimony is the best evidence of the fact that not only at home, but thruout the territories of small nations conquered by the armed forces of American oil, sugar, steel and finance-capital there is a rising wave of discontent and resentment against oppression and exploitation by American capital.

Perhaps the workers of Cuba, Haiti, the Philippines, Mexico and South America will learn the lesson of Teapot Dome before the American workers. If they learn it together in the same hard school so much the better for them and so much the worse for American capitalism.

Will not some other scandalized and indignant flunkey of the oil-lords gladden us with tidings of occurrences similar to those in Cuba from other mortgage holdings of the American rulers?

Thru Wrong Spectacles

The contest for the senatorial nomination now being waged in the republican party of Illinois is of first-rate interest to the workers and farmers of the entire country. This is true, not because there is any doubt as to the outcome of the contest, or because the competition in the primaries is so keen.

There is no doubt that the present Senator Medill McCormick of Harvester Trust fame, the gentleman who has condoned and upheld the outrageous Wall Street invasion of Haiti, and whose whole record in Washington is one of unfaltering service to the biggest capitalist interests, will win the nomination on April 8th. But the significant fact is that some trade union leaders, with the frank support of the insurgent bloc in Washington, are attempting to wage a plainly hopeless fight in the reactionary republican party of the state.

If LaFollette refused to play this game in North Dakota, a state which has been his impregnable stronghold for many years, why should the progressive forces waste their time and get into a hopeless contest against so powerful a capitalist machine as the republican party of Illinois?

The forces fighting to put over Newton Jenkins against McCormick or Deneen in the republican party of the state, are off on the wrong foot. They are looking at things thru the wrong spectacles. The republican party cannot possibly afford the working masses a chance for effective political action against the big business interests now strangling the country, politically and economically. Instead of spending energy in useless, demoralizing fights in the house of the enemy, the labor forces should rather devote this time and energy in building up their own house, their own political machinery. Now is the time to build up a powerful farmer-labor party, speaking solely for the working masses of the city and farm and committed to waging a relentless fight on the capitalist exploiters of the workers and farmers.

Uncle Sam is getting a little bit stouter and more determined with each passing year. While his whiskers are gray, he has plenty of vigor, judging by the manner in which he hauls a professor with peaceful inclinations before an American flag and demands that he "teach patriotism." It appears "Uncle" is getting along very nicely on an oil diet.

A dispatch from Rome states that the pope has blessed Chicago and everything within the city limits. The dispatch does not state what effect this is supposed to have on the typhoid germs in the drinking water.

The Nadir of Democracy

The zenith of our capitalist democracy, of our employing class centralized governmental power over the workers and farmers, is in the Department of Justice, with its mighty army of detectives, spies, marshals and nondescript thug-agents.

The nadir of capitalist corruption attendant to the exercise of this tyrannical rule over the exploited masses in behalf of the financial and industrial powers that be, rests in the same Department of Justice.

It is natural that Attorney General Daugherty, who is the link between the White House and the Stock Exchange, who symbolizes the apex, the height of capitalist dictatorship, should also embody all the crookedness, corruption and bribery flowing out of the disease-breeding cesspool of government by and for the bosses.

The indictment brought against Daugherty by the Wheeler Committee is too formidable to be thwarted even by the complicated technicalities of employing class courts. In the Teapot exposure Fall, Doheny, Sinclair, McAdoo, and Denby were concerned only in one line of the political holdup profession—oil. But Daugherty's dirty business and thievery branches out into all directions.

The facts adduced to date in the unmasking of the Department of Justice are without parallel in our history, which is replete with such instances of sinister domination of government by Big Business. Daugherty would make Mark Hanna, the first apostle of American imperialism, blush with shame. The Teapot scandal is as white as the first fallen snow compared with the Daugherty regime. The very witnesses called in the Daugherty investigation reflect the depths of depravity and degradation to which capitalist democracy inevitably sinks.

On the front-door steps of the Attorney General's chambers there rest a liquor scandal, a film conspiracy, espionage over political opponents, and, worst of all, the organization of a band of underworld gangmen and stool-pigeons to disrupt the labor organizations and smash their strikes.

Stern, swift action must be taken to put an end to Daughertyism. The workers and dispossessed farmers are the ones who suffer most from the Daughertys and Burnses. The working and farming masses alone have the courage to uproot this nefarious evil. Every labor organization, every farm oganization, every local union and central labor body is face to face with an urgent, a most pressing duty to make itself heard in unmistakable terms on Daughertyism. Burns and Daugherty must be kicked out of office and thrown behind the bars. They are the dark symbols of a menace—the capitalist system of industry and government—that is gnawing at the very vitals of the labor and farmers' movement the country over.

Helpless Readers

The concentration of ownership and the centralization of control in capitalist industry is proceeding apace. There is not an industry immune from this natural trend of development digging the grave of the competitive system.

Today, the dispensing of news, the newspaper industry, is conducted, like all other industries, on the commodity basis by individual capitalists for sale and private profit. The great mass of the workers and farmers, the readers of the newspapers, are as helpless before the owners of the dailies a they are at the mercy of the owners of the means of production and exchange. The worker-reader has nothing to say as to who should dispense the news and how events should be interpreted. The workingman is confronted with an accomplished fact in his morning, afternoon or evening newspaper, controlled by the capitalist class which exploits him.

The trustification of the newspaper industry tends to secure the ruling class a firmer grip on the minds of the working masses. Within the last few years this tendency has been painfully evident in New York City. First, the SUN, which was once run by Dana, was exterminated. The PRESS was buried next. The GLOBE, the oldest American newspaper, followed in quick order. The EVENING MAIL was swallowed a short time afterward. Then there was signed the death-warrant for the TELEGRAM. A few days ago formal obsequy was held over the HERALD, which merged with the NEW YORK TRIBUNE. Munsey has been the assassin and undertaker of these dailies.

The ease with which the capitalist owners dispose of and dominate so vital a necessity of the working class as the daily news should set the workers and farmers to thinking and doing. Slavery is not distant when the vital sources of mental and physical development needed by the many are monopolized by the few. The best answer to and the most effective way of dealing with this menace lies in the building-up of a powerful farmer and labor press.

The Chicago Tribune sees profit in the Teapot Dome scandal. So did another newspaper owner, Mr. John Schaffer, of the Chicago Evening Post, long before it became a scandal. His foresight brought him nearly $100,000. Now he thinks it is a scandal to continue airing the scandal. In fact he is scandalized.

The virgin birth theory bit the dust last week in a debate between the Rev. Charles Potter, modernist, and the Rev. John R. Stratton, fundamentalist. The boys are quite excited over that 2,000 year old romance of Mr. Ghost.

Gains and Losses In the British Dock Strike

EDITOR'S NOTE:—The labor struggles in Great Britain, in the economic field, become of increasing interest and importance as a result of the fact that a labor government, under the premiership of J. Ramsay MacDonald, is in power in Downing Street. The DAILY WORKER has therefore arranged to get the best possible articles and the most up-to-date news on the British labor struggle. These articles will be published from time to time by such well known writers as Charles Ashleigh, J. T. Murphy and others. Today we publish the concluding article by Ashleigh on the important British dock strike. It has a double interest in view of the newly declared Traction Strike and the threatening struggle in the coal mining industry. Ashleigh's article follows:

* * * *

By CHARLES ASHLEIGH.

Well, now the dock strike is over, and we may count up our gains—and our losses.

The men went back to work on February 26. Their demands were partially gained.

They had asked for two shillings per day increase, thus raising the minimum daily wage, in smaller ports to eleven shillings, and, in the larger, to twelve. They asked also for immediate measures to be taken towards the decasualization of their employment.
